UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 101st CONGRESS

SECOND SESSION

VOLUME 136—PART 7

MAY 2, 1990 TO MAY 15, 1990

(PAGES 9133 TO 10603)

GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION LAW LIBRARY
CENTRAL OFFICE

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE, WASHINGTON, 1990

AUTHENTICATED
U.S. GOVERNMENT
INFORMATION
GPO

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402

United States of America

Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 101st CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

SENATE—May 2, 1990

(Legislative day of Wednesday, April 18, 1990)

The Senate met at 11 a.m., on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. BYRD].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. As we reverence God, who created man in his own image, the Senate will be led in prayer by the Chaplain, the Reverend Richard C. Halverson. Dr. Halverson.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Richard C. Halverson, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Let us pray:

* * * Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever: for wisdom and might are his: And he changeth the times and the seasons: he removeth kings, and setteth up kings: he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know understanding.—Daniel 2:20,21.

Almighty God, we thank Thee for the way, throughout its history, our Nation has responded generously to the peoples of the world in time of tragedy, catastrophe, and need. We thank Thee for the impulse, deep in American life, to share its bounty with others who are less fortunate. And we ask Thy blessing upon the Senate as it expresses this concern.

Gracious Father, Thou knowest us better than we know ourselves, individually and collectively. Thou art all wise and all powerful. By Thy Spirit breathe upon this body that Thy perfect will may be realized here. Remove any hindrance in heart or mind or procedure that would prevent the Senate from fulfilling its awesome responsibility.

At this moment of history, mighty God, move in our midst that Thy will may be done on Earth as it is in Heaven. In Jesus' name. Amen.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the order, the majority leader is recognized.

THE JOURNAL

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Journal of the proceedings be approved to date.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SCHEDULE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, following the time for the two leaders today, there will be a period for morning business not to extend beyond 12 noon, with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 5 minutes each.

The Senate will recess today from 12 noon to 1:30 p.m. in order to accommodate a Republican conference luncheon. When the Senate reconvenes at 1:30 p.m., we hope to then begin consideration of S. 135, the Hatch Act reform bill.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of my leader time, and I reserve all the time of the minority leader.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There will now be a period for the transaction of morning business with Senators permitted to speak therein for 5 minutes each.

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. WIRTH] is recognized.

Mr. WIRTH. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. WIRTH pertaining to the introduction of S. 2560 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Washington is recognized.

Mr. GORTON. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. GORTON pertaining to the introduction of S. 2561 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

MESSAGE FROM THE CONGRESS OF ESTONIA TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, several weeks ago, I reported to the Senate that I had been invited to address the initial session of the Congress of Estonia, a group acting outside of the normal Soviet Government power, to work with the independence of that nation.

I was denied a visa to visit Estonia. I made the speech I would have given to that group here on the floor of the Senate, and by the miracles of modern communication, it was FAXed to Estonia and given to that Congress.

Recently, Tunne Kelam, the individual who was elected Chairman first of the Congress of Estonia and of its continuing body, the Council of Estonia, visited the United States and brought with him a message from the Congress of Estonia to the Congress of the United States thanking us both for our example as a nation and for our support of independence for Estonia, and reporting to us on the inspiration which America has continued to be for the people of Estonia themselves.

As a consequence, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the message from the Congress of Estonia to the Congress of the United States be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the message was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

● This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a member of the Senate on the floor.

COUNCIL OF ESTONIA,
Tallinn, Estonia.

MESSAGE FROM THE CONGRESS OF ESTONIA TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

On behalf of the Congress of Estonia, the only representative body which legitimately expresses the will of the citizens of the Republic of Estonia, we wish to greet the American people through their elected representatives in the Congress of the United States.

Despite the on-going Soviet occupation, at least eighty-five percent of the eligible population of Estonia—over 850,000 individuals of all ethnic backgrounds and political opinions—have registered as citizens of the Republic of Estonia, thereby declaring that they are not, and have never been, Soviet citizens, and also expressing their firm belief in the continuity of that Republic, which declared its independence in 1918, and over which Soviet Russia renounced voluntarily and forever all rights via the Peace Treaty of Tartu in 1920.

Based on the above, the Congress of Estonia is the only vehicle for restoring the legal and actual authority of the Republic of Estonia. And therefore, for Estonia, there is no question of "secession" from the Soviet Union.

We note with pride and emotion some striking parallels between historic events in the founding and freeing of the United States of America from colonial occupation and the current process of re-establishing the Republic of Estonia.

We thank you for your moral and practical support for the Republic of Estonia over these long years of Soviet military occupation and colonization. As we now take concrete steps to restore a democratic and legitimate government in Estonia and seek to negotiate the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Estonian soil, we hope to be able to rely upon the continued attention and support of the American people.

Adopted by the Council of Estonia (the steering organ of the Congress of Estonia), Tallinn, March 16, 1990.

TUNNE KELAM,
Chairman, Council of Estonia.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The absence of a quorum has been suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KERREY). Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS UNTIL 1:30 P.M.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, under the previous order entered, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess until 1:30 today.

Their being no objection, the Senate, at 11:44 a.m., recessed until 1:32 p.m.; whereupon, the Senate reconvened when called to order by the Presiding Officer [Mr. SHELBY].

DIRE EMERGENCY SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATION BUDGET AUTHORITY COMPARISON

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, as Senators are aware, yesterday the Senate completed action on H.R. 4404, the dire emergency supplemental appropriation bill for fiscal year 1990.

I ask unanimous consent that a comparative table which sets forth the amounts of budget authority provided in the Senate-passed bill compared to the President's requests and to the House-passed bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SUPPLEMENTAL H.R. - 4404

Doc. No.		Supplemental Request	House Amount	Senate Amount	Senate vs Request	Senate vs House Amount
	TITLE I - DISASTER ASSISTANCE
	DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE - CIVIL DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY
	Corps of Engineers - Civil
---	Flood control and coastal emergencies	---	20,000,000	20,000,000	+20,000,000	---
---	General expenses	---	---	15,000,000	+15,000,000	+15,000,000
101-176	(By transfer)	(30,000,000)	---	---	(-30,000,000)	---
	Total, Department of Defense - Civil	---	20,000,000	35,000,000	+35,000,000	+15,000,000
	DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE
	Soil Conservation Service:
---	Watershed and flood prevention operations	---	31,000,000	42,000,000	+42,000,000	+11,000,000
	Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service:
---	Salaries and expenses	---	---	11,000,000	+11,000,000	+11,000,000
---	Emergency conservation program	---	10,000,000	10,000,000	+10,000,000	---
	Total, Department of Agriculture	---	41,000,000	63,000,000	+63,000,000	+22,000,000
	INDEPENDENT AGENCIES
	Federal Emergency Management Agency
---	Disaster relief	---	50,000,000	50,000,000	+50,000,000	---
	Total, Title I:
	New budget (obligational) authority	---	111,000,000	148,000,000	+148,000,000	+37,000,000
	(By transfer)	(30,000,000)	---	---	(-30,000,000)	---
	TITLE II - SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS
	CHAPTER I
	DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE
	Bureau of the Census
---	Periodic censuses and programs	---	---	110,000,000	+110,000,000	+110,000,000
101-176	(By transfer)	(110,000,000)	---	---	(-110,000,000)	---
	Economic Development Administration
101-178	Economic development assistance programs (rescission)	-181,800,000	---	---	+181,800,000	---
	National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration
---	Operations, research and facilities	---	---	15,482,000	+15,482,000	+15,482,000
	Total, Department of Commerce	-181,800,000	---	125,482,000	+307,282,000	+125,482,000
	DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE
	Legal Activities
	Salaries and expenses, general legal activities
101-122	(Vaccine injury compensation fund)	500,000	---	---	-500,000	---
---	Salaries and expenses, antitrust division	---	---	2,500,000	+2,500,000	+2,500,000
	Salaries and expenses, United State Marshals Service
---	(by transfer)	---	---	(7,400,000)	(+7,400,000)	(+7,400,000)
---	Fees and expenses of witnesses	---	---	2,600,000	+2,600,000	+2,600,000
	Total, Legal Activities	500,000	---	5,100,000	+4,600,000	+5,100,000
	Federal Bureau of Investigation
---	Salaries and expenses	---	---	185,000,000	+185,000,000	+185,000,000
	Total, Department of Justice	500,000	---	190,100,000	+189,600,000	+190,100,000
	DEPARTMENT OF STATE
	Administration of Foreign Affairs
	Secretary's special Lithuania Independence and
---	Recognition fund	---	---	10,000,000	+10,000,000	+10,000,000
	Emergencies in the diplomatic and consular service
101-122	(by transfer)	(3,000,000)	---	---	(-3,000,000)	---
	THE JUDICIARY
	Supreme Court of the United States
101-122	Salaries of justices	63,000	63,000	63,000	- -	---

SUPPLEMENTAL H.R. - 4404

Doc. No.		Supplemental Request	House Amount	Senate Amount	Senate vs Request	Senate vs House Amount
	Courts of Appeals, District Courts, and Other Judicial Services
	Salaries and expenses:
101-122	Salaries of judges	5,253,000	5,253,000	5,253,000	---	---
101-122	Other salaries and expenses	22,750,000	22,750,000	17,750,000	-5,000,000	-5,000,000
	Total, salaries and expenses	28,003,000	28,003,000	23,003,000	-5,000,000	-5,000,000
	United States Sentencing Commission
101-122	Salaries and expenses	700,000	700,000	700,000	---	---
	Total, Judiciary	28,766,000	28,766,000	23,766,000	-5,000,000	-5,000,000
	RELATED AGENCIES
	Federal Trade Commission
---	Salaries and expenses	---	---	2,500,000	+2,500,000	+2,500,000
	Total, Chapter I:
	New budget (obligational) authority	-152,534,000	28,766,000	351,848,000	+504,382,000	+323,082,000
	Appropriations	(29,266,000)	(28,766,000)	(351,848,000)	(+322,582,000)	(+323,082,000)
	Rescissions	(-181,800,000)	---	---	(+181,800,000)	---
	(By transfer)	(113,000,000)	---	(7,400,000)	(-105,600,000)	(+7,400,000)
	CHAPTER II
	DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE - MILITARY Procurement
---	Procurement of Ammunition, Army	---	---	238,000,000	+238,000,000	+238,000,000
---	(Rescission)	---	---	-238,000,000	-238,000,000	-238,000,000
	Research, Development, Test, and Evaluation
---	Research, development, test, and evaluation, Navy	---	6,000,000	6,000,000	+6,000,000	---
	Military Construction
---	Military Construction, Army Reserve	---	---	9,000,000	+9,000,000	+9,000,000
---	Military Construction, Army National Guard	---	---	9,000,000	+9,000,000	+9,000,000
	Total, Military Construction	---	---	18,000,000	+18,000,000	+18,000,000
	General Provisions
---	Rescission	---	-1,796,792,000	-1,540,974,000	-1,540,974,000	+255,818,000
---	Net effect of Section 205	---	---	-1,346,620,000	-1,346,620,000	-1,346,620,000
	Total, Chapter II:
	New budget (obligational) authority	---	-1,790,792,000	-2,863,594,000	-2,863,594,000	-1,072,802,000
	Appropriations	---	(6,000,000)	(-1,084,620,000)	(-1,084,620,000)	(-1,090,620,000)
	Rescissions	---	(-1,796,792,000)	(-1,778,974,000)	(-1,778,974,000)	(+17,818,000)
	CHAPTER III
	FUNDS APPROPRIATED TO THE PRESIDENT
	Multilateral Economic Assistance
	International Financial Institutions
	Contribution to the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development:
101-148	(Limitation on callable capital)	(1,609,671,408)	(1,609,671,408)	(1,609,671,408)	---	---
	Bilateral Economic Assistance
	Agency for International Development
---	Sub-Saharan Africa, development assistance	---	5,000,000	20,000,000	+20,000,000	+15,000,000
---	Health development assistance	---	---	10,000,000	+10,000,000	+10,000,000
	Housing and other credit guaranty programs
---	(limitation on guaranteed loans)	---	(400,000,000)	(400,000,000)	(+400,000,000)	---
	International Security Assistance
---	Economic support fund	---	765,000,000	750,000,000	+750,000,000	-15,000,000
101-148
101-157	(By transfer)	(800,000,000)	---	---	(-800,000,000)	---
---	I-match (guarantee loans)	---	---	(200,000,000)	(+200,000,000)	(+200,000,000)

SUPPLEMENTAL H.R. - 4404

Doc. No.		Supplemental Request	House Amount	Senate Amount	Senate vs Request	Senate vs House Amount
	DEPARTMENT OF STATE
---	Migration and refugee assistance	---	75,000,000	75,000,000	+75,000,000	---
101-148	(By transfer)	(70,000,000)	---	---	(-70,000,000)	---
---	United States Emergency Refugee and Migration Assistance Fund	---	25,000,000	25,000,000	+25,000,000	---
	Total, Department of State	---	100,000,000	100,000,000	+100,000,000	---
	Total, Chapter III: New budget (obligational) authority	---	870,000,000	880,000,000	+880,000,000	+10,000,000
	(By transfer)	(870,000,000)	---	---	(-870,000,000)	---
	CHAPTER IV
	DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR
	Bureau of Land Management
---	Firefighting	---	176,800,000	176,800,000	+176,800,000	---
	United States Fish and Wildlife Service
---	Resource management	---	---	1,000,000	+1,000,000	+1,000,000
	Total, Department of Interior	---	176,800,000	177,800,000	+177,800,000	+1,000,000
	DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE
	Forest Service
---	Forest Research (by transfer)	---	---	(4,700,000)	(+4,700,000)	(+4,700,000)
---	State and Private Forestry (by transfer)	---	---	(6,900,000)	(+6,900,000)	(+6,900,000)
---	National Forest System (by transfer)	---	---	(4,440,000)	(+4,440,000)	(+4,440,000)
---	Forest Service firefighting	---	256,000,000	256,700,000	+256,700,000	+700,000
	Total, Chapter IV: New budget (obligational) authority	---	432,800,000	434,500,000	+434,500,000	+1,700,000
	(By transfer)	---	---	(16,040,000)	(+16,040,000)	(+16,040,000)
	CHAPTER V
	DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
	Employment and Training Administration
---	Community service employment for older Americans	---	---	10,000,000	+10,000,000	+10,000,000
---	State unemployment insurance and employment service operations (limitation on trust fund transfer)	---	(96,000,000)	(99,600,000)	(+99,600,000)	(+3,600,000)
	Employments Standards Administration
---	Black Lung Disability trust fund	---	---	700,000	+700,000	+700,000
	Total, Department of Labor	---	---	10,700,000	+10,700,000	+10,700,000
	DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES
	Health Resources and Service Administration
---	Program operations	---	---	2,300,000	+2,300,000	+2,300,000
	Centers for Disease Control
---	Disease control, research, and training	---	---	31,500,000	+31,500,000	+31,500,000
	Family Support Administration
---	Payments to States for AFDC work programs (rescission)	---	---	-7,880,000	-7,880,000	-7,880,000
---	Low income home energy assistance	---	50,000,000	50,000,000	+50,000,000	---
	Assistant Secretary for Human Development Services
---	Head Start program	---	---	165,685,000	+165,685,000	+165,685,000
	Total, Department of Health and Human Services	---	50,000,000	241,605,000	+241,605,000	+191,605,000
	DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
---	School Improvement Program	---	---	22,609,000	+22,609,000	+22,609,000
---	(By transfer)	---	---	(3,374,000)	(+3,374,000)	(+3,374,000)
	Total, Department of Education	---	---	22,609,000	+22,609,000	+22,609,000

SUPPLEMENTAL H.R. - 4404

Doc. No.		Supplemental Request	House Amount	Senate Amount	Senate vs Request	Senate vs House Amount
	RELATED AGENCIES
---	National Commission on Children	---	---	500,000	+500,000	+500,000
---	White House Conference on Library and Information Services	---	---	425,000	+425,000	+425,000
	Total, Related Agencies	---	---	925,000	+925,000	+925,000
	Total, Chapter V:
	New budget (obligational) authority	---	50,000,000	275,839,000	+275,839,000	+225,839,000
	Appropriations	---	(50,000,000)	(283,719,000)	(+283,719,000)	(+233,719,000)
	Rescissions	---	---	(-7,880,000)	(-7,880,000)	(-7,880,000)
	(By transfer)	---	---	(3,374,000)	(+3,374,000)	(+3,374,000)
	CHAPTER VI
	DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE
	Agricultural Research Service:
101-178	Buildings and facilities (rescission)	-4,075,000	---	---	+4,075,000	---
	Cooperative State Research Service:
101-178	Buildings and facilities (rescission)	-41,008,000	---	---	+41,008,000	---
	Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service:
---	Salaries and expenses	---	---	8,000,000	+8,000,000	+8,000,000
---	Food Safety and Inspection Service	---	---	6,884,000	+6,884,000	+6,884,000
	Federal Crop Insurance Corporation:
101-176	Administration and operating expenses	15,000,000	---	15,000,000	---	+15,000,000
	Rural Electrification Administration:
	Rural electrification & telephone revolving fund:
	Direct loans:
101-176	Electric	(-23,500,000)	---	---	(+23,500,000)	---
101-176	Telephone	(-105,900,000)	---	---	(+105,900,000)	---
	Food and Nutrition Service:
---	Commodity supplemental food program	---	---	4,700,000	+4,700,000	+4,700,000
---	Food stamp program	705,000,000	510,000,000	705,000,000	---	+195,000,000
	Total, Department of Agriculture	720,000,000	510,000,000	739,584,000	+19,584,000	+229,584,000
	DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES
	Food and Drug Administration
101-122	Salaries and expenses	13,900,000	13,900,000	13,900,000	---	---
101-122	Offsetting collections	-13,900,000	---	---	+13,900,000	---
	RELATED AGENCIES
	Commodity Futures Trading Commission 1/	3,655,000	---	3,655,000	---	+3,655,000
	Total, Chapter VI:
	New budget (obligational) authority	678,572,000	523,900,000	757,139,000	+78,567,000	+233,239,000
	Appropriations	(723,655,000)	(523,900,000)	(757,139,000)	(+33,484,000)	(+233,239,000)
	Rescissions	(-45,083,000)	---	---	(+45,083,000)	---
	CHAPTER VII
	DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS
	Veterans Benefits Administration
101-176	Compensation and pensions	190,000,000	190,000,000	190,000,000	---	---
101-176	Loan guaranty revolving fund	245,000,000	150,000,000	245,000,000	---	+95,000,000
	Total, Veterans Benefits Administration	435,000,000	340,000,000	435,000,000	---	+95,000,000
	Veterans Health Service and Research Administration
---	Medical care	---	50,000,000	94,000,000	+94,000,000	+44,000,000
---	Medical administration and miscellaneous operating expenses (by transfer)	---	(1,300,000)	(1,300,000)	(+1,300,000)	---
	Total, Department of Veterans Affairs	435,000,000	390,000,000	529,000,000	+94,000,000	+139,000,000

1/ CFTC has submitted a request for this amount to the Office of Management and Budget. OMB has not acted on the request.

SUPPLEMENTAL H.R. - 4404

Doc. No.		Supplemental Request	House Amount	Senate Amount	Senate vs Request	Senate vs House Amount
	DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT
	Housing Programs
	Annual contributions for assisted housing:
---	Housing Development Grant project (reappropriation	---	---	2,469,000	+2,469,000	+2,469,000
	Payments for operation of low-income housing projects
---	(by transfer)	---	(72,000,000)	(72,000,000)	(+72,000,000)	---
	Community Planning and Development
101-122	Urban homesteading (by transfer)	(11,450,000)	(11,450,000)	---	(-11,450,000)	(-11,450,000)
	INDEPENDENT AGENCIES
	American Battle Monuments Commission
---	Salaries and expenses	---	---	500,000	+500,000	+500,000
	Federal Emergency Management Agency
---	Emergency management planning and assistance	---	---	500,000	+500,000	+500,000
	National Aeronautics and Space Administration
	Space flight, control and data communications
---	(rescission)	---	---	-36,077,000	-36,077,000	-36,077,000
101-122	Research and program management (by transfer)	(32,970,000)	(32,970,000)	(45,000,000)	(+12,030,000)	(+12,030,000)
	National Commission on Native American, Alaska Native and Native Hawaiian Housing
---	Salaries and expenses (by transfer)	---	---	(500,000)	(+500,000)	(+500,000)
	National Commission on Severely Distressed Public Housing
---	Salaries and expenses (by transfer)	---	---	(2,000,000)	(+2,000,000)	(+2,000,000)
	Total, Chapter VII:
	New budget (obligational) authority	435,000,000	390,000,000	496,392,000	+61,392,000	+106,392,000
	Appropriations	(435,000,000)	(390,000,000)	(530,000,000)	(+95,000,000)	(+140,000,000)
	Reappropriations	---	---	(2,469,000)	(+2,469,000)	(+2,469,000)
	Rescissions	---	---	(-36,077,000)	(-36,077,000)	(-36,077,000)
	(By transfer)	(44,420,000)	(117,720,000)	(120,800,000)	(+76,380,000)	(+3,080,000)
	CHAPTER VIII
	DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION
	National Highway Traffic Safety Administration
	Highway traffic safety grants (Highway Trust Fund)
---	(liquidation of contract authorization)	---	---	(5,000,000)	(+5,000,000)	(+5,000,000)
	Alcohol safety incentive grants: (limitation on ---	obligations)	---	---	(5,000,000)	(+5,000,000)	(+5,000,000)
	CHAPTER IX
	DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA FUNDS
	Operating Expenses
101-	Governmental direction and support	(99,000)	---	(99,000)	---	(+99,000)
101-	(Rescission)	(-3,218,000)	---	(-3,218,000)	---	(-3,218,000)
101-	Economic development and regulation	(50,000)	---	(50,000)	---	(+50,000)
101-	(Rescission)	(-10,478,000)	---	(-10,478,000)	---	(-10,478,000)
101-	Public safety and justice	(7,750,000)	---	(7,750,000)	---	(+7,750,000)
101-	(Rescission)	(-5,739,000)	---	(-5,739,000)	---	(-5,739,000)
101-	Public education system (rescission)	(-6,583,000)	---	(-6,583,000)	---	(-6,583,000)
101-	Human support services	(4,840,000)	---	(4,840,000)	---	(+4,840,000)
101-	(Rescission)	(-5,739,000)	---	(-5,739,000)	---	(-5,739,000)
101-	Public works (rescission)	(-8,810,000)	---	(-8,810,000)	---	(-8,810,000)
101-	Washington Convention Center Fund	(2,993,000)	---	(2,993,000)	---	(+2,993,000)
101-	Repayment of loans and interest (rescission)	(-12,336,000)	---	(-12,336,000)	---	(-12,336,000)
101-	Repayment of general fund deficit	---	---	---	---	---
101-	Short-term borrowings	(3,349,000)	---	(3,349,000)	---	(+3,349,000)
101-	Optical and dental benefits	(543,000)	---	(543,000)	---	(+543,000)
101-	Energy adjustment	---	---	---	---	---
101-	Equipment adjustment	---	---	---	---	---
101-	Personal services adjustment	---	---	---	---	---
	Total, Operating expenses, general fund (net)	-33,279,000	---	-33,279,000	---	-33,279,000
	Capital Outlay
101	General fund	(76,102,000)	---	(76,102,000)	---	(+76,102,000)
101	(Rescission)	(-24,215,000)	---	(-24,215,000)	---	(-24,215,000)

SUPPLEMENTAL H.R. - 4404

Doc. No.		Supplemental Request	House Amount	Senate Amount	Senate vs Request	Senate vs House Amount
	Enterprise Fund
101-	Water and Sewer Enterprise Fund	(12,026,000)	---	(12,026,000)	---	(+12,026,000)
101-	(Rescission)	(-17,680,000)	---	(-17,680,000)	---	(-17,680,000)
	CHAPTER X
	FUNDS APPROPRIATED TO THE PRESIDENT
---	Unanticipated needs	---	---	5,000,000	+5,000,000	+5,000,000
	Total, Chapter X: New budget (obligational) authority	---	---	5,000,000	+5,000,000	+5,000,000
	CHAPTER XI
	LEGISLATIVE BRANCH
	SENATE
	Payments to Widows and Heirs of Deceased Members of Congress
101-176	Gratuities, deceased Members	98,400	---	98,400	---	+98,400
	Library of Congress
101-176	Salaries and expenses	912,000	---	---	-912,000	---
	Total, Chapter XI: New budget (obligational) authority	1,010,400	---	98,400	-912,000	+98,400
	Total, Title II: New budget (obligational) authority	962,048,400	504,674,000	337,222,400	-624,826,000	-167,451,600
	Appropriations	(1,188,931,400)	(2,301,466,000)	(2,157,684,400)	(+968,753,000)	(-143,781,600)
	Reappropriations	---	---	(2,469,000)	(+2,469,000)	(+2,469,000)
	Rescissions	(-226,883,000)	(-1,796,792,000)	(-1,822,931,000)	(-1,596,048,000)	(-26,139,000)
	(By transfer)	(1,027,429,000)	(117,720,000)	(147,614,000)	(-879,806,000)	(+29,894,000)
	TITLE III - GENERAL PROVISIONS
	LEGISLATIVE BRANCH
	SENATE
	Contingent Expenses of the Senate
	Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate
---	(Reappropriation)	---	---	1,500,000	+1,500,000	+1,500,000
	REPEAL OF SECTION 614
101-122	Repeal of Sec. 614 of P.L. 101-162	363,416,000	---	363,416,000	---	+363,416,000
	Total, Title III: New budget (obligational) authority	363,416,000	---	364,916,000	+1,500,000	+364,916,000
	Appropriations	(363,416,000)	---	(363,416,000)	---	(+363,416,000)
	Reappropriations	---	---	(1,500,000)	(+1,500,000)	(+1,500,000)
	Grand total: New budget (obligational) authority	1,325,464,400	615,674,000	850,138,400	-475,326,000	+234,464,400
	Appropriations	(1,552,347,400)	(2,412,466,000)	(2,669,100,400)	(+1,116,753,000)	(+256,634,400)
	Reappropriations	---	---	(3,969,000)	(+3,969,000)	(+3,969,000)
	Rescissions	(-226,883,000)	(-1,796,792,000)	(-1,822,931,000)	(-1,596,048,000)	(-26,139,000)
	(By transfer)	(1,057,620,000)	(117,720,000)	(147,614,000)	(-909,806,000)	(+29,894,000)
	CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET RECAP
	Scorekeeping adjustments:
	Unanticipated needs (rescission)	---	---	-15,153,000	-15,153,000	-15,153,000
	REA credit scoring	-121,270,000	---	---	+121,270,000	---
	Export Enhancement Program	---	---	-7,000,000	-7,000,000	-7,000,000
	Total, adjustments	-121,270,000	---	-22,153,000	+99,117,000	-22,153,000
	Total (including adjustments)	1,204,194,400	615,674,000	827,985,400	-376,209,000	+212,311,400
	Amount in this bill	(1,325,464,400)	(615,674,000)	(850,138,400)	(-475,326,000)	(+234,464,400)
	Scorekeeping adjustments	(-121,270,000)	---	(-22,153,000)	(+99,117,000)	(-22,153,000)
	Total mandatory and discretionary	1,204,194,400	615,674,000	827,985,400	-376,209,000	+212,311,400
	Mandatory	(1,145,414,400)	(1,288,116,000)	(1,582,214,400)	(+436,800,000)	(+294,098,400)
	Discretionary	(58,780,000)	(-672,442,000)	(-754,229,000)	(-813,009,000)	(-81,787,000)

TERRY ANDERSON

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise to inform my colleagues that today marks the 1,873d day that Terry Anderson has been held in captivity in Beirut.

I would also ask unanimous consent that a thoughtful Washington Post editorial on the hostage situation be included at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, May 2, 1990]

FIFTEEN MORE HOSTAGES TO GO

Release of a second hostage in Damascus puts those holding the 15 others a step closer to closing out this grim chapter of terrorism. Like Robert Polhill, educator Frank Reed was held for more than three years in conditions of abuse and humiliation. The two men, along with the remaining six American and nine other Western hostages—all innocent victims chosen at random—have suffered an ordeal that will leave a permanent stain on the perpetrators and the governments that sustained them.

For Mr. Reed's liberty, President Bush thanked Iran for prompting the captors who physically held him. He thanked Syria for mediating between Washington and Tehran. These words reflect a measure of encouragement and a hint—but only a hint—of more substantial approbation to come. With an eye on the last administration's Iran-contra follies, this administration rejects bargaining for hostages. But this does not mean the United States has no leverage. The political plates are shifting in the Middle East. War-weakened Iran needs to work its passage back into the international economy. Syria's diplomatic setbacks and economic burdens dictate a less self-isolating course. These considerations are inclining the two countries to address with fresh vigor the fundamentalist groups, ideologically close to Iran and physically based on Syrian or Syrian-occupied territory, that actually hold the hostages. Their recent success casts an interesting light on contentions that the matter was out of their hands.

On the day Mr. Bush was expressing thanks to Iran and Syria, the State Department cited both countries (and four others) under terms of a law compelling annual designation, and at this time, of governments responsible for state-supported terrorism. The apparent awkwardness of citing those who are expected to deliver more hostages has to be set against the much larger value of underlining the United States' seriousness about combating terrorism. In fact, there is less of a contradiction here than meets the eye. The two governments were cited for activities in 1989. Only now are they taking the sort of steps requisite to working themselves off the list. Bazaar bargainers, Iran and Syria ask Washington for what Iran terms "reciprocal positive steps" right now. There will be time and reason to consider returning American relations with those states to normal when the 15 remaining hostages come home.

HARVEST OF PEACE: A VISION FOR THE FUTURE

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I am pleased to cosponsor Senate Concurrent Resolution 91, the harvest of peace resolution, introduced by Senators HATFIELD and BUMPERS.

Mr. President, Senate Concurrent Resolution 91 lays the groundwork for a positive, forward thinking approach to some of our most serious international problems. The innovative policy recommendations put forth in the resolution are designed to achieve a measure of common security, thus decreasing our need to rely on military spending. In this connection, the world's economic powers would be able to devote important resources to attacking the festering blights of hunger, poverty, and underdevelopment.

At the onset of the 1980's, some of the provisions of the harvest of peace resolution would have been inconceivable. However, the landmark year of 1989 unleashed a series of monumental changes across the globe, and we are now presented with a unique opportunity to formulate a new world order. As we construct that new order in the 1990's, I believe that the harvest of peace resolution would provide us with the proper focus to confront and overcome the many challenges we face.

Mr. President, I commend Senators HATFIELD and BUMPERS for their foresight and leadership in introducing this resolution. I am pleased to join them in an effort to redirect our Nation's priorities in view of the historic opening that our time has given us. I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation, and I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the harvest of peace resolution be included in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the concurrent resolution was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. CON. RES. 91

Whereas reduced East-West tensions and renewed efforts for peace by people in the Third World give the United States and other nations an unprecedented opportunity to reverse the $1,000,000,000,000 arms race and promote peaceful international development;

Whereas hunger victimizes approximately 20,000,000 people in the United States and 1,000,000,000 people worldwide; and

Whereas common security is based not only on legitimate defense measures but also on all people having an opportunity to meet their basic needs for food, shelter, health care, education, and work with dignity; to live in a safe and healthful environment; and to enjoy human rights, including the right to participate in decisions affecting their lives: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring),

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This resolution may be cited as the "Harvest of Peace Resolution".

SEC. 2. STATEMENTS OF POLICY.

(a) STEPS TO HELP ACHIEVE COMMON SECURITY.—It is the sense of the Congress that the United States should help achieve common security by reducing the world's reliance on the military and redirecting resources to peaceful efforts toward overcoming hunger and poverty and meeting basic human needs by—

(1) negotiating agreements with the Soviet Union for substantial and verifiable reductions in overall military forces and spending, and urging other nations to reduce their military forces and spending, with the goal of halving worldwide military spending by the year 2000;

(2) reducing military assistance and arms sales to developing nations and urging other nations to do likewise;

(3) encouraging peaceful settlement of conflicts through regional and international negotiations;

(4) providing increased assistance to developing nations to overcome hunger and poverty, to reduce debt burdens, to promote human rights and people's participation in political decisions affecting them, to ensure sustainable development, and to protect the environment;

(5) increasing support domestically for programs that address human needs;

(6) helping defense industries and their employees convert to productive nondefense work; and

(7) reducing the Federal deficit.

(b) ACHIEVING COMMON SECURITY SHOULD BE A PRIMARY POLICY OBJECTIVE.—It is the further sense of the Congress that the United States should make fostering common security through the initiatives described in subsection (a) a primary foreign and domestic policy objective.

TRIBUTE TO FORMER MAYOR MARGARET HANCE, PHOENIX, AZ

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, I rise to pay tribute to a dedicated public servant. Margaret Hance, Phoenix' first woman mayor, died April 29, 1990. I had the pleasure and opportunity to work with Margaret during the late seventies and early eighties. She always worked hard for the cause of cities and came to my office armed with the facts and figures to support her arguments. Yet she never neglected to temper her seriousness with humor.

As the mayor of Phoenix and a leader in two national local government organizations, the National League of Cities and the U.S. Conference of Mayors, Mayor Hance was a determined fighter for Phoenix and other cities. She believed that good city government and healthy, vibrant cities reflected the strength of our form of government. Many of my colleagues in the Senate knew her because she was a national spokesperson for cities while she was mayor of Phoenix.

Mayor Hance frequently visited my office between 1980 and 1983, when we worked together on securing highway discretionary funding to complete the Papago Freeway. She led Phoenix into the development of a modern freeway system and was quick to remind me that Phoenix was not looking for a Federal handout to solve its problems. Because she believed so strongly in local governments' ability to solve problems, she played a major role in getting the Arizona Legislature to approve a bill to fund local transportation projects.

I remember how determined she was to convince Federal officials that the Urban Development Action Grant Program and the Urban Parks Program should benefit not only the Nation's older cities but also Sun Belt cities. She was very proud of that success. Over the years at budget and appropriation times, the Arizona delegation could expect to see Mayor Hance fighting hard and successfully to protect the funding for community development grants, mass transit funds, and general revenue sharing.

Mayor Hance once explained to a reporter why she initially ran for public office. "One of the reasons I originally decided to run," she said, "was that I felt I could do more for parks and recreation" as a city council member. After two terms on the council, "I decided to take upward mobility. I was told a woman could not be elected mayor of Phoenix for another 10 years," she said. "But I was successful."

Not only was Margaret successful in that 1975 election, but she won every precinct in the city. Her margin for victory would increase in the campaign to follow! With Margaret Hance at the helm, Phoenix experienced 8 years of explosive growth. And when she retired in 1983, she left a list of accomplishments that included approval of the Papago Freeway, a citywide system of mountain parks, installation of hundreds of miles of improved streets, and a nearly 50-percent increase in employment.

What Margaret Hance accomplished, she did with style and grace. Her wit and charm are legendary. One of the best Washington stories about her involves my former Senate colleague and friend, Barry Goldwater. He and "Margie," as she was known to Barry, met soon after President Reagan was inaugurated. Mayor Hance and Senator Goldwater exchanged pleasantries, and Margaret began to tell Barry about how the President's election success had been started by Barry years ago.

Barry countered with how grand and successful Mayor Margie was. He started to reminisce about his service on the Phoenix City Council and exclaimed how she had the best job in politics as mayor of Phoenix. Mayor Hance reportedly drew a slow breath and in her matter-of-fact tone said to Barry, "Senator, that is easy for you to say. You live 2,000 miles away from your constituents. Mine know my street address and phone number!" But anyone who knew her and saw her as mayor understood how much she loved the job and her city. She is going to be sorely missed.

SENATOR BOREN ON AMERICA'S ROLE IN THE WORLD

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, our colleague, Senator BOREN, recently wrote an article, published in the Washington Post, arguing that a changed world calls for a new vision of the United States role in it.

Senator BOREN argues that as the perceived Soviet threat declines, America's allies around the world will feel that they do not need U.S. protection any longer. In addition, with an increase in their own prosperity, they do not need us economically as much as they once did. All of this adds up to a declining willingness of our friends and allies to follow the U.S. lead on international issues.

In response to this challenge to the U.S. position in the world, Senator BOREN concludes that the United States cannot afford to rely on the same foreign policy tools put in place by the Truman administration 45 years ago. He proposes that we link foreign aid to the purchase of American products, that the staffing of U.S. embassies abroad should reflect a greater emphasis on promoting our economic interests, and that the student exchange program be greatly increased.

These and other recommendations by Senator BOREN make eminently good sense, and they deserve thoughtful consideration by the President and Congress. I ask unanimous consent that the full text of Senator BOREN'S excellent article be printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, May 2, 1990]

. . . FOR A MODEL NATION

(By David L. Boren)

For the past four decades, America's allies have been willing to follow this country's lead largely because of the perceived threat from the Soviet Union and the Eastern bloc. As long as there was a threat, they needed the shield of American military protection, especially when we were bearing so much of the economic burden of paying for it.

But now that this threat is greatly reduced, many will feel that they do not need our protection anymore. As a result, they will be far less willing to follow our lead on matters of international importance to us. Nor do our allies need us economically the way they did in the '50s, when we had nine of the 10 largest banks in the world and two-thirds of the world's assets and markets. We began the '90s with none of the top 20 banks and an asset share less than half that of 40 years ago.

Does this mean that the United States, which has led the world in the 20th century, will be automatically reduced to a bit player on the world stage in the 21st? It could happen if we squander the opportunities we have in this decade to reorder our priorities. They must be seized quickly for they may not come again.

A different set of assets will be needed for a leadership role in the next century. Economic strength along with the moral force of America's political and social example as a model for others will be more important. While we must remain prepared to deal with a variety of military threats, overall military strength will be less important.

Those who doubt that economic competition is more and more replacing military competition should examine what is happening in the intelligence field. An increasing share of the espionage directed against the United States comes from spying by foreign governments against private American companies aimed at stealing commercial secrets to gain a national economic advantage.

There is no time to waste. We need to realign our foreign policy to advance our national economic interests. What should we do?

First, change the way we give foreign aid by giving more in the form of credits to be used solely to buy American products produced with American jobs. Recent polls show opposition to foreign aid running at 80 percent. They are a clear indication that the United States will not be able politically to reach out to newly emerging democracies unless we develop a way for American taxpayers to see a return for their tax dollars in terms of more jobs at home.

West Germany and Japan are following this policy. Over 90 percent of their recent aid to Poland and Hungary came in the form of restricted credits. From 1984 to 1987, aid in the form of such credits given by other nations increased from $4 billion to $12 billion. Our failure to have a "Buy American Plan" has cost Americans billions of dollars in lost exports in the past five years alone.

We must remember that burden sharing in helping other nations also means influence sharing and a diminished role for the United States economically and politically in the future. A Buy American Plan would enable us to expand our influence, help others and help ourselves at the same time.

Second, change the perspective of American embassies and missions to give greater emphasis to supporting our economic interests. We must recruit more people into the Foreign Service and intelligence agencies with economic skills and training. Right now, two-thirds of our embassies do not even have a commercial officer in the embassy to assist our businesses. When we do have a commercial officer, it is three times as likely that the official is a foreign national.

Embassies must be regarded as outposts to further our economic interests. We must put behind us the attitude that commercial sections of diplomatic missions are nuisances best relegated to basements or annexes. If we don't restore our economic influence we will soon be without political influence.

Third, dramatically increase student exchange programs for college undergraduates—especially with the Soviet Union, Eastern Europe and Latin America. Such a program serves our interests in two ways. It forges bonds with the future generation of leaders of nations of growing importance to us. It also helps sensitize our students to the need to become more international in their training and outlook. Doubling the size of the Peace Corps would be another important step in the right direction.

We can't compete if we can't speak the world's languages and don't understand the world's cultures. Our educational system is woefully insular. One hundred percent of Japanese high school graduates have studied at least six years of English, while a tiny fraction of 1 percent of our students have studied Japanese. For every 30 students who come from abroad to study in the United States, only one American student ventures into another nation for study and living experiences. The nation of Malaysia, with a population of 14 million, sends more students to study abroad than does the United States.

Of course, a comprehensive plan to rebuild our economy should include many other initiatives. Repairing the entire education system, planning for the trasition from a military economy to a civilian economy and developing an international partnership to share the cost of improving the environment must all be part of the plan. It is essential to overhaul tax policy to match the tax incentives for saving and investment given by other nations so that our cost of capital can compete with theirs.

Above all, we must realize that we can't afford to continue to rely upon the same foreign policy tools put in place by the Truman administration 45 years ago. A new world calls for a new vision for our role in it. It has been said that those who mill around at the crossroads of history do so at their own peril. It is urgent that we heed that warning.

THANKS TO DICK McCORMACK: HIGHER PRIORITY FOR ECONOMIC ISSUES

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, for years many Senators have complained that the Department of State has downgraded economic issues when assessing the national interest in negotiations with Japan.

It always seemed that diplomatic concerns somehow did not include the United States economic interest in our relationship with Japan—as though Japan's growing economic clout was irrelevant.

However, an article in yesterday's Journal of Commerce notes that that policy has been changing under Secretary of State James Baker. In fact, the article cites officials in the Commerce Department praising the new stance of the Department of State, taken as a result of the extremely effective efforts by Undersecretary of State for Economic Affairs, Richard T. McCormack, in the so-called "structural talks" with Japan on opening up Japanese trading and commercial practices to foreign goods.

The Journal of Commerce quotes Dick McCormack: "When you are engaged in the task of trying to prevent world war III, which is what has gone on here for the past 40 years, that of course gets a lot of high profile attention, but because the geopolitical factors have improved to a very large degree, there is a renewed emphasis on economic matters."

Of course, Ambassador McCormack is very well known for his years on the Senate staff, as well as the many years he has spent at the State Department, so his views are no surprise, I congratulate him for his fine work in this matter.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the article from the Journal of Commerce, May 1, 1990, be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Journal of Commerce, May 1, 1990]

TRADE ROLE EARNS STATE DEPARTMENT HIGH MARKS

(By Keith M. Rockwell)

WASHINGTON.—In recent years, mentioning the "State Department" to U.S. trade officials or business leaders was likely to bring a shudder.

When trade disputes arose, the department was almost a sure vote against taking any course that might impair strategic or geopolitical relations.

State's approach exasperated the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative, the Commerce Department and many U.S.-based multinational corporations.

This is changing.

The pace may not be fast enough for some, but State's former critics concede that trade and other international economic issues are receiving higher priority around Foggy Bottom these days.

Moreover, as U.S.-Soviet tensions ease and as the focus for Eastern Europe shifts more to economics from military strategy, the trend is likely to continue and accelerate in coming years.

"When you are engaged in the task of trying to prevent World War III, which is what has gone on here for the past 40 years, that of course gets a lot of high profile attention . . . (but) because the geopolitical factors have improved to a very large degree, there is a renewed emphasis on economic matters," said Richard T. McCormack, Undersecretary for economic and agricultural affairs at State.

State has been particularly involved in two critical areas of U.S. international economic policy: the economic restructuring of Eastern Europe and the ongoing talks with Japan on structural issues which contribute to the persistently wide U.S. trade deficits with Japan.

Officials with Commerce and USTR warmly praised Mr. McCormack and his staff for their role in the structural talks that, so far, have exceeded expectations.

"We would not have ended up with the outcome we did and we would have no hope of gaining a final agreement" without Mr. McCormack's efforts, said one Commerce Department official.

U.S. business leaders have been impressed with State's involvement in the economic side of the reforms in Eastern Europe. The department has sought advice from the business community and has provided timely information on the market potential, says William T. Archey, vice president for international at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

The interest shown in economic issues is underscored, he said, by a request from Deputy Secretary Lawrence Eagleburger that the chamber survey all 60 of its overseas offices on the economic competence of the U.S. embassies in Eastern Europe.

But like many business officials, Mr. Archey retains some reservations. It will take years, he said, before State fully embraces the notion that trade is a vital component of U.S. national security.

"Over the last 15-20 years, their primary role was to ensure that trade issues never came to the forefront of the policy process. . . . Foreign service officers are congenitally incapable of dealing with trade issues," he said.

One senior administration official seconds Mr. Archey's view that it may be difficult for some foreign service officers to break with the policies of the past.

"Obviously State has been actively involved but basically as a naysayer over the past eight years and probably even as far back as the late 1930s," that official said.

The low-water mark for the State Department's credibility with the trade community probably occurred in January 1988 when a senior State official misled reporters by telling them a Japanese proposal to open the construction market "will meet what we want for opening the Japanese market."

Industry and trade agency officials reacted with outrage, pointing out that Tokyo's offer fell far short of U.S. demands. Indeed, it was months before a deal on construction was reached, and the issue remains unresolved two years later.

The abrupt shift in attitude at State is directly linked to the arrival of James A. Baker III as Secretary in early 1989. As Secretary of the Treasury from 1985-88, Mr. Baker was perhaps the major player in the global international economic policy scene and his interest in the subject remains keen.

As protecting U.S. economic interests abroad and improving American competitiveness became relatively larger policy concerns, few believed Mr. Baker would be content to sit on the sidelines in any debate on them.

"The landscape has changed. Today economic policy is more important strategically than military policy. For Mr. Baker there are basically two issues today; getting involved in trade or peace in the Middle East. Which would you chose?" asked one senior U.S. trade official.

In fact, given Mr. Baker's powerful connection to the president and his expertise in economics, some administration officials were surprised State did not inject itself into trade policy earlier. Some trade agency officials feared that after Mr. Bush's inauguration, State would muscle in on their turf.

Mr. Baker had other things on his plate, however, such as arms control and Middle East peace talks. Furthermore, State had ceded a lot of trade territory in the past three decades and Commerce and USTR were in no mood to return it.

Despite the greater emphasis given trade by senior State officials, there will continue to be skepticism here about whether economic issues will win a high place in the hearts and minds of the department's bureaucracy.

"There is still a tendency to keep relationships or issues in the context of geopolitics," and Mr. Archey, who strongly supports the change of tack at State.

LAW OF THE SEA—AGAIN

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, the Convention on the Law of the Sea is a hardy perennial weed that keeps coming back and back, no matter how hard you try to pull it out by its roots. And it is a weed that remains obnoxious.

The Law of the Sea proposal was soundly rejected by President Reagan in 1982 because the deep seabed mining provisions were deeply flawed. Indeed, President Reagan rightly concluded that these provisions were deeply detrimental to American commercial, economic, and political interests.

Time has demonstrated how correct President Reagan was in his assessment of this dangerous treaty, which would destroy U.S. rights to seabed mining on the high seas, and transfer the fruit of our technology to the United Nations and the Third World without recompense.

Yesterday, Mr. President, the Committee on Foreign Relations heard testimony which brought forth the same old discredited aguments in favor of resuscitating the treaty. But fortunately, the Committee also heard from one of the most distinguished experts in the United States on this matter, former Assistant Secretary of State for Oceans and Environment, James L. Malone, now an adjunct professor at the Naval Postgraduate School.

Professor Malone was able to review the progress that the United States has been able to make since 1982 as a result of President's Reagan's decision. His fine testimony is worthy of the consideration of all my colleagues.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Professor Malone's testimony be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY JAMES L. MALONE

Thank you, Mr. Chairman, for this opportunity to appear before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in today's overview hearing on the law of the sea. I appreciate the chance to present my views on the current status of the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea and United States ocean policy. I stress that these are my personal views and do not necessarily represent the position of the Naval Postgraduate School with which I am currently associated.

Mr. Chairman, the grave predictions that accompanied President Reagan's decision not to sign the 1982 UN Law of the Sea Convention have never materialized. Although the United States was not a signatory to the Convention, clearly it has been a full partner and practicing member of the world community that adheres to the law of the sea.

The decision not to sign has often been the centerpiece of debate about U.S. ocean policy. Erroneous notions implied that the United States was not committed to the rule of law and that Washington had thrown away a great deal of hard work that had gone into the Conference for so many years. Nothing was further from the truth.

President Reagan's decision on the 1982 Convention followed an intensive review by the administration to study whether American interests could be protected and served outside of the Convention. The conclusion reached was that the deep seabed mining provisions—Part XI and Annexes III and IV—were deeply flawed.

The President determined that while the other parts of the Convention served United States interests well, the seabed mining provisions were detrimental to American commercial, economic, and political interests, particularly in providing access to seabed minerals and the establishment of a sound international regime in which U.S. influence could be felt. The text on seabed mining was unacceptable to the Reagan administration and is not likely to win the support of the Bush administration.

American objections to the seabed mining regime of the Convention have been well known since July 1982, when President Reagan announced that the United States would not sign the Convention. The United States wants access to deep seabed minerals through the operation of a regime that is based on sound economic and commercial principles, and the United States wants no undesirable precedents set for future international regimes. The intentional design of the Convention's seabed mining provisons to promote collectivist economic policies remains a fundamental problem.

Many American concerns are shared by the United Kingdom and the Federal Republic of Germany which, like the United States, have not signed the Convention, and such concerns have been expressed by other industrial states that have signed. The While House analysis in 1982 was that the Convention could not achieve Senate advice and consent to ratification. The Reagan administration then acted in good faith in not signing a Convention that the United States could not ratify. Today, the U.S. Senate still does not seem willing to accept only symbolic changes in Part XI of the Convention.

Indeed, it is quite possible that changes in areas other than Part XI could be demanded in the future. But clearly any effort to achieve acceptance of less than very substantial alterations in Part XI cannot be successful.

The United States has pursued deep seabed mining interests outside of the framework presented in the Convention. Many argued that this could not be done, but it has. The United States has chosen to protect its interest outside the Convention's seabed mining regime by continuing to affirm customary international law that assures the right to engage in deep seabed mining as a high seas freedom. The Reagan administration believes that a determined pursuit of American interests would eventually play a constructive role in establishing a new climate to address U.S. concerns about the Convention and, at the very least, would provide a firm basis for a regime outside the Convention.

The United Kingdom, the Federal Republic of Germany, France, Japan, Italy, and the Soviet Union have enacted national deep seabed mining laws similar to the U.S. Deep Seabed Hard Mineral Resources Act. Moreover, after successful negotiations among the multinational Western deep seabed mining consortia to resolve their mine site conflicts, the United States, the United Kingdom, the Federal Republic of Germany, France, Japan, Belgium, Italy, and The Netherlands signed the Provisional Understanding Regarding Deep Seabed Matters in August 1984, implementing these settlements and providing a basis for future cooperation and a means of avoiding future conflicts.

Thereafter, a joint government and industry effort produced a settlement of the only remaining mine site conflicts between the claims of four consortia and the mine site claim of the Soviet Union. This effort resulted in an agreement between Canada, Belgium, Italy, The Netherlands, and the Soviet Union on deep seabed mining. Diplomatic notes have been exchanged between the Soviet Union and the United Kingdom, the Federal Republic of Germany, and the United States, incorporating the same mutual obligations.

Many experts in marine affairs have recommended that, despite its objections, the United States should participate in the Preparatory Commission established by the Final Act and Resolution I of the UN Law of the Sea Conference. But President Reagan's decision not to send an observer was intended to signify the seriousness of United States concerns and to protest the fact that the Preparatory Commission's mandate was to implement the provisions of the Convention, which were objectionable to the United States, not to alter them. To participate in the commission would give the erroneous impression that the United States had found Part XI acceptable.

Furthermore, the United States strongly objected to a UN General Assembly resolution that authorized the use of funds from the regular UN budget to finance the activities of the Preparatory Commission. President Reagan emphasized in a December 1982 statement that the United States regarded such an authorization as not only adverse to the interest of the United States, but also as an improper assessment within the meaning of the UN Charter, thus not legally binding on the United States. The United States therefore withheld from the United Nations its pro-rata share of the cost of funding the commission.

Over time, other states began to accept the reality that Part XI of the Convention had serious flaws and that eventually a new international environment would be needed to discuss and to remove the objections of the United States and other countries to the seabed mining provisions of the Convention. Until clear evidence existed of a willingness in an international forum to address the fundamental seabed mining problems of the Convention text, it would be counterproductive for the United States to reenter negotiations. Yet the willingness may not materialize and other alternatives may have to be found. Indeed, the best scenario may be to protect pioneer investors under Resolution II of Annex I of the Final Act of the Conference, with the Convention text problem being set to one side. This might be an acceptable solution considering the lack of any prospect for deep seabed mining for many years.

Much of the work of the Preparatory Commission reveals a growing understanding that the Convention seabed mining regime still does not address existing political and economic realities and that arrangements must be found to adapt the regime to these realities. The Soviet Union and some developing countries appear to be coming to similar conclusions, but other developing countries remain intransigent.

There is no need for precipitous U.S. action with regard to the 1982 Law of the Sea Convention. Under reasonable economic assumptions, commercial deep seabed mining will not occur until well into the next century at the earliest. In the late 1970s, an era of high raw materials prices and widespread predictions of shortages, seabed mining appeared to be a feasible alternative. Since then, the consumption rate has leveled off considerably and prices have plunged. In the summer of 1986, raw material prices reached their lowest level in real terms since the 1930s. Although some prices have recovered since then, real prices for metals remain depressed. The continued slow growth of consumption and the unused capacity in most metals indicate those prices will rise only modestly over the next decade.

There is growing international appreciation for the U.S. decision not to sign the Law of the Sea Convention. A number of countries are increasingly emulating U.S. free-market principles around the globe, and do not intend to ratify the Convention until Part XI is remedied. The initial debate framed largely around the North/South and New International Economic Order (NIEO) dialogue has diminished in importance as other countries begin to understand and appreciate the fact that the United States and many of its allies represent the biggest market for the mineral products of developing countries. The world socialist community has continued to place greater emphasis on market approaches.

The United States, I believe, recognizes that the Convention has widespread support. More than 159 nations have signed the Convention; yet ratification by the required 60 states has been slow and mostly by states that provide a modest proportion of world gross national product. Entry of the Convention into force still seems to be some time away, and there is little or no prospect that any large Western industrialized country or major Eastern European nation will ratify the Convention before the seabed mining regime has been adjusted.

In 1983, President Reagan issued an Ocean Policy Statement indicating that the United States was prepared to accept and act in accordance with the balance of interests relating to traditional uses of the oceans, such as navigation and overflight. The United States would recognize the rights of other states in the waters off their coasts, as reflected in the Convention, so long as the rights and freedoms of the United States and others under international law were recognized by these coastal states. Thus, the President made clear that the United States would respect not just the legal rights of others, but the negotiated quid pro quos, as long as others respect its legal rights and those same quid pro quos. The United States in this manner demonstrated its respect of the rule of law. In fact, with the exception of the seabed mining and settlement of disputes provisions, the United States and many other states have accepted the substantive provisions of the Convention as the best evidence of the customary international law of the sea, which is binding on all states.

The Bush administration has also relied on the 1983 Ocean Policy Statement as its fundamental policy. The United States has been acting in a manner consistent with the text of the Convention, excepting the seabed regime. That policy has been expressed often in congressional correspondence; it has been the basis for the application of U.S. domestic laws; it forms the grounds for the evaluation of the actions of other states; and it is the support the United States uses to justify its actions internationally with regard to the world ocean and to protest the actions of others.

In extensive consultations with other states, American diplomats have found that whereas many countries regret that the United States did not sign the Convention, President Reagan's policy was well received as a positive approach to dealing with coastal jurisdiction and other uses of the sea.

Substantive provisions of the Convention (other than seabed mining and dispute settlement) are already part of customary international law and found in the current practice of states. Coastal states are already applying the principles contained in the 1982 Convention. Over 90 coastal states, for instance, claim exclusive economic zones or comparable fisheries zones. In December 1988, the United States joined more than 100 nations in establishing a 12-mile territorial sea.

The United States has been at the forefront to preserve and promote traditional international navigational freedoms. When excessive national claims over the high seas persist, the United States has not hesitated to assert its right through diplomacy and through peaceful exerises of its warships.

The United States has conducted regular multilateral and bilateral consultation with many governments on ocean law and policy. The talks have been very effective. Additionally, the United States has tried to work with key states to encourage conformity of their legislation with the rules articulated in the 1982 Convention. There is a remarkably good record of implementation of the balance of interests between coastal jurisdiction and maritime rights reflected in the Convention.

Through the Freedom of Navigational Rights Program, originally established in 1979 and vigorously reasserted since 1983, the U.S. Department of Defense executes an assertion of navigational rights on a continuing worldwide basis. In a typical year, 30–40 naval exercises are conducted. These exercises are undertaken to challenge coastal maritime claims that are excessive and not in accord with customary international law as reflected in the Convention. The assertions are subject to definite guidelines and interagency review, and are executed against both friendly and unfriendly coastal states. Such assertions are clear evidence of U.S. attention to excessive claims and interest in preventing the establishment of state practice that could give excessive maritime claims legitimacy under international law. The most noteworthy U.S. assertions of rights were in the Gulf of Sidra in 1986 and in the Black Sea in 1988. Outstanding differences with the Soviet Union on the rights of warships to innocent passage stemming from the 1988 Black Sea assertion as well as other incidents have now been favorably resolved with the September 23, 1989 Joint Statement by the United States and the Soviet Union on innocent passage of ships in the territorial sea.

The elaboration of the regime of transit passage through straits used for international navigation was one of the significant accomplishments of the Law of the Sea negotiations. The consensus established in the Convention represented a clear agreement by the international community of what has been and continues to be state practice of both coastal states and states navigating through and over straits. The Convention clearly recognized this new regime, and current state practice is in accord with it.

The new archipelagic regime for oceanic archipelagoes was one of the basic compromises between navigational interests and coastal states. The United States did not support the establishment of the concept of the archipelagic state consisting of islands separated by interconnecting waters, but accepted the regime. President Reagan's ocean policy statement made it clear that the United States would respect the rights of archipelagic states so long as the rights and freedoms and maritime states were recognized by such states.

The Convention established (in Article 76) the criteria for locating the outer edge of the continental shelf. Currently, there is general agreement in the international community that Article 76 of the Convention applies. The United States believes that the criteria in Article 76 should be applied by it and other states. The U.S. Interagency Group on Law of the Sea and Ocean Policy has established procedures to ensure that government maps incorporate these criteria and that customary international legal norms are correctly applied. Procedures for careful review of the maps prior to publications have been established.

In March 1983, the President established by proclamation the exclusive economic zone (EEZ) of the United States simultaneously with the issuance of his statement on U.S. Ocean Policy. The proclamation fully reflects the principles of customary international law reflected in the Convention. The EEZ added almost 4 billion acres of coastal zone area to the United States and its possessions. In these areas, the United States has sovereign rights over living and mineral resources development and conservation. Within the EEZ, the United States continues to apply the provisions of the Magnuson Fisheries Management and Conservation Act (Magnuson Act) to the development and conservation of fisheries.

In this connection, a larger number of bilateral agreements elaborating the terms and conditions of foreign fishing off American coasts have been negotiated. Coinciding with the Magnuson Act, the level of foreign fishing off U.S. coasts has continued to decline as the domestic fishing industry has grown and developed. Today almost no foreign fishing occurs in the U.S. EEZ.

As a consequece of the extensions by Pacific Island states of their maritime jurisdiction over fisheries within their 200-mile EEZs, the United States negotiated a tuna fishing treaty with 15 of the Pacific Island states. The treaty, which entered into force on June 15, 1988, established terms and conditions for U.S. flag fishing vessels to catch tuna in about 10 million square miles of the South Pacific Ocean. Much of this area is within the 200-mile EEZs of the Pacific Island states. The treaty is consistent with the Magnuson Act and the March 1983 U.S. EEZ proclamation. Further, it is in accord with the American interpretation of Article 64 of the Convention, providing for regional management and conservation of highly migratory species of tuna that are not subject to U.S. jurisdiction. Washington believes that the treaty will prevent any seizure of American vessels and subsequent U.S. retaliation mandated by the Magnuson Act.

The United States continues to promote a strong policy aimed at the preservation and enhancement of the marine environment. Working through the International Maritime Organization and other international agencies, efforts have focused on regional problems. United States participation in the UN Environment Program and its regional seas effort, including the Cartagena Convention and Associated Oil Spill Protocol for the Caribbean and the Environmental Convention for the South Pacific under the South Pacific Regional Environmental Program are recent examples. Under the London Dumping Convention, the United States took a leading role in protecting the marine environment from the dumping of waste and other matter into the world's oceans.

American interest in encouraging marine scientific research has been accomplished in part by not asserting jurisdiction over marine scientific research in the U.S. EEZ. The United States has, however, recognized the right of coastal states to exercise jurisdiction over marine scientific research within 200 nautical miles of their coasts, provided that such jurisdiction is consistent with customary international law. This position solved a dilemma previously facing U.S. marine scientists who had been unable to secure permission to conduct research in foreign 200-mile zones because the United States had not previously recognized foreign coastal state jurisdiction in these zones.

Under present American ocean policy, there has been a continually increasing number of requests for research in foreign EEZs by American scientists. The work of the State Department's Office of Marine Science and Technology Affairs in securing research vessel clearances has had a beneficial impact on establishing and promoting state practice clarifying coastal state obligations and rights. The Conventions' provisions on marine scientific research are routinely implemented to enhance U.S. interest and to contribute to the development of a fair predictable worldwide regime for such research.

Mr. Chairman, I believe, U.S. ocean policy continues to be active and working well. As Washington seeks to protect and promote national interest, U.S. policy seems to address every major portion of the Convention.

Although Convention-based deep seabed mining will not occur in the foreseeable future because of the world metals market and the unacceptability of the Convention's seabed mining regime to the United States, other Western industrialized states, and major Eastern European nations, the rest of the Convention's provisions, other than those on dispute settlement with only very minor exceptions, represent customary law. These provisions are now accepted by most nations as the law of the sea.

The present prospects for correcting the seabed mining portions of the Convention in the Preparatory Commission or in any other forum are not favorable, even in view of recent rhetoric from developing countries and others to the contrary. Such assertions have been made frequently in the past and not fulfilled.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman, I would be pleased to respond to your questions.

TELL IT LIKE IT IS NOT

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I rise today to comment on the Second Annual Dick Darman tell it like it is not speech to America.

This year the subject of his speech is his belief that Americans are unwilling to express themselves with romantic voyages into the unknown. Mr. Darman believes Americans want too much security. He believes we need to reduce the insurance and entitlements that protect them. He believes they are not willing to run the risks which every American hero from Orville Wright to JOHN GLENN has braved.

He called for a revival of America's "love of freedom, respect for individual rights, distrust of excessively centralized authority, appreciation of markets, hope, optimism, confident faith in the future, heroization of risk-taking, and pioneering spirit."

He ended his dreary assessment of Americans with a reference to a painting by Albert Pinkham Ryder called "Toilers of the Sea." In it, he said, "The sea is dark. The boat is less than secure. But the moon is a bright and shining light. And with it is a guide, one senses the toilers will reach the distant horizon."

Mr. President, I have visited the Ryder exhibition, which is on display at the National Museum of American Art, and believe there is a painting more appropriate for Mr. Darman and President Bush. The painting is entitled "MacBeth and the Witches." It is a dark and forboding picture of the tragically doomed MacBeth confronting the tormentors of his existence.

President Bush has five witches and they are calling to him as well. Witch No. 1 is his budget. It is full of unrealistic economic assumptions which have been discredited by real world economic conditions. It inaccurately assesses our domestic problems and inadequately accounts for reduced external threats. So pathetic was this budget that not a single Member of the House of Representatives could be found to introduce it yesterday for a vote.

Witch No. 2 is the fiscal deficit. In January, the President proudly told the American people in his State of the Union that the deficit was under control. He told the American people that we had achieved the $100 billion figure required last year and were well on our way to eliminating it altogether. But in March alone the deficit was $53 billion and for the first 6 months of this fiscal year we had a deficit of $150 billion. By all accounts we are back in the world of $200 billion deficits.

It is folly for Mr. Darman to be telling the American people that we need to save and invest more while he is planning to borrow another $300 billion to pay this year's bills. The medicine he prescribes is not the medicine he takes.

It is also folly for Mr. Darman to be calling for another budget summit. Last year he broke his word with Congress after a similar summit. Anyone in the legislative branch who trusts him enough this time around should be very careful where he sits.

Witch No. 3 is the savings and loan bailout. President Bush's No. 1 domestic spending priority is growing like the carniverous plant in the movie "Little Shop of Horrors." Thus far this fiscal year American taxpayers have poured over $50 billion into the mouth of this beast. Soon, it may devour us all.

Witch No. 4 is the status of 25 percent of Americans under the age of 6 who currently live in poverty. For this crisis the President and his budget director prescribe a diet of self-reliance and visitations to the Ryder exhibit. For these Americans, upon whom all of us will depend in less than 20 years, we are encouraged to believe that less security is what is required.

Mr. President, the final witch tormenting President Bush and his Budget Director is the very Federal bureaucracy which they pretend to dislike. In the past 10 years the growth of the Federal Government's power and control has been phenomenal. In health care, transportation, energy, agriculture, the environment, education, banking, and most other areas of American life, the very leaders who have been talking smaller government have been quietly but steadily building their base of power.

Regrettably, Mr. Darman appears to be continuing the game of criticizing the devices of his own making. For the power base which most of us here recognize as the strongest rests under the hall where Mr. Darman claims to hear the refrain of "Alice's Restaurant."

The Office of Management and Budget has become a separate kingdom with powerful lords controlling vast territorial authority. A recent article in the Washington Post, which I will ask unanimous consent to have included in the RECORD, describes the power of four of King Richard's Lords. These non-elected personnel are making policy decisions that in many ways are more important than the elected representatives of the people.

Mr. Darman and President Bush will probably continue to ignore the five witches that warn them of impending disaster. One can almost hear Macbeth's soliloquy echoing after Mr. Darman's speech:

Tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow creeps in this petty pace from day to day
Till the last syllable of recorded time,
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
Their way to dusty death.

Out, out brief candle
Life is but a walking shadow,
A poor lone player that struts and frets
His hour upon the stage and is heard no more.
It is a tale full of sound and fury signifying nothing."

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the article to which I referred be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, Apr. 25, 1990]

"PADs" WISE TO WAYS OF POWER

(By Steven Mufson)

Thomas A. Scully, a lanky fellow with the face of a schoolboy, holds the unheralded title of associate director for programs in the Office of Management and Budget, a name worthy of a dutiful bean counter.

But the title is deceiving. As one of four appointed program aides working directly under Budget Director Richard G. Darman, Scully wields power that outstrips that of most Cabinet secretaries. During March, the 32-year-old Scully hammered out a deal on food stamps with key Senate staff aides, held the administration line on limiting food subsidies and killed a move to forgive delinquent graduate school loans.

Shuttling between the Old Executive Office Building and Capitol Hill, he tried to negotiate a compromise child-care bill that would placate top congressional Democrats as well as conservatives in the Republican Party. In between, he squeezed in time to review testimony to be given by Veterans Affairs officials and he mediated a dispute between the Agricultural Department and the Food and Drug Administration over who would regulate seafood inspection.

"The associate director is in a unique position to influence what government does," said John F. Cogan, a former associate director at the OMB who now teaches at Stanford Business School. "He is at the center of the hourglass of government. Everything goes through this little opening."

"It's incredible how much stuff you get into," said Robert Grady, 33, one of the other program associate directors, known in government circles as PADs.

Though influential, the OMB associate directors are relatively anonymous—they never testify before Congress. Instead, they work behind the scenes. As one of the two leading Bush administration representatives in the Clean Air Act talks, Grady spent virtually the entire month of February locked in a room negotiating, line by line, the terms of the bill with senior senators, including Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell (D-Maine).

Absent from the Clean Air talks were the secretaries of the Commerce, Energy and Interior departments. Environmental Protection Agency chief William K. Reilly only came to the first couple of meetings, according to a Senate aide who attended the meetings. He added that White House domestic policy adviser Roger Porter and Grady "did the talking." Although a Reilly deputy attended the talks, Grady was more than a budget scorekeeper; he played a premier role in setting environmental policy.

Created in 1921 as the Bureau of the Budget, the OMB originally was responsible only for the relatively technical task of preparing estimates of government spending. After it was moved from the Treasury to the Executive Office of the President by Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1939, the budget office and its 600 staff members grew into a powerful tool for exerting White House control over policy. It took on management functions in 1970 and, in 1973, the PADs were created to provide a layer of political appointees over the agency's career technical staff.

Especially in times of fiscal constraint, the OMB plays a crucial part in talks between the executive branch and Congress. In the Clean Air talks, for instance, the Bush administration insisted that the cost of the package to the economy come to less than $21 billion—a cost analysis done by the OMB.

Hard financial times also give the OMB a central role in overseeing Cabinet departments and mediating disputes between agencies. An agency can't take a public position on pension reform, for example, without checking with Scully's office. Five people under Scully do nothing but keep track of the Labor Department. "We make sure everyone who works for the president is on the same wavelength," Scully said.

This often comes as a surprise to Cabinet secretaries new to the ways of Washington, and even Washington veterans sometimes chafe.

"They control everything I do," said Anthony J. Principi, deputy secretary of veterans affairs and a former congressional staff aide. "Sometimes it's tough to deal with the second-guessing. At times I feel I'm not managing my own department."

At the OMB, there are four associate directors for programs, each with a staff of 40 to 50 people. Grady is in charge of natural resources, environment, energy and science. Scully has the departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, Veterans Affairs and 22 smaller agencies. Janet Hale, 40, a former official at the Department of Housing and Urban Development, deals with the Treasury, Transportation, Justice, and Commerce departments, as well as drug policy and the U.S. Postal Service. Robert Howard, 57, a career staff member at the OMB, oversees the Defense Department, though Darman keeps tight control over this area.

Darman looms large over all four associate directors and rules on the most important issues. The senior OMB staff has formal meetings with Darman on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and PADs have almost daily contact with Darman.

"We didn't clear every item on Clean Air, but we knew our strategy going into the negotiations," Grady said. One OMB staff member said that because of the extent of Darman's control, a gallery of photographs of OMB PADs should be full of photos of Darman. Moreover, the budget director is said not to suffer fools gladly. One associate director politely said that Darman "makes his wishes known in very few words. He understands things quickly and makes himself understood very quickly."

But the sheer magnitude of the job of managing a trillion-dollar budget makes it inevitable that any budget director must rely on the people working beneath him.

"Aside from Cabinet officers and perhaps one or two people on the West Wing staff, they are arguably the most powerful people in the civilian side of the government," said Fred Khedouri, who was a PAD when David Stockman was budget director. Khedouri now represents the investment banking company Bear Stearns Cos. in Washington.

"I had enormous latitude on any item less than $50 million," said Deborah Steelman, who served under budget director James C. Miller III during the Reagan administration. Steelman, a lawyer who is a member of a presidential commission on Social Security and health insurance policy, adds that she also had "darn good latitude on anything complicated. The more technical the subject, the more latitude you had."

Khedouri recalled, "Many times I found myself in meetings in the White House where I might be the least senior person, but I would be the only person who really had detailed knowledge of the issue. Knowledge is certainly the currency of power in those corridors."

Loyalty and a little political savvy don't hurt either. Even Scully, the most junior PAD, has some political experience. A native of Philadelphia, he worked as a volunteer for the 1979 Bush campaign while tending bar in Alexandria during his summer vacation from the University of Virginia. He later spent four years on the staff of Sen. Slade Gorton (R-Wash.) while attending Catholic University law school at night.

Scully then worked as one of the few Republicans with the law firm of Akin Gump Strauss Hauer & Feld. Describing himself as "a hard-core Bush fan," Scully joined the Bush campaign full time in 1988 after working at the Republican convention. Last year, he served as Darman's liaison on legislative affairs.

Hale is serving in her third post in the executive branch. After coming under scrutiny for her role as deputy assistant secretary for housing at HUD during the scandal-ridden tenure of HUD Secretary Samuel Pierce, Hale has tried to keep a low profile. From 1986 to 1988, she was assistant transportation secretary responsible for developing the department's $26 billion budget. She also served as the Transportation Department representative on the enforcement coordinating group of the Cabinet-level National Drug Policy Board, giving her a glimpse into the interagency battles she now helps settle.

Robert Howard, 57, is an anomaly among the four. Originally a physicist, Howard has spent more than 20 years working at the OMB on national security issues. The OMB works more closely with the Defense Department than any other department—its staff actually moves to an office at the Pentagon to draw up budget guidelines. Moreover, Howard said, while many Cabinet secretaries play minor roles in policy, "there aren't any unimportant secretaries of defense—ever." As a result, his latitude is "narrow."

Grady is the other extreme, with his own connections to the White House. Grady grew up in New Jersey, the son of Irish Catholic Democrats who attended antiwar rallies during the Vietnam War. Partly because of their opposition to abortion, Grady's parents became Republicans.

After Grady finished at Harvard College in 1979, he went to work for former New Jersey representative Millicent Fenwick. Though Fenwick's political career fizzled after her unsuccessful run for the Senate in 1982, Grady made contacts with Bush backers. Fenwick was chairwoman of the 1980 Bush presidential campaign in New Jersey and Robert Teeter, later a Bush adviser, ran Fenwick's Senate campaign.

At age 24, Grady was hired as communications director to reverse the then-flagging fortunes of former New Jersey governor Thomas Kean. New contacts were made. Kean played tennis every Saturday with Nicholas F. Brady, now Treasury secretary and a Bush confidante. When Kean ran for reelection in 1985, he hired Teeter and Roger Ailes, who later ran Bush's 1988 campaign.

Grady went to Stanford Business School, then joined the Bush campaign in 1988. During the 90 days from Aug. 1 through Election Day, Grady wrote 60 speeches for Bush. He penned Bush's attack on Democratic candidate Michael Dukakis as being the Stealth candidate and wrote the speech Bush delivered in Boston Harbor accusing Dukakis of hypocrisy on environmental issues.

Dukakis supporters called the attack underhanded because cutbacks in federal funding had made it impossible for the state of Massachusetts to clean up the harbor. But Grady said Dukakis deserved the criticism: "It drove me crazy when Dukakis, who had once proposed dumping Massachusetts waste on the New Jersey shore, stood on our shore and pledged to stop ocean dumping."

After the election, Grady worked on the Bush transition team before joining the OMB. "I wanted a job with on-line responsibility and OMB is incredibly central to the process," Grady said. "As Mrs. Fenwick used to say, at least you have the illusion of being useful."

There are few other rewards. Because they guard the federal purse strings, OMB officials tend to make few friends in Washington. Alumni of the PAD jobs include Paul O'Neill, now chairman of Aluminum Co. of America; Timothy J. Muris, now a professor at George Mason University; Frank G. Zarb, former "energy czar" under president Gerald Ford and now chairman of the investment banking firm Smith Barney, Harris, Upham & Co. Inc., and Alton G. Keel Jr., deputy chairman for international banking at Riggs National Bank. "This town runs on not making enemies," said Steelman. "In that job, that was hard to do."

The Clean Air bill is one example. Many industrialists are unhappy about how much they'll have to pay to cut pollution, and some environmentalists are unhappy that the bill doesn't go further toward cleaning up the air.

Unfazed, Grady said, "The environmental community had always looked at the OMB as the bad guys trying to shut down the Environmental Protection Agency. There has been a total sea change on our attitude on the environment." Grady said he looks forward to attending the signing ceremony at the White House.

His will be one of the least familiar faces to the public at that ceremony. But to members of Congress and the Cabinet, it will be familiar.

PADs have always been in that position. When Khedouri was at the OMB, farm issues were part of his portfolio. Once, Khedouri and then-agriculture secretary John R. Block went to meet with then-Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. and Sen. Robert J. Dole (R-Kan.).

As they walked into the room, Dole looked at Khedouri and said, "Well, I'm glad to see they sent the real Secretary of Agriculture."

MINIMUM STATE SHARE IN HOUSING PROGRAMS

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, earlier today I proposed an amendment to the national affordable housing bill (S. 566) which was included with other amendments and agreed to in the markup of the bill by the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs. In speaking to the amendment, I stated as follows:

Mr. Chairman, I shall be brief. I have introduced a bill (S. 2491) which would protect the interests of the lesser populated States in certain housing programs administered by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. It is cosponsored by Senators Grassley, Jeffords, Burdick, Burns, and Baucus. I am pleased to say that the bill has been accepted by the Committee as an amendment to the Committee print of S. 566.

The lesser populated States, as in many other categorical programs, are concerned that they be included on a fair and equitable basis. In the case of the categorical housing programs we find that they generally are targeted to urban areas, thus shortchanging, if you will, nonurban areas. For example, the $44 million Nehemiah Housing Opportunity Grant program only benefits urban areas. It does absolutely nothing for rural areas. Also, during fiscal year 1988, my home State of South Dakota received absolutely no new assistance in the moderate rehabilitation or Section 312 loan programs.

Altogether during fiscal year 1988, our good friends in North Dakota received only $8.9 million in the categorical programs, which is substantially below what the State would have received if allocations were made purely on the basis of population. Idaho received only $8.2 million, which is about one-third of what it would have received on a per capita basis. Many other examples could be cited, but these exemplify the problem of lesser populated States and rural areas in these programs.

Patterned after the Federal aid for highway legislation, my amendment provides that no State shall receive in the aggregate for these programs less than one-half of one percent of each year's apportionment among entitlement cities, urban counties, and States. By enacting this legislation, we will assure that each State will receive a minimum amount of assistance in these programs in the aggregate and not be denied assistance because of the way in which the programs are structured.

Mr. Chairman, I thank you. I am very pleased that this amendment has been included at this point.

Mr. President, I am pleased that the Banking Committee today voted to favorably report the National Affordable Housing Act.

THE PRESIDENT'S EXPORT CONTROL INITIATIVE

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, earlier today the White House issued a statement on behalf of President Bush, spelling out a set of recommendations on our multilateral export controls, principally as they effect the new democracies of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union. I take the floor because I have some very concrete reactions to what the President has proposed today, and also because it is pertinent at this time to share with my Senate colleagues the observations that I and a group of three other Senators were in a position to make during a recent trip to Eastern Europe.

Our delegation, which consisted of Senator GARN, Senator BOND, and Senator CHAFEE, visited the German Democratic Republic—we call it East Germany—Poland, Hungary, and Czechoslovakia. We could not help but note in each of those countries the prevalence of the word "democracy" in that region.

We visited with fledgling political parties who included in their political platforms such Western values as freedom of speech, thought, worship, free elections, the free enterprise system, private property. We were moved, as I believe President Bush was during his historic visit to Eastern Europe last year, and we returned convinced of the irreversibility of the sea change in favor of democracy, freedom, and other democratic values brought about by these political revolutions in Eastern Europe as one country after another has, indeed, shed its Communist system in favor of Western ideals.

We also, I think, share the observation that while many of these changes were made possible and facilitated by the external policies of the Soviet Union brought about by Mikhail Gorbachev, nevertheless they have not been matched by parallel change in the Soviet Union. For all that it means in concept, perestroika so far has brought little gain to Soviet citizens. Analysis of the soviet economy shows continued deterioration and enormous difficulties in climbing out of the hole created by some 70 years of central planning and stifling of individual initiative.

I think we all sense that Gorbachev's own political position remains precarious as his economy hovers near collapse.

There is a tension between freedom and control. As a result, there is a high probability that a period of prolonged uncertainty and instability cannot be rule out, and we clearly must maintain our vigilance and due care in light of that possibility.

Mr. President, my colleagues and I, I believe, also returned acutely aware that these fledgling democracies in Eastern Europe are on very tenuous footing economically because of the difficult circumstances in which they were left. There is a conceivable danger that they could be forced inadvisably to retreat from democratic institutions based on Western ideals and values and experience. Their economic reforms—and believe me they are bold and admirable—if not properly supported, run the risk of failure.

That is why I, in particular, and I think my colleagues in general, believe it is particularly important that we act quickly and decisively to ensure the success of these twin pillars of democracy and economic pluralism in those countries.

On our visits to Poland and Hungary and Czechoslovakia, all of those countries identified their need of access to Western technology. Not that they wanted us to give it to them, they wanted only the opportunity to acquire it, to buy it. But nonetheless, that opportunity is a key to the economic reform programs in each of those countries. We were, therefore, discouraged to learn from our embassies in those countries and from many political and governmental leaders we met with, U.S. export controls are and remain an impediment to U.S. firms wishing to do business in Eastern Europe.

The Poles, the Hungarians, the Czechs all express their concern that we are conceding Eastern European markets to West Germany, in particular, and to the European Community in general. Clearly, this income by default was not, they told us, either their preference or in their national interest and, Mr. President, neither is it in our economic interest. This is a message that has been reinforced since our return a week ago Monday.

Many American firms have told us that many Eastern European orders were placed during a major international conference in Zurich for which U..S firms could not effectively compete because they all contain control technology, even though some of those technologies are widely available from COCOM sources. Despite assertions to the contrary, the fact is that American technology is still preferred, it is competitive, and sometimes more than competitive on the world market. Unfortunately, it is not consistently available, thanks to our export control policies.

It is this Senator's view that right now we have an unprecedented opportunity to assist in the economic transformation of these countries and to do so through a program that uses Western technology and private direct investment to promote and support free market mechanisms in those countries. This, I believe, will be a key success to the political democracies in Eastern Europe. In particular, to facilitate that very process, I want to point out, that these countries have agreed and, in some cases, already have adopted what you might call confidence building measures, and very important ones, to reassure our investors and to prevent diversion of critical technologies to unauthorized or worrisome destinations which I believe at this time still includes the Soviet Union.

Item No. 1: Poland and Hungary and Czechoslovakia have each indicated a clear willingness, indeed agreement, to negotiate trade, investment, and legal protection regimes to facilitate United States direct investments, including joint ventures. Hungary and Czechoslovakia have negotiated the withdrawal of Soviet troops by June 30, 1991. That is just a little over a year from today.

Poland, Hungary, and Czechoslovakia have announced their intention to lower their defense budgets, to reduce troop strengths, and phase out their participation in the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance, the Communist COCOMICOM. Some countries in the region made clear to us their intentions to kick out Soviet intelligence agents within their borders and those same three democracies I mentioned—Poland, Hungary and Czechoslovakia—made clear their willingness to negotiate technology security arrangements on our terms and to enact legislation to make their obligations statutory and to bring penalties against violators of United States laws as well as their own.

Mr. President, that is both great evidence of need and great evidence of willingness to do the right thing.

So, accordingly, our delegation returned with a very strong consensus about how we should treat these Eastern European nations that have taken these bold steps. We also continue to believe strongly in differentiating the way we treat them from our export control policy toward the Soviet Union, because in the Soviet Union, they have changed less, and less change in our export control policy is justified.

What, in sum, I am here to urge—and I think maybe all of my colleagues in the delegation would agree—is that we should start by shifting Poland, Hungary, and Czechoslovakia and the GDR to what is known as country group T. Those are free world countries. Right now, they are in other categories that essentially say they are Communist nonmarket economies.

Second, following the negotiation of effective technology safeguards, which they have all indicated they want to do, we should decontrol at least to the China Greenline; that is to say, the level of technology that several years ago we agreed to provide to the People's Republic of China, that should be available at a minimum to Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, and the German Democratic Republic.

Indeed, it seems to this Senator ludicrous that we would treat these democracies in any respect one iota worse than we treat the People's Republic of China, which is currently a repressive, reactionary regime that butchered its own children just 1 year ago.

Third, we should extend favorable consideration, that is to say, the presumption of approval by COCOM for exports to Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, and the German Democratic Republic, for items above the China Greenline.

And, fourth, we should direct the National Security Council to fulfill urgently and promptly the U.S. commitment made in January 1988 to develop a new core list; that is to say, a signficantly streamlined U.S. control list that will serve as the model for negotiating a similar streamlining of the COCOM control list.

Mr. President, that, I believe, is what we ought to do. I believe there is a strong consensus, probably on both sides of the aisle, that that is what we do or ought to do. I must confess that I am concerned, based on the information released from the White House today, that what the administration has proposed to do is not only different, but falls seriously short of what is both right and in our own national interest.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the statement by the White House Press Secretary dated May 2, 1990; the factsheet on the "U.S. Proposal to COCOM;" and a second factsheet entitled "Comprehensive U.S. Proposal for Modernizing COCOM" be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
May 2, 1990.

STATEMENT BY THE PRESS SECRETARY

The President is recommending to the Coordinating Committee for Multilateral Export Controls (COCOM) that significant changes be made in the list of technologies subject to export control. For over 40 years, COCOM controls have helped the Allies protect our technological achievements from being exported to our adversaries. The President initiated a comprehensive study of these controls in January to reflect the changes in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, as well as other military priorities that have emerged in the last year or more. The President has concluded that a complete overhaul of the control list is warranted. Therefore, the United States will recommend to COCOM the development by the end of 1990 a new core list of goods and technologies that is far shorter and less restrictive than the present list.

The President's proposals will continue to protect our advanced technology from being exported to the Soviet Union and other adversaries. In effect, our proposals will build "higher fences around fewer goods" by focusing on those items that are the most sensitive in terms of our national security. We will be able to pinpoint a streamlined list of exports that can make a major contribution to Soviet power, while changing the restrictions on items such as personal computers which are readily available throughout the world anyway.

We will propose that of the 120 categories on COCOM's industrial list, 30 will be eliminated completely and the scope of another 13 will be reduced substantially. These changes reflect specific analysis by the Department of Defense that identifies technology of crucial importance to weapons production in the Soviet Union and other countries. They have the unanimous support of all security agencies. Careful study indicates that most of the goods and technologies that we currently control to Eastern Europe and Soviet destinations, are of low strategic value and should be decontrolled. These categories include computers, telecommunications equipment, and machine tools. More specifically, these categories will include off-the-shelf personal computers and some mainframe computers for use in banking, airline reservations, etc.

We are proposing greater access for Eastern Europe to modern fiber optics equipment and some microwave telecommunications systems. Access to this technology is dependent on adoption of safeguards against diversion, such as identification of authorized uses, and verification inspections.

The United States will begin consultations immediately with our Allies on these changes. We think it is crucial to be able to provide maximum protection of our highly sensitive technologies, while at the same time giving the Eastern Europeans access to technologies desperately needed to improve their infrastructure and modernize their industrial plants.

FACTSHEET ON U.S. PROPOSAL TO COCOM

President Bush has approved a U.S. comprehensive COCOM proposal that will ensure the continued effectiveness of that body, thereby enhancing U.S. national security interests.

The U.S. proposal consists of immediate steps which would eliminate the need for approximately 50% of the 81,000 licenses that were received by Commerce last year from U.S. exporters. The licenses eliminated would have represented approximately $48 billion in U.S. exports last year.

Once these immediate steps are taken, the U.S. proposes a fundamental restructuring of the COCOM industrial list by the end of 1990. This exercise may result in additional reductions in licensing requirements.

Items that are decontrolled represent lower level technology that will not make a significant contribution to the Soviet military.

The U.S. proposal on computers will decontrol computers below a 275 megabits/second level of performance. This will decontrol virtually all personal computers commonly used in office automation, word processing and light industry. Examples of other small business computers released include the IBM as 400 and 4381 MG 13, Control Data's Cyber 840, Digital Equipment Corporations VAX 8600 and the Hewlett Packard 3000.

The computer proposal also provides for favorable consideration of licenses submitted to COCOM for mainframe computers up to a performance level of 550 megabits per second. This will make it significantly easier for U.S. companies to export computers used in banking, travel reservations and publishing, including Control Data's Cyber 910, the DEC VAX 8800 and the IBM 4381 MG 24.

Existing COCOM controls on machine tools require a validated license for essentially all U.S. machine tool exports. We anticipate that the COCOM machine tool agreement will permit many of these exports to now go under general license to all destinations. This will allow the U.S. to better compete against competitors in foreign countries that are not COCOM members. Controls remain on machine tools that are vital to U.S. national security interests.

The U.S. proposal will allow telecommunications manufacturers to export their products to Eastern Europe. The proposal includes the following:

Decontrol of satellite ground stations for civil television and communications to permit Western broadcasting in Eastern Europe.

Decontrol of civil mobile radio including trunked radio telephone, paging, dispatch and the current analog radio cellular systems. This technology can be used for local telephone service and dispatch, including communications for fire, ambulance and taxi service.

National discretion licensing for civil packet switching systems up to the level currently being exported to the People's Republic of China.

Once Eastern European countries adopt safeguards to protect against diversion of equipment to prescribed countries, export of fiber optic transmission equipment with transmission rates up to 156 megabits/second will generally be permitted.

This technology will provide Eastern Europe with the technology used for basic long distance telephone service.

(Dept. of Commerce, Bureau of Export Administration, May 2, 1990.)

THE WHITE HOUSE,
OFFICE OF THE PRESS SECRETARY,
May 2, 1990.

FACT SHEET—COMPREHENSIVE U.S. PROPOSAL FOR MODERNIZING COCOM

The U.S. government has completed a thorough evaluation of export controls on those technologies and goods which have both civilian and military use. These items are controlled pursuant to agreements with other members of the Coordinating Committee for Multilateral Export Controls (COCOM).

As a result of its evaluation, the U.S. recommended to its COCOM allies the development of a core list of technologies that need to be controlled to maintain the strategic technological edge that is a key component of our military strength. In addition to the core list proposal, the U.S. recommended that COCOM approve immediate reductions in certain controlled items that need not await completion of the core list.

Based on thorough analysis by the Departments of State, Defense, Commerce, and Energy, the proposals reflect the changing strategic threat and provide for increased access to advanced technology, particularly to the emerging democracies of Eastern Europe.

CORE LIST

The U.S. core list proposal, which is similar to a British proposal, would replace current export controls with a completely restructured list of key technologies and goods. This new list would be built "from scratch." The military priorities identified by the Department of Defense's analysis would be a vital guide in identifying those technologies and goods that are militarily critical to our technological lead. The U.S. proposes that the new list supersede the regular COCOM lists by the end of 1990. The U.S. proposal would allow for phased or complete implementation as long as strategically critical items are fully integrated into the new list.

ELIMINATION OF CERTAIN INDUSTRIAL LIST ENTRIES

The present COCOM control lists are too long, redundant and contain items not strategically critical to U.S. interests. Based on the Defense Department's analysis of militarily critical technologies, over 40, out of 120, categories have been identified for complete or partial elimination from the current control lists. Of this number, at least 30 are identified for complete elimination. Eliminating these controls immediately would ease the transition to the core list.

DECONTROL TO THE CHINA GREEN LINE

Careful study has also indicated that most of the goods and technologies that we control to Eastern European and Soviet destinations, yet license freely to the People's Republic of China (known as the China Green Line), are of low strategic value and therefore will be decontrolled.

DECONTROL IN PRIORITY SECTORS

There are three priority sectors identified by COCOM for immediate or partial decontrol: computers, telecommunications equipment, and machine tools. These sectors account for a large portion of all export license applications and are key to infrastructure improvements in Eastern Europe. The U.S. has proposed significant decontrol in these categories as follows:

A. Computers

The U.S. proposal would provide for decontrol of computers to all destinations which have a Processing Data Rate (PDR) of 275 megabits per second (mps), which is half way to the China Green Line, and favorable licensing treatment to civilian end-users all the way to the China Green Line (a PDR of 550 mps). This action would result in the decontrol of most off-the-shelf personal computers and allow access to some mainframe computers for applications in banking, airline reservations, etc.

B. Telecommunications equipment

The U.S. proposes relaxation of controls, for example, in some cellular communications systems, and some satellite ground stations, to all destinations. We are proposing for Eastern Europe greater access to modern fiber optics equipment (to a transmission level of 156 megabits), and some microwave telecommunications systems. Access to this more advanced technology is dependent on adoption of safeguards against diversion.

C. Machine tools

The U.S. government will support with a few modifications a COCOM proposal calling for significant decontrol of machine tools and their numerical controllers. This results in decontrol of many machine tools with a positioning accuracy down to the ± 2 or 3 micron level depending on the type of machine tool.

DIFFERENTIATION

The U.S. will recommend to COCOM that more favorable licensing treatment be accorded to countries adopting COCOM-approved safeguards against diversion of controlled goods and technologies to proscribed destinations or to unauthorized end-users. Such countries would be determined to be in transition to a status of a non-proscribed destination pursuant to COCOM-agreed conditions. COCOM would be asked to develop a list of technologies and goods to which such countries would have presumed favorable treatment.

ENFORCEMENT OF EXPORT CONTROLS

The U.S. Government continues to encourage the enforcement of the controls by its allies. It is essential to obtain the agreement of our COCOM allies to a renewed commitment to improve compliance so that the core list of identified technologies is protected. The U.S. will seek adherence to the previously agreed common standard levels of protection against diversion or illegal acquisition of controlled goods and technologies.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I am going to need to give more detailed study to the President's proposal, not that I have not read carefully what has been issued to the press today, but that there are many questions that, without answers from the administration, will remain rather vaguely attended to in these handouts. But from what I can tell of the administration's position, it is this: First, they have decided to move in the right direction toward some liberalization of controls, and that is a plus. Nonetheless, it falls short of what is justified in Eastern Europe by the strategic situation and what is necessary for COCOM unity and what is necessary for the competitiveness of U.S. exporters.

I fully agree with the President's insistence on having appropriate technology safeguards in place. That is very important. But the limited decontrol that he apparently is proposing is insufficient even to permit the emergent democracies of Eastern Europe to embark on anything close to the same economic reform programs as the People's Republic of China was allowed to 4 years ago.

Let me give an example. The People's Republic of China was able to purchase state-of-the-art telecommunications equipment so that within the next 3 to 5 years, they will have a telecommunications network that is totally up to date, modern, second to none. The Eastern European democracies are prohibited from purchasing anything even close to the same kind of fiber optic systems, including technology like a common channel switch No. 7 and the appropriate fiber optic cable, that is, indeed, the essential part of the modern telecommunications system.

That is not, as I said, only unfair to Eastern Europe, given the risk that they have decided to take—they should be supported—it is not only shortsighted with respect to American workers' jobs and U.S. business opportunities to compete, but it runs the risk of destroying the coordinating committee, COCOM. It runs the risk for this practical reason. The Europeans are there in Europe. West Germany, in particular, has very close ties to many of these countries. The Austrians have very close ties to the Hungarians. These are European countries.

For example, with respect to the German Democratic Republic, which still has 90,000 Soviet troops in it, there are no longer any border controls on the exports from West Germany to East Germany, and I suppose if the United States had been divided along the Mississippi River or still was divided along the Mason-Dixon line and that came to an end, we in this country would have a hard time having somebody else tell us no, you cannot sell to the Midwest or you cannot sell to the South; they are Americans, and we would say that is our business.

That is exactly what is going on in Eastern Europe and in particular between the Federal Republic of Germany and the Democratic Republic of Germany.

So we run the risk not only of being stupid and isolated, but we run the risk of taking such an unrealistic position that discipline should remain in place with respect to the Soviet Union, with respect to maintaining controls on the inappropriate use of technologies, whether they are in Eastern Europe or anyplace else, against the diversion to other unauthorized destinations like Iran or Iraq; that all of that system could come tumbling down.

That is the price we risk paying by being out on a limb. And so it is not just our workers and our exporters that will get sawed off, it may be the basic national security arrangements that we and our allies have worked so hard over the last 40 years to build.

Mr. President, let me return to my basic point. The peoples of Eastern Europe have taken a giant first step to remove the shackles of oppression and tyranny under which they have lived for 40 years. We have a rare opportunity to take with them the next step to ensure that change is irreversible and permanent. Such a step is utterly in our interest as it is in Eastern Europe's. Our President should take it.

I yield the floor.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ADAMS). Without objection, it is so ordered.

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS OF 1989

MOTION TO PROCEED

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I rise to dispel some myths about the Hatch Act that I have already heard in this debate several times. We are just beginning the second day of debate on this legislation and already several Senators have suggested that the regulations surrounding the Hatch Act are confusing and used as an example the notion that the size of political sign is limited depending on whether the sign is placed in the front yard of a home or on a car.

Mr. President, let me once and for all dispel this myth—it does not matter what size sign it is as long as the activity is an expression of personal opinion. An individual could paint the entire side of their house with a political banner or cover their entire car, as long as this was personal expression.

According to the Office of Special Counsel in a letter dispelling this myth, along with many others, the Special Counsel Mary Wieseman writes:

So long as this activity is an expression of personal opinion, it is permissible under the Hatch Act and the size of any such sign is irrelevant.

Mr. President, I hope this will put to rest this myth. It is wrong and misleading.

Despite what some have suggested, Federal employees can write letters to the editor expressing an opinion on a partisan issue.

Despite what some have suggested, Federal employees can attend political rallies and join political clubs.

All of this is explained in a pamphlet available from the Office of Special Counsel explaining to Federal employees exactly what they can and can not do.

I think that when Senators understand what this law really is instead of relying on these myths, maybe the Senator will consider the true implications of this legislation. I am not saying the regulations are perfect, and this is why I may offer an amendment to require the Office of Personnel Management to clarify the regulations.

Mr. President, perhaps the most significant myth surrounding this legislation is that the first amendment will be served by the enactment of S. 135. The proponents suggest that this bill would allow Federal employees the freedom of participating in the political process. While the bill does this in its language, it would in practice—and of course this is what is important—create the freedom for public employees to be politically coerced. If this bill is enacted, there might be more speech, but not necessarily more free speech, the value that the first amendment is intended to serve.

Some time ago, I wrote to the U.S. Office of Special Counsel about some of my concerns that have been raised with respect to the Hatch Act and, on September 1, 1989, I received a reply from the Special Counsel. I think this letter is of sufficient importance to read, because it dispels many of the myths that have arisen with respect to the Hatch Act.

DEAR SENATOR ROTH: You have requested the Office of Special Counsel (OSC) to clarify certain matters relating to the Hatch Act (the Act) regarding restrictions on the political activities of federal employees. The Act is codified at 5 U.S.C. § 7321 et seq. As the federal agency having the statutory responsibility for providing advisory opinions on and enforcement of the Act, we are pleased to respond to your request.

First, you have asked for clarification concerning the import of an estimated 3,000 administrative decisions of the former Civil Service Commission (CSC) which predated the passage of the Hatch Act in 1940, and the effect of these rulings on current interpretation and enforcement of the Act. Section 15 of the original Act [now part of 5 U.S.C. § 7324(a)(2)] defined the prohibition against taking an active part in political campaigns as proscribing only those activities which the CSC had determined to be prohibited for classified civil service employees under Civil Service Rule 1 at the time the Act was passed. Some individuals have erroneously referred to these decisions as "rules" or "regulations," creating the false impression that there are 3,000 rules or regulations currently governing political activity by federal employees. Such individuals clearly misapprehend the legal and historical significance of these decisions.

At the time the Congress was considering passage of the Hatch Act, the CSC had been performing its investigative and adjudicative role under Civil Service Rule 1 for over 30 years, and had, on a case-by-case basis, developed a body of law with respect to what partisan conduct by federal employees was permitted and forbidden by the rule. Rather than permit the CSC to establish new prohibitions on partisan conduct or to reinterpret existing prohibitions, the Congress intended by section 15 to proscribe only those activities which the CSC had already determined to be prohibited in the course of rendering its decisions. This was done in order to provide continuity of interpretation, and to place limitations on the exercise of CSC discretion. It is in this sense alone that these administrative decisions were "voted into law," as some have recently suggested.

Nevertheless, precisely to avoid the confusion that can arise from multiple rulings on any one subject, the CSC had already distilled from these decisions a much smaller number of basic categories of permissible and prohibited political conduct. These categories or principles of political conduct were contained in Civil Service Form No. 1236, to which Senator Hatch referred in the course of the Senate debates. These principles have since devolved to the 13 permitted and 16 prohibited activities set forth in the Code of Federal regulations, 5 C.F.R. § 733. Thus, it is these regulations, and not the original decisions from which they were distilled, which have been used since 1940 to advise federal employees of their rights and responsibilities, and which now direct the judgment of OSC attorneys, the Merit Systems Protection Board, and the courts concerning what political activity is permissible under the Act.

The significance of these thousands of CSC decisions was considered by the U.S. Supreme Court in United States Civil Service Commission v. National Association of Letter Carriers, 413 U.S. 548 (1973), and placed in its proper legal context. In that case, the Court referred to these extracted rules—Civil Service Form No. 1236 and its "legitimate descendants" found in 5 C.F.R. § 733—as an "administrative restatement of Civil Service Rule 1 law." Id. at 573. The Court then noted approvingly that:

"It is this administrative restatement of Civil Service Rule 1 law . . . that, in our view, Congress intended to serve as its definition of the general proscription against partisan activities. It was within the limits of these rules that the Civil Service Commission was to proceed to perform its role under the statute."—Id. at 574 (emphasis added).

Indeed, in Letter Carriers, the appellees specifically attacked the Hatch Act as unconstitutionally vague because it incorporated the several thousand of the CSC's previous adjudications. The appellees argued that the adjudications were largely "undiscoverable, inconsistent, or incapable of yielding any meaningful rules to govern present or future conduct." 413 U.S. at 571. Rejecting this argument as legally and historically irrelevant, the Court went on to state that the proper subject of inquiry was not the "several thousand adjudications of the Civil Service Commission," but rather the regulations that were extracted from them.

"It is to these regulations [at 5 C.F.R. § 733] purporting to construe § 7324 as actually applied in practice, as well as the statute itself . . . that we address ourselves in rejecting the claim that the Act is unconstitutionally vague and overbroad."—Id. at 575.

Further the Court stated:

"We see nothing impermissibly vague in 5 C.F.R. § 733.122, which specifies in separate paragraphs the various activities deemed to be prohibited by § 7324(a)(2). There might be quibbles about the meaning of taking an "active part in managing" or about "actively participating in . . . fundraising" or about the meaning of becoming a partisan candidate for office"; but there are limitations in the English language with respect to being both specific and manageably brief, and it seems to us that although the prohibitions may not satisfy those intent on finding fault at any cost, they are set out in terms that the ordinary person exercising ordinary common sense can sufficiently understand and comply with, without sacrifice to the public interest.

* * * * *

"Surely, there seemed to be little question in the minds of the plaintiffs who brought this lawsuit as to the meaning of the law, or as to whether or not the conduct in which they desire to engage was or was not prohibited by the Act."

In summary, the discussion above regarding the legislative purpose of section 15 of the Hatch Act, along with the corroborating and unambiguous interpretation of that section by the Supreme Court, should dispel the erroneous and repeated belief that specific CSC pre-Hatch Act rulings themselves are relied upon as the basis for current OSC advice on or enforcement of the Act.

You have also asked us to address several other questions. First, you have inquired whether the Hatch Act applies to part-time or to temporary employees. The answer is that the Hatch Act does apply to such employees; however, these intermittent or occasional employees are covered by the Act only during the 24-hour period of any day on which they are actually employed. This response is consistent with information provided in our publication entitled "Political Activity and the Federal Employee," which is widely distributed by the OSC to interested persons.

Also, you have asked whether or not a federal employee may put a large sign which endorses a political candidate on his or her automobile or in his or her yard. So long as this activity is an expression of personal opinion, it is permissible under the Hatch Act and the size of any such sign is irrelevant.

You have also asked our opinion on whether a federal employee who is the spouse of a political candidate may appear in campaign photographs with the candidate. When the spouse of an employee is a candidate for public office or holds public office, there are certain expectations as to the employee—not as a campaigner, but as the spouse of the candidate. These expectations would logically include appearances with the candidate in public and at campaign functions. Nevertheless, the employee is responsible for ensuring that his or her activity is restricted to "family" appearances and should avoid any activity which would be readily identifiable as active campaigning. Therefore, the employee could be included in "family of the candidate" photographs which might appear in newspapers or in campaign literature.

Finally, you have asked for our response to a recent statement during Senate hearings on S. 135, the "Hatch Act Reform Amendments of 1989," questioning why the Hatch Act should restrict an employee of a federal agency who lives in a Virginia or Maryland community from serving on a local town council or board of education of those communities. The statement further questioned why the citizens of those communities should be deprived of the benefits of the service of this group of people who happen to be uniquely sensitive to public issues, informed, and committed to public service.

This statement reflects misinformation regarding the Hatch Act. At the present time, federal employees living in Virginia and Maryland communities in the immediate vicinity of the District of Columbia are permitted by statute and regulation to participate actively in partisan elections for local offices in municipalities or political subdivisions—either as independent candidates, or on behalf of independent candidates. Federal employees in certain other communities in the United States with large populations of federal employees are also permitted this right.

One of the significant changes which would be brought about by the enactment of S. 135, however, is that § 7327 would be repealed. Although S. 135 would permit federal employees to campaign for partisan or independent candidates, it would forbid them from running for partisan office, even as independent candidates. Thus, one of the avowed justifications for the proposed changes in the Hatch Act, i.e., greater participation by federal employees in the political process, is undercut by the fact that the proposed legislation would eliminate a significant right of participation currently available to large numbers of these employees.

I trust that this letter is responsive to your request. If I can be of any further assistance, or provide any additional information, please feel free to contact me.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to print this letter in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

OFFICE OF SPECIAL COUNSEL,
Washington, DC, September 1, 1989.

Hon. WILLIAM V. ROTH, Jr.,
Committee on Governmental Affairs, U.S. Senate, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR ROTH: You have requested the Office of Special Counsel (OSC) to clarify certain matters relating to the Hatch Act (the Act) regarding restrictions on the political activities of federal employees. The Act is codified at 5 U.S.C. § 7321 et seq. As the federal agency having the statutory responsibility for providing advisory opinions on and enforcement of the Act, we are pleased to respond to your request.

First, you have asked for Clarification concerning the import of an estimated 3,000 administrative decisions of the former Civil Service Commission (CSC) which predated the passage of the Hatch Act in 1940, and the effect of these rulings on current interpretation and enforcement to the Act. Section 15 of the original Act [now part of 5 U.S.C. § 7324(a)(2)] defined the prohibition against taking an active part in political campaigns as proscribing only those activities which the CSC had determined to be prohibited for classified civil service employees under Civil Service Rule 1 at the time the Act was passed. Some individuals have erroneously referred to these decisions as "rules" or "regulations," creating the false impression that there are 3,000 rules or regulations currently governing political activity by federal employees. Such individuals clearly misapprehend the legal and historical significance of these decisions.

At the time the Congress was considering passage of the Hatch Act, the CSC had been performing its investigative and adjudicative role under Civil Service Rule 1 for over 30 years, and had, on a case-by-case basis, developed a body of law with respect to what partisan conduct by federal employees was permitted and forbidden by the rule. Rather than permit the CSC to establish new prohibitions on partisan conduct or to reinterpret existing prohibitions, the Congress intended by section 15 to proscribe only these activities which the CSC had already determined to be prohibited in the course of rendering its decisions. This was done in order to provide continuity of interpretation, and to place limitations on the exercise of CSC discretion. It is in this sense alone that these administrative decisions were "voted into law," as some have recently suggested.

Nevertheless, precisely to avoid the confusion that can arise from multiple rulings on any one subject, the CSC had already distilled from these decisions a much smaller number of basic categories of permissible and prohibited political conduct. These categories or principles of political conduct were contained in Civil Service Form No. 1236, to which Senator Hatch referred in the course of the Senate debates. These principles have since devolved to the 13 permitted and 16 prohibited activities set forth in the Code of Federal Regulations, 5 C.F.R. § 733. Thus, it is these regulations, and not the original decisions from which they were distilled, which have been used since 1940 to advise federal employees of their rights and responsibilities, and which now direct the judgment of OSC attorneys, the Merit Systems Protection Board, and the courts concerning what political activity is permissible under the Act.

The significance of these thousands of CSC decisions was considered by the U.S. Supreme Court in United States Civil Service Commission v. National Association of Letter Carriers, 413 U.S. 548 (1973), and placed in its proper legal context. In that case, the Court referred to these extracted rules—Civil Service Form No. 1236 and its "legitimate descendants" found in 5 C.F.R. § 733—as an "administrative restatement of Civil Service Rule 1 law." Id. at 573. The Court then noted approvingly that:

"It is this administrative restatement of Civil Service Rule 1 law . . . that, in our view, Congress intended to serve as its definition of the general proscription against partisan activities. It was within the limits of these rules that the Civil Service Commission was to proceed to perform its role under the statute."—Id. at 574 (emphasis added).

Indeed, in Letter Carriers, the appellees specifically attacked the Hatch Act as unconstitutionally vague because it incorporated the several thousand of the CSC's previous adjudications. The appellees argued that the adjudications were largely "undiscoverable, inconsistent, or incapable of yielding any meaningful rules to govern present or future conduct." 413 U.S. at 571. Rejecting this argument as legally and historically irrelevant, the Court went on to state that the proper subject of inquiry was not the "several thousand adjudications of the Civil Service Commission," but rather the regulations that were extracted from them.

"It is to these regulations [at 5 C.F.R. § 733] purporting to construe § 7324 as actually applied in practice, as well as the statute itself . . . that we address ourselves in rejecting the claim that the Act is unconstitutionally vague and overbroad."—Id. at 575.

Further the Court stated:

"We see nothing impermissibly vague in 5 C.F.R. § 733.122, which specifies in separate paragraphs the various activities deemed to be prohibited by § 7324(a)(2). There might be quibbles about the meaning of taking an "active part in managing" or about "actively participating in . . . fundraising" or about the meaning of becoming a "partisan candidate for office"; but there are limitations in the English language with respect to being both specific and manageably brief, and it seems to us that although the prohibitions may not satisfy those intent on finding fault at any cost, they are set out in terms that the ordinary person exercising ordinary common sense can sufficiently understand and comply with, without sacrifice to the public interest."

* * * * *

"Surely, there seemed to be little question in the minds of the plaintiffs who brought this lawsuit as to the meaning of the law, or as to whether or not the conduct in which they desire to engage was or was not prohibited by the Act."—Id. at 578-79 (emphasis added).

In summary, the discussion above regarding the legislative purpose of section 15 of the Hatch Act, along with the corroborating and unambiguous interpretation of that section by the Supreme Court, should dispel the erroneous and repeated belief that specific CSC pre-Hatch Act rulings themselves are relied upon as the basis for current OSC advice on or enforcement of the Act.

You have also asked us to address several other questions. First, you have inquired whether the Hatch Act applies to part-time or to temporary employees. The answer is that the Hatch Act does apply to such employees; however, these intermittent or occasional employees are covered by the Act only during the 24-hour period of any day on which they are actually employed. This response is consistent with information provided in our publication entitled "Political Activity and the Federal Employee," which is widely distributed by the OSC to interested persons.

Also, you have asked whether or not a federal employee may put a large sign which endorses a political candidate on his or her automobile or in his or her yard. So long as this activity is an expression of personal opinion, it is permissible under the Hatch Act and the size of any such sign is irrelevant.

You have also asked our opinion on whether a federal employee who is the spouse of a political candidate may appear in campaign photographs with the candidate. When the spouse of an employee is a candidate for public office or holds public office, there are certain expectations as to the employee—not as a campaigner, but as the spouse of the candidate. These expectations would logically include appearances with the candidate in public and at campaign functions. Nevertheless, the employee is responsible for ensuring that his or her activity is restricted to "family" appearances and should avoid any activity which would be readily identifiable as active campaigning. Therefore, the employee could be included in "family of the candidate" photographs which might appear in newspapers or in campaign literature.

Finally, you have asked for our response to a recent statement during Senate hearings on S. 135, the "Hatch Act Reform Amendments of 1989," questioning why the Hatch Act should restrict an employee of a federal agency who lives in a Virginia or Maryland community from serving on a local town council or board of education of those communities. The statement further questioned why the citizens of those communities should be deprived of the benefits of the service of this group of people who happen to be uniquely sensitive to public issues, informed, and committed to public service.

This statement reflects misinformation regarding the Hatch Act. At the present time, federal employees living in Virginia and Maryland communities in the immediate vicinity of the District of Columbia are permitted by statute and regulation to participate actively in partisan elections for local offices in municipalities or political subdivisions—either as independent candidates, or on behalf of independent candidates. Federal employees in certain other communities in the United States with large populations of federal employees are also permitted this right. See, 5 U.S.C. § 7327 and 5 C.F.R. § 733.124.

One of the significant changes which would be brought about by the enactment of S. 135, however, is that § 7327 would be repealed. Although S. 135 would permit federal employees to campaign for partisan or independent candidates, it would forbid them from running for partisan office, even as independent candidates. Thus, one of the avowed justifications for the proposed changes in the Hatch Act, i.e., greater participation by federal employees in the political process, is undercut by the fact that the proposed legislation would eliminate a significant right of participation currently available to large numbers of these employees.

I trust that this letter is responsive to your request. If I can be of any further assistance, or provide any additional information, please feel free to contact me.

Yours truly,

MARY F. WIESEMAN,
Special Counsel.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the regulations be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PART 733—POLITICAL ACTIVITY OF FEDERAL EMPLOYEES

SUBPART A—THE COMPETITIVE SERVICE

General Provisions

Sec.
733.101 Definitions.

Permissible Activities

733.111 Permissible activities.

Prohibited Activities

733.121 Use of official authority: prohibition.
733.122. Political management and political campaigning prohibitions.
733.123 Prohibited activity; exception of certain employees.

733.124 Political management and political campaigning: exception of certain elections.

SUBPART B—THE EXCEPTED SERVICE

733.201 Jurisdiction.

SUBPART C—THE U.S. POSTAL SERVICE

733.301 Jurisdiction.

AUTHORITY: 5 U.S.C. 3301, 3302, 7301, 7321, 7322, 7323, 7324, 7325, and 7327; Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1978, 3 CFR 1978 Comp. p. 323; and E.O. 12107, 3 CFR 1978 Comp. p. 264.

SOURCE: 35 FR 16785, Oct. 30, 1970, unless otherwise noted.

SUBPART A—THE COMPETITIVE SERVICE

General Provisions

§ 733.101 Definitions.

In this subpart:

(a) "Employee" means an individual who occupies a position in the competitive service;

(b) "Agency" means an executive agency and the government of the District of Columbia;

(c) "Political party" means a National political party, a State political party, and an affiliated organization;

(d) "Election" includes a primary, special, and general election;

(e) "Nonpartisan election" means—

(1) An election at which none of the candidates is to be nominated or elected as representing a political party any of whose candidates for presidential elector received votes in the last preceding election at which presidential electors were selected; and

(2) An election involving a question or issue which is not specifically identified with a political party, such as a constitutional amendment, referendum, approval of a municipal ordinance, or any question or issue of a similar character; and

(f) "Partisan" when used as an adjective refers to a political party.

(g) "Political fund" means any fund, organization, political action committee, or other entity that, for purposes of influencing in any way the outcome of any partisan election, receives or expends money or anything of value or transfers money or anything of value to any other fund, political party, candidate, organization, political action committee, or other entity.

(h) "Contribution" means any gift, subscription, loan, advance, deposit of money, allotment of money, or anything of value given or transferred by one person to another, including in cash, by check, by draft, through a payroll deduction or allotment plan, by pledge or promise, whether or not enforceable, or otherwise.

(i) "Federal workplace" means any place, site, installation, building, room, or facility in which any Executive department or agency conducts official business, including, but not limited to, office buildings, forts, arsenals, navy yards, post offices, vehicles, ships, and aircraft.

(j) "Employer" or "employing authority" means the immediate employing agency head, agency principals, or an employee's supervisor.

[35 FR 16785, Oct. 30, 1970, as amended at 49 FR 17432, Apr. 24, 1984]

Permissible Activities

§ 733.111 Permissible activities.

(a) All employees are free to engage in political activity to the widest extent consistent with the restrictions imposed by law and this subpart. Each employee retains the right to—

(1) Register and vote in any election;

(2) Express his opinion as an individual privately and publicly on political subjects and candidates;

(3) Display a poltical picture, sticker, badge, or button;

(4) Participate in the nonpartisan activities of a civic, community, social, labor, or professional organization, or of a similar organization;

(5) Be a member of a political party or other political organization and participate in its activities to the extent consistent with law;

(6) Attend a political convention, rally, fund-raising function; or other political gathering;

(7) Sign a political petition as an individual;

(8) Make a financial contribution to a political party or organization;

(9) Take an active part, as an independent candidate, or in support of an independent candidate, in a partisan election covered by § 733.124;

(10) Take an active part, as a candidate or in support of a candidate, in a nonpartisan election;

(11) Be politically active in connection with a question which is not specifically identified with a political party, such as a constitutional amendment, referendum, approval of a municipal ordinance or any other question or issue of a similar character;

(12) Serve as an election judge or clerk, or in a similar position to perform nonpartisan duties as prescribed by State or local law; and

(13) Otherwise participate fully in public affairs, except as prohibited by law, in a manner which does not materially compromise his efficiency or integrity as an employee or the neutrality, efficiency, or integrity of his agency.

(b) Paragraph (a) of this section does not authorize an employee to engage in political activity in violation of law, while on duty, or while in a uniform that identifies him as an employee. The head of an agency may prohibit or limit the participation of an employee or class of employees of his agency in an activity permitted by paragraph (a) of this section, if participation in the activity would interfere with the efficient performance of official duties, or create a conflict or apparent conflict of interests.

Prohibited Activities

§ 733.121 Use of official authority; prohibition.

An employee may not use his official authority or influence for the purpose of interfering with or affecting the result of an election.

§ 733.122 Political management and political campaigning; prohibitions.

(a) An employee may not take an active part in political management or in a political campaign, except as permitted by this subpart.

(b) Activities prohibited by paragraph (a) of this section include but are not limited to—

(1) Serving as an officer of a political party, a member of a National, State, or local committee of a political party, an officer or member of a committee of a partisan political club, or being a candidate for any of these positions;

(2) Organizing or reorganizing a political party organization or political club;

(3) Directly or indirectly soliciting, receiving, collecting, handling, disbursing, or accounting for assessments, contibutions, or other funds for a partisan political purpose;

(4) Organizing, selling tickets to, promoting, or actively particpating in a fund-raising activity of a candidate in a partisan election or of a political party, or political club;

(5) Taking an active part in managing the political campaign of a candidate for public office in a partisan election or a candidate for political party office;

(6) Becoming a candidate for, or campaigning for, an elective public office in a partisan election;

(7) Soliciting votes in support of or in opposition to a candidate for public office in a partisan election or a candidate for political party office;

(8) Acting as recorder, watcher, challenger, or similar officer at the polls on behalf of a political party or a candidate in a partisan election;

(9) Driving voters to the polls on behalf of a political party or a candidate in a partisan election;

(10) Endorsing or opposing a candidate for public office in a partisan election or a candidate for political party office in a political advertisement, a broadcast, campaign, literature, or similar material;

(11) Serving as a delegate, alternate, or proxy to a political party convention;

(12) Addressing a convention, caucus, rally, or similar gathering of a political party in support of or in opposition to a partisan candidate for public office or political party office;

(13) Initiating or circulating a partisan nominating petition;

(14) Soliciting, collecting, or receiving a contribution at or in the Federal workplace from any employee for any political party, political fund, or other partisan recipient;

(15) Paying a contribution at or in the Federal workplace to any employee who is the employer or employing authority of the person making the contribution for any political party, political fund, or other partisan recipient; and

(16) Soliciting, paying collecting, or receiving a contribution at or in the federal workplace from any employee for any political party, political fund, or other partisan recipient.

[35 FR 16785, Oct. 30, 1970, as amended at 41 FR 49473, Nov. 9, 1976; 49 FR 17433, Apr. 24, 1984]

§ 733.123 Prohibited activity; exception of certain employees.

(a) Sections 733.21 and 733.122 do not apply to an employee of an educational or research institution, establishment, agency, or system which is supported in whole or in part by the District of Columbia or by a recognized religious, philanthropic, or cultural organization.

(b) Section 733.122 does not apply to—

(1) An individual exempted under section 7324(d) of title 5, United States Code;

(2) An employee of The Alaska Railroad who resides in a municipality on the line of the railroad in respect to political activities involving that municipality;

(3) Subject to the conditions of § 733.124, an employee who resides in a municipality or other political subdivision designated by OPM under that section; or

(4) An employee who works on an irregular or occasional basis, on the days that he performs no services.

§ 733.124 Political management and political campaigning; exception of certain elections.

(a) Section 733.122 does not prohibit activity in political management or in a political campaign by an employee in connection with—

(1) A nonpartisan election, or

(2) Subject to the conditions and limitations established by OPM, an election held in a municipality or political subdivision designated by OPM under paragraph (b) of this section.

(b) For the purpose of paragraph (a)(2) of this section, the Office may designate a municipality or political subdivision in Maryland or Virginia in the immediate vicinity of the District of Columbia or a municipality in which the majority of voters are employed by the Government of the United States, when the Office determines that, because of special or unusual circumstances, it is in the domestic interest of employees to participate in local elections. Information as to the documentation required to support a request for designation is furnished by the Office on request. The following municipalities and political subdivisions have been designated, effective on the date specified:

IN MARYLAND

Annapolis (May 16, 1941).
Anne Arundel County (March 14, 1973).
Berwyn Heights (June 15, 1944).
Bethesda (Feb. 17, 1943).
Bladensburg (Apr. 20, 1942).
Bowie (Apr. 11, 1952).
Brentwood (Sept. 26, 1940).
Capitol Heights (Nov. 12, 1940).
Cheverly (Dec. 17, 1940).
Chevy Chase, sections 1 and 2 (Mar. 4, 1941).
Chevy Chase, section 3 (Oct. 8, 1940).
Chevy Chase, section 4 (Oct. 2, 1940).
Martin's Additions 1, 2, 3, and 4 to Chevy Chase (Feb. 13, 1941).
Chevy Chase View (Feb. 26, 1941).
College Park (June 13, 1945).
Cottage City (Jan. 15, 1941).
District Heights (Nov. 2, 1940).
Edmonston (Oct. 24, 1940).
Fairmont Heights (Oct. 24, 1940).
Forest Heights (Apr. 22, 1949).
Garrett Park (Oct. 2, 1940).
Glenarden (May 21, 1941).
Glen Echo (Oct. 22, 1940).
Greenbelt (Oct. 4, 1940).
Howard County (Apr. 25, 1974).
Hyattsville (Sept. 20, 1940).
Kensington (Nov. 8, 1940).
Landover Hills (May 5, 1945).
Montgomery County (Apr. 30, 1964).
Morningside (May 19, 1949).
Mount Rainier (Nov. 22, 1940).
New Carrollton (July 7, 1981).
North Beach (Sept. 20, 1940).
North Brentwood (May 6, 1941).
North Chevy Chase (July 22, 1942).
Northwest Park (Feb. 17, 1943).
Prince Georges County (June 19, 1962).
Riverdale (Sept. 26, 1940).
Rockville (Apr. 15, 1948).
Seat Pleasant (Aug. 31, 1942).
Somerset (Nov. 22, 1940).
Takoma Park (Oct. 22, 1940).
University Park (Jan. 18, 1941).
Washington Grove (Apr. 5, 1941).

IN VIRGINIA

Alexandria (Apr. 15, 1941).
Arlington County (Sept. 9, 1940).
Clifton (July 14, 1941).
Fairfax County (Nov. 10, 1949).
Town of Fairfax (Feb. 9, 1954).
Falls Church (June 6, 1941).
Herndon (Apr. 7, 1945).
Loudoun County (Oct. 1, 1971).
Manassas (Jan. 8, 1980).
Manassas Park (Mar. 4, 1980).
Portsmouth (Feb. 27, 1958).
Prince William County (Feb. 14, 1967).
Stafford County (Nov. 2, 1979).
Vienna (Mar. 18, 1946).

OTHER MUNICIPALITIES

Anchorage, Alaska (Dec. 29, 1947).
Benicia, Calif. (Feb. 20, 1948).
Bremerton, Wash. (Feb. 27, 1946).
Centerville, Ga. (Sept. 16, 1971).
Crane, Ind. (Aug. 3, 1967).
District of Columbia (July 5, 1977).
Elmer City, Wash. (Oct. 28, 1947).
Huachuca City, Ariz. (Apr. 9, 1959).
New Johnsonville, Tenn. (Apr. 26, 1956).
Norris, Tenn. (May 6, 1959).
Port Orchard, Wash. (Feb. 27, 1946).
Sierra Vista, Ariz. (Oct. 5, 1955).
Warner Robins, Ga. (Mar. 19, 1948).

(c) An employee who resides in a municipality or political subdivision listed in paragraph (b) of this section may take an active part in political management and political campaigns in connection with partisan elections for local offices of the municipality or political subdivision, subject to the following limitations:

(1) Participation in politics shall be as an independent candidate or on behalf of, or in opposition to, an independent candidate.

(2) Candidacy for, and service in, an elective office shall not result in neglect of or interference with the performance of the duties of the employee or create a conflict, or apparent conflict, of interests.

(5 U.S.C. 7701, et seq.)
[35 FR 16785, Oct. 30, 1970]

EDITORIAL NOTE.—For Federal Register citations affecting § 733.124, see the List of CFR Sections Affected in the Finding Aids section of this volume.

SUBPART B—THE EXCEPTED SERVICE

§ 733.201 Jurisdiction.

Sections 733.111–733.124 apply to an employee in the excepted service. It is the responsibility of the employing agency to investigate and decide allegations of prohibited poltitical activity on the part of such an employee.

SUBPART C—THE U.S. POSTAL SERVICE

§ 733.301 Jurisdiction.

Sections 733.101 (c), (d), (e), and (f) through 733.124 apply to an employee of the U.S. Postal Service.

(5 U.S.C. 7701, et seq.)
[44 FR 48954, Aug. 21, 1979]

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legisiative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I do not quarrel with my distinguished colleague about the fact that the 3,000 rules have been reduced in volume. But then we run into all kinds of things when we get into that reduction as to what will be interpreted in a simple fashion.

The distinguished Senator from Delaware indicated that there are, I believe he said, 13 permitted and 16 prohibited activities that those 3,000 have been whittled down to. But you still come down to such things to how you make the judgments in specific cases.

It has been held to be OK, for instance, to wear a campaign button on the job. That is permitted. It does not say anything about that in the instructions here, but that is one of the things under questioning they say you can do. You can wear a campaign button on the job, as I understand it. Or more than that, you can write a $1,000 check to a candidate. That is a very substantial contribution, the maximum permitted under Federal regulations.

What if you did not have that $1,000? What if you wanted to give an in-kind contribution of your time? Say you want to go down and stuff envelopes, you are not going to be out on TV or radio broadcasting for a specific candidate. You want to go down and help out—you are civic minded—and do what you can do. Or, someone says, would you like to circulate a nominating petition and see if you can get signatures on this? That is legal. As I understand it, that is not covered in the 13 permitted and the 16 prohibited examples that my distinguished colleague points out.

Another example: You would think if you were going to be able to use a political post for whatever purposes, that you could use that post about anywhere you wanted. If you go to a rally, and the Senator is correct, you are permitted under the rules to go to a political rally just as a spectator, that is spelled out. You can go as a spectator. You better keep your hands in your pockets because if someone hands you a sign to hold while they go make a telephone call, you can be arrested, I presume, or you could have charges brought against you as violating the Hatch act.

In other words, the point being you can go to the political rally but you cannot hold a poster. You cannot wave a poster at a political rally, but at the same time you can take that same poster you are prohibited from even touching anywhere else and you can put it on your car or you can take it home and put it in your front yard. But I believe—and I am not sure, I do not have the figures on this right here, I believe the figures are that there are certain size restrictions on what you can put on your car and different size restrictions that apply to your front yard. Is that something that really should be the subject of Federal law?

Here is another one. If you are asked, you are absolutely permitted to express your opinion about a candidate publicly, and that is spelled out—publicly. But you are prohibited from making a campaign speech for or against anyone. If I am "Hatched," I can go out and say here is what I believe about this candidate, here is what I believe and here are the reasons I believe the way I do, and so on. I am allowed to say that and say it publicly, but I do not know how many people have to be around me before that becomes a speech, becomes a public speech of advocacy that would be prohibited.

So what is the interpretation here? It is this kind of thing from which we are trying to get away from. This is not just an excercise in semantics on this last one either because let me tell you what happened. This really gets into a serious infringement on some people's rights as far as I understand it. The fine line on this one became a very serious issue in the State of Washington.

I see my colleague, the Presiding Officer, from Washington. He would be interested in this one. He may already have heard about this.

It was a serious issue. The State of Washington has a caucus system, and so people have to go to caucuses and when you get ready to vote at the caucus people make a presentation; we are going to vote. People hold up their hands to be counted. You can vote by ballot, as I understand it, in the caucus, but you also can do this just by holding up your hand to be counted as to what that caucus is going to do. They can do it either way as I understand it. There is nothing that says they cannot do that.

What happened in the State of Washington, Navy shipyard workers were notified that they could not actively participate in the State's Presidential caucuses without violating the Hatch Act. Now, if that shipyard was in a State where there was a primary, they could have voted. You go to the primary, cast that ballot in the voting booth, whatever. But if it was a caucus State, they could not attend this caucus. In other words, they were not even permitted to go to a caucus to hold up their hand to vote. That was presumed to be illegal under the Hatch Act.

I do not think that is right. That is denying the people the right to vote in a primary, albeit in caucus States.

Up to a year ago the Hatch Act even extended to letters to the editor on partisan politics. I know my distinguished colleagues from Delaware addressed that, but let me point out something else. One of the difficulties in trying to deal with the Hatch Act and how it is administered is the publications that they put out. They do not even date them. You do not even know which one you are picking up. I presume that that was intentional. Every publication I pick up, government or otherwise, always has a date of some kind on it. But you take two different years of these instructions to Federal employees on political activity and what is permitted, "Political Activity and the Federal Employee," and out of the one that came out in 1988, for instance, it says:

Question. May an employee write a letter to the editor of a local newspaper expressing an opinion on a partisan issue?

Answer. Yes, but employees must not engage in concerted solicitations of votes for or against partisan candidates or political parties. (In support of a candidate or political party, the employee may neither write one letter and cause it to be distributed to five newspapers nor may the employee write five consecutive letters to the same newspaper.

I may have to read that thing back and forth three or four times so everybody understands it.

Let me hasten to add that that is no longer the rule. This was put out last year. Because in the new publication they put out, undated—you do not know which one you are picking up. It depends on whether any old stock is left or not. But in the new one they leave out that example.

In it they say, "May an employee write a letter to the editor 8 a local newspaper expressing an opinion on a partisan issue?" To exactly the same question, the answer this time say, "Yes, but employees may not write letters in connection with political parties or partisan groups or candidates."

So I guess it is to be interpreted now that the old rule that you cannot write one letter to five papers or five letters to one paper is out. If I was a Federal employee, I could not tell for the life of me which one is the current publication. Which one do I go by? There is nothing that indicates any date on this at all that I can find on either one of them.

So those are just a couple little things we are trying to make sure we correct by modifying the Hatch Act only very, very slightly, as I see it.

Let me add one other thing on that example I gave of the five letters to one or one letter to five different papers. The new publication apparently came out after we had our hearings that pointed out some of these fallacies or some of these things that appeared to be misinterpreted in the law. And so they changed it in the next edition, but there is nothing on it that says it is the next edition. So how do Federal employees know what to go by?

As one of the officials said on commenting what they have to do, or what they can tell their members, "We cannot advise our members with confidence since advisory opinions of the special counsel are not subject to judicial review. It is only after employees jeopardize their jobs that a determination is made on whether an activity is permitted under the Hatch Act. Many decisions are not published"—some of those such as I just indicated—"and so are not readily available, resulting in an inability to ascertain the precise extent of prohibited and protected activities or the penalties involved."

So if you are head of an organization, legitimate Government organization, Government employees, what do you tell your people? What can they do under the Hatch Act?

Well, a button at home, or at some place, you can wear it, and so on, and other places you cannot; and five to one and one to five and all these various things I mentioned, even down to different interpretations as to whether it is legal on a Presidential caucus to participate.

Then does this not need to be clarified? I certainly think it does. What we do is the most simple of all clarifications. It is basically said on the job you can do nothing with regard to political activity, I mean zero. You cannot wear that button that is permitted now. You could not wear a political button. That is permitted now. We take that away. We say on the job—this has to be Simon pure—you cannot do anything.

But we also say that when you get off the job and you are on your own time and there is a county Democtatic Party, or a Republican Party, or independent, or whatever your political interests or caucuses or plans are or primaries or whatever it may be, you as an American citizen can without endangering the Republic participate.

You cannot run for elective office yourself. We keep that prohibition in there. The House version does not do that.

The House takes away most of these restrictions that I think go too far. I think that goes too far. So we keep in the Senate version of this the prohibition against running for elective office.

You can be a member of a political party, and you can participate in that party. You can be an official in that party. You could be a ward chairman, a precinct committeeman, or whatever. But you could not go beyond that.

The second prohibition that we keep in the Senate version of this bill that they do not have in the House bill is that Federal employees cannot go out and solicit contributions. You cannot go out and try to get people to contribute because that is where you once again get in a bind as to what is permitted and favoritism, conflict of interest, and a whole bunch of things. We keep those prohibitions in this bill so that, whether you are off duty or on duty, you cannot participate.

You cannot be a candidate for elective office yourself, public elective office, nor can you solicit contributions. But can you then participate in a local school board race or a partisan political activity at a local level or whatever level? Yes. I see nothing wrong with that.

This takes away all this difference that we have on all these things, like whether you are "Hatched" can you go to a caucus, can you wear a campaign button, or write a $1,000 check, but cannot give any in-kind time, stuff envelopes? That is prohibited in current law. We say that is no danger to the country. That is no hazard to the United States of America to permit people to do that kind of political participation.

I am the last one that wants to weaken the protections of the Federal employee.

This bill basically simplifies things where it would be easy to interpret what can be done. There will not be all this confusion under the proposal that we have before the Senate.

One other thing I have not heard anybody comment on yet as far as what will let us consider Hatch Act changes at this time. I brought this up yesterday in my remarks. I will bring it up again today. If someone wants to comment on it, I will be glad to hear what they have to say on it.

But I mentioned yesterday that one of the events that combined to make the amendment of the Hatch Act a project in the 100th Congress, this being the 101st, was that during the 1984 Presidential election the presidents of three of our major Federal and postal employee unions endorsed Walter Mondale's candidacy for the Presidency. It went further than that. In their union newsletters they encouraged their membership to vote for him.

Here is the situation. These three union heads were Government employees who had been elected presidents of their union. All of them had been out of their Government jobs on a leave of absence, which is provided for in law, at least 16 years. That was the shortest time they had been out. But they were still technically on leave from their Government jobs, 16 years later.

What happened? Because they had advocated, endorsed Mondale's candidacy, the Office of Special Counsel brought suit against them asserting they had violated the prohibitions against active political participations. Mind you, they had been out of their Government jobs 16 years.

The Merit Systems Protection Board upheld the OSC finding and they penalized those three presidents. Do you know how they penalized them? They suspended them their jobs for 60 days; jobs they had not been in for over 16 years. But that was a big penalty, or was supposed to be anyway. They suspended them for 60 days. That was done. They continued on in their activities as heads of their particular unions.

On appeal, two, not one, but two Federal circuit courts overruled and reversed those findings of the Merit Systems Protection Board on the findings that no Hatch Act violations had occurred. The Office of Personnel Management, and the Merit Systems Protection Board both wanted to appeal the court decisions to the Supreme Court. But the Officer of Solicitor General declined the invitation. They apparently felt they did not have a case. Two Federal courts had already ruled on it.

I bring this up because this is partisan enforcement of the Hatch Act every bit as much as some of these arbitrary decisions against individuals. In other words, there was partisan enforcement. We are going to lay this on them here and show them they cannot do this.

I do not know whether there is an answer to this on the other side or not. If there is, I am not aware of it. But I point out that is one of the things that triggered off the interest in the Hatch Act in the last Congress, where legislation was started, and that is carried over now into this 101st Congress.

So that is another thing that I think takes away some of the doubts about the legislation we have now. Would that be legal? No. It will not. There will not be any question about that as I see it, under the legislation that we are providing. Once again, what we have done is take away uncertainty under the Hatch Act. We have not lessened the protection for Government employees. We are making this a much more administerable law than it has been up to this particular time.

Mr. President, I know we have other people on the floor here who wish to address this. I see Senator LIEBERMAN here. I believe he came over to address this subject. I would be happy to hold any remarks I have until later if he wishes to proceed.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. REID). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I wish to make a few additional remarks regarding the Hatch Act. Three thousand interpretations, erroneously referred to as rules or regulations, are before me, but at least the 3,000 interpretations of the Hatch Act that were referred to were said to now be down to, I believe, 13 permitted and 16 prohibited, and I think that oversimplifies it considerably because there are still many hundreds and perhaps even still this whole 3,000 out there in the way of interpretations as to what can be done or what should not be done under the Hatch Act.

I am not sure I fully understand the administration's position on the Hatch Act. Let me go back to the last election. One of the most effective images I remember from the last Presidential campaign showed Mr. Bush surrounded by a sea of blue-uniformed police officers.

I am not sure; I think the site was in Boston. He was accepting their endorsement for President of the United States. Those employees were State, they were local employees, they were not Federal employees, although I would say there might have been some Federal money in that with the help we give to local police departments. But by any interpretation they were not "Hatched" from a Federal standpoint. They were State and local employees with salaries paid for by taxpayer dollars supposed to act impartially to enforce the laws of their jurisdiction.

I would agree completely with the President of the United States if he said that the actions of those officers in publicly endorsing him did not affect their ability to impartially enforce the law. However, I am not sure how one reconciles readily availing himself of the political activities of one group of public employees with denying some 3 million Federal and postal employees similar opportunities to participate in the political processes of this Nation.

Mr. President, under the terms of S. 135, Federal or postal employees could join Mr. Bush or others in a television commercial or rally. However, unlike the policemen I mentioned earlier, these "Hatched" employees would not be able to wear a uniform or anything else which would identify themselves as a Federal or a postal worker.

Mr. President, there is something else I want to stress with regard to S. 135. It is a modest proposal for reforming the 1939 Hatch Act statute. And I use the word "reform" and not "repeal." The word "repeal" with regard to the Hatch Act has been used repeatedly. That just is not true. The Department of Justice and others have characterized this bill as repealing the Hatch Act. There is a big difference between repeal and reform.

What S. 135 seeks to do is just rationalize the Hatch Act by creating clear distinctions between on-the-job politicking, which is expressly prohibited, and political activity off the job, which is allowed but still with some restrictions.

The two major restrictions we keep on this is off the job you still cannot run for public elective office. Another thing you cannot do, you cannot—and this is very important—you cannot, under any circumstance, solicit political contributions from the general public. Those are two great big restrictions. But could you participate in local politics? Of course, you could and should be able to.

The purpose of the legislation is to clarify the confusion and illogic of current law governing the political activities of Federal and postal employees. It is not repealing of the act, I repeat. It is a reform, a needed reform.

In answer to a confirmation hearing question from the Governmental Affairs Committee on the need for reforming the Hatch Act, the administration's own Director of the Office of Personnel Management, Constance B. Newman said, "At the very least, there should be steps taken to simplify, consolidate, and reduce the confusion brought about by more than 3,000 rulings."

Those are not my words, those are the words of the Director of the Office of Personnel Management.

The confusion resulting from all this, whether it is 3,000, 2,000, or even 1,000, is sort of immaterial. It is a great number, we do know that, of these interpretations that Federal employees have to live with. And this confusion hurts Democrats and Republicans alike. It is not a partisan thing, as I see it, at all.

I remember the news stories about the State of Washington's Presidential caucuses during the last election. Jesse Jackson, Michael Dukakis, and President Bush all lost. They all lost in the caucuses. For Jackson and Dukakis, there were not enough non-Federal volunteers to serve as delegates for the party convention. On the Republican side, according to news reports, anyway, one caucus went to former television evangelist Pat Robertson by a one-vote margin after three married couples, who were Federal workers and supported President Bush, told their caucus chairman they were afraid to attend and participate. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the Washington Post story of that incident called "To the 'Hatched,' Tuesday Wasn't Super," be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD as follows:

[From the Washington Post]

TO THE "HATCHED," TUESDAY WASN'T SUPER

(By Judith Havemann)

Jesse L. Jackson, Michael S. Dukakis and Vice President Bush had something new in common yesterday: their supporters in Kitsap County, Wash., were tallying the results from the state's "Super Tuesday" caucuses and cursing the Hatch Act.

On the Democratic side, the Hatch Act—which prohibits most partisan political activity by federal workers—meant that there were not enough nonfederal workers to serve as Jackson and Dukakis delegates to upcoming party conventions. While federal workers were allowed to vote, they were prohibited from electing themselves or other federal workers as delegates to conventions, so there were not enough eligible people to vote for.

On the Republican side, one caucus went to former television evangelist Pat Robertson, 25 to 24, after three married couples who are federal workers, fearing the consequences, told the caucus chairman that they were afraid to attend and declare their support for Bush.

The Republican regulars "got stomped," said Kitsap County Republican chairman Harold Reynolds, and the strict Hatch Act prohibitions "made a big difference."

In Bremerton, Wash., where 11,500 residents work for the Puget Sound Naval Shipyard in a city of 35,000, an interpretation of the Hatch Act published last month in the base newspaper, The Salute, has caused a political furor.

The Salute advised federal employees that while they could attend party caucuses, they could not speak on behalf of candidates or seek election as delegates. The article was based on a regulation implementing the Hatch Act that prohibits an individual from "addressing a convention, caucus, rally or similar gathering of a political party in support of or in opposition to a partisan candidate for public office."

Washington Secretary of State Ralph Munro failed in an election eve request for a temporary restraining order barring enforcement of the Hatch Act's provisions against addressing caucuses. He called the situation "absurd."

Reynolds said the federal workers attending his caucus Tuesday night "just sat there, not saying a word." He said his caucus secretary declined to sign the election form—the minutes of the caucus—because he was a federal worker.

Karen Marchioro, Washington state Democratic chairman, said, "We have an overzealous administration interpreting something rigidly that has always been on the books but never enforced. If Ralph Munro had not filed suit, people might have gone ahead to the caucuses and participated as they have always done."

As it was, she said, "people had to sit there like dummies." She said the interpretation, the suit, and the publicity "sure didn't help" the traditionally low turnout.

Kitsap County Auditor Karen Flynn said that two federal employees attended her caucus wearing gags over their mouths.

Preliminary results suggest that Dukakis received about 42 percent of the vote, Jackson 37 percent, with "uncommitted" running third.

On the Republican side with 70 percent of the vote reported, Robertson won the state with 39 percent of the vote, followed by Dole at 26 percent and Bush 24 precent.

Rep. William L. Clay (D-Mo.), sponsor of House-passed legislation to eliminate virtually all bars to political participation by federal workers on their own time, called the Kitsap County situation the "perfect example of why the law should be reformed.

"If you take what happened to the few people affected here and multiply it by the 3 million people covered by the Hatch Act, you can see the impact on the electoral process."

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, this will be printed in the RECORD, but since we have time here I would like to go ahead and read this anyway. It is called, "To the 'Hatched,' Tuesday Wasn't Super. Candidates Lost Delegates Because of Political Curb on U.S. Workers," written by Judith Havemann, Washington Post staff writer.

Jesse L. Jackson, Michael S. Dukakis and Vice President Bush had something new in common yesterday: their supporters in Kitsap County, Wash., were tallying the results from the state's "Super Tuesday" caucuses and cursing the Hatch Act.

On the Democratic side, the Hatch Act—which prohibits most partisan political activity by federal workers—meant that there were not enough nonfederal workers to serve as Jackson and Dukakis delegates to upcoming party conventions. While federal workers were allowed to vote, they were prohibited from electing themselves or other federal workers as delegates to conventions, so there were not enough eligible people to vote for.

On the Republican side, one caucus went to former television evangelist Pat Robertson, 25 to 24, after three married couples who are federal workers, fearing the consequences, told the caucus chairman that they were afraid to attend and declare their support for Bush.

The Republican regulars "got stomped," said Kitsap County Republican chairman Harold Reynolds, and the strict Hatch Act prohibitions "made a big difference."

In Bremerton, Wash., where 11,500 residents work for the Pugent Sound Naval Shipyard in a city of 35,000, an interpretation of the Hatch Act published last month in the base newspaper, The Salute, has caused a political furor.

The Salute advised federal employees that while they could attend party caucuses, they could not speak on behalf of candidates or seek election as delegates. The article was based on a regulation implementing the Hatch Act that prohibits an individual from "addressing a convention, caucus, rally or similar gathering of a political party in support of or in opposition to a partisan candidate for public office."

Washington Secretary of State Ralph Munro failed in an election eve request for a temporary restraining order barring enforcement of the Hatch Act's provisions against addressing caucuses. He called the situation "absurd."

Reynolds said the federal workers attending his caucus Tuesday night "just sat there, not saying a word." He said his caucus secretary declined to sign the election form—the minutes of the caucus—because he was a federal worker.

Karen Marchioro, Washington state Democratic chairman, said, "We have an overzealous administration interpreting something rigidly that has always been on the books but never enforced. If Ralph Munro had not filed suit, people might have gone ahead to the caucuses and participated as they have always done."

As it was, she said, "people had to sit there like dummies." She said the interpretation, the suit, and the publicity "sure didn't help" the traditionally low turnout.

Kitsap County Auditor Karen Flynn said that two federal employees attended her caucus wearing gags over their mouths.

That must have been a sight to behold.

Preliminary results suggest that Dukakis received about 42 percent of the vote, Jackson 37 percent, with "uncommitted" running third.

On the Republican side with 70 percent of the vote reported, Robertson won the state with 39 percent of the vote, followed by Dole at 26 percent and Bush 24 percent.

Rep. William L. Clay (D-Mo.), sponsor of House-passed legislation to eliminate virtually all bars to political participation by federal workers on their own time, called the Kitsap County situation the "perfect example of why the law should be reformed.

"If you take what happened to the few people affected here and multiply it by the 3 million people covered by the Hatch Act, you can see the impact on the electoral process."

That is the end of the article.

I hasten to add with respect to Mr. CLAY and the House-passed legislation, we do not go as far in this legislation before us today, S. 135, as the House does in their legislation. We prohibit the solicitation of money for political purposes by Federal employees. We also keep the restrictions on that say a Federal employee cannot run for partisan elective office. So, those are two big differences between what we do here and what they do over in the House.

I also say in response to my distinguished colleague about whether there is support or nonsupport for this among good pipelines into all of their organizations, that they know what those organizations are doing. If they do not like what they are doing, they let those views be known. We have quite a list of organizations here, which I ask unanimous consent be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

American Federation of Government Employees.
American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.
American Foreign Service Association.
American Postal Workers Union.
American Psychiatric Association.
Epsilon Sigma Phi.
Federal Executive and Professional Association.
Federal Managers Association.
Federally Employed Women.
Graphic Communications International Union.
International Association of Fire Fighters.
International Federation of Professional and Technical Engineers.
International Union of Operating Engineers.
Military Sea Transport Union SIU.
National Association of Air Traffic Specialists.
National Association of ASCS County Office Employees.
National Association of Federal Veterinarians.
National Association of Government Employees.
National Association of Letter Carriers.
National Association of Postal Supervisors.
National Association of Postmasters of the United States.
National Association of Retired Federal Employees.
National Federation of Federal Employees.
National Labor Relations Board Union.
National League of Postmasters of the United States.
National Postal Mail Handlers Union/LIUNA.
National Rural Letter Carriers Association.
National Treasury Employees Union.
Organization of Professional Employees of the Department of Agriculture.
Overseas Education Association/NEA.
Public Employee Department (AFL-CIO).
Service Employees International Union.

Mr. GLENN. Here are some of the organizations that support changing the Hatch Act. These are modest changes, reforms—reforms, again, not repeal—reforms that help clarify what employees can do under the Hatch Act and what they cannot. That is the main thrust of this. Let me just read these off:

American Federation of Government Employees.
American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.
American Foreign Service Association.
American Postal Workers Union.
American Psychiatric Association.
Epsilon Sigma Phi.
Federal Executive and Professional Association.
Federal Managers Association.
Federally Employed Women.
Graphic Communications International Union.
International Association of Fire Fighters.
International Federation of Professional and Technical Engineers.
International Union of Operating Engineers.
Military Sea Transport Union SIU.
National Association of Air Traffic Specialists.
National Association of ASCS County Office Employees.
National Association of Federal Veterinarians.
National Association of Government Employees.
National Association of Letter Carriers.
National Association of Postal Supervisors.
National Association of Postmasters of the United States.
National Association of Retired Federal Employees.
National Federation of Federal Employees.
National Labor Relations Board Union.
National League of Postmasters of the United States.
National Postal Mail Handlers Union/LIUNA.
National Rural Letter Carriers Association.
National Treasury Employees Union.
Organization of Professional Employees of the Department of Agriculture.
Overseas Education Association/NEA.
Public Employee Department (AFL-CIO).
Service Employees International Union.

Mr. President, I have not counted up that number but that must be 25 or so organizations representing people who feel they are being dealt with unfairly under the Hatch Act as it is administered now. I repeat, what we are trying to do is just reform it, to make it more fair, to make it more workable so the people understand what they are permitted to do on the job and off the job without all these myriad, myriad, myriad interpretations that have been made that leave people so confused they do not know what they can do and what they cannot do, basically. So they just deny themselves the right to participate in our political process. I think that is a shame that that occurs. I hope we can correct that with S. 135, and I urge its passage.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I must firmly but respectfully disagree with my distinguished colleague, the chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee, when he asserts that the bill he proposes to consider represents reform or the reversal of past practice. Make no mistake about it, S. 135 represents essentially repeal of the Hatch Act and not reform.

I point out the act was enacted in 1939 when we had a Democratic President and a Democratic Congress. It was passed because at that time Congress determined that partisan political activity by Federal employees must be limited in order for public institutions to function fairly and effectively. The purpose of the Hatch Act was to strike a balance between the rights of the Federal employees to engage in their constitutional right to vote but also at the same time to ensure that the laws would be administered in a neutral, nonpartisan manner so the American people would have confidence in its Government.

It was not a new idea. Past Presidents going way back to George Washington, expressed concern about the political activity of Government employees. Thomas Jefferson, our Nation's third President, was one of the first to express concern about this issue. In response to his concern, the heads of the executive departments issued an order which stated while it is "the right of any officer, that is Federal employee, to give his vote at elections as a qualified citizen * * * it is expected that he will not attempt to influence the votes of others or take any part in the business of electioneering, that being deemed inconsistent with the spirit of the Constitution. * * *"

Despite efforts of succeeding Presidents to achieve that goal, it really was not until 1939 when the Hatch Act was passed that this problem was fairly and squarely met. For the last 50 years, I think it can be said, the Hatch Act has enjoyed broad support, both among the American people and among the Federal employees.

Going back to the question whether this is reform or repeal, let me point out that the whole purpose of the Hatch Act was to prevent an active role on the part of Federal employees in partisan political activity. Specifically, the Hatch Act forbids employees to run as partisan candidates in election for public office, hold office in political clubs or parties, solicit or handle political contributions, or organize partisan fundraising activities, make speeches, or engage in other campaign activities to elect partisan candidates as an agent of the candidate's campaign organization, and to circulate partisan nominating petitions.

What S. 135 would do in most of these areas is just go 180 degrees in the other direction. Not only would it permit, but the language of the bill says it would encourage, partisan political activity on the part of Federal employees.

What kind of confidence is that going to build in the American people? One day, a Federal employee could head up the Federal Election Commission. He could be elected chairman of either the Democratic or Republican National Committee, and that would be legal under S. 135. But in the daytime, when he is on duty, he is supposed to administer that legislation in a fair and nonpartisan way.

Who is going to have confidence in him? If it is a Republican, if he is a Republican national chairman, do the Democratic national candidates think in his administration of the Election Commission he is going to be nonpartisan?

Obviously, it is going to raise serious doubt, serious question, both in the minds of the American people and the Democratic candidates. If it were a Democratic chairman, the same would be true of the Republicans. But what I am saying is that this proposed law, S. 135, would turn around and not only permit Federal employees, but by its very language, as I have already pointed out, can urge Federal employees to hold office in a political party, to work in partisan political campaigns or in party organizations, publicly endorse partisan candidates and urge others to support them, and solicit political contributions from fellow Federal employees under certain circumstances.

If that is reform of the basic thrust of the Hatch Act, I must look up what "reform" means, because we are going the other direction. It is true it does not go quite as far as the House legislaiton would. The House legislation, for example, would permit Federal employees to run for partisan public office. So you can see the direction we are headed if this legislation is adopted.

Mr. President, my distinguished colleague, the chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, has talked about the difficulty, the complexity of the rules and regulations under this legislation. Let me say that, to be perfectly candid, I think the advocates, those supporting the so-called S. 135, have badly overstated the problem of interpretation under the current law although, like all rules and regulations, it unquestionably can be simplified and clarified. At a later time, I will undoubtedly offer an amendment to do just that.

Let me point out there are 13 permissible activities under the rules and regulations, and 16 prohibited activities. They are not all that difficult. I think a reading of that will show, although, as under any rule or regulation, questions will arise. But I think it is important to understand that there is a hotline, and any Federal employee who has a question as to whether his proposed conduct raises a question as to whether he is in conflict with the Hatch Act or not can obtain advice through that hotline.

But let me just read you some of these rules and regulations:

Permissible activities:

1. All employees are free to engage in political activity to the widest extent consistent with the restrictions imposed by law and this subpart. Each employee retains the right to register and vote in any election;

2. Express his opinion as an individual privately and publicly on political subjects and candidates;

3. Display a political picture, sticker, badge or button. I might point out that nowhere does it say there is a limit as to the size.

4. Participate in the nonpartisan activities of a civic, community, social, labor or professional organization or of a similar organization;

5. Be a member of a political party or other political organization and participate in its activities to the extent consistent with the law;

6. Attend a political convention, rally, fundraising function or other political gathering;

7. Sign a political petition as an individual;

8. Make a financial contribution to a political party or organization;

9. Take an active part as an independent candidate or in support of an independent candidate in a partisan election covered by 733.124;

10. Take an active part as a candidate or in support of a candidate in a nonpartisan election;

11. Be politically active in connection with a question which is not especially identified with a political party, such as constitutional amendment, referendum, approval of a municipal ordinance or any other question or issue of a similar character;

12. Serve as an elected judge or clerk or in a similar position to perform nonpartisan duties as prescribed by State or local law;

13. Otherwise participate fully in public affairs, except as prohibited by law, in a manner which does not materially compromise the efficiency and integrity of an employee or the neutrality and efficiency and integrity of the agency.

Those are the 13 permissible activities. Admittedly, on occasion, as I said, there are going to be questions, serious questions, as there is under any regulation. But, again, there is a hotline available to the employee who has a question as to what he can do or not do.

Just let me point out that we are going to have the same difficult questions raised under S. 135 if it should become law. For example, under this legislation, it forbids political activity on the job, or while on duty, and yet nowhere is there any definition of what political activity is. For example, just as you do under the present law, you may have questions as to what is a political activity. Is it a constitutional amendment, referendum, approval of municipal ordinance; are these political questions or not? There are going to have to be some rules and regulations to define what the law is intended to mean by political activity.

For example, if S. 135 became law and you were on the job, would you be able to talk to several other employees about a candidate or would that be proscribed activity? Again, what I am saying is that under the proposed law, there are going to be similar questions of interpretation and rules and regulations. As I intend to show later, some of them are going to be very difficult to answer.

Mr. President, many fine organizations have come out in opposition of the repeal of the Hatch Act. As I said, that is essentially what we are talking about in S. 135. But before I list some of those organizations which are opposing this repeal, I would like to read into the RECORD I think a very important letter sent to me by a distinguished Member of the House of Representatives, FRANK R. WOLF, who serves the contiguous district of Virginia which is very much dominated by citizens who work for the Federal Government.

(Mr. ROBB assumed the chair.)

Mr. ROTH. In a letter dated October 24, 1989, Congressman WOLF wrote to me:

Hon. WILLIAM ROTH,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR BILL: Since you may soon have the opportunity to consider proposed revisions to the Hatch Act, I am writing to offer my thoughts on this issue. As the representative of a congressional district with the highest number of federal employees in the country, I want to point out some of my concerns regarding changing this important law.

The Hatch Act has protected federal workers from coercion, and has protected the general public from a politicized federal workforce, for almost 50 years. My concerns regarding changes to the Hatch Act stem from my commitment to the strength of our federal service, and from my desire that the American public have confidence in public servants.

The Hatch Act is, above all, a protection. It protects federal workers from the subtle political persuasion that could compromise the performance of their duties. It protects them from the partisan spoils system that characterizes the civil service of some countries. It also protects the general public. It allows the public to be secure in the knowledge that the everyday contact that they have with federal employees—with the Social Security representative, the IRS auditor, the postal carrier—will not be influenced by partisan politics.

Times have changed since the enactment of the Hatch Act 50 years ago, but human nature has not changed. The fact that the size of the federal workforce has tripled makes the Hatch Act even more needed today. The abuses that prompted passage of the Hatch Act in 1939 are still possible today. We have not witnessed such abuses precisely because the Hatch Act has let federal employees know that they cannot be coerced into political participation.

It is important to note that a bill to repeal the Hatch Act has been introduced in every Congress since 1939. Our forebears understood the dangers of a politicized federal workforce and rejected attempts to repeal the Hatch Act.

One bill passed both the House and the Senate in 1976. President Ford vetoed the bill and preserved the Hatch Act, saying that "pressures could be brought to bear on federal employees in extremely subtle ways beyond the reach of any anti-coercion statute so that they would inevitably feel compelled to engage in partisan political activity. This would be bad for the employee, bad for the government, and bad for the public."

In a 1973 decision the Supreme Court found that ". . . it is in the best interest of the country, indeed essential, that the federal service should depend on meritorious performance rather than political service, and that political influence of federal employees on others and on the electoral process should be limited."

In a 1979 report the non-partisan GAO found several problems with proposed changes to the Hatch Act, finding that the "elimination of restrictions on political activity could very likely increase the potential for conflict-of-interest situations to develop."

You may be surprised to learn that the majority of federal employees do not favor changes to the Hatch Act. I surveyed 23,000 of my constituents in 1983 and found that 66 percent favored the existing Hatch Act. A poll of 10,000 federal employees published last May by the Federal Employees News Digest found that 70 percent were either neutral or favored current Hatch Act limitations on partisan political activity.

In addition, Common Cause and the United States Chamber of Commerce are opposed to changes to the Hatch Act. The Attorney General has stated that the legislation that passed the House earlier this year, H.R. 20, is unenforceable due to the subtle nature of political coercion and the fact that it often just occurs between two individuals. He would recommend a veto since the bill would lead to a 'tragic repoliticization of the federal workforce." Passage would flood the already crowded docket of the Merit Systems Protection Board with litigation by disgruntled employees.

I fear that what is permitted will come to be expected. Political appointees and partisan supervisors could pressure their workers to make campaign contributions or work in campaigns. This subtle pressure, with the threat of performance appraisals, work assignments, transfers, and opportunities for advancement, could politicize the civil service.

Instead of wasting time on this legislation, which will subject federal workers to political coercion and will hurt public confidence in the federal workforce, we in Congress should be addressing the serious problems of federal pay and benefits. The growing disparity between federal and private sector pay threatens to affect the ability of the federal government to attract and retain experienced and qualified employees at all levels. This should be our number one priority.

I hope that these comments are helpful to you.

Sincerely,

FRANK R. WOLF,
Member of Congress.

Mr. President, a number of very distinguished organizations have come out in opposition to this proposed repeal of the Hatch Act. They include Common Cause, the American Bar Association, the Federal Bar Association, the National Academy of Public Administration, the National Taxpayer Union, the Chamber of Commerce, the International Personnel Management Association.

I have just received a copy of a letter dated May 2, 1990, from Common Cause. It is of such importance again I would take the time to read it in its entirety.

DEAR SENATOR: The Senate is soon expected to take action on legislation to amend the Hatch Act which for 50 years has protected federal employees from inappropriate political pressures. Common Cause strongly urges you to oppose S. 135, the Hatch Act Amendments of 1989. This bill seeks to make basic changes in the current Hatch Act restrictions on partisan political activity by federal workers, opening the door to implicit coercion, and abandons the fundamental concept of an unpoliticized civil service.

The House-passed bill H.R. 20, which would repeal Hatch Act protections and for the first time in 50 years allow Federal civil service and postal employees to participate in partisan political activity. For example, Federal workers could run as candidates in partisan elections, serve as officers of a political party, raise partisan campaign contributions, manage campaigns, and administer political action committees.

Incidentally—this is not part of the letter, but let me make the aside—is it not ironic that at the very time we are presumably going to be considering campaign reform, much of which is directed at reforming PAC's, that we have a legislative proposal before us today that would in effect expand PAC's, directly contrary to what I presume was going to be the thrust of this future campaign legislation.

But to go back to the letter from Common Cause:

The only restraint is that the partisan activity would have to occur during off-hours. Common Cause opposed the passage of H.R. 20.

S. 135 also proposes major changes in the Hatch Act, lifting most restrictions on partisan political activity. Like the House bill, a federal employee would be permitted, among other things, to serve as an officer of a political party or a PAC, become a public campaign official for a candidate, and run as a delegate to a national convention. The Senate bill does prohibit federal employees from running for partisan political office and from soliciting contributions for partisan candidates. However, it allows government workers to solicit their colleagues for contributions for their own federal employee PACs.

Repeal of the Hatch Act's basic protections—

Again, as an aside, not part of the letter—repeal of the Hatch Act's basic protection does not sound like an amendment; it sounds like repeal.

as proposed in S. 135, would increase the potential for widespread abuse and open the way for implicit coercion against which there is no real protection. With basic restrictions on partisan activity repealed, no procedural or other safeguards will be sufficient to protect against subtle forms of political favoritism or coercion of federal workers.

It is important to recognize that under the current Hatch Act, federal workers are already permitted to engage in various political activities. For example, they make political contributions to candidates, serve as rank-and-file members of political parties, and engage in nonpartisan political activities. It is only the most active levels of partisan participation from which they are currently barred. In drawing this line, we believe that the current Hatch Act strikes an appropriate balance between the federal worker's ability to participate in political activities and the public's right to fair and impartial administration of government.

Common Cause recognizes that the current regulations governing administration of the Hatch Act are complicated. There may be ways to clarify and simplify for workers the degree of participation they are permitted under the Hatch Act without lifting the basic restrictions on partisan activity. We would urge the Senate to instead explore this possibility. As a core principle, however, a careful balance must be struck between an individual's First Amendment right of free speech and association and the public's right to impartial administration of government. We believe S. 135 upsets this balance and would open the possibility of a dangerously politicized civil service.

The Hatch Act was designed to ensure that the federal government is administered in a fair and impartial manner. We agree with the U.S. Supreme Court which stated, in upholding the constitutionality of the Act, that "it is in the best interest of the country, indeed essential, that federal service should depend upon meritorious performance rather than political service. . . ."

Common Cause strongly believes this important integrity-in-government measure should not be repealed. We strongly oppose S. 135 and other proposals that would repeal necessary prohibitions on partisan political activity by federal employees.

Sincerely,

FRED WERTHEIMER,
President.

Mr. President, I have a number of other letters that I will undoubtedly read into the record later, but I think that very well states the case why this proposed legislation is not in the best interests of the public, the Federal employee, or the impartial administration of the law.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. LIEBERMAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LIEBERMAN].

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President, I rise to support the bill and express my continued hope and prayer that we will be allowed to proceed expeditiously to consider this on its merits.

It appears there will be repeated opportunities to comment on this legislation as the days ahead go forward, but I wanted to first approach the baseline question as I see it. It is this: We are dealing here with some fundamental American rights. When we in America think of what distinguishes us as Americans, when people around the world think about what distinguishes the American experience, what is the American ideal, I believe that we and they think about political freedom, about the right of the governed, the right of the people to determine who their leaders will be, the right of the people to express their opinions on public issues, and the right of the people to control their own destiny.

Any infringement on that basic right ought to be carried out with the greatest respect, with the greatest requirement for proof that it is justified. If we were going to create a scale here, a scale of justice, a scale of political rights, we would require, I think, the heaviest possible showing of proof and evidence that an infringement of political liberty was justified before we applied it, and when we limit political liberty, we would want to do so in the most limited, exacting, precise way.

In the Hatch Act, we have exactly the opposite circumstance, both in its inception, and let me just talk more particularly about today. Those who oppose these reforms, as its chairman quite accurately says, these reforms in the Hatch Act, not the repeal of the Hatch Act, do so on what I would call generalized fears. There is no showing of evidence that this is justified.

Let us go back to the origins of the Hatch Act, 1939. There was a specific concern at that time. Apparently salaries of employees in the Work Progress Administration [WPA] were being illegally assessed, and workers were being coerced to fund a particular senatorial campaign.

That procedure became widely publicized through the release of an investigatory report by then what was called the Special Senate Committee to Investigate Senatorial Campaign Expenditures and the use of Government funds.

There was another more general concern which I would say was a political concern.

And that is that at that time there was a fear that President Roosevelt would try to gain reelection to a third term in 1940 with the support of Federal employees who, it was alleged or worried, would be beholden to him because they received their jobs through the New Deal, through the Federal administration.

Well, if the salaries of employees in the WPA were being illegally assessed and workers being coerced to fund a campaign, that is intolerable. It seems to me, the way to address that is the way it has been done over the years, to specifically provide by law that it would be illegal for a Federal worker to be coerced, to be assessed, to be required to give to a political campaign as, in a sense, a condition, implicit condition, of his employment. The law specifically prohibits that, as it does a whole host of every other imaginable abuses of the autonomy of Federal employees, and every other imaginable improper mixing of public authorities carried out by Federal employees and their political opinions—in other words, to protect those who deal with the Federal Government from being influenced or affected as a result of their politics.

In my opinion, the original Hatch Act violated the principle that I talked about at the beginning of these remarks. It was a gross overreaction to the problem; it was a meat cleaver, when we should have used a scalpel. In fact, the scalpel is in law, and still as a matter of overreaction, the meat cleaver remains in law, which is the prohibition on so many of the basic political rights of Federal employees, undercutting what it really means to be an American, undercutting their rights as Americans, making them less fully Americans than the rest of us are.

The word is overused; we do not use it much any more. But in my opinion, the Hatch Act is un-American, inconsistent with what the basic definition of this country is and ought to be.

In this debate thus far, we have heard discussion of why we ought not change the Hatch Act, and I think what we have again is no real showing of evidence. We have some experience at the State level now; 41 States have adopted reforms in their baby Hatch Acts, which allow much greater political freedom by their State employees than the Federal Hatch Act does. And there is simply no evidence from any one of those 41 States, many of which are represented here in the Senate by people who apparently still oppose these modest reforms in the Hatch Act, that this increased freedom has created coercion of subordinate State employees, or has opened the door to the improper use of public authority, based on political considerations, because of a person's party or political involvement.

So in the laboratories where one might say we have had this experience over a period of years, where somebody can come into the Senate and say, Look what happens when the Hatch Act is opened up, there is just no showing of any wrongdoing. The most that I have heard here on the floor is, worry about what might happen, that politically oriented supervisors of Federal employees might keep track of the political activities and positions taken by those who work under them and implicitly pressure those employees to take political actions on behalf of candidates the supervisors support, or implicitly reward and punish their subordinate employees, based on their political activities.

I must say that, in my opinion, is reaching, both in terms of the case that it makes for limiting the political rights of many American citizens; but it is also reaching in the sense that I am sure that in most Federal offices today, people have a general idea of what the political persuasion of their fellow workers is. I know around a lot of coffee breaks and lunchtime breaks, talk in Federal offices certainly turns to politics. People have awareness of what the political orientation of their coworkers is. And it is not just that generalized notion.

The truth is that even under the law today, a Federal employee could wear a button or put a bumper sticker on a car. He can go to a meeting, but not speak at the meeting. He can write a letter to the paper. There is awareness of the political orientation of public employees. If a supervisor wanted to act inappropriately on the basis of that information, clearly that supervisor could.

I do not know whether this bill ought to be considered, Mr. President, a liberal bill or a conservative bill. But it seems to me, if there was ever an example that a conservative ought to be worried about Government trying to meddle too far into the private lives of Americans, this is the example. We are dealing here with human nature. We are dealing here with the desire of people to express their opinions and be involved in public life. And it seems to me outrageous that the major argument that has been made so far against these slight reforms, this attempt to open up to 3 million Americans, who happen to be Federal employees, equality of political participation, an opportunity, is this generalized fear that a little more involvement might create some coercion on the job, is just reaching too far as a justification for limiting the rights of public employees. Besides, going back to the beginning, there are specific statutes that prohibit coercion of Federal employees, based on political participation.

The reality is that the bill before us extends very little the opportunities Federal employees have for political participation. It maintains prohibitions against some of the fears my friends opposed to this bill have expressed. For instance, even if this bill is passed and signed into law by the President, a Federal employee can solicit political contributions, but only from fellow employees and only from multiparty political action committees, and not from subordinate employees, to avoid any concern about coercion.

So it is early in the debate, earlier than I would hope, because it appears that this is going to be a long debate. But I still have not heard a case made, based on evidence instead of fears, based on evidence, that would justify the limiting of the liberties of 3 million of our fellow Americans.

Mr. President, I see other Members of the Senate on the floor. I presume they wish to speak, and in deference to that desire, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. D'AMATO addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from New York [Mr. D'AMATO].

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I might be permitted to proceed as in morning business, provided, though, that the time be counted as against the bill, and that the time, in addition to that, be charged against my hour that I might be permitted, and also that the remainder of that time be given to my friend, the distinguished Senator from Delaware.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, the Senator is recognized for that purpose.

SOVIET MOST-FAVORED-NATION TRADING STATUS

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, yesterday the Senate passed, by an overwhelming majority, a sense-of-the-Senate resolution which said clearly that we should not go forward in terms of implementing any agreements conferring upon the Soviets most-favored-nation trading status, until and unless they do two things: First, stop their economic aggression, their embargo against the people of Lithuania; and, second, that they go to the bargaining table and sit down with the Lithuanians and in good faith begin to work out the terms and the conditions of trade, security, et cetera.

The sentiment of the Senate, I think, is quite correctly shared by almost all Americans and all people who stand for freedom. I think there has been a very successful propaganda campaign that unwittingly has been carried on by the media because in paper after paper, in TV program after TV program, in radio account after radio account, in every manner of the media available, we see Gorbachev's words that somehow the economic blockade will be loosened and, in particular, that more natural gas is going to be made available to the Lithuanian people. This has been taken as fact.

Yesterday I spoke to President Landsbergis and he assured me that this is not the case. So here is the Western democracies, the people of the United States, Senators and Congressmen, being led to believe that all is well, that the Soviets are beginning to bargain, they are beginning to talk, when, in fact, they are not.

Let me share with you a letter, because I asked the President to send me a letter with an overview of what is taking place. I received that letter this morning at about 10:30—

DEAR SENATOR D'AMATO—

And I am not going to read all of it but I will highlight parts and ask that the letter be printed in the RECORD in its entirety when I have concluded.

In response to your recent telephone call, the following is a brief overview of the current situation in Lithuania.

The Soviet economic blockade of Lithuania continues; its primary purpose is to create massive unemployment—

Mr. President, this is the President of Lithuania. He says to us the blockade continues and its purpose is to create massive unemployment. Someone might ask why is this. What purpose would be achieved?

He goes on. He says:

As factories, due to a suspension of deliveries of raw materials and a shortage of energy, are forced to close, this will eventually lead to unrest in large segments of the population.

This is a deliberate design by the Soviets to create consternation, yes, and to create responses by the masses with the objective of creating instability and unrest. I suggest to you that you do not get more aggressive than these tactics.

He says:

This will eventually lead to unrest. * * * As of the present moment, our reserves of various materials and products will last until mid-May.

And then he goes on to say quite clearly, and I would hope that the editorial writers would take Gorbachev's promises into account and would listen because a promise about doubling the supply of natural gas was made at least 3 days ago.

Here is what the President of Lithuania says as of this morning:

A promise on Moscow's part to increase the flow of natural gas has yet to be fulfilled.

Well, Mr. Gorbachev, and your PR machine, why are you not keeping the promise? You throw the media out so that the peoples of the world, the free people, do not find out what is taking place and the propaganda machines are all too happy to pick it up. So we have people in the Western democracies believing that they are negotiating. They are not negotiating.

A promise on Moscow's part to increase the flow of natural gas has yet to be fulfilled.

Let me continue. He says:

The danger of violence or provocations of some sort remains very real. Moscow has every intention of carrying out, in Lithuania, the spring draft into the Soviet Army. Since this is an army of occupation, we consider it to be nothing else than abduction of our young men.

But you understand, if the Soviets press forward in this there is going to be unrest and hence the excuse to use the troops to suppress the people.

He concludes. He said:

We would also urge that the President demand either a lifting of the economic blockade or a complete opening of Lithuania's borders to the rest of the world to allow conduct of foreign trade.

Mr. President, I believe that the United States of Amercia is in a unique position, and has a very special responsibility, to say to the Soviets that which we have so far failed to say, certainly not adequately: Mr. Gorbachev, if you want our most-favored-nation status, if you want our trade, if you want to be treated in accordance with the ability of the United States to do which it confers on those nations that have most-favored-nation status, then you cannot use aggression in dealing with the Lithuanian people or you will not be accorded these privileges.

Mr. President, unfortunately I have not heard the State Department undertake that challenge to the Soviets with the vigor necessary. It is one thing for the Soviets to promise that they are going to negotiate and another thing for them to start this propaganda machine that, yes, we are willing to negotiate but continue to suppress aggressively and continue to attempt to foment unrest in Lithuania so they can say to the people of the world they really do not want independence, they move too precipitiously, and yet, Big Brother, we will take them into the house and we will deal with them in accordance with conventional wisdom established by the Western democracies. We are turning our back on what is taking place and this is nothing but a betrayal of what freedom should be about, about what the U.S. position should be about as these inhumanities continue.

Mr. President, I am going to submit for the RECORD that letter. I hope that my colleagues and people who want the true facts would familiarize themselves with what is taking place and not be content to be led to believe that Mr. Gorbachev really is bargaining in good faith, because they are not. They have been aggressive. They are suppressing the people of Lithuania, and those are the facts as unfortunate as they may be. We should not be blinded by the hope for peace and the realities as they exist today. I think that is what is taking place.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the letter from the President of Lithuania be printed in the RECORD.

39-059 O-91-2 (Pt. 7)

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE SUPREME COUNCIL OF THE REPUBLIC OF LITHUANIA, Vilnuis, Lithuania, May 2, 1990.

Senator ALFONSE D'AMATO,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC, United States of America.

DEAR SENATOR D'AMATO: In response to your recent telephone call, following is a brief overview of the current situation in Lithuania.

The Soviet economic blockade of Lithuania continues; its primary purpose is to create massive unemployment, as factories, due to a suspension of deliveries of raw materials and a shortage of energy, are forced to close. This will eventually lead to unrest in large segments of the population. As of the present moment, our reserves of various materials and products will last until mid-May. A promise on Moscow's part to increase the flow of natural gas has yet to be fulfilled.

The danger of violence or provocations of some sort remains very real. Moscow has every intention of carrying out, in Lithuania, the spring draft into the Soviet Army. Since this in an army of occupation, we consider to be nothing else than abduction of our young men.

Also, control of our borders has been usurped; our open society is not being allowed to return to Europe.

President Bush could help out by heeding the call of the joint Congressional resolution to establish, as soon as possible, diplomatic relations with the independent Republic of Lithuania. If this is still not possible at the present moment, when will it become possible? Under what conditions?

We would also urge that the President demand either a lifting of the economic blockade or a complete opening of Lithuania's borders to the rest of the world to allow conduct of foreign trade.

Finally, I would simply like to express my gratitude for your concern, and appreciation for your efforts on behalf of Lithuania.

Respectfully,
VYTAUTAS LANDSBERGIS,
President, Supreme Council of the Republic of Lithuania.

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I yield the floor and the remainder of the time to my friend from Delaware.

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS OF 1989

MOTION TO PROCEED

The Senate continued with the consideration of the motion to proceed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time will be allocated in accordance with the Senator's request.

The Chair recognizes the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I rise today in opposition to S. 135—legislation to amend the Hatch Act's restrictions against political activity by Federal employees.

The Hatch Act affords Federal employees the opportunity to participate in politics while shielding the Federal work force from coercion and corruption. S. 135 would allow 3 million Federal employees to engage in an unprecedented degree of political activity—placing them at substantial and imminent risk of coercion and manipulation.

Much of what we discuss today has been the subject of debate since the founding of the Republic. Many of the same problems that troubled Thomas Jefferson in 1791, and led in turn to passage of the Hatch Act in 1939, still cause concern to this day.

Of course there has been considerable evolution in the type of pernicious political activity engaged in since Jefferson's time. The jug of wine or punch in Jefferson's day evolved into the election scandals of the late 1930's, and has in turn today become the unregulated morass of soft money. The task of regulating political behavior by Federal employees and others has become steadily more difficult with time—and today is characterized by allegations and nuances, half-understandings, and subtle forms of coercion.

My own State of Kentucky is well-acquainted with the dangers attendant to a partisan work force. There is an old saying that politics are the damnedest in Kentucky—a premise supported by Kentucky's long, colorful, and sometimes shady tradition of electoral politics. Indeed, I have previously brought my colleagues' attention to the continuing problem of election fraud in Kentucky and other States. Thus, it is with something short of pride that I remind my colleagues that it was the 1938 U.S. Senate campaign in Kentucky which in major part brought about the enactment of the Hatch Act itself.

The Works Progress Administration [WPA] brought thousands of desperately needed jobs to depression-era Kentucky. However, Thomas Stokes' Pulitzer Prize winning series of articles revealed corruption surrounding WPA's activities in Kentucky. As those articles and a later Senate investigation documented, some WPA supervisors coerced contributions from Federal employees and relief workers to the 1938 Senate reelection campaign of Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, who later went on to be Vice President of the United States. Thus, it is with a sense of historical perspective that I bring my objections.

Some argue that the time for a WPA-type scandal has passed, and that the vigilance of the press and Federal employee unions can replace the Hatch Act's protections. However, as problems at HUD and the savings and loan industry have demonstrated, even a scandal of WPA magnitude can escape notice for quite some time.

Although I have substantial doubts regarding whether individual Federal employees actually want Hatch Act reform—and I have actually seen some surveys indicating most of them do not want it—or whether the real force behind this movement is the desire of Federal employee unions to play a larger role in politics—I can understand and appreciate the desire of some Federal employees to play a more active role in politics. Nevertheless, I believe that it is these very Federal employees who ultimately would suffer the greatest harm if the Hatch act's protections are gutted.

The Supreme Court has twice considered whether the Hatch Act's restrictions unduly burden Federal employees' first amendment rights. On both occasions, the Court upheld the Hatch Act, holding that the act's restrictions on partisan activity are a constitutionally permissible choice given the important governmental interest of assuring "fair and effective government" and an "impartial execution of the laws."

Proponents of amending the Hatch Act claim that both S. 135 and legislation previously passed by the House—H.R. 20—provide ample protection against coercion. However, this legislation's artificial distinctions—daytime prohibition—virtually unlimited opportunity for political activity in the nighttime or other off-hours—will inevitably dissolve into a murky twilight zone of unreachable and unregulatable conduct. And in addition, this legislation will saddle the regulators with a burden of proof obtainable only in the very rarest of cases.

In testimony repeated before the Governmental Affairs Committee in this and the previous Congress, OPM's Director, the special counsel to the Merit Systems Protection Board, and the Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Divison, all testified to their lack of confidence in this legislation's proffered protections, saying that "this legislation would almost certainly result in the unprecedented politicization of the Federal civil service." If the very officials who would be charged with enforcing post-Hatch Act restrictions lack confidence in these proposals, should we not reconsider before opening the floodgates to partisan activity?

Another argument that has been made in favor of amending the Hatch Act is that its provisions are so confusing that it serves as a barrier to political expression by Federal employees. Personally, I find the list of permissible and prohibited activities found in the Code of Federal Regulations to be relatively clear and concise at least when you compare it to other Federal standards.

If the boundaries are uneven, then by all means, we should provide clarity. However, I simply cannot understand the argument that the boundaries themselves should be tossed to the wind—nearly anything could go—merely to provide a brightline rule.

If there is any confusion lingering among Federal employees as to what they can and cannot do, then we should take steps to ensure that they are fully and adequately educated as to their rights. The Office of the Special Counsel of the Merit Systems Protection Board has a well-designed series of pamphlets and posters geared toward this end. The Office of the Special Counsel also stands ready to issue advisory opinions upon request. The Federal employee and Postal worker unions can and should also do more to educate their memberships.

Through the Hatch Act's protections, we have created a delicate balance between Federal employees' first amendment rights and the American people's interest in having an orderly government administered by a nonpartisan work force. I believe that we disrupt this delicate balance only at our great peril.

I urge my colleagues to carefully consider this legislation with an eye to its profound ramifications for the conduct of the Federal Government. In vetoing Hatch Act Reform legislation in 1976, President Ford said that it was "bad for the employee, bad for the Government, and bad for the public." Those words are still applicable today—probably even more so. This is bad legislation from a policy standpoint, from a partisan standpoint, and, most importantly, from a human standpoint.

Each of these points will be discussed, I am sure, as this debate unfolds, by other Senators. But, Mr. President, I strongly urge that at the appropriate time we reject this legislation.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum has been suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, those of us in the Senate who are supportive of Hatch Act reform and those groups that will be affected by such reform have been waiting quite some time for the Senate's consideration of a bill like this. The House passed its version of Hatch reform by a wide margin last April. It is time for us to do the same with ours. I commend our colleague, Senator GLENN, for his fine work in developing this legislation and getting it through the Governmental Affairs Committee. I also want to express my appreciation to the majority leader for bringing this measure to the floor.

Fifty years ago, there was a substantial increase in the number of Federal agencies and, subsequently, in the number of individuals employed by the Federal Government. The bulk of these new agencies and new employees were not placed under the jurisdiction of the Civil Service Commission and, thus, some 300,000 new Federal employees were not covered by civil service laws or merit hiring practices. As a result, many of the positions were filled with individuals who were essentially rewarded with Federal jobs for their political activities and contributions. A 1939 Senate investigation disclosed troubling hiring and retention practices within the Federal service. In particular, it was discovered that political appointees in the Works Progress Administration, the WPA, had been coercing employees into making political campaign contributions in exchange for jobs.

In response to this situation, Senator Carl Hatch introduced S. 1871, a bill to prevent pernicious political activity. This bill was signed into law in August 1939 and has since become known as the Hatch Act. The Hatch Act was enacted in an attempt to restore public trust in the Federal work force by instituting guidelines to guard against the politicization of that work force and to preserve its impartial character.

There was and is a legitimate need for such legislation. The political corruption and favoritism that spawned this law 50 years ago is unacceptable, and a legislative remedy to end that corruption and to restore the integrity of the Federal service was appropriate and necessary. The Hatch Act was designed to attain that goal.

I agree with that goal, and I think most, if not all, of us do. An impartial federal work force, free from political coercion, is essential to the fair and effective execution of government programs and policies. We have witnessed just this week, through the House hearings on the HUD scandal, what can happen when political favoritism overcomes good public policy.

In the most general terms, the Hatch Act prohibits employees of the executive branch—except for certain top political appointees—from taking an active part in political management or in political campaigns. The Act also prohibits executive branch officers or employees from using their official authority or influence to interfere with or affect the result of an election. Those provisions sound very simple and straightforward. However, there are some 3,000 specific regulations in place under the Hatch Act to implement this law. The specific restructions laid out by these governing regulations are oftentimes confusing and inconsistent and, in some respects, needlessly deny political freedoms to millions of U.S. citizens without any offsetting public benefit.

For instance, a Federal employee can put up a sign under certain circumstances, write a letter to the editor under certain circumstances, wear a political button to work under certain circumstances, and can even give a campaign contribution of up to $1,000, but he or she cannot stuff envelopes or do any other volunteer activity on behalf of a particular campaign or political party during nonworking hours. There is a real problem, however, in defining those certain circumstances as the guidelines try to do.

To more fully illustrate the confusion which can be created by the current guidelines, I would like to quote two exchanges I had with Mary Wieseman, special counsel responsible for overseeing and prosecuting Hatch Act violations, during hearings in the Governmental Affairs Committee on Hatch Act reform.

The first exchange was on February 24, 1988, and I was asking Ms. Weiseman to explain the scope of the Hatch Act prohibitions as they applied to specific acts.

I said:

But, can I write a letter to the editor soliciting votes for a candidate?

Ms. WIESEMAN. You may not solicit votes for a candidate in your letter.

Senator LEVIN. I can say, he or she is the greatest candidate?

Ms. WIESEMAN. Yes.

Senator LEVIN. But I cannot say, vote for him or her?

Ms. WIESEMAN. That is right.

Senator LEVIN. So that you are going to start censoring the content of my letter?

Ms. WIESEMAN. It is not the content. What you are doing with the letter is soliciting votes for a partisan political candidate, and that is prohibited.

Senator LEVIN. I just wrote the letter. I can say, he or she is the greatest candidate; that is okay?

Ms. WIESEMAN. Yes.

Senator LEVIN. I cannot say at the end, so I hope everybody will vote for him or her; is that right?

Ms. WIESEMAN. That would be a question at that point in soliciting votes in your letter.

The first time I went through that little scenario with her I said, "I can say a candidate is the greatest candidate in my letter to the editor? That is OK? She said "yes." But I cannot say vote for him or her at the end of my letter? She said, "That is right."

Twenty seconds later when I went through the same scenario, expecting to receive the same absurd conclusion, I got a slightly different conclusion. This time not absurd, but confusing, because the second time I went through it with her I said: "I can say that he or she is the greatest candidate; That is OK?"

"Yes."

But "I cannot say at the end, so I hope everybody will vote for him or her; is that right?"

And she said, "That would be a question at that point in soliciting votes in your letter."

Well, I do not care whether you are not allowed to do it or whether there is a question whether you can do it, the result is either absurd or confusing. And neither one should be acceptable to us.

So a Federal employee can write a letter to the editor espousing the virtues of a candidate and saying this is the greatest candidate in the race, as a matter of fact this is the greatest candidate that ever lived, but there is an uncertainty as to whether or not that letter can then at the end say, "and therefore I hope everybody will vote for that candidate."

I think, if it is uncertain, it should be corrected. And if it is certain that the person cannot use that letter to urge people to vote for a candidate, I think that is an absurd result and a real restriction on basic, fundamental free speech rights in the Constitution.

The following year in July 1989, Ms. Wieseman and I picked up our discussion. This time the question was whether or not it is OK to invite your neighbor to go to a rally, to a campaign rally.

This is what I said. "Why is it OK to go to a rally but not OK to invite your neighbor to go to the rally?" It seems that a Federal employee can go to the rally himself or herself. But what is wrong with inviting your neighbor to go with you to the rally? She said, "You could invite your neighbor to go to a rally with you." That would be OK. Then the question was: "Could you give your neighbor a piece of paper saying there is a rally tomorrow?"

Then she said—she is now quoting a court decision to answer that question:

What the court said in the Biller Blaylock and Sombrotto case in interpreting the Hatch Act—and, of course, the courts are the ones who make the final interpretation of what the Hatch Act prohibits, we try to give that information to Federal employees, but the courts are the ones who make the determination—is that expression by Federal employees of political opinions is unrestricted by the Hatch Act so long as that expression is not in concert with or in connection with or on behalf of partisan candidates of campaigns. That is what the court said, and that is a new interpretation of the Act.

So I said:

My question is, I can invite my neighbor to the rally orally but I cannot hand the brochure, or I can hand the brochure?

Ms. WIESEMAN. If it is in concert with, on behalf of or in connection with—that is what the court said—a partisan political campaign or activity, it is prohibited. If it is not, it is permissible.

Senator LEVIN. So that whether I can invite my neighbor, or cannot invite my neighbor orally to that rally may depend upon my intent?

Ms. WIESEMAN. The only thing I can say, Senator, is what the court said. And we are dealing with factual situations every day in this area.

Mr. President, I think it is time for some nice clear lines to be drawn which are fair to everybody, fair to the public and fair to Federal employees. I think it is shameful that Federal employees, American citizens, have to risk violating a law if there intent is one thing when handing a brochure for a rally to their neighbor but not if their intent is another thing. An invitation to a rally could be a criminal violation of regulations, depending upon the intent of the person in handing that brochure to the neighbor.

The employee can go to the rally. There is nothing wrong with that apparently. And if his intent is just right, he can orally or in writing hand out a brochure, an invitation, to the rally to the neighbor. But if the intent is wrong, that person is in big, big trouble. I think our law is in big, big trouble, and it is time to change it.

Certain activities under current guidelines are permissible, as long as the employee's intent is clear, but that same activity can be a violation if it is in coordination or in concert with a political campaign. For the most part, Mr. President, you cannot get a quick, definitive answer as to whether or not an activity is prohibited. You almost need a court decision on the specifics of each situation.

If I were a Federal employee faced with that kind of advice in terms of what I could do or could not do legally, my best option would be to stay away from the process altogether. But that is not what was intended by the Hatch Act, although that is, to a large extent, what has resulted. It is not fair.

There are those who argue that all political activity by Federal employees should continue to be prohibited due to concerns that the allowance of any such activity would do damage to the public perception of an impartial civil servant. But there are a wide variety of politically related activities that do not jeopardize the integrity of the conduct of our Federal Government.

I do not believe, Mr. President, I simply do not believe, for example, that the public cares if a clerk at the Veterans' Administration or a computer operator at the Commerce Department stuffs envelopes for a local mayoral candidate in a partisan election or assists in enhancing the democractic process by participating in a get-out-the-vote initative for a particular party at a phone bank. I just do not believe the public cares if that person on his or her own time is stuffing envelopes at a party headquarters. As a matter of fact, I think most of the public would be surprised to learn that Federal employees are barred from such activity.

When money is involved, at a minimum I think subtle pressure is involved, and I do believe the American public does care if their local postal carrier comes to the door asking for campaign contributions or their local tax clerk does the same. Those activities should be barred when it comes to soliciting financial contributions. Federal procurement officers should not solicit funds from Federal contractors and supervisory personnel should not be able to pressure subordinates to engage in political activity.

The American public also cares, and rightly so, that individuals employed by the Federal Government not use their influence as a Federal employee for political ends. This bill retains the restrictions against these types of activities by prohibiting all on-the-job political activities and disallowing any general solicitations of contributions by Federal employees anywhere at any time.

The prohibition on running for partisan political office is also retained, with one exception; that is, Federal employees would be allowed to run for offices within a party organization and affiliated groups, such as a convention delegate.

The bill continues the current restrictions on and penalties for the use of one's official position to influence the course or outcome of an election. Unlike current law, S. 135 allows for active participation in the political process, except for these explicitly identified situations.

The effective result of the Hatch Act has been not a coherent ban on the political activities of Federal employees, but a Swiss cheese law full of arbitrary and oftentimes unnecessary "do's" and "don'ts". What we have done is turn a statute that was aimed at protecting Federal employees from retaliation into a statute which discriminates against Federal employees in their most basic rights.

What we need to do now is enact a law which clearly prohibits those activities which can lead to the types of coercive and unacceptable behavior in evidence 50 years ago, but which allows this Nation's Federal employees to engage in responsible, appropriate political activities which threaten no one. S. 135 achieves that goal and protects the original intent of the Hatch Act. It is the product of much debate and compromise. It strikes an appropriate balance between the need to retain the impartiality and special character of the Federal work force while allowing civil servants to actively participate in the democratic process.

At a time when only half of the eligible population votes, it makes no sense to arbitrarily ban the active off-duty participation of those individuals who have already shown their dedication to and interest in the governing of this Nation by opting to become

Federal employees. We are not tapping into a vital resource which is available and eager to participate if we maintain the status quo. If anything, the result of the current law is to dissuade those employees from engaging in even those activities which are allowed because of the ambiguities which exist in the interpretation of this law.

In many respects, Federal employees are the most likely and uniquely qualified individuals to participate in the democratic process. Prohibitions such as these only serve to deny active participation in the political process by those who choose to serve in the Federal civil service. I do not believe that what has resulted in these 50 years was within the intention of the Hatch Act.

I hope that this legislation will pass. It is important legislation. Again, I am glad the majority leader has decided to press forward with this legislation. I know it is difficult. The House has acted. I think the majority of this body wants to restore some fundamental rights to Federal employees, rights whose exercise would threaten none of the rest of the public.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the previously referred to exchange with Ms. Wieseman be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senator LEVIN. Why is it okay to go to a rally but not okay to invite your neighbor to go to the rally with you?

Ms. WIESEMAN. You could invite your neighbor to go to a rally with you.

Senator LEVIN. You can? Could you give your neighbor a piece of paper saying there is a rally tomorrow?

Ms. WIESEMAN. Senator, since the last time we had this colloquy at the last hearing, I am sure you are aware that the courts have ruled on some of the issues that we discused at that time. In our discussions last time, we were talking about the number of letters that might be written to a newspaper, et cetera.

Senator LEVIN. With regard to the rally question, can you give your neighbor a brochure saying there is a rally tomorrow?

Ms. WIESEMAN. What the court said in the Biller, Blaylock and Sombrotto case in interpreting the Hatch Act—and, of course, the courts are the ones who make the final interpretation of what the Hatch Act prohibits, we try to give that information to Federal employees, but the courts are the ones that make that determination—is that expression by Federal employees of political opinions is unrestricted by the Hatch Act so long as that expression is not in concert with or in connection with or on behalf of partisan candidates of campaigns. That is what the court said, and that is a new interpretation of the Act.

We are in the process of applying those broad principles to particular factual situations. That is our job. We have revised our Hatch Act booklet—it is at the printer—to make those points. So I think it would be——

Senator LEVIN. What is the booklet going to tell us about my question?

Ms. WIESEMAN. Pardon me?

Senator LEVIN. What is that booklet that is at the printer going to answer to my question?

Ms. WIESEMAN. It is going to talk about the broad principles that I just iterated about in the concert——

Senator LEVIN. My fact situation.

Ms. WIESEMAN. If it is in concert with—as the court said—if it is in connection with, on behalf of, or in concert with a political party or campaign, it is prohibited by the Hatch Act. That is the criteria that the courts set up, the 2nd Circuit and the 11th Circuit. That is what we are interpreting.

Senator LEVIN. Now, my question is, I can invite my neighbor to the rally orally but I cannot hand the brochure, or I can hand the brochure?

Ms. WIESEMAN. If it is in concert with, on behalf of or in connection with—that is what the court said—a partisan political campaign or activity, it is prohibited. If it is not, it is permissible.

Senator LEVIN. Either oral or in writing?

Ms. WIESEMAN. Yes.

Senator LEVIN. So that whether I can invite my neighbor, or cannot invite my neighbor orally to that rally may depend upon my intent?

Ms. WIESEMAN. The only thing I can say, Senator, is what the court said. And we are dealing with factual situations every day in this area. We have to tell the employees, you may partake in this activity if you are not doing it in concert with, in connection with, or on behalf of a partisan political campaign or candidate. And those are the court's words and that is what we are interpreting and telling Federal employees currently.

Senator LEVIN. Did the Administration argue against that decision by the court?

Ms. WIESEMAN. The case was argued by the Merit Systems Protection Board. They have litigating authority. It was an action brought by my predecessor, and the Board found that there was a violation of the Hatch Act in that factual circumstance. And the case was argued in the appeals courts by the Merit Systems Protection Board attorneys.

Senator LEVIN. Let me just address, then, the Attorney General's Office, the Department of Justice.

It seems to me what we have done here, basically, is—you used the phrase, I believe, Mr. Dennis, that we need a blanket prohibition. We don't have a blanket prohibition. We have got a piece of Swiss cheese, basically, with the most complicated dos and don'ts that are conceivable.

You can put a bumper sticker on your car but you cannot give a bumper sticker to your neighbor if it is—what are the words?

Ms. WIESEMAN. You can give the bumper sticker unless it is in concert with, in connection with, or—

Senator LEVIN. What was the second word? In concert with or what?

Ms. WIESEMAN. On behalf of.

Senator LEVIN. Behalf of. So—

Ms. WIESEMAN. You cannot campaign for—

Senator LEVIN. I understand.

Ms. WIESEMAN [continuing]. A political party.

Senator LEVIN. I understand. I can put a bumper sticker on my car, wear a button, but I cannot give a bumper sticker to my neighbor if I am doing that on behalf of a campaign. I cannot go and stuff envelopes in a campaign office.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BRYAN). Who seeks recognition?

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ROTH. I ask unanimous consent that the statement I will give, be as if in morning business with the understanding the time I use be counted toward my time on this motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ROTH. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. ROTH pertaining to the introduction of S. 2563 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I make a point of order a quorum is not present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum having been suggested, the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I take this opportunity to again express my personal hope that we may proceed as expeditiously as possible to get to the substance of this bill and, while we are waiting for that to happen, to respond to a few of the points that have been made here against S. 135 which would enact what I consider to be really relatively moderate reforms in the existing Hatch Act prohibitions on political participation by Federal employees.

One of the points that many of us who support this bill have made is that the current Hatch Act is a gross overreaction to a problem, that when you are dealing with the political rights of any category of Americans, you ought to legislate with precision and great respect for those political rights.

One of the other points that we have made, in response to the parade of fears that have been suggested here about what will happen if we give these 3 million of our fellow Americans some measure of the same dose of political freedom that the rest of us have, has been that there is in existing law a series of statutes that prohibit any and all of the specific actions that those who oppose this bill feel will occur if the bill passes. In other words, even if we accept as legitimate the fears expressed about the activities—possible coercion by superiors of employees based on political persuasion, possible coercion of those who deal with the Federal Government by Federal employees, who are free to participate in politics—even if we accept that those fears may possibly be realized if this bill is passed, it is very important to remember and to cite that existing Federal law, law that will not be changed if S. 135 is enacted into law, itself prohibits and makes illegal each and every one of the activities of the improper acts that opponents of S. 135 cite.

In fact, Mr. President, there are today on the books 13 different criminal laws that prohibit and punish the list of acts that my colleagues who oppose this bill worry about. Let me just cite if I may a few of those.

Present Federal criminal law prohibits any person from attempting to coerce another person to contribute money or services to a candidate or political party through the threat of denial of government employment or position. That is 18 United States Code 601. Let me just read from that provision of the law.

§ 601. Deprivation of employment or other benefit for political contribution

(a) Whoever, directly or indirectly, knowingly causes or attempts to cause any person to make a contribution of a thing of value—

That is not just money, but the statute says, parenthetically—

(Including services) for the benefit of any candidate or any political party, by means of the denial or deprivation, or the threat of the denial or deprivation, of—

(1) any employment, position, or work in or for any agency or other entity of the Government of the United States, a State, or a political subdivision of a State, or any compensation or benefit of such employment, position, or work; or

(2) any payment or benefit of a program of the United States, a State, or a political subdivision of a State;

So we cover there both the coercion of employees and the use of influence in the granting of favors of the Federal Government.

Any person found guilty of that shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both.

That is a pretty clear statement, a broad statement, and a tough penalty attached to it which covers so many of the acts that opponents of S. 135 fear will occur.

I say to them again, I do not believe that your fears are justified. Our history tells us they are not. But if they are, then there is a specific Federal law that would prohibit and punish those actions.

Second, on the civil side, the Civil Service Reform Act of 1978 makes it improper to coerce political activity or to take reprisals against an employee for failure to engage in political activity. This makes coercion or reprisal for failure to engage in political activity a ground for grievance to the agency and any appeal to the Merit Systems Protection Board.

If I may, Mr. President, just read the statute involved here to show the sweep of it and protection that we all have from improper behavior. It is title 5, United States Code, section 2302. It quite broadly defines personnel action to mean an appointment; promotion; other desciplinary or corrective action; a detail, transfer, or reassignment; a reinstatement; a restoration; a reemployment; even a performance evaluation.

Then it goes on to say that "Any employee who has authority to take, direct others to take, amend, or approve any personnel action"—that long list that I have just read—"shall not, with respect to such authority, discriminate for or against any employee or applicant for employment * * * on the basis of * * * political affiliation, as prohibited under any law, rule, or regulation." And may not "solicit or consider any recommendation or statement * * * with respect to any individual who requests or is under consideration for any personnel action unless such recommendation or statement is based on the personal knowledge of the person furnishing it. * * *"

Finally, there is a prohibition against coercing the political activity of any person—again broadly defined—including the providing of any political contribution or service, or take any action against any employee or applicant for employment as a reprisal for the refusal of any person to engage in such political activity.

Mr. President, those are very, very broadly worded prohibitions that will remain in the law.

The point is that S. 135 retains restrictions on political activities, on improper use of political influence, that is, and on political fundraising activities by Federal workers. The extent to which Federal employees would be able to engage in any political fundraising activity would be strictly limited under this legislation.

Federal workers would not be able to solicit political contributions from anyone except other members of their employee organization.

Solicitations can only be made on behalf of their organization's political committee and Federal employees could not solicit funds on behalf of individual candidates nor can they solicit funds for other PAC's or political parties in general.

Fundraising cannot be conducted while the employee is on duty, while in uniform or while using a government vehicle.

So we have a very narrowly circumscribed political right that is being given here. Effectively, what we are saying is that a Federal employee, if S. 135 is passed, can only ask a fellow employee within that particular office or agency to contribute—can only ask that employee to contribute—to the multicandidate political action committee of that group of employees; can only do so after hours, essentially, and, pursuant to general Federal law, not in the building where they work. And that, essentially, means that a Federal employee, after S. 135 is adopted, can call a fellow employee perhaps at night, maybe can ask them as they are leaving work, but the right is an extremely narrow one.

Federal employees could not solicit contributions, if this bill passes, from the general public. They certainly cannot—I know this is a fear—they cannot solicit contributions from people who appear before the Federal employee in the course of work. A Federal worker will not be able to solicit contributions on behalf of a candidate of their choice from anyone.

Again it means that no partisan political activity can occur during working hours even if that activity involves two members of the same Federal employee organization. So once again when we say that the reform of the Hatch Act involved in S. 135 is moderate, it is extremely moderate, to put it mildly.

Second, I have said earlier, and others have said, that when we are dealing with political freedom in this country, we ought to have a strong showing of evidence before we are prepared to limit that freedom.

That showing certainly has not been made by those who oppose S. 135. In 1974, Congress lifted most of the restrictions on political activity by State and local government employees whose positions are funded in whole or in part by Federal money.

I can tell you, Mr. President, that during my previous position as attorney general of Connecticut, we litigated two cases where two State employees whose salaries were partially funded by the Federal Government—it happened to be one was a Republican that wanted to run for probate judge in one town, the town of Wallingford; another was a Democrat, who wanted to run for city council in Hartford, CT. Both were found to have violated the Hatch Act.

So that are still restrictions on State employees whose salaries are partially funded by the Federal Government.

But, in 1974, Congress lifted some of the other restrictions that existed and that engendered. At the State level, a reconsideration of not only the Federal Hatch Act but of the baby Hatch Act, little Hatch Acts that have been adopted in several States. And a number of States went on to reform, in some cases repeal, those little Hatch Acts. Effectively States past laws, which permitted employees to become candidates in partisans elections.

In 1987, the Subcommittee on Civil Service of the House of Representatives sent questionnaires to the attorneys general of the States which had reformed their laws since 1974, asking specifically: Has there been greater participation by public in State elections, No. 1. Second, has there been an increased coercion of employees and has there been an increase in the number of prosecutions relating to violations of restrictions of political activity?

Broadly speaking, the responses of the attorneys general found no adverse effect resulting from the changes in restrictions.

Perhaps the most typical of the responses was one that came from my former colleague, the attorney general of New Hampshire, Stephen E. Merrill, who happens to be Republican, who said:

> The answer to your first two questions are necessarily based on general impressions. First, there is a general impression that the participation of public employees in State elections has increased somewhat in recent years but there is no way of knowing whether that increase is related to any change in State law. Second, there seems to be no evidence of increased coercion of public employees in recent years. The answer to your third question is based on objective information. The number of prosecutions relating to violations of restrictions on political activity has not increased as a result of the change in State laws.

The attorneys general reported no adverse reactions as a result of the loosening of the restrictions on political activities of State and local government employees. Not one attorney general, not one of those surveyed, voiced concern that by easing restrictions on State or local employees that the door to coercion or impropriety had opened.

So my point here, Mr. President, is that this is probably the best test case, this is probably the freshest source of evidence for us about what might happen at the Federal level if we make this slight reform in Hatch Act law and permit Federal employees to get a bit more involved in our political system.

The answer is resoundingly that there has been no problem at the State level and that suggests strongly that there will be no problem at the Federal level. It also says once again that the case has not been made for continuing these abhorrent and in my opinion un-American restrictions on the political rights of Federal employees.

Third, there has been some reference at different points to a survey that was done of Federal employees that shows many of them do not support the changes in the Hatch Act. I am sure many Members in the Chamber have shared this experience—members of organizations representing Federal employees, and I am sure they have some knowledge of what their members feel broadly, have talked to me and said they are in favor of these changes. I suspect, though the references to the surveys have not been specific, that the survey referred to is the one that was done by the Senior Executives Association. I refer to a letter to the Honorable JOHN GLENN, chairman of the Committee on Governmental Affairs, dated November 28, 1989.

This is a response to a question that Chairman GLENN had raised about this survey that was taken in 1987. It is a letter from G. Jerry Shaw, who is the general counsel of the Senior Executive Association.

He reports that there was in fact such a survey done in 1987, that there were 480 responses to the questionnaires sent out. The gentleman, Mr. Shaw, says: "From the standpoint of the association the survey results were very disappointing," referring to the fact that it was one of the lowest response rates that they had received.

We are talking here about 480 responses. It was not a random survey in the way the public opinion polls are generally conducted these days to get a representative sample of public opinion on a given issue. It was 480 Federal employees, members of the Senior Executive Association. I suggest respectfully, not a group that would be representative, broadly, of the 3 million-plus Federal employees who would be affected by this action.

The conclusion of Mr. Shaw, who writes this letter on behalf of the association, was that the responses obtained were very ambivalent and led the association to decide simply not to take a position on the Hatch Act.

While support for these reforms should not be a matter of polling, it should be more a matter of principle and that is the principle of political freedom for 3 million of our fellow Americans, nonetheless this particular survey—which I believe may be the basis for the representations that have been made here—should not, with all respect, be viewed as representative of the broad mass of Federal employees.

Mr. President, I thank the Chair for giving me this opportunity. I see other Members of the Senate on the floor at this time who may wish to address the Senate. Seeing that, I yield the floor.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I rise today to offer my strong support for this long overdue and urgently needed effort to reform the Hatch Act. It has long been my view that certain provisions of the Hatch Act have outlived their usefulness, and I congratulate Senator GLENN and others—on both sides of the aisle—for their persistence in arguing that case.

Make no mistake: A very strong argument can be made that every single provision of the Hatch Act was vitally important when the legislation was drafted more than five decades ago. Widespread allegations of political manipulation of and by WPA workers during the 1938 congressional elections had severely undermined public confidence in our civil service. What former President Herbert Hoover called in 1936 "the five horsemen of the New Deal Apocalypse: prolifigacy, propaganda, patronage, politics and power" were threatening the integrity of the entire civil service system.

In that context, the various provisions of the Hatch Act were designed to restore and protect the integrity of our civil service—and the men and women who were part of it. But more than five decades have passed, and a great deal has changed in those years—including the effects of certain provisions of the Hatch Act. Put simply, they are now inhibiting the very same people they were designed to protect.

In my view, Mr. President, it is high time we recognize that fact. And it is high time we get on with the business of reforming the Hatch Act.

I think my colleagues will all agree that the civil service system in this country is the most professional one in the world. The men and women who literally keep this country running every day are deeply committed and honorable individuals. The citizens of the United States trust them and have faith in their integrity, as well they should.

Unfortunately, however, the antiquated Hatch Act prohibitions on any sort of partisan political activity by Federal workers—even when they are not on the job—imply that these men and women cannot and should not be trusted.

By legally prohibiting them from becoming involved in partisan political activities when they are not on the job—when they are not in uniform—we are implying that Federal workers are somehow lacking in good judgment and sound reason. I find that intolerable.

Mr. President, I also find intolerable—and profoundly troubling—the idea that people are synonymous with their jobs. My job certainly is what I do, but it is not who I am. I hope my colleagues appreciate that subtle yet critical distinction, for it is the very backbone of our families, our communities, and our Nation. We are dehumanized without that distinction, assigned a label without a name or a face.

In my view, certain provisions of the Hatch Act fail to make that critical distinction between what Federal employees do for a living and who they are. By failing to differentiate between what a Federal employee does during working hours and who he or she is before or after work, certain provisions of the Hatch Act imply that all Federal employees are what they do. That is a notion we simply must reject.

The legislation we are considering today does reject that notion. It recognizes the judgment and reason of Federal employees, and sends the message that they need not be straitjacketed after office hours by their job title during office hours. In my view, Mr. President, this is a simple matter of trust.

Moreover, by allowing Federal employees to participate in partisan political activities outside of their work, this legislation does nothing more than restore fundamental rights guaranteed to all other Americans. I think that point must be central to this debate.

Mr. President, let me conclude by stating the obvious: The legislation we are considering does not repeal the Hatch Act. It reforms the Hatch Act. This legislation is both reasonable and responsible, and I urge my colleagues—on both sides of the aisle—to support it.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BREAUX). Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDERS FOR TOMORROW

RECESS UNTIL; 9:45 A.M.; MORNING BUSINESS; PROCEED TO CONSIDER S. 135, THE HATCH ACT

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in recess until 9:45 a.m. tomorrow; that following the time for the two leaders, there be a period for morning business not to extend beyond 10:30 a.m. with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 5 minutes each; and that at 10:30 a.m. the Senate begin consideration of S. 135, the Hatch Act bill, and that Senator ROTH be recognized at that time to offer an amendment to that bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a period for morning business, with Senators permitted to speak therein.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

At 1:30 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives announced that the House agrees to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 1472) to establish the Grand Island National Recreational Area in the State of Michigan, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House has passed the following bills and joint resolutions, without amendment:

S. 1853. An act to award a congressional gold medal to Laurance Spelman Rockefeller;

S. 2533. An act to amend the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 to extend the civil penalty assessment demonstration program;

S.J. Res. 224. Joint resolution to designate the month of May 1990 as "National Trauma Awareness Month";

S.J. Res. 230. Joint resolution to designate the period commencing on May 6, 1990, and ending on May 12, 1990, as "National Drinking Water Week";

S.J. Res. 236. Joint resolution designating May 6 through 12, 1990, as "Be Kind to Animals and National Pet Week"; and

S.J. Res. 241. Joint resolution to designate the week of May 6, 1990, through May 13, 1990, as "Jewish Heritage Week".

At 3:10 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Hays, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bill, with an amendment, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

S. 303. An act to establish a framework for the conduct of negotiated rulemaking by Federal agencies.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED

At 3:58 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Hays, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker has signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions:

S. 1485. An act to grant the consent of Congress to the Quad Cities Interstate Metropolitan Authority Compact entered into between the States of Illinois and Iowa.

S. 2533. An Act to amend the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 to extend the civil penalty assessment demonstration program;

S.J. Res. 224. Joint resolution to designate the month of May 1990 as "National Trauma Awareness Month";

S.J. Res. 230. Joint resolution to designate the period commencing on May 6, 1990, and ending on May 12, 1990, as "National Drinking Water Week";

S.J. Res. 236. Joint resolution designating May 6 through 12, 1990, as "Be Kind to Animals and National Pet Week"; and

S.J. Res. 241. Joint resolution to designate the week of May 6, 1990 through May 13, 1990, as "Jewish Heritage Week."

H.R. 1011. An Act to provide for the establishment of the National Commission on Wildfire Disasters, to provide for increased planning and cooperation with local firefighting forces in the event of forest fires, and for other purposes.

The enrolled bills and joint resolutions, except Senate Joint Resolution 236, were subsequently signed by President pro tempore (Mr. BYRD).

ENROLLED BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED

The President pro tempore [Mr. BYRD] announced that on today, May 2, 1990, he had signed the following enrolled bill and joint resolutions, previously signed by the Speaker of the House:

H.R. 756: An act for the relief of Shelton Anthony Smith;

S.J. Res. 153. Joint resolution designating the third week in May 1990 as "National Tourism Week";

H.J. Res. 546. Joint resolution designating May 13, 1990, as "Infant Mortality Awareness Day"; and

H.J. Res. 553. Joint resolution to make technical changes in the Ethics Reform Act of 1989.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS PRESENTED

The Secretary of the Senate reported that on today, May 2, 1990, he had presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions:

S. 1485. An act to grant the consent of Congress to the Quad Cities Interstate Metropolitan Authority Compact entered into between the States of Illinois and Iowa.

S 2533. An act to amend the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 to extend the civil penalty assessment demonstration program;

S.J. Res. 224. Joint resolution to designate the month of may 1990 as "National Trauma Awareness Month";

S.J. Res. 230. Joint resolution to designate the period commencing on May 6, 1990, and ending on May 12, 1990, as "National Drinking Water Week";

S.J. Res. 241. Joint resolution to designate the week of May 6, 1990, through May 13, 1990, as "Jewish Heritage Week."

EXECUTIVE AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

The following communications were laid before the Senate, together with accompanying papers, reports, and documents, which were referred as indicated:

EC-2892. A communication from the Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting, pursuant to law, annual report tables on agricultural export activities under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

EC-2893. A communication from the Comptroller General of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report entitled "Homelessness: Too Early to Tell What Kinds of Prevention Assistance Work Best"; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-2894. A communication from the Secretary of Commerce, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to amend title II of the Marine Protection, Research, and Sanctuaries Act of 1972, as amended, to authorize appropriations for fiscal years 1991 and 1992; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-2895. A communication from the Secretary of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the annual report on administration of the Deepwater Port Act for fiscal year 1989; pursuant to 33 U.S.C. 1519, referred jointly to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, and the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-2896. A communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, pursuant to law, the annual report on the Outer Continental Shelf Oil and Gas Leasing and Production Program for fiscal year 1989; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

EC-2897. A communication from the Director of the National Ocean Pollution Program Office, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, Department of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, the final review of the fiscal year 1991 Agency requests for appropriations to support marine pollution research, development, and monitoring programs; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-2898. A communication from the Acting Administrator of General Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, informational copies of proposed prospectuses; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-2899. A communication from the Assistant Secretary of the Army (Civil Works), transmitting, pursuant to law, notice of the deletion of a project in Brevard County, Florida from the list of incompleted water resource studies eligible for deauthorization and for which no funds have been appropriated; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-2900. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, notice that he intends to suspend indefinitely Liberia from its status as a Generalized System of Preferences country and the addition of certain others; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-2901. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on Tier III Federal Agency Drug-Free Workplace Programs; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-2902. A communication from the Acting Assistant Attorney General (Legislative Affairs), transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to improve the financial management of the Department of Justice, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC-2903. A communication from the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, transmitting, pursuant to law, the fiscal year 1990 update to the Long Range Plan for Automation in the U.S. Courts; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC-2904. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a call for the adoption of amendments to the Constitution of the United States dealing with a balanced budget and line-item veto; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC-2905. A communication from the Chairman of the United States Sentencing Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report of amendments to the sentencing guidelines and reasons for the amendments; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC-2906. A communication from the Acting Assistant Secretary of Education (Civil Rights), transmitting, pursuant to law, the annual report on compliance and enforcement activities of the Office of Civil Rights and identifying significant civil rights or compliance problems; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

EC-2907. A communication from the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on the first meeting of the Advisory Committee on Former Prisoners of War; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

EC-2908. A communication from the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to authorize the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to enter into enhanced-use agreements with respect to designated VA facilities and to direct the disposal of such designated facilities by special disposition; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

EC-2909. A communication from the Secretary of Labor, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to amend title 38, United States Code, Chapter 41, to revise the definition of "eligible veteran", and for other purposes; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

EC-2910. A communication from the Secretary of Commerce, transmitting a National implementation plan for modernization of the National Weather Service; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-2911. A communication from the Chairman of the Merit Systems Protection Board, transmitting, pursuant to law, the annual report of the Board for fiscal year 1989; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-2912. A communication from the Secretary of the Consumer Product Safety Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, notice of a new Privacy Act system of records; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The following petitions and memorials were laid before the Senate and were referred or ordered to lie on the table as indicated:

POM-477. A petition from citizens of Arizona and Oregon relative to public lands in the western United States; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

POM-478. A resolution adopted by the House of Representatives of the State of California to the Committee on Environment and Public Works:

"HOUSE RESOLUTION No. 40

"Whereas, Comprehensive federal oil spill legislation has languished in the United States Congress since the middle of the 1970's; and

"Whereas, By March 24, 1989, Congress had not yet acted, and nearly 11 million gallons of crude oil was spilled in Prince William Sound, Alaska, which, with poor federal, state, and private response coordination, caused billions of dollars of economic and environmental damage; and

"Whereas, Since March 24, 1989, major oil spills of 420,000, 250,000, 300,000, and 567,000 gallons have occurred in Rhode Island, Texas, Delaware, and New Jersey, and Congress still has not acted; and

"Whereas, On February 7, 1990, a further 400,000 gallon oil spill occurred in Huntington Beach, California, and Congress still has not acted; and

"Whereas, Congress, through indecision and inaction, has failed to provide necessary federal resources, plans, and programs to adequately deal with oil spill prevention and response, delaying design of needed state efforts that must work within the federal framework, and as a result has placed the California coastline, and the United States coastline, at serious environmental and economic risk; now, therefore, be it

"Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That the Assembly of the State of California respectfully memorializes the Conferees of the Senate and the House of Representatives in the Congress of the United States to meet immediately to resolve any remaining differences in the oil spill bills passed by the Senate and House, S 686 and HR 1465, and provide the clearest possible language delineating direct lines of planning removal authority and responsibility for the President and the Coast Guard; and be it further

"Resolved, That the Assembly of the State of California respectfully memorializes the conferees to ensure that the Coast Guard has adequate funding to carry out its new responsibilities, including dedicated manpower to foster an adequate contingency planning process, to oversee oil spill drills and exercises, to certify removal equipment, and to conduct training for emergency response personnel, as well as to acquire suitable strike team facilities and oil spill response equipment; and ensure that this funding is neither held hostage to "Gramm-Rudman" pressures, nor limited by arbitrary legislative targets; and ensure that adequate funding for state oil spill removal expenditures is immediately available to the state governments during an oil spill emergency; and be it further

"Resolved, That the Assembly of the State of California respectfully memorializes the conferees to provide rapid establishment of the west coast federal strike teams, to secure adequate protection for the California coastline, and to require the Coast Guard to develop and maintain uniform standards and procedures on marine manpower and training and safety systems, and provide for direct input from and consultation with California and other coastal state governments in developing those standards and procedures; and be it further

"Resolved, That the Assembly of the State of California memorializes the Congress of the United States, in recognition of potential preemption issues in pending federal oil spill legislation, to consider California's unique interests in protecting our coast from oil pollution; and be it further

"Resolved, That the Assembly of the State of California respectfully memorializes the Congress of the United States to act on the Conference Report and deliver this bill for the President's signature April 22, 1990, Earth Day; and be it further

"Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the Assembly transmit copies of this resolution to the President and Vice President of the United States, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, to the United States Coast Guard, and to each Senator and Representative from California in the Congress of the United States."

POM-479. A resolution adopted by the House of Representatives of the State of California; to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

"HOUSE RESOLUTION No. 44

"Whereas, The Parliament of Lithuania declared a restoration of national independence on March 11, 1990, and the new President of the Parliament of Lithuania appealed for diplomatic recognition by democratic nations on March 17, 1990; and

"Whereas, Recent democratic developments in Lithuania represent the fruition of the shared democratic goals and aspirations of the people of Lithuania, which have been long supported by the people of the United States of America; and

"Whereas, Historically the Congress of the United States has repeatedly stated its support for Lithuanian democracy and national sovereignty, and the government of the United States has had a longstanding policy of support for national sovereignty and political freedom in Lithuania; and

"Whereas, The development of increased political freedom and democracy in Lithuania must necessarily include genuine sovereignty for the nation of Lithuania and its people; and

"Whereas, The use of force by the Soviet Union to suppress the democratic aspirations of the people of Lithuania and their desire for national sovereignty would be a gross violation of Lithuanian human rights and political freedom and would be viewed by the Congress of the United States as an extremely serious and tragic setback in United States-Soviet relations; and

"Whereas, The United States has had a longstanding refusal to recognize the Soviet takeover of Lithuania in 1940; and

"Whereas, The United States Senate has passed a resolution to consider the call of the elected Lithuanian government for recognition; now, therefore, be it

"Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, as follows:

"(1) The government of the United States should continue its longstanding policy of strong support for democracy and national self-determination in Lithuania.

"(2) The United States should immediately establish diplomatic relations with the new government of the Republic of Lithuania.

"(3) Any military action by the Soviet Union to intimidate or suppress the desire of the people of Lithuania for self-determination and national independence should be strongly condemned by the United States.

"(4) If the Soviet Union undertakes military action intended to intimidate or suppress the legitimate desire of the people of Lithuania for democracy and national independence, the Congress of the United States should prohibit United States' assistance, trade credits, and trade enhancements to the government of the Soviet Union; and be it further

"Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the Assembly transmit suitably prepared copies of this resolution to the President and Vice President of the United States, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to each Senator and Representative from California in the Congress of the United States."

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. HOLLINGS, from the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, without amendent:

S. 1423. A bill to authorize a certificate of documentation for the vessel Job Site (Rept. No. 101-274).

By Mr. HOLLINGS, from the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, with an amendment in the nature of a substitute:

S. 1791. A bill to amend the International Travel Act of 1961 to assist in the growth of international travel and tourism into the United States, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 101-275).

By Mr. HOLLINGS, from the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, without amendment:

S. 1855. A bill to authorize a certificate of documentation for the vessel Camelot (Rept. No. 101-276).

S. 1856. A bill to authorize a certificate of documentation for the vessel Sinbad (Rept. No. 101-277).

S. 2008. A bill to authorize a certificate of documentation for the vessel Pacific Pearl (Rept. No. 101-278).

S. 2076 A bill to authorize a certificate of documentation for the vessel Mariner III (Rept. No. 101-279).

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS AND OTHER RESOLUTIONS

The following bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first and second time by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

By Mr. WIRTH:

S. 2560. A bill to direct the Secretary of the Army to transfer to the Forest Service certain lands that are not needed for the purpose of the Pinon Canyon Maneuver Site, for the purpose of protecting the paleontological, archeological, and natural resources on those lands; to the Committee on Armed Services.

By Mr. GORTON:

S. 2561. A bill to amend the Controlled Substances Act with respect to the regulation of precursor chemicals; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BOSCHWITZ (for himself and Mr. BOND):

S. 2562. A bill to amend the Food Security Act of 1985 to improve provisions relating to wetland conservation, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

By Mr. ROTH:

S. 2563. A bill to impose a moratorium on the fishing and possession of Atlantic striped bass (Monroe Saxatilis) within waters under the jurisdiction of the United States; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

By Mr. GRASSLEY (for himself and Mr. HARKIN):

S. 2564. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to exclude from gross income amounts received under any State in-home care program by an individual for care of a member of such individual's family; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. WARNER (for himself and Mr. ROBB):

S. 2565. A bill to designate the Federal building located at 340 North Pleasant Valley Road in Winchester, Virginia, as the "J. Kenneth Robinson Postal Building"; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

By Mr. MCCAIN:

S. 2566. A bill to redesignate the Sunset Crater National Monument as the Sunset Crater Volcano National Monument; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

By Mr. KERREY:

S. 2567. A bill to strengthen education in the fields of mathematics, science, and engineering; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

SUBMISSION OF CONCURRENT AND SENATE RESOLUTIONS

The following concurrent resolutions and Senate resolutions were read, and referred (or acted upon), as indicated:

By Mr. MITCHELL (for himself and Mr. DOLE):

S. Res. 278. A resolution to authorize representation of, and production of documents by, the Senate Committee on Intelligence in the case of United States v. Barnett; considered and agreed to.

By Mr. COHEN:

S. Con. Res. 125. Concurrent resolution expressing the sense of Congress regarding adequate funding for long-term health care services provided through the medicare and medicaid programs; to the Committee on Finance.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. WIRTH:

S. 2560. A bill to direct the Secretary of the Army to transfer to the Forest Service certain lands that are not needed for the purposes of the Pinon Canyon maneuver site, for the purpose of protecting the paleontological, archeological, and natural resources on those lands; to the Committee on Armed Services.

"PICKET WIRE" PROTECTION ACT

Mr. WIRTH. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Pinon Canyon land transfer bill. This legislation will transfer some 16,700 acres, which is currently under the control of the Department of the Army, to the U.S. Forest Service. There are lands that are currently not being used by the Department of the Army. They have identified them as unwanted, "uneconomic remnants," of which the Department of the Army wishes to dispose, and they are lands that the U.S. Forest Service would like to manage. These are lands in southeastern Colorado, Mr. President, 16,700 acres that were part of the overall Pinon Canyon Army Reserve area where there are major maneuvers conducted by the Department of the Army.

The reserve, some hundreds of thousands of acres, was acquired by the Department of the Army about 10 years ago and is used for various maneuvers by armored and other units coming down from Fort Carson.

Generally this land is very flat. The Pinon Canyon area drops off into some of the most beautiful dry canyon area in southeastern Colorado, some of the most beautiful canyon area in the country, canyons cut by what is now known as the Purgatoire River, known in the vernacular as the Picket Wire River.

The canyon of the Purgatoire has been cut by this river and has been used by all kinds of people for a long time. But before that it was used by the dinosaurs, and the longest single contiguous dinosaur track in the country, and maybe in the world, is found in the canyon on the Purgatoire River which now is being threatened by flooding. The Forest Service wants to preserve that area.

The canyon is also an area that was used by native Americans for thousands and thousands of years—in a hostile country, areas where one could go for real protection. The Spanish came through here about 300 years ago and there are still Spanish settlements down in the canyon.

Kit Carson hung out in this area. This was the area that was the dividing line between the Anglos coming in from the north and outlaw Indians from the south, and Kit Carson for a period of time was about the only individual who could go from one side of the area to another.

It is an area that has been peopled by religious groups, including penitents coming from that old Spanish tradition now found in many areas of the Southwest. And also down in the canyon are a variety of Spanish settlements, most of which have been abandoned today.

Immigrant pioneers came into this area, settled it and for a while were dry farming in the whole region. It has a long history, very hauntingly beautiful country, and it is my hope that we can preserve and transfer the land from the Department of the Army to the U.S. Forest Service.

We had initially hoped to occasion this in a swap of land that could be done directly with the Department of the Army, and I have worked with the distinguished junior Senator from Mississippi in attempting to work out a swap so we would not have to go the legislative route. That was very complicated in the State of Mississippi. I am sorry we were not able to work that out and I have so communicated that to the distinguished Senator from Mississippi. Now we are just going to have to go the direct legislative route.

The Department of the Army wants to excess this land, calling it "uneconomic remnants." The U.S. Forest Service Comanche National Grassland wants to manage the area. This legislation is necessary to occasion this transfer and to be sure that we can protect and enhance these natural lands.

More than 300 years ago, Spanish explorers came through the Pinon Canyon area and traveled along the Purgatoire River. Hundreds of years before the Spanish conquistadores journeyed through this part of southern Colorado, native Americans settled there. Evidence of native American presence in Pinon Canyon is clear from the numerous pictoglyphs and rock drawings one can still see on canyon walls and crevices in the area.

Millions of years before the native American tribes visited Pinon Canyon, the dinosaurs were residents of the Arkansas Valley—and giant sauropod tracks are still visible along the banks and the streambed of the Purgatoire River. The dinosaur trackway in this part of Colorado is believed to be the longest continuing set of dinosaur tracks in the world.

In addition to its historic and paleontological value, the Pinon Canyon area is also a refuge for many species of wildlife, including native fish and game. It combines vast expansions of grassland and rocky canyons.

In 1983, the U.S. Army acquired 270,000 acres of land in this area for a military training ground known as the Pinon Canyon maneuver site. Since that time, the Army has successfully used the maneuver site for mechanized training and infantry exercises.

And although many southern Coloradans viewed the Army's presence in the Pinon Canyon area with suspicion, I think it is fair to say that the Army has been a good neighbor in the Arkansas Valley, and care has been taken to avoid disturbing some of the area's more fragile resources, including the dinosaur trackway.

In fact, the dinosaur trackway and significant portions of the Purgatoire River canyon have been identified by the Army as unusable or "uneconomic remnant" parcels of the Pinon Canyon maneuver site. These areas—comprising approximately 16,700 acres—are completely unsuitable for mechanized or infantry training and the Army has taken care to keep troops and vehicles out of these parcels.

Although the Army has no use for these parcels, and has, therefore, restricted training activities that might have damaged the unique resources of this area, it is clear that the Army does not have the resources or institutional experience to manage these lands for the public benefit. The Army is, after all, a military department and not a public lands management agency.

The proper stewardship of these unused remnant lands should not rest with the Army, but with an agency of the Federal Government that is experienced in public lands management. Proper stewardship of these lands requires an agency of government with the resources to thoroughly study the archeological, cultural, and paleontological treasures which abound in the area.

My legislation will turn these unused Army lands over to the U.S. Forest Service, an agency that is well suited for managing natural resources. The Forest Service's Comanche National Grassland borders most of these lands, and a transfer of the unused Army acreage to the Comanche National Grassland, therefore, makes good management and logistical sense.

The legislation I am introducing today will set aside these lands as a "special management area"—a designation which recognizes the unique position the acreage holds by virtue of its placement between the Army's maneuver site and the Forest Service's grassland. The Army and the Forest Service have separate missions, and managing this acreage will present unique challenges. That is why this legislation calls upon the Forest Service and the Army to enter into a cooperative interagency agreement to deal with problems like public access and other issues that might arise.

Mr. President, there is a more pressing argument for transferring these lands to the jurisdiction of the U.S. Forest Service. The dinosaur trackway is in danger of erosion from the Purgatoire River. Since the tracks were first discovered earlier in this century it is estimated that one-third of the tracks have been destroyed by erosion caused by flooding from the river. If we are to preserve this unique public treasure, it is imperative that a management plan be implemented by an agency familiar with protecting such resources. My legislation authorizes the Forest Service to implement a management plan to prevent further destruction of the trackway.

For the last 2 years I have been urging the Department of the Army to transfer the unused Pinon Canyon lands to the Forest Service. Some progress has been made in negotiations between the Army and the Forest Service to agree on a land exchange, but I regret to say that an administrative transfer of the Pinion Canyon lands in Colorado seems to be hopelessly mired in a debate over the wisdom of transferring Forest Service lands in the DeSoto National Forest in Mississippi to the U.S. Army.

Mr. President, the conservation and protection of the unique resources of the Pinon Canyon area should not be held hostage to the Army's desire for acquiring additional lands in Mississippi or anywhere outside of Colorado. The Army has made it clear that there is no military need or use for the 16,700 acres of remnant lands of Pinon Canyon. The Army does not expend funds protecting or managing these lands, and an important scientific resource, the dinosaur trackway, is languishing.

Two years is long enough. It is time to protect these lands by transferring their stewardship to the U.S. Forest Service. My bill will do that, and will also respect the Army's continued use of the Pinon Canyon maneuver site.

Finally, Mr. President, I would like to explain why my bill calls the special management area the "Picket Wire Special Management Area." For many years, the people of the Arkansas Valley have affectionately referred to the Purgatoire River Valley as the "Picket Wire." It evokes the pioneer spirit and the rough-and-tumble frontier atmosphere of this historic part of Colorado. I have spent time in the Arkansas Valley and feel certain that preserving the "Picket Wire Special Management Area" will be a welcomed addition to our Nation's public lands.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of my bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2560

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. TRANSFER OF LANDS.

(1) TRANSFER.—Not later than 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Army shall transfer to the Secretary of Agriculture, acting through the Chief of the Forest Service, the lands described in subsection (b), which shall be known as the Picket Wire Special Management Area (referred to as the "special management area").

(b) LAND DESCRIPTION.—(1) The special management area shall consist of all "uneconomic remnant" lands identified by the Secretary of the Army, in consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture, as not suitable for the purposes of the Pinon Canyon Maneuver Site, including the approximately 16,707 acres of land in the counties of Las Animas and Otero, Colorado, described as follows:

SIXTH PRINCIPAL MERIDIAN

Township 27 South, Range 55 West (Otero County, Colorado).

Section 20: S½NE¼, SE¼.
Section 25: NW¼SW¼.
Section 26: S½N½, SW¼, N½SE¼, SW¼SE¼.
Section 27: S½, NW¼, SW¼NE¼.
Section 28: S½, SE¼NW¼, SW¼NE¼.
Section 29: SE¼, N½NE¼, SE¼NE¼, S½SW¼.
Section 30: S½SE¼.
Section 33: NE¼NW¼, NW¼NE¼, E½E½.
Section 34: All.
Section 35: N½NW¼.

Township 27 South, Range 56 West (Otero County, Colorado).

Section 29: E½SW¼, W½E¼, SE¼SE¼.
Section 31: All.
Section 32: All.
Section 33: All.
Section 34: W½.
The SW¼, S½NW¼, SW¼NE¼, NW¼SE¼ and S½SE¼ of Section 35,. Township 27 South, Range 56 West of the Sixth Principal Meridian, Otero County, Colorado, together with all interest in Rourke Road abutting Section 35 on the north.

Township 27 South, Range 57 West (Otero County, Colorado).

Section 33: All.
Section 34: All.
Section 35: All.

Township 28 South, Range 55 West (Las Animas County, Colorado)

That portion of the NW1/4SW¼, S½S½ of Section 5, the N½NE¼, NE¼NW¼ of Section B, Township 28 South, Range 55 West of the Sixth Principal Meridian, Las Animas County, Colorado, lying Southeasterly of the following described line: Beginning at a point on the North line of said S½S½ of Section 5, said point being 550.00 feet Westerly of the Northeast corner thereof; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 330.00 feet South of and 900.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 990.00 feet South of and 2,100.00 feet West of said Northwest corner; thence Southwesterly to the Southquarter corner of said Section 5; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 1,100.00 feet South of and 1,000.00 feet West of the North quarter corner of said Section 8; thence Southerly parallel with the West line of said NE¼NW¼ of said Section 8, to the South line of said NE¼NW¼, and being the point of termination.

Section 3: Lots 1, 2, 3, and 4, the S½NW¼, SW¼NE¼.

Section 4: That portion of Lots 1, 2, 3, and 4, the S½N½, SW¼, N½SE¼, lying Southeasterly of the following described line: Beginning at a point on the North line of said Section 4, said point being 1,980.00 feet Westerly of the Northeast corner of said Section 4; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 330.00 feet South of and 2,310.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 660.00 feet South of and 3.580.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Southwesterly to the West quarter corner of said Section 4, and being the point of termination.

Section 5: That portion of the N½SE¼ lying Southeasterly of the following described line: Beginning at a point on the East line of said Section 5, said point being 660.00 feet Southerly of the East quarter corner of said Section 5; thence Southwesterly to a point on the South line of said N½SE¼, said point being 550.00 feet Westerly of the Southeast corner of said N½SE¼, said point being the point of termination.

Section 7: SE¼, excepting therefrom the following described tract of land: Beginning at the Northwest corner of said SE¼ of Section 7; thence Easterly along the North line of said SE¼ to the Northeast corner thereof; thence Southerly along the East line of said SE¼, 1,000.00 feet; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 1,980.00 feet South of and 990.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Northwesterly to a point, said point being 1,320.00 feet South of and 1,650.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Northeasterly to a point, said point being 990.00 feet South of and 660.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Northerly to a point, said point being 660.00 feet South of and 660.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Westerly to a point, said point being 660.00 feet South of and 1,650.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Northerly to a point, said point being 330.00 feet South of and 1,650.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Westerly to a point, said point being 330.0 feet South of and 1,780.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Southwesterly to a point on the West line of said SE¼, said point being 1,650.00 feet Northerly of the Southwest corner thereof; thence Northerly along said West line to the point of beginning.

Section 8: S½SW¼, SW¼SE¼, N½SE¼, S½NE¼.

Section 9: W½, NW¼SE¼.

Section 17: NE¼, SW¼, SW¼NW¼, N½NW¼.

Section 18: E½NE¼, SE¼, SE¼SW¼, that portion of Lot 4, lying Easterly of the following described line: Beginning at the Northwest corner of said Lot 4; thence Southeasterly to a point, said point being 660.00 feet North of and 1,100.00 feet East of the Southwest corner of said Section 18; thence Southwesterly to a point on the South line of Section 13, Township 28 South, Range 56 West, said point being 660.00 feet Westerly of the Southeast corner of said Section 13, said point being the point of termination.

Section 19: S½NE¼.

Section 29: SW¼, S½NW¼, NW¼NW¼.

Section 30: Lots 3 and 4.

Section 31: Lot 4, E½, SE¼W¼, NE¼NW¼

Section 32: SW¼, S½NW¼, NW¼NW¼.

Township 28 South, Range 56 West (Las Animas County, Colorado).

Section 13: That portion of the W½ lying Southerly of the following described line: Beginning at a point on the East line of said W½, said point being 990.00 feet Northerly of the Southeast corner thereof; thence Northwesterly to a point, said point being 1,400.00 feet North of and 600.00 feet West of said Southeast corner; thence Northerly to a point, said point being 1,730,00 feet North of and 600.00 feet West of said Southeast corner; thence Westerly to a point, said point being 1,730.00 feet North of and 1,260.00 feet West of said Southeast corner; thence Northwesterly to a point, said point being 2,750.00 feet North of and 1,600.00 feet West of said Southeast corner; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 1,730.00 feet North of and 1,900.00 feet West of said Southeast corner; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 1,450.00 feet North of a 2,500.00 feet West of said Southeast corner; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 700.00 feet North of and 660.00 feet West of the Southeast corner of Section 14, Township 28 South, Range 56 West, said point being the point of termination.

Section 14: That portion of the E½SE¼ lying Southeasterly of the following described line: Beginning at a point in the W½ of Section 13, Township 28 South, Range 56 West, said point being 1,450.00 feet North of and 2,500.00 feet West of the Southeast corner of said W½ of Section 13; thence Southwesterly to a point in said E½SE¼ of Section 14, said point being 700.00 feet North of and 660.00 feet West of the Southeast corner of said Section 14; thence Southwesterly to a point on the South line of said E½SE¼, said point being 990.00 feet Westerly of said Southeast corner, said point being the point of termination.

Section 19: Lots 1 and 2 NE¼NW¼, N½NE¼.

Section 23: That portion of the E½ lying Easterly of the following described line: Beginning at a point on the North line of said E½, said point being 1,240.00 feet Westerly of the Northeast corner thereof; thence Southeasterly to a point, said point being 330.00 feet South of and 990.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 660.00 feet South of and 1,650.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 700.00 feet South of and 1,980.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 1,050.00 feet South of and 1,700.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Southeasterly to a point, said point being 1,320.00 feet South of and 990.00 feet West of said Northeast corner, thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 1,980.00 feet South of and 1,320.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Southerly to a point, said point being 3,960.00 feet South of and 1,320.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Southwesterly to a point on the South line of said E½, said point being 1,730.00 feet Westerly of the Southeast corner of said E½, said point being the point of termination.

Section 24: N½, N½S½ and that portion of the S½SW¼, SW¼SE¼, lying North and West of the Purgatoire River. Excepting therefrom that portion lying Northerly of the following described line: Beginning at a point on the North line of said Section 24, said point being 660.00 feet Westerly of the Northwest corner thereof; thence Southeasterly to a point, said point being 330.00 feet South of and 1,320.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Westerly parallel with said North line, 660.00 feet; thence Northwesterly to a point, said point being 750.00 feet North of and 400.00 feet East of the North quarter corner of said Section 24, said point being point of termination. Additionally, that portion of the SW¼SE¼ and the S½SW¼ lying Southerly of the South bank of the Purgatoire River as now situated.

Section 25: All.

Section 26: E½NE¼, SE¼.

Section 35: N½NE¼, S½SE¼.

Township 29 South, Range 55 West (Las Animas County, Colorado).

Section 5: Lot 4, SW¼NW¼.

Section 6: Lots 1 and 2.

Township 29 South, Range 56 West (Las Animas County, Colorado).

That portion of Lots 3 and 4, S½NW¼ and the SW¼ of Section 4, Section 5, Section 7, the NW¼, N½SW¼, SW¼SW¼, N½NE¼ and the SW¼NE¼ of Section 8; Lot 2 and the E½NW¼ of Section 18, lying Southerly of the following described line: Commencing at the Northeast corner of the W½ of said Section 4; thence Southerly along the East line of said W½, 1,100.00 feet of the point of beginning; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 1,210.00 feet South of and 2,400.00 feet East of the Northwest corner of said Section 4; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 2,510.00 feet South of and 1,700.00 feet East of said Northwest corner; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 3,190.00 feet South of and 1,320.00 feet East of said Northwest corner; thence Northwesterly to a point, said point being 1,210.00 feet South of and 660.00 feet East of said Northwest corner; thence Northwesterly to a point on the East line of said Section 5, said point being 550.00 feet Southerly of the Northeast corner thereof; thence Northwesterly to the Northwest corner of Lot 1 of said Section 5; thence Southwesterly to a point on the East line of the W½ of said Section 5, said point being 990.00 feet Southerly of the Northeast corner thereof; thence Southerly along the East line of said W½ of Section 5 to a point, said point being 3,300.00 feet Southerly of said Northeast corner of the W½ of Section 5; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 4,850.00 feet South of and 1,320.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 5,180.00 feet South of and 1,980.00 feet West of said Northeast corner; thence Southerly to a point on the South line of said Section 5, said point being 660.00 feet Easterly of the Southwest corner of said Section 5; thence Southwesterly to the Southwest corner of the NW¼NW¼ of said section 8; thence Westerly to a point, said point being 1,320.00 feet South of and 660.00 feet West of the Northeast corner of said Section 7; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 2,970.00 feet South of and 1,980.00 feet West of said Northeast corner of Section 7; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 4,290.00 feet South of and 2,310.00 feet West of said Northeast corner of Section 7; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 4,620.00 feet South of and 2,640.00 feet West of said Northeast corner of Section 7; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 5,000.00 feet South of and 3,300.00 feet West of said Northeast corner of Section 7; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 1,650.00 feet South of and 1,320.00 feet West of the Northeast corner of the NW¼ of said Section 18; thence Southwesterly to a point on the South line of said NW¼, said point being 1,100.00 feet East of the Southwest corner thereof and said point being the point of termination.

Township 29 South, Range 60 West (Las Animas County, Colorado).

Section 20: That portion of the NW¼NW¼ lying Northwesterly of the Southeasterly right-or-way line of State Highway No. 350.

Township 30 South, Range 57 West (Las Animas County, Colorado).

That portion of the S½ of Section 17, SE¼NE¼, E½SE¼ of Section 18, E½SW¼, E½ of Section 19, N½N½, SW¼NW¼, W½SW¼ of Section 20 NW¼ of Section 21, and Lot 2, the E½NW¼, W½NE¼ of Section 30 lying Southerly of the following described line: Beginning at a point on the East line of said Section 17, said point being 900.00 feet Northerly of the Southeast corner thereof; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 150.00 feet North of and 1,900.00 feet East of said Southwest corner; thence Northwesterly to a point, said point being 1,400.00 feet North of and 1,000.00 feet East of said Southwest corner; thence Westerly to a point, said point being 1,400.00 feet North of and 550.00 feet East of said Southwest corner; thence Northwesterly to a point on the West line of the East 732.00 feet of the E½SW¼ of said Section 17, said point being 1,600.00 feet Northerly of the Southwest corner of said East 732.00 feet of the E½SW¼; thence Northwesterly to a point, said point being 1,700.00 feet North of and 450.00 feet West of said Southwest corner of the East 732.00 feet of the E½SW¼; thence Westerly parallel with the South line of said Section 17, 900.00 feet; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 1,450.00 feet North of and 2,300.00 feet West of the Southeast corner of the W½ of said Section 17; thence Northwesterly to a point on the West line of said Section 17, said point being 2,100.00 feet Northerly of the Southwest corner of said Section 17; thence Northwesterly to a point, said point being 3,000.00 feet North of and 650.00 feet West of the Southeast corner of said Section 18; thence Southerly parallel with the East line of said Section 18, a distance of 1,875.00 feet; thence Westerly parallel with the South line of said Section 18, a distance of 300.00 feet; thence Southerly parallel with said East line of Section 18, a distance of 300.00 feet; thence Southeasterly to a point, said point being 200.00 feet North of and 300.00 feet West of said Southeast corner of Section 18; thence Southerly parallel with said East line of Section 18, to said South line of Section 18; thence Southerly parallel with the East line of said Section 19, a distance of 350.00 feet; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 1,100.00 feet South of and 700.00 feet West of the Northeast corner of said Section 19; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 2,300.00 feet South of and 1,050.00 feet West of said Northeast corner of Section 19; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 2,650.00 feet South of and 1,450.00 feet West of said Northest corner of Section 19; thence Westerly parallel with the North line of said Section 19, a distance of 950.00 feet; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 1,700.00 feet North of and 1,900.00 feet East of the Southwest corner of said Section 19; thence Southerly parallel with the East line of said Section 19, a distance of 1,400.00 feet; thence Southeasterly to a point on the South line of said Section 19, said point being 1,950.00 feet Easterly of said Southwest corner of Section 19; thence Southeasterly to a point, said point being 650.00 feet South of and 2,125.00 feet East of the Northwest corner of said Section 30; thence Southwesterly to a point, said point being 1,650.00 feet South of and 1,450.00 feet East of said Northwest corner of Section 30; thence Southwesterly to a point on the West line of said Section 30, a distance of 2,100.00 feet Southerly of said Northwest corner of Section 30, said point being the point of termination.

(2) The Secretary of the Army and the Secretary of Agriculture may agree on minor adjustments and may correct clerical errors in the land description in paragraph (1).

(3) The Secretary of Agriculture, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Army, shall prepare a map of the special management area and shall file the map and any adjusted or corrected legal description of the area with the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the House of Representatives, and each such map and legal description shall have the same force and effect as if included in this Act.

(4) The map and legal description referred to in paragraph (3) shall be on file and available for public inspection in the office of the Chief of the Forest Service, Department of Agriculture.

SEC. 2. ADMINISTRATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Agriculture shall administer the special management area so as to preserve and protect the paleontological, archeological, wildlife, vegetative, aquatic and other natural resources of the area.

(b) PERMITTED USES.—To the extent that it can be done without unduly impairing—

(1) the Army's use of the Pinon Canyon Maneuver Site for the purposes for which the site is intended to be used; or

(2) the preservation and protection of paleontological, archeological, or natural resources of the area, the Secretary of Agriculture may provide access to those resources for scholarly research, interpretation to the public, and recreation.

(c) LIVESTOCK GRAZING.—The Secretary of Agriculture may permit livestock grazing in the special management area only to the extent it is deemed necessary to benefit the natural resources of the area.

(d) WITHDRAWAL.—Lands within the special management area are withdrawn from operation of the mining, mineral leasing, and other mineral entry laws of the United States.

(e) PROHIBITED USES.—No activity shall be permitted in the special management area that would impair the preservation and protection of the paleontological, archeological, and natural resources of the area, including production of or exploration for oil, gas, or minerals of any kind or the storage or processing of nuclear waste, hazardous waste, or waste of any other kind.

(f) MANAGEMENT PLAN.—The Secretary of Agriculture, in consultation with the National Park Service, the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, the Department of the Army, the Colorado Department of Natural Resources, and the Colorado State Historic Preservation Office, shall, after notice and public comment, develop a management plan for the special management area that contains, among other things—

(1) a complete survey and an inventory of the paleontological and archeological resources of the area; and

(2) a strategy for protecting and conserving the dinosaur track-way in the Purgatoire River Canyon and other paleontological and archeological resources in the special management area.

SEC. 3. INTERAGENCY AGREEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Army and the Secretary of Agriculture shall enter into an interagency agreement providing for—

(1) the completion of a survey of the boundaries of the special management area;

(2) the provision of access to the special management area through the Pinon Canyon Maneuver Site by the Secretary of Agriculture, for the purpose of taking action to preserve and protect the area's resources, and by the public, for educational purposes, in such manner, at such times, and to such an extent as will not unduly interfere with the Army's use of the site; and

(3) cooperation between the Army and the Forest Service in the protection and conservation of the paleontological, archeological, and natural resources in the special management area.

(b) ACCESS.—In determining whether the manner, time, and extent of access through the Pinon Canyon Maneuver Site for a particular purpose will constitute an undue interference with the Army's use of the site for the purpose of subsection (a)(2), the Secretary of the Army and the Secretary of Agriculture shall—

(1) in the case of access by the Forest Service for management purposes, take into consideration that the high importance of protecting and conserving the resources of the special management area may justify the imposition of some inconvenience to the Army, so long as it does not prevent the Army from accomplishing its purposes on the Pinon Canyon Maneuver Site; and

(2) in the case of access by the public, solicit comment from the public concerning the need for and the kind of access that should be provided.

SEC. 4. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out this Act, including such sums as are necessary to complete a study of the special management area's paleontological resources and action to prevent erosion of the dinosaur trackway.

By Mr. GORTON:

S. 2561. A bill to amend the Controlled Substances Act with respect to the regulation of precursor chemicals; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PRECURSOR CHEMICAL REGULATION ACT OF 1990

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, today I rise to introduce the Precursor Chemical Regulation Act of 1990, to regulate the flow of chemicals used to make illegal drugs in the United States.

During my last trip home, I met with the Clark-Skamania County Narcotics Task Force in Vancouver, WA. I toured a mock methamphetamine lab and was provided a demonstration on the production of ice. Ice is to methamphetamine or meth what crack is to cocaine.

By all accounts, ice is far more devastating than crack. Users of ice are more violent. They stay high for a longer period of time, usually from 16 to 18 hours and sometimes for several days. And most disturbing, users and distributors of ice are making this illegal drug at home, with easily purchased chemicals.

We should all be concerned with the rapid spread of meth labs, and particularly ice. So-called cooks, who make ice, and their labs, are sprouting-up in locations all across the country. The problem is by no means a West Coast phenomenon, as was once believed.

According to the Drug Enforcement Agency, the number of labs seized has grown from 184 in 1981 to 810 in 1988, an increase nationwide of over 400 percent. In my State of Washington, more than 150 labs were seized during the last 15 months—a whopping 21 labs in Clark County alone.

While Congress has taken one step to curb the spread of meth production—by requiring all chemical makers to be registered to sell chemicals which can be used for the production of illegal drugs—we have not done enough. Anyone can still buy these chemicals.

That is why I am introducing the Precursor Chemical Regulation Act of 1990, to establish national standards to regulate these chemicals.

Many of these chemicals, I've learned, are highly hazardous; some are toxic, explosive, and even radioactive. The chemicals and their mixtures are recklessly dumped into our streams, sewers, and on the ground—poisoning the land and the ground water. Entire communities are being endangered by the improper disposal of this hazardous waste.

We cannot stand idly by while these purveyors of illegal drugs and toxic sludge destroy our children and our environment. Under my bill, those who make illegal drugs and pollute our environment will pay for their crimes.

First, this bill will expand the list of precursor chemicals to include those chemicals that are most frequently used to produce illegal drugs. Second, it builds on existing law to require that all transactions dealing with these chemicals be undertaken by licensed individuals, and that each transaction be recorded. Finally, and perhaps most important, this legislation imposes stiff penalties and a heavy jail sentence on those individuals contaminating our neighborhoods.

I believe that this legislation will go a long way toward remedying the devastation that is created in towns and cities across the country from the domestic production of illegal drugs. I encourage my colleagues to join me in support of this important legislation.

By Mr. BOSCHWITZ (for himself and Mr. BOND):

S. 2562. A bill to amend the Food Security Act of 1985 to improve provisions relating to wetland conservation, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

SWAMPBUSTER IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1990

● Mr. BOSCHWITZ. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce, with Senator BOND, the Swampbuster Improvement Act of 1990.

This legislation gives the U.S. Department of Agriculture flexibility for implementing the swampbuster provision of the 1985 farm bill through mitigation and graduated penalties.

Under mitigation a farmer can drain a wetland to improve the efficiency of his farming operation as long as a wetland is restored on the farm or on another farm in the general area. Local representatives of the Soil Conservation Service and the Fish and Wildlife Service have to agree to the mitigation plan to ensure that wetland values, functions, and acreage are preserved.

Mitigation is currently occurring through the regulations the administration developed for the swampbuster program. However the authority for mitigation is less than clear. As a result, mitigation has not been implemented consistently in all parts of the country. This legislation clarifies that mitigation is allowed and provides guidance as to how and under what circumstances it should occur.

Additional flexibility is allowed to impose a graduated penalty for first-time violators of swampbuster who have made a good faith effort to comply.

Presently, enforcement of swampbuster is compromised by the fact that farmers lose all their farm program benefits for even the smallest violation. Therefore, USDA has the choice of either taking away all program payments and jeopardizing a farmer's survival or simply overlooking the violation. There is no latitude for an adjustment of the penalty so that it is commensurate with the violation.

This legislation will allow the Secretary to impose a penalty of $1,000 to $10,000 based on the seriousness of the violation provided the farmer restores or mitigates the wetland.

It is my intention that this legislation be part of the 1990 farm bill so that the swampbuster program can be made more workable for farmers and yet preserve valuable wetlands.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2562

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Swampbuster Improvement Act of 1990.

SEC. 2. MINIMAL EFFECTS CLARIFICATION AND SWAMPBUSTER MITIGATION POLICY

Section 1222(c) of the Food Security Act of 1985 (16 U.S.C. 822) is amended to read as follows:

"(c) the Secretary shall exempt a person from the ineligibility provisions of section 1221 for any action associated with the production of an agricultural commodity on converted wetland if—

"(1) the effect of such action, individually and in connection with all other similar actions authorized by the Secretary in the area, on the hydrological and biological aspects of the wetland is minimal; or

"(2) such wetland has been normally cropped, as determined by the Secretary, prior to the date of such action, such wetland is an impediment to the effective and efficient operation of the farm of the person, and the wetland values, acreage, and functions are mitigated by the producer or the agent of the producer through the restoration of a prior converted wetland—

"(A) on the basis of one restored acre for every acre of converted wetland on which an agricultural commodity is produced;

"(B) at the expense of the producer;

"(C) that shall occur in advance of or concurrently with the planned alteration of the cropped wetland according to a restoration plan developed by the Soil Conservation Service in concurrence at the county and district level with the Fish and Wildlife Service;

"(D) that is on lands in the same general area as the original wetland; and

"(E) that is recorded in the deed to remain as a wetland for as long as the mitigated wetland remains in cropland or is not returned to its original wetland classification.".

SEC. 3. GRADUATED PENALTIES.

Section 1222 of the Food Security Act of 1985 (16 U.S.C. 822) (as amended by section 2) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) Section 1221 shall not apply if—

"(1) a person violates section 1221 for the first time;

"(2) the person made a good faith effort to comply with this section;

"(3) the person forfeits not less than $1,000, nor more than $10,000, of price supports and payments made under the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.) as determined by the Secretary taking into account the seriousness of the violation; and

"(4) a binding agreement is signed by the person to fully restore the wetland or to mitigate, under section 1222(c)(2).

This subsection shall apply, where appropriate, to violations that have occurred following the date of enactment of this subsection.".●

● Mr. BOND. Mr. President, it is with great pleasure that I join my distinguished colleague Senator BOSCHWITZ in introducing the Swampbuster Improvement Act of 1990. I thank Senator BOSCHWITZ for his hard work and leadership on this important piece of legislation. This legislation is yet another example of the complexity of existing conservation programs and the tremendous impacts which they have throughout rural America.

In traveling throughout Missouri, I have learned that while there is broad support for many conservation programs, there remains a genuine concern over the implementation of policies related to wetlands. The swampbuster provisions of the Food Security Act of 1985 have been the subject of a great deal of concern and confusion. I feel, along with many others, this legislation will clear up some of the inflexibility of current programs.

For example, while first time violators should be penalized, there should be some flexibility in the amount of the penalty. Let me give an example. A Missouri farmer made plans to remove trees and perform some bulldozer grading work on a wet area which formed the center of an old riverbed. He then proceeded to plant the acreage to a mixture of grass and wheat used as a nurse crop.

The converted area was determined by the Soil Conservation Service [SCS] to be wetlands and subject to swampbuster provisions. Both the State and county ASCS committees recommended that a waiver of the violation be considered. The wheat seed was destroyed early in the year and was never intended to be harvested. However, since wheat is an annually tilled agricultural commodity, this farmer was ineligible to receive USDA program benefits on his home farm or any other farm during the 1989 crop-year.

What was the total cost for this farmer not to harvest even one bushel of wheat? Thirty-seven thousand dollars. Clearly an overwhelming amount of money. It is obvious this farmer did not deserve an iron hand, but with the current law there was no flexibility to handle this problem in the correct manner.

Today Senator BOSCHWITZ and I provide an opportunity to put some fairness back into the system. Mr. President, I believe this bill improves upon the conservation provisions in the 1985 farm bill. I am hopeful that we can act quickly on this matter.●

By Mr. ROTH:

S. 2563. A bill to impose a moratorium on the fishing and possession of Atlantic striped bass (Morone Saxatilis) within waters under the jurisdiction of the United States; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

ATLANTIC STRIPED BASS PROTECTION ACT

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation which places a moratorium on the fishing and possession of the Atlantic striped bass. The moratorium on this fish, also known as striper or rockfish—would apply only in the U.S. exclusive economic zone [EEZ]. The EEZ is the band of water from 3 miles off the coast to 200 miles off. I take this action today in the Senate, while my good friend from New Jersey, Representative JIM SAXTON is introducing similar legislation in the House of Representatives.

We are introducing this legislation for a variety of reasons which I would like to outline to my colleagues at this time.

Over recent years a sharp decline in the population of Atlantic striped bass prompted many eastern seaboard States to place a moratorium on fishing for striped bass. Now, the moratorium on the catching of Atlantic striped bass may be lifted in each State from North Carolina to Maine. Currently each State has plans to increase the 1990 harvest of the fish. The States are relaxing the moratorium because of the high spawning counts in the Chesapeake Bay in 1989. These counts are considered dubious by some people, and while most people agree that the striped bass stock is recovering, it is not clear if the greater harvest should be allowed at this time.

When we passed the original Atlantic Striped Bass Conservation Act, Public Law 100-589, due to the tremendous efforts of Senators CHAFEE and MITCHELL, we included a title which directed the Commerce Department to promulgate regulations governing the fishing for Atlantic striped bass in the EEZ. Rulemaking never occurred, and only early this year, has the Department of Commerce begun to solicit public comments on options to regulate the fishing for Atlantic striped bass in the exclusive economic zone. If all goes as expected, we anticipate this rulemaking to go into effect at the end of this year. However, there is always the possibility that this may not take place. For that reason we are imposing the moratorium at this time.

There is a third and more important reason for our actions. With many States relaxing some of their restrictions in State waters, there is a big loophole that enables fishermen to bypass State fishing restrictions. It works as follows: Suppose a fisherman catches more than his quota in State waters like the Chesapeake Bay. Since the fishermen currently can catch Atlantic striped bass in Federal waters—the U.S. exclusive economic zone—all he would have to say when he brought his fish to the harbor is that he caught them in the EEZ. There is no way to tell if a fish was caught in State waters—the Chesapeake in this instance—or Federal waters—the EEZ.

This legislation would close this loophole. Approximately 6 percent of all the striped bass caught over the past years were caught in the EEZ. The majority of these fish tend to be large females that like to overwinter in the deep pools of the coast. Since mature female Atlantic striped bass have about 100,000 eggs per pound of weight, and most of those females are in the EEZ a significant impact could be made upon the spawning population. The population must have a chance to recover.

In addition, Atlantic striped bass are naturally anadromous—a-na-dro-mus—ascending coastal streams and brackish estuaries in early spring to spawn, afterward returning to ocean waters to migrate along the coastline. The migratory behavior of striped bass is more complex than that of most other anadromous species, with seasonal movement and location of fish being related to age, sex, degree of maturity, and natal river.

A further complicating factor is that there is even considerable variation in the migratory behavior of fish of the same age, sex, and degree of maturity. The importance of the migration pattern to striped bass management is that the fisheries operating in coastal waters are exploiting mixed stocks of fish, and the nature of the mix in any given location at any given time is a function of all factors noted above.

Mr. President, quite simply this bill places a moratorium on fishing and the possession of striped bass in the U.S. EEZ. It applies equally to commercial and recreational fishermen. The moratorium expires in 3 years. At the expiration of this 3-year period, the Secretary of the Commerce Department may extend it annually for as long as he determines necessary. All experts expect this 3-year period to be sufficient for the striped bass stock to reestablish itself again.

We have also included an exception to the moratorium. It allows those fishermen that have legally taken striped bass but need to transect the EEZ en route back to the mainland to do so. We felt that way to accommodate this would be to allow a fisherman to transect the EEZ with striped bass in their possession but not to be fishing in the process. For example, fishermen that say catch striped bass around Block Island or Nantucket Island would fall into this category.

Finally there is a reason that prohibits the keeping of incidentally caught Atlantic striped bass. There are no figures available for the number of fish caught that fall into this category. It is considered to be very small.

Mr. President, at this time, the following associations are in support of our actions: Times Mirror Magazines Conservation Council, the American Fish and Tackle Manufacturers Association, the Atlantic Coast Conservation Association, American Fisheries Society, Center for Marine Conservation, and the National Wildlife Federation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the legislation be printed in the RECORD in its entirety at the end of my statement.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2563

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Atlantic Striped Bass Protection Act".

SEC. 2. MORATORIUM ON THE FISHING AND POSSESSION OF ATLANTIC STRIPED BASS.

The Magnuson Fishery Conservation and Management Act is amended—

(1) by redesignating section 312 (16 U.S.C. 1857 note) as section 313; and

(2) by inserting after section 311 the following:

"SEC. 312. MORATORIUM ON THE FISHING AND POSSESSION OF ATLANTIC STRIPED BASS (MORONE SAXATILIS).

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c), the possession or fishing of Atlantic striped bass within the exclusive economic zone shall be unlawful—

"(1) during the period commencing on the date of the enactment of this Act and ending 36 months after that date; and

"(2) thereafter if the Secretary so decides under subsection (c).

"(b) EXCEPTION.—Atlantic striped bass fished outside the exclusive economic zone may be possessed within the exclusive economic zone if the fishing vessel from which the Atlantic striped bass were fished must transport through the zone in order to reach State waters. A fishing vessel which possesses Atlantic striped bass within the exclusive economic zone consistent with this subsection may not be engaged in fishing while in the zone.

"(c) EXTENSION OF MORATORIUM.—(1) The Secretary, after consultation with the appropriate Councils and the Atlantic States Marine Fisheries Commission, is authorized to extend the moratorium under subsection (a).

"(2) Each such extension under paragraph (1) shall be for a period of 12 months.

"(3) No extension under paragraph (1) shall take effect unless—

"(A) the determination by the Secretary to extend such moratorium is made not less than 90 days prior to the end of the period in which moratorium is in effect pursuant to this section; and

"(B) notice of such determination is published in the Federal Register no later than 30 days prior to the date on which such extension is to commence.

"(d) The provisions of this subsection shall not apply to fishing of Atlantic striped bass which is incidental to fishing that occurs in the course of commercial or recreational fish catching activities directed at species other than Atlantic striped bass, and if any such Atlantic striped bass so fished is returned immediately to the water regardless of the physical conditions of the striped bass when caught.".

By Mr. GRASSLEY (for himself and Mr. HARKIN):

S. 2564. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to exclude from gross income amounts received under any State in-home care program by an individual for care of a member of such individual's family; to the Committee on Finance.

TAXATION OF IN-HOME HEALTH CARE BENEFITS

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, today, I am introducing legislation, along with Congressman TOM TAUKE on the House side, to correct an unfair Internal Revenue Service policy regarding the taxation of in-home health care benefits.

Under a program in my State of Iowa, the State provides funds to families to care for disabled family members whose physical or mental health prevents self-care. The funding is, apparently, given to the disabled individual, as the beneficiary, who, in many cases, agrees to be cared for by family members rather than hiring nurses, other outside help, or being institutionalized.

The State assistance is limited to $368 per month and is exempted from State income taxes. Unfortunately, the IRS is attempting to collect income and self-employment taxes from those family members providing care, because these relatives appear to be providing "contractural services" to the disabled beneficiary.

Mr. President, this new IRS policy undermines the entire State program by subjecting a large amount of the State assistance to Federal taxation. Many families, who are now faced with back-taxes for multiple years, may be forced to institutionalize their disabled loved ones at much higher State expense because the family can no longer afford to care for them. In this case, the IRS policy is jeopardizing sound fiscal policy on the delivery of human services. Mr. President, changes must be made.

At this time, it's not clear how widespread the problem is or how many States provide this kind of assistance. For years, families in Iowa were led to believe that these benefits would not be taxed. It was only after the IRS "stumbled" onto the problem after investigating professional health care providers that these families became aware of their problem.

Our legislation would treat these in-home care payments the same as State payments for foster care, and exclude them from taxable income when care is provided by the family.

Mr. President, there is no rational excuse to tax these in-home care benefits when the care is provided by the family. Taxing these benefits creates further hardship for the family and greater expenses, in the long run, for the State and Federal Government.

I urge my colleagues to join me and Congressman TAUKE in addressing this unfair and costly problem by exempting in-home care benefits that are paid to the family from Federal taxation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous concent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2564

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That (a) part III of subchapter B of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to amounts specifically excluded from gross income) is amended by redesignating section 136 as section 137 and by inserting after section 135 the following new section:

"SEC. 136. CERTAIN IN-HOME CARE PAYMENTS.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—Gross income shall not include amounts received by an individual during the taxable year as qualified in-home care payments.

"(b) QUALIFIED IN-HOME CARE PAYMENTS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified in-home care payment' means any amount—

"(A) which is paid by a State or political subdivision thereof,

"(B) which is paid under a program which provides health-related and personal care services to individuals in their homes in cases where the state of the individual's physical or mental health prevents independent self-care, and

"(C) which is received by an individual for services provided to a member of such individual's family.

"(2) FAMILY.—The term 'family' means, with respect to any individual, any lineal descendent of such individual, any brother or sister or stepbrother or stepsister of such individual, any parent or grandparent of such individual, and any spouse of any of the foregoing. For purposes of the preceding sentence, a relationship by legal adoption shall be treated as a relationship by blood."

(b) The table of sections for part III of subchapter B of chapter 1 of such Code is amended by striking the item relating to section 136 and inserting the following:

"Sec. 136. Certain in-home care payments.
"Sec. 137. Cross references to other Acts."

(c) The amendments made by this section shall apply to all taxable years whether beginning before, on, or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my distinguished colleague from Iowa, Senator GRASSLEY, today in introducing legislation which seeks to address a situation in our home State and has implications for the Nation. We are taking this action on behalf of a number of families in Iowa who are facing large and unexpected Federal tax bills from payments they received from the State under a special program to care for their disabled children at home. While these payments are not subject to State income taxes, the IRS is claiming that they are subject to Federal taxes.

Mr. President, Federal policies must give incentives, not disincentives, for keeping families together and allowing those needing long-term assistance to remain in their own homes and communities. Thousands of Iowans and millions of Americans receive no compensation for caring for their loved ones, sacrificing for the sake of family. This very small program provides a little help to a small number of families. We need to expand on assistance, not cut back.

Mr. President, this particular situation in our State of Iowa, is a reflection of broader public policy issues which we need to act on. Our Nation must better recognize and address the special long-term care needs of Americans with disabilities as a part of developing and implementing overarching national policies on long-term care and disability. I was pleased that the Pepper Commission took a step toward this in their pathblazing recommendations. I recently wrote to President Bush asking him to specifically direct both the Advisory Council on Social Security and the Secretary's Task Force on Health and Long-Term Care to give special emphasis to Americans with disabilities in their studies and recommendations.

Mr. President, we have much work to do to revamp Federal policies to promote independence and empowerment of individuals with disabilities and their families. I look forward to maintaining our productive bipartisan working relationship so that not only will the great promise of the Americans With Disabilities Act be realized but that it might be matched with necessary reforms and restructuring of other critical programs.

By Mr. WARNER (for himself and Mr. ROBB):

S. 2565. A bill to designate the Federal building located at 340 North Pleasant Valley Road in Winchester, VA, as the "J. Kenneth Robinson Postal Building"; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

J. KENNETH ROBINSON POSTAL BUILDING

● Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, today I join many of our colleagues in paying tribute to my long-time friend, the former Congressman from Virginia's Seventh District J. Kenneth Robinson who died on April 8.

I want to point to three areas of Ken's life which were particularly meaningful to me.

First, Ken, was born into an apple-growing family in Winchester, the heart of Virginia's apple and peach country. He graduated from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University with a degree in horticulture and returned home to run the family orchard business. He truly loved the land, what it provides, and the people who work so hard in agribusiness.

After a distinguished career in the General Assembly of Virginia, as a Senator, Kenneth was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1971 where he served until 1985. During this time, he was my Congressman as I live in the seventh district. He was my close friend; he was a big brother as I started my legislative duties.

He was a member of the House Appropriations Committee where he served on the Subcommittee on Agriculture, Rural Development and Related Agencies. Following my election to the U.S. Senate in 1978, I consulted with Ken Robinson on all issues of importance to Virginia's agricultural community, for he and I were two of the few in the Virginia delegation who lived on working farms.

Together we secured Federal assistance to start a veterinary school at his alma mater of VPI. This was of great significance to the equine interests of Virginia.

When a California wine-grape growers' association asked that their growing area be designated as the "Shenandoah Valley Viticultural Area" Ken Robinson led the opposition. The Virginia delegations prevailed and the Federal Government gave Virginia interests the paramount right to use the name "Shenandoah Valley" in the context of our wine-producing industry.

Ken served in the U.S. Army with distinction during World War II and attained the rank of major. He was deeply committed to a strong national defense and served on the Defense Appropriations Committee and the House Intelligence Committee. As a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee and the Armed Services Committee, I worked closely with him in these areas. As we witness the transformation of Communist regimes around the world today, we should thank President Reagan, President Bush, and Members of Congress such as Ken Robinson who dedicated their careers to the defense of this country and the nurturing of democracy and freedom abroad.

Lastly, in the finest Virginia tradition Kenneth Robinson was a strong patriot of the highest integrity. He dedicated his life to the service of the Commonwealth and the Nation which he loved so dearly. He was a family man who cherished his wife of 43 years, Kathryn Rankin Robinson, and their six children and seven grandchildren.

He was a Virginia statesman in the tradition of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, and Patrick Henry. As the Richmond Times Dispatch stated in an editorial when he died, "Rep. Robinson gained his popularity the old-fashioned way through indefatigable constituent service * * * and through strict adherence to principle."

"God grant that men of principle shall always be our principal men." This quote attributed to Thomas Jefferson is so appropriate for Kenneth Robinson.

Today Senator Robb joins me in introducing legislation identical to that introduced in the House of Representatives by Represenative Slaughter to name the Federal building in Winchester, VA, the "J. Kenneth Robinson Postal Building."

By Mr. McCAIN:

S. 2566. A bill to redesignate the Sunset Crater National Monument as the Sunset Crater Volcano National Monument; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

SUNSET CRATER VOLCANO NATIONAL MONUMENT

● Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation for myself and my colleague Senator DECONCINI to change the name of the Sunset Crater National Monument in Arizona to the Sunset Crater Volcano National Monument.

This 3,000-acre natural area was established on May 26, 1930, to preserve Arizona's youngest volcano and surrounding lava flows, cinder cones and ash-fall area. The symmetrical and now dormant 1,000-foot cinder cone of Sunset Crater Volcano was named for its brilliant hued rim by Maj. John Wesley Powell in 1885. The citizens of Flagstaff, AZ, were able to have the volcano protected as a national monument, when it was threatened with destruction by dynamiting to film a stagecoach avalanche scene for a movie. Sunset Crater Volcano erupted periodically from 1064 A.D. for over 200 years.

Over 500,000 visitors a year travel to Sunset Crater National Monument and informal surveys show that over 80 percent come expecting to see a crater caused by a meteor. This was due in part, to the extensive publicity by the nearby commercial attraction of Meteor Crater, so visitors have related the national monument to the meteor-caused crater 40 miles to the east.

Renaming the areas as the Sunset Crater Volcano National Monument will help clear up the confusion and more specifically identify the outstanding resource this special attraction has to offer. I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2566

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. REDESIGNATION.

The Sunset Crater National Monument, Arizona, shall, on and after the date of enactment of this Act, be known and designated as the "Sunset Crater Volcano National Monument". Any reference to the Sunset Crater Volcano National Monument in any law, regulation, map, document, record, or other paper of the United States shall be considered to be a reference to the Sunset Crater Volcano National Monument.●

By Mr. KERREY:

S. 2567. A bill to strengthen education in the fields of mathematics, science, and engineering; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

THE SPACE SCIENCE AND EDUCATION ACT OF 1990

● Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, the Nation's goal of having our high school seniors graduate first in the world by the year 2000 is one of the most important we have ever set for ourselves. It is exciting to contemplate the positive changes in our economy and society if we are successful.

Unfortunately the outlook for accomplishing this objective is poor. This is mostly because the outlook for producing the numbers of math, science and engineering personnel needed not only in the next few years but into the next century is bleak.

Engineering faculties are reaching retirement age. Some colleges are having difficulty recruiting and retaining faculty. There is a shortage of qualified elementary and secondary teachers in these fields. Interest among undergraduate students is currently insufficient to attract the number of personnel needed in these areas by business and industry. Production of baccalaureate and graduate degrees is not expected to keep pace with demand. Many secondary schools do not offer proper lab experiences. Children are being turned off of science as early as third grade.

Legislation has been introduced to expand the number of scholarships and fellowships available, to improve and disseminate curriculum materials, to enhance teacher preparation, to encourage informal educational activities such as exhibits and museum programs, to develop expertise in the creation of exhibits and other informal education activities, to expand the use of public television in providing science, math and engineering related programming, to aid less well established institutions to upgrade their programs, to disseminate science and math curriculum materials, and to support regional educational laboratories. I am a co-sponsor of S. 843 and S. 2114, which incorporate the above provisions.

The legislation I am introducing today, however, goes beyond what is included in the above.

First, this legislation would focus on the students. It is designed to get students in grades 5–12 into supportive programs to expand their knowledge of math, science and engineering and to make them more comfortable with such subjects. The National Science Foundation has found children turned off as early as the third grade. This is an effort to turn them back on—or keep them from being turned off in the first place.

Second, this is a program which should have an immediate impact. Some 2,000 students—at least 20 in each State—could have immediate access to programs such as space camps, summer enrichment programs and multisession science activities. We are already familiar with some of these programs. What this legislation does is expand access and demonstrate the priority we place upon these activities.

An early, positive experience with math, science and engineering can propel a person toward a career in that field. Recently, for example, a University of Nebraska professor replied when asked how he became interested in his field, "My parents sent me to a summer program. That was it." We can begin to give those experiences now.

And, we can give them in a highly visible way—through the student grants—throughout the country. We can make it clear that it is important for all students in all States to have access. Indeed, if we are to make progress by the year 2000, we need to motivate the students themselves and not just wait for additional teacher training and curriculum materials. We need to take what we have—some of which is very good—and build upon that.

Third, we need to expand the types of programs which are available. We need to place our students in multisession programs which allow for a continued, experimental introduction to or expansion of education in math, science and engineering.

These programs do several things: First, they offer a hands-on, manipulative experience which is necessary for a student to become comfortable with math and science concepts and approaches; and second, they do so in a non-threatening environment where the student skeptical or reluctant to try a laboratory or other scientific experience for a grade may first learn what's involved.

Fourth, we know that industry is already doing some useful things. For example, IBM has a program under which people can retire early if they teach. Westinghouse has a long-standing competitive program for high school students. We need to know the scope of what is being done and build upon that.

Fifth, the bill includes a scholarship component designed to encourage students in the areas of both space and earth sciences. Both are areas which can expect shortages unless additional persons are attracted.

This portion also includes a new positive approach to encourage students to enter the field of teaching science and math. Some programs require a payback if a recipient of a scholarship fails to follow through with teaching requirements. These provisions have proved extremely cumbersome to administer. Instead of a pay back, the recipient would receive a further stipend to be used for further study during the teaching period. In this way, young teachers—those who traditionally earn the least—would have an additional benefit, an additional incentive to teach—and an incentive which should expand their knowledge and improve their classroom skills.

NASA was chosen to implement this legislation rather than the more traditional departments and agencies because NASA has demonstrated a long-term ability to interest and challenge youth. It has begun to move into the educational arena and is already initiating some competitive programs. This would simply give it a broader mandate and involvement.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a summary of the legislation be printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the summary was ordered to be printed in the RECORD as follows:

TITLE I—YOUTH EXPLORING SCIENCE

This title authorizes the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to award 2,000 grants each year to students in grades 5-12 to enable them to participate in math, science and engineering short courses, camps, and similar programs. Grants may cover up to $1,000 of costs including transportation. At least 20 awards shall be made in each State. Awards will be made on a competitive basis, with attention to making the awards available to a cross-section of the population.

TITLE II—SCIENCE AND SPACE EXPLORATION

This title authorizes the Administrator to make grants to educational institutions, museums, non-profit organizations and technically oriented businesses which develop programs on a non-profit basis to design and prepare multisession science programs and short courses which offer a hands-on, manipulative experience for elementary and secondary students. Such courses could be offered in after-school sessions, on weekends or in the summer.

TITLE III—INDUSTRY IN EDUCATION

The Administrator is authorized to conduct a survey of existing industry and education co-operative efforts in education. A report shall be submitted to Congress by March 1, 1991.

TITLE IV—SCHOLARSHIPS

This title authorizes the Administrator to award 150 scholarships of up to $5,000 each to undergraduate juniors and seniors who complete two courses in space science or earth science as part of a math, science or engineering major or minor and who intend to teach in an elementary or secondary school for each year for which a scholarship is received. For the first year of teaching, the recipient would be entitled to an additional $1,000 to be used to pursue further studies in their chosen fields or to enhance their teaching skills; for the second year $1,500 would be available. At least 2 scholarships shall be awarded in each state.●

ADDITIONAL COSPONSORS

S. 1212

At the request of Mr. SANFORD, the name of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. DASCHLE] was added as a cosponsor of S. 1212, a bill to amend title II of the Social Security Act to provide for a more gradual period of transition (and a new alternative formula with respect to such transition) to the changes in benefit computation rules enacted in the Social Security Amendments of 1977 as such changes apply to workers born in years after 1916 and before 1927 (and related beneficiaries) and to provide for increases in such workers' benefits accordingly, and for other purposes.

S. 1480

At the request of Mr. CRANSTON, the name of the Senator from Maine [Mr. COHEN] was added as a cosponsor of S. 1480, a bill to ensure economic equity for American women and their families by providing equitable pay and employee benefits and enhanced opportunities in business procurement; providing economic and retirement security for women as workers and as divorced or surviving spouses; making quality and affordable dependent care available to all working families; enhancing the long-term health of women and their families through prevention services and assistance to victims of domestic violence.

S. 1511

At the request of Mr. PRYOR, the name of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. SARBANES] was added as a cosponsor of S. 1511, a bill to amend the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 to clarify the protections given to older individuals in regard to employee benefit plans, and for other purposes.

S. 1577

At the request of Mr. BOREN, the name of the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. BOSCHWITZ] was added as a cosponsor of S. 1577, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide that charitable contributions of appreciated property will not be treated as an item of tax preference.

S. 1690

At the request of Mr. DODD, the name of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN] was added as a cosponsor of S. 1690, a bill to establish programs to improve foreign language instruction, and for other purposes.

S. 1865

At the request of Mr. DANFORTH, the name of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. ROBB] was added as a cosponsor of S. 1865, a bill to require the Comptroller General of the United States to review and report on the effectiveness and fairness of agency policies and procedures for distributing Federal research funds.

S. 2003

At the request of Mr. HOLLINGS, the names of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. BRYAN] and the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. KERREY] were added as cosponsors of S. 2003, a bill to establish a commission to advise the President on proposals for national commemorative events.

S. 2189

At the request of Mr. PRYOR, the name of the Senator from Maryland [Ms. MIKULSKI] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2189, a bill to establish a grant program to provide health insurance information, counseling, and assistance to individuals eligible to receive benefits under title XVIII of the Social Security Act, and for other purposes.

S. 2222

At the request of Mr. BRADLEY, the names of the Senator from California [Mr. CRANSTON], and the Senator from Florida [Mr. GRAHAM] were added as cosponsors of S. 2222, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 with respect to the tax treatment of payments under life insurance contracts for terminally ill individuals.

S. 2240

At the request of Mr. KENNEDY, the names of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. LEAHY], and the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. BOREN] were added as cosponsors of S. 2240, a bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide grants to improve the quality and availability of care for individuals and families with HIV disease, and for other purposes.

S. 2244

At the request of Mr. GLENN, the name of the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DURENBERGER] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2244, a bill to prevent and control infestations of the coastal and inland waters of the United States by the zebra mussel, and other nonindigenous aquatic nuance species.

S. 2365

At the request of Mr. DECONCINI, the name of the Senator from Maryland [Ms. MIKULSKI] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2365, a bill to amend the Controlled Substances Act to prohibit advertisements intended to promote or facilitate the distribution or transfer of a schedule I controlled substance.

S. 2384

At the request of Mr. BOREN, the names of the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. LOTT], and the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN] were added as cosponsors of S. 2384, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 with respect to the treatment of certain real estate activities under the limitations on losses from passive activities.

S. 2526

At the request of Mr. BOSCHWITZ, the name of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LIEBERMAN] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2526, a bill to establish a program to improve access by small and large private businesses to technical information and expertise within the Federal Government and selected States.

S. 2555

At the request of Mr. CRANSTON, the name of the Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2555, a bill to amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act by designating a segment of the Lower Merced River in California as a component of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 88

At the request of Mr. BAUCUS, his name was added as a cosponsor of Senate Joint Resolution 88, a joint resolution to establish that it is the policy of the United States to reduce the generation of carbon dioxide and for other purposes.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 195

At the request of Mr. D'AMATO, the names of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. THURMOND] and the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. PELL] were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 195, a joint resolution proclaiming Christopher Columbus to be an honorary citizen of the United States.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 286

At the request of Mr. RIEGLE, the names of the Senator from California [Mr. WILSON], the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DURENBERGER], the Senator from Arizona [Mr. DECONCINI], and the Senator from Hawaii [Mr. INOUYE] were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 286, a joint resolution to designate the week beginning May 6, 1990, as "National Correctional Officers Week."

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 292

At the request of Mr. PELL, the names of the Senator from Montana [Mr. BURNS], the Senator from New York [Mr. D'AMATO], and the Senator from Alaska [Mr. MURKOWSKI] were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 292, a joint resolution to designate the year 1991 as the "Year of the Lifetime Reader."

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 294

At the request of Mr. PELL, the names of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. HATFIELD], the Senator from Kansas [Mr. DOLE], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. SIMPSON], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. NUNN], and the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. CHAFEE] were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 294, a joint resolution to designate May 4, 1990, as "Department of Education Day."

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 295

At the request of Mr. DANFORTH, the names of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PRESSLER] and the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI] were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 295, a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States to prohibit the Supreme Court or any inferior court of the United States from ordering the laying or increasing of taxes.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 301

At the request of Mr. PELL, the names of the Senator from Washington [Mr. ADAMS] and the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. COCHRAN] were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 301, a joint resolution designating October 1990 as "National Breast Cancer Awareness Month."

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 99

At the request of Mr. PRYOR, the names of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], the Senator from New York [Mr. MOYNIHAN], and the Senator from Maine [Mr. MITCHELL] were added as cosponsors of Senate Concurrent Resolution 99, a concurrent resolution expressing the sense of the Congress concerning the 25th anniversary of the Older Americans Act of 1965.

SENATE RESOLUTION 231

At the request of Mr. BRADLEY, the names of the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ROCKEFELLER], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY], and the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DURENBERGER] were added as cosponsors of Senate Resolution 231, a resolution urging the submission of the Convention on the Rights of the Child to the Senate for its advice and consent to ratification.

SENATE RESOLUTION 276

At the request of Mr. RIEGLE, the names of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WALLOP] and the Senator from Maryland [Ms. MIKULSKI] were added as cosponsors of Senate Resolution 276, a resolution expressing the sense of the Senate regarding the actions of the Soviet Union toward Lithuania.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 125—RELATIVE TO ADEQUATE FUNDING FOR LONG-TERM HEALTH CARE

Mr. COHEN submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 125

Whereas 1,700,000 Americans currently receive long-term health care services in the Nation's 19,100 nursing homes;

Whereas the medicare program pays 5 percent of these nursing home costs and the medicaid program pays 40 percent;

Whereas the national expenditure for nursing home care in 1987 was $40,600,000,000 or 9 percent of the total personal health care expenditure of $447,000,000,000;

Whereas the portion of the United States population that is over age 65 will double in the next 50 years, and the portion over age 85 will quadruple;

Whereas the current nursing personnel shortage is expected to intensify for the foreseeable future and the demand for long-term care nursing personnel by nursing homes is expected to increase by more than 130 percent by the year 2000;

Whereas the acuity level of nursing residents has risen steadily since the introduction of the Medicare Prospective Payment System, thereby increasing the demands for both resources and personnel provided by nursing homes;

Whereas the Congress has significantly increased the facility standards of long-term care providers through both the medicare and medicaid programs; and

Whereas long-term care providers must receive the resources necessary to provide for these increased services in order that the ability of the nursing home profession to ensure a high level of quality care is not jeopardized: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That this concurrent resolution may be cited as the "Congressional Commitment to Long-Term Care Concurrent Resolution".

SEC. 2. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING ADEQUATE FUNDING FOR LONG-TERM CARE SERVICES.

It is the sense of the Congress that payments to long-term care providers made through the medicare and medicaid programs be adequate and sufficient so as to assure the providers' ability to maintain the highest quality of patient care in nursing homes.

● Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I rise today to submit a concurrent resolution expressing the sense of the Senate concerning adequate funding for long-term health care.

In 1986, my colleague on the Special Committee on Aging, Senator HEINZ, remarked that "for tens of thousands of our oldest, sickest citizens the hope for a haven of care becomes instead a sure descent into hell." Without adequate funding, Senator HEINZ' grim assessment will to be reality for too many of our older Americans.

The Bipartisan Commission on Comprehensive Health Care, also known as the Pepper Commission, recently issued recommendations concerning long-term care. Although the specific proposals may be open to debate, there is no question that, as America ages, long-term care will become increasingly important.

And it is already an essential service for many Americans today. Currently 1.7 million people live in the Nation's 19,000 nursing homes and other long-term care facilities. Many of these residents need help with activities we take for granted. Eating, dressing, and even getting out of bed can be insurmountable tasks for these individuals. They depend on the help of others, who are, more often than not, strangers. One-fifth of the nursing home residents have no living relatives. Eighty-five percent have either lost a spouse through death or divorce or simply never married. Without these long-term care facilities, these Americans would have no place to go.

The Pepper Commission estimates that 9 million Americans are currently in need of some kind of long-term care. By the year 2040—when the population over 65 will have doubled and the population over 85 will have quadrupled—the number of residents in nursing homes alone is expected to climb to 4.6 million.

At the same time, we face a well-documented shortage of nurses and other health care professionals. And nursing homes are no exception. As much as 90 percent of nursing home care is administered by nurse aides, most of whom are paid minimum wage. Of paid long-term care givers, one-third live at or near the poverty level. As a result, the turnover at some nursing homes is 75 percent a year. My own State of Maine offers some telling examples. There are 9,000 patients in Maine nursing homes. Estimates indicate that these homes provide the equivalent of 3 million days of care each year. At the same time, these homes are staffed by only 1,000 RN's and LPN's.

The increase in health care costs strain the budgets of these long-term care facilities. In 1987, the national expenditure for nursing home care was $40.6 billion, 9 percent of total personal health care expenditures. Fifty-four percent of the funds for these expenditures comes from Federal, State or local governments. Although families still bear close to half of these costs, it is clear that continued public assistance is critical to the survival of these nursing homes.

And so, Mr. President, I ask my colleagues in the Senate to join with me in expressing our sense that payments to long-term care providers made through Medicare and Medicaid Programs should be adequate and sufficient. The residents of these homes depend on the care givers and administrators. But they also depend on us. Adequate and sufficient funding will assure these people that their reliance and faith has not been misplaced.

In "Risking Old Age in America," Richard J. Margolis writes that the best nursing homes are run "on the humble premise that no resident, however venerable or vulnerable, is beyond reach of help or affection." The premise may be humble in its simplicity, but it is proud and enduring in its effect. Although adequate funding cannot guarantee a haven of care, inadequate funding almost certainly guarantees the opposite.

As we review the support from Medicare and Medicaid for these facilities, we have a duty to be certain that the quality of care is not jeopardized by underfunding. We have a duty to be sure the hope of haven is not a descent to hell. And we have a duty to act on our own humble premise: that the oldest and sickest Americans are still human beings in need of human care and compassion.●

SENATE RESOLUTION 278—AUTHORIZING PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS AND REPRESENTATION BY THE SENATE LEGAL COUNSEL

Mr. MITCHELL (for himself and Mr. DOLE) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

SENATE RESOLUTION 278

Whereas, in the case of United States v. Barnett, No. 89 Cr. 699, pending in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, defendant Charles D. Barnett has caused the issuance of subpoenas for certain documents within the custody and control of the Select Committee on Intelligence;

Whereas, pursuant to sections 703(a) and 704(a)(2) of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, 2 U.S.C. 288b(a) and 288c(a)(2) (1988), the Senate may direct its counsel to represent committees of the Senate with respect to subpoenas issued to them;

Whereas, by the privileges of the Senate of the United States and Rule XI of the Standing Rules of the Senate, no evidence under the control or in the possession of the Senate may, by the judicial process, be taken from such control or possession but by permission of the Senate;

Whereas, when it appears that evidence under the control or in the possession of the Senate is needed for use in any court for the promotion of justice, the Senate will take such action as will promote the ends of justice consistent with the privileges of the Senate;

Whereas, certain of the documents requested have been classified in the interests of national security: Now, therefore be it

Resolved, That the Senate Legal Counsel is directed to represent the Select Committee on Intelligence in the case of United States v. Barnett, No. 89 Cr. 699 (S.D.N.Y).

SEC. 2. The Chairman and Vice Chairman of the Select Committee on Intelligence are authorized to provide under appropriate security controls copies of relevant documents in the custody and control of the Committee which are responsive to subpoenas in the case of United States v. Barnett, except concerning matters for which a privilege should be asserted.

AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED

MISCELLANEOUS AMENDMENTS TO INDIAN LAWS

INOUYE AMENDMENT NO. 1574

Mr. MITCHELL (for Mr. INOUYE) proposed an amendment to the bill (S. 1846) to make miscellaneous amendments to Indian laws, and for other purposes, as follows:

On page 17, line 11, strike out "section 2" and insert in lieu thereof "sections 2 and 17".

On page 17, line 12, immediately after "462", insert "and 477".

On page 17, between lines 22 and 23, insert the following:

(c) Section 17 of the Act of June 18, 1934 (25 U.S.C. 477), is amended—

(1) by striking out "by at least one-third of the adult Indians," and inserting in lieu thereof "by any tribe,";

(2) by striking out "at a special election by a majority vote of the adult Indians living on the reservation" and inserting in lieu thereof "by the governing body of such tribe";

(3) by striking out "ten years any of the land" and inserting in lieu thereof "twenty-five years any trust or restricted lands".

On page 18, beginning with line 3, strike out all through line 5 on page 22.

On page 22, line 6, strike out "SEC. 8." and insert in lieu thereof "SEC. 5.".

On page 25, line 10, strike out the comma and insert in lieu thereof "or a school operated under the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988,".

On page 25, line 18, immediately after the word "school", insert a comma and the following: "a school operated uder the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988,".

On page 25, line 19, immediately after "programs" insert a comma and the following: "except that funds appropriated for implementation of this section shall be used only to supply the amount of the grant required to be provided by this section".

On page 25, beginning with line 20, strike out all through line 15 on page 26 and insert the following:

(g)(1) Paragraph (2) of subsection 5205(a) of the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2504(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) to the extent requested by such Indian tribe or tribal organization, the total amount of funds provided from operations and maintenance accounts and, notwithstanding section 105 of the Indian Self-Determination Act (25 U.S.C. 450j), or any other provision of law, other facilities accounts for such schools for such fiscal year (including but not limited to all those referenced under section 1126(d) of the Education Amendments of 1978, or any other law), and".

(2) Subsection (b) of section 5205 of the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2504(b)) is amended by adding the following new paragraph:

"(4) Notwithstanding the provision of paragraph 5204(a)(2) of the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2503(a)(21)), with respect to funds from facilities improvement and repair, alteration and renovation (major or minor), health and safety, or new construction accounts included in the grant under such paragraph (a)(2), the grantee shall maintain a separate account for such funds and shall, at the end of the period designated for the work covered by the funds received, render a separate accounting of the work done and the funds used to the Secretary. Funds received from these accounts may only be used for the purposes for which they were appropriated and for the work encompassed by the application or submission under which they were received. Where the appropriations measure or the application submission does not stipulate a period for the work covered by the funds so designated, the Secretary and the grantee shall consult and determine such a period prior to the transfer of funds: Provided, That such period may be extended upon mutual agreement.".

On page 26, line 16, strike out "SEC. 9." and insert in lieu thereof "SEC. 6.".

On page 27, line 3, strike out "SEC. 10." and insert in lieu thereof "SEC. 7.".

On page 27, beginning with line 22, strike out all through line 2 on page 28 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

SEC. 8. Section 3(l) of the White Earth Reservation Land Settlement Act of 1985 (25 U.S.C. 331, note) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(not including laws related to spousal allowance and maintenance payments)" immediately after "inheritance laws of Minnesota in effect on March 26, 1986", and

On page 28, beginning with line 24, strike out all through line 4 on page 29.

On page 29, line 5, strike out "SEC. 13." and insert in lieu therof "SEC. 9.".

On page 30, beginning with line 4, strike out all through line 11 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

(4) by adding at the end of subsection (a) of section 14 the following new sentence: "The Yurok Transition Team, or any individual thereon, shall not be named as a defendant or otherwise joined in any suit in which a claim is made arising out of this subsection.".

On page 30, after line 11, add the following:

SEC. 10. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to retain collections from the public in payment for goods and services provided by the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Such collections shall be credited to the appropriation account against which obligations were incurred in providing such goods and services.

SEC. 11. There is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Health and Human Services, Administration for Native Americans, $1,000,000 for the purpose of conducting a feasibility study for the establishment of a National Center for Native American Studies and Policy Development.

SEC. 12. (a) The following proviso in title I of the Act of June 24, 1967 (81 Stat. 59), under the heading "Office of the Solicitor", is repealed: "Provided, That hereafter hearing officers appointed for Indian probate work need not be appointed pursuant to the Administrative Procedures Act (60 Stat. 237), as amended".

(b) Hearing officers heretofore appointed to preside over Indian probate proceedings pursuant to the proviso repealed by subsection (a), having met the qualifications required for appointment pursuant to section 3105 of title 5, United States Code, shall be deemed to have been appointed pursuant to that section.

(c) The first sentence of section 1 of the Act of June 25, 1910 (36 Stat. 855; 25 U.S.C. 372), is amended by deleting "his decision thereon shall be final and conclusive" and inserting in lieu thereof "his decisions shall be subject to judicial review to the same extent as determinations rendered under section 2 of this Act".

SEC. 13. Notwithstanding the Act of March 7, 1928 (45 Stat. 210–211), and the Act of August 7, 1946 (60 Stat. 895–896), the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to allocate not to exceed $2,000,000 from power revenues available to the San Carlos Irrigation Project to pay for the operation and maintenance charges associated with the delivery of 30,000 acre-feet of water from the Central Arizona Project to the San Carlos Irrigation Project.

VETERANS COMPENSATION COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENT ACT

CRANSTON (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1575

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. CRANSTON (for himself, Mr. GRAHAM, and Mr. DECONCINI) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them to the bill (S. 2100) to increase the rates of compensation for veterans with service-connected disabilities and the rates of dependency and indemnity compensation for the survivors of certain disabled veterans; to amend title 38, United States Code, to improve veterans' compensation, health care, insurance, and housing programs, and to provide for transitional group residences for veterans recovering from substance-abuse disabilities; and for other purposes, as follows:

On page 16, after line 17, add the following new section:

SEC. . EXPANSION OF EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING INFORMATION PROGRAM.

(a) PROGRAM EXPANSION.—In order to address more effectively the needs of increasing numbers of members of the Armed Forces being separated from active duty, and notwithstanding section 408(b) of the Veterans' Benefits Amendments of 1989 (38 U.S.C. 2000 note), the Secretary of Labor (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary") may expand the pilot program provided for in section 408 of that Act so as to furnish employment and training information and services under that program in more than 10 geographically dispersed States. Any expansion of the pilot program shall be made subject to subsection (b).

(b) REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary may expand the pilot program referred to in subsection (a) only if the Secretary determines, after consultation with the Secretary of Veterans Affairs and the Secretary of Defense, that—

(1) the program has been successful in providing beneficial information and training to members separated from the Armed Forces;

(2) the expansion is necessary to address more effectively an increase in the number of such members who will be separated from the Armed Forces in the future;

(3) the program has received sufficient funds, personnel, and other resources from the Departments of Labor, Defense, and Veterans Affairs to achieve the purposes for which the program was established;

(4) the program, if expanded, will continue to receive such sufficient funds, personnel, and other resources to achieve the purposes for which the program was established; and

(5) the expansion will not interfere with the provision of services or other benefits to eligible veterans and other eligible recipients of such services of benefits.

(c) NOTIFICATION TO COMMITTEES ON VETERANS' AFFAIRS.—Not less than 60 days before initiating any expansion under this section, the Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives a report regarding the expansion. The report shall specify the location of the site or sites designated for such expansion and set forth the bases for the determinations made under subsection (b).

SEC. 2. UTILIZATION OF VETERANS ORGANIZATIONS.

Section 408(c) of the Veterans' Benefits Amendments of 1989 (38 U.S.C. 2000 note) is amended to read as follows:

"(c) RESOURCES.—(1) The Secretary of Labor shall request resources and participation necessary to support the pilot program referred to in this section from (A) the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, and (B) to the maximum extent feasible, from representatives of veterans' service organizations. The Secretary of Labor shall provide for the coordination of the resources and participation so provided.

"(2) The Secretary shall utilize disabled veterans' outreach program specialists or local veterans' employment representatives, to the maximum extent feasible, to furnish employment and training information and services under the pilot program.".

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, as chairman of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, I have today submitted an amendment to S. 2100, the proposed Veterans Compensation Cost-of-Living Adjustment Act of 1990, to authorize under certain circumstances expansion of the pilot program of transition assistance services established in section 408 of the Veterans' Benefits Amendments of 1989 (Public Law 101–237), enacted on December 18, 1989. This pilot program, which is scheduled to begin operation on May 21, is designed to furnish active-duty personnel with employment and training assistance and information during the 180-day period leading up to their separation from the Armed Forces.

Joining me in submitting this measure are Senators BOB GRAHAM and DENNIS DECONCINI, members of our committee who worked closely with me in developing the original legislation.

Section 408 of Public Law 101–237 requires, during the 3-year period that began on January 1, 1990, the Secretary of Labor, in conjunction with the Secretary of Veterans Affairs and the Secretary of Defense, to conduct such a pilot program—known as the transition assistance program [TAP]—in not more than 10 geographically dispersed States in which the Secretary determines that employment and training services to eligible veterans will not be unduly limited by the provision of such services to members of the Armed Forces under the pilot program.

SUMMARY OF PROVISIONS

Our legislation would revise the pilot program so as to:

First, authorize the Secretary of Labor to expand the TAP to more than ten geographically dispersed States, but only if the Secretary determines, after consultation with the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, that the program has been successful in providing beneficial information and training to those who were about to be separated from the Armed Forces; that the expansion is necessary to meet more effectively the needs of increasing numbers of those who will be separating in the future; that the program has received sufficient contributions of funds, personnel, and other resources from the Departments of Labor [DOL], Defense [DOD], and Veterans Affairs [VA] and, if expanded, will continue to receive sufficient resources from the three departments; and that expansion will not interfere with the provision of services or other benefits to eligible veterans.

Second, require the Secretary of Labor to provide both congressional Committees on Veterans' Affairs with 60 days' advance notice of any expansion, including the location of the sites and the bases on which the determinations were made.

Third, require the Secretary of Labor to request participation in the program and additional resources necessary for it from DOD and VA and, to the maximum extent feasible, representatives of veterans' service organizations, and coordinate the resources that are provided.

DISCUSSION

Mr. President, I remain convinced that this pilot concept of testing a transition-assistance program is the most effective means of ensuring the best long-term use of limited resources. However, the pilot program enacted last December was fashioned last summer before it became so clear—as it has more recently as a result of the dramatic changes in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union—that our military personnel's needs will likely decrease very substantially in the coming years. As a consequence, the 10-State limitation may soon prove too restrictive, leaving thousands of men and women in need of timely assistance that could shorten the time between separation from military service and gainful civilian employment. Thus, I believe the Secretary of Labor should under certain circumstances be able to expand the pilot program in order to meet the growing need for this kind of transition assistance.

Mr. President, on May 1, 1990, Senator THURMOND introduced, at the request of the Department of Labor, administration-proposed legislation, S. 2546, which would make service members who are within 180 days of being released from active duty eligible for employment and training assistance from DOL-funded disabled veterans' outreach program specialists [DVOP's] and local veterans' employment representatives [LVER's]. Under current law, DVOP's and LVER's are generally charged with responsibilities only for veterans and certain dependents or survivors of service-disabled veterans. Thus, this approach would greatly increase the DVOP's and LVER's functions without any increase in funding for additional personnel.

Mr. President, I am concerned that we try to ensure that DOL's Veterans Employment and Training Service [VETS]—and, in particular, DOL-funded DVOP's and LVER's—not be called upon to bear a disproportionate share of the costs of the TAP or its expansion. The resources of VETs and of the DVOP and LVER programs have not been calculated on the basis of their routinely taking on sole responsibility for this effort and their doing so could result in a substantial reduction in the resources available to carry out their primary responsibilities—meeting the employment assistance needs of veterans.

Moreover, I believe that the Department of Defense [DOD] has a clear responsibility to assist its own personnel who are nearing release—especially premature release—from active duty. Similarly, VA has an obligation, under section 241(3) of title 38, to help in providing such personnel with information about the education, training, health care, readjustment, and other opportunities and benefits, and, for those who are disabled, the vocational rehabilitation benefits that will be available to them as veterans.

To address this concern, our measure would add to the basic pilot program provisions a requirement for the Secretary of Labor to request and coordinate contributions of needed resources from DOD and VA in support of the program. These provisions would, of course, apply to any expansion of the program.

In addition, the legislation would condition expansion of the program on a determination by the Secretary of Labor that DOD and VA have provided sufficient support for the pilot program as currently authorized and will provide such support for the expanded program. Our measure would also require the Secretary, to the maximum extent feasible, to seek the assistance of veterans' service organizations in carrying out the program.

Mr. President, our legislation would strike a balance between preserving the programmatic development and evaluation features of a pilot program and meeting an increasing demand with finite resources by authorizing the Secretary of Labor to expand the section 408 pilot program to more than 10 geographically dispersed States, but only if the Secretary, after consultation with the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, makes the determinations that I have described that are designed to protect the basic mission and purpose of the VETS' existing program responsibilities.

Under our proposal, if these determinations are made, the Secretary of Labor must, at least 60 days before carrying out an expansion, submit to both congressional Committees on Veterans' Affairs a report specifying the location of the sites and the reasons for the expansion and the underlying determinations.

CONCLUSION

Mr. President, I believe that our legislation would meet a Federal responsibility to offer transition assistance to those who are being separated from military service without abandoning the obligation to assist those wo have already been discharged and, in most instances, served their full tour of duty. It is also designed to provide an orderly and efficient means of meeting that responsibility together with a fair approach for distributing the resource burden among the three Federal departments involved. I urge my colleagues to join us in providing for an orderly, careful expansion of this program as part of our national transition to a more peaceful international climate.

In order to move forward rapidly with this legislation, I have placed it on the agenda for the committee's May 11 hearing on various veterans' employment, education, and home-loan issues and bills.

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEES TO MEET

SUBCOMMITTEE ON CONVENTIONAL FORCES AND ALLIANCE DEFENSE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Armed Services Committee Subcommittee on Conventional Forces and Alliance Defense be authorized to meet in open session on Wednesday, May 2, 1990, at 2 p.m., in SR-222, to receive testimony on the Navy's force structure and modernization plans and in general review of S. 2171, the Department of Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 1991.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs be allowed to meet during the session of the Senate Wednesday, May 2, 1990 at 10 a.m. to conduct a markup of S. 566, the National Affordable Housing Act; and S. 2388, the Yosemite National Park Centennial Medal Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON CONSUMER

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Consumer, of the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on May 2, 1990, at 9:30 a.m. on telemarketing fraud and other types of consumer fraud, specifically S. 2494 and S. 1441.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON WATER RESOURCES, TRANSPORTATION, AND INFRASTRUCTURE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Water Resources, Transportation, and Infrastructure, Committee on Environment and Public Works, be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Wednesday, May 2, beginning at 9:30 a.m., to conduct a hearing on S. 1140, a bill which provides that Federal facilities meet Federal and State environmental laws and requirements and clarifies that such facilities must comply with such environmental laws and requirements.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON LABOR AND HUMAN RESOURCES

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Labor and Human Resources be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Wednesday, May 2, at 9:30 a.m., for a hearing on Drug Treatment in the Criminal Justice System.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Wednesday, May 2, 1990 at 2 p.m. to hold a hearing on the nominaton of Stanley F. Birch, Jr., to be U.S. circuit court judge for the Eleventh Circuit, John D. Rainey to be U.S. district court judge for the Southern District of Texas, Richard W. Vollmer, Jr., to be U.S. district court judge for the Southern District of Alabama, and Samuel G. Wilson, to be U.S. district court judge for the Western District of Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

A TRIBUTE TO THE CAPITALS

● Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, today I have had the pleasure of trading places with George Michael, the outstanding Washington sports broadcaster. Both on Channel 4 here in Washington, and as the host of his nationally syndicated show, "George Michael's Sports Machine," he defines excellence in sports coverage. Today, though, he is finding out what it takes to be a U.S. Senator. He's doing a great job—in fact, I have made him promise not to run for my seat. It is my pleasure to request that the following tribute to the Washington Capitals professional ice hockey team be included in the RECORD.

A TRIBUTE TO THE CAPITALS

(By George Michael)

The boys of Summer have taken the field, but this year the excitement is still on ice—and in the rink. In 1990, the Men of May are the outstanding Washington Capitals. Always a tremendous team, they have skated through years of winning seasons. Struggling earlier this year, they pulled together and, with outstanding contributions from veterans and young players alike, they brought the Patrick Division Championship home to Largo, Maryland.

We have shared their thrilling victories, the pain of their injuries and the heart-pounding excitement of sudden-death goals. Throughout the cpaital region, in Maryland, and especially in Baltimore—the home of the Caps partner team, the Skipjacks—we have been inspired by the best season yet. Thanks to everyone at the Capitals for a great job. Now, let us bring the Stanley Cup to Washington!●

HUMAN CAPITAL: A CHILLING FABLE FOR AMERICA

● Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, many of us have been increasingly concerned about the lack of education, low standard of discipline and sullenness displayed by some young people these days. Scholars, pastors, politicians, and others have been speaking and writing about this concern for a long time. I have myself been increasingly perplexed by the realization that suicide has emerged as a leading cause of death among young people; student SAT scores are now 75 points lower than 1963; 57 percent of high school students use illegal drugs, some on a regular basis. And increasing numbers of students are carrying pistols and other weapons to school—and using them.

So I was particularly interested in Ben Stein's insightful article "Human Capital: A Chilling Fable for America," which appeared in the January issue of Business Month. I commend it to my colleagues.

The article follows:

HUMAN CAPITAL: A CHILLING FABLE FOR AMERICA

(By Ben Stein)

One day last month, after realizing that I had run out of file folders, I took myself down to the local drugstore—here in Point Dume, Malibu, California—to buy more. I quickly found what I needed, took a handful to the counter, and asked a male clerk, who looked to be in his late teens, how much they cost. "I don't know," he answered sullenly. "I guess about a buck each."

"A dollar for a file folder?" I asked. "I don't think that's right." The clerk shrugged.

I found another clerk—an older Asian woman—in the back of the store, and she told me the correct price was 12 cents each. I returned to the front counter, where a teenage girl had taken over the cash register. I counted the folders. "Twenty-three at 12 cents each," I said. "That's $2.76 before tax."

The young woman looked at me as if I had come down from Mars. "You did that in your head?" she asked in amazement. "How can you do that?"

"It's magic," I said.

"Really?" she asked.

"Really," I said.

No modestly well educated adult who comes into frequent contact with young Americans can fail to be truly upset by the experience. While they seem to be more genial and good-natured than ever, they are so ignorant—and so ignorant of their ignorance—that they literally terrify me. In a class of about 60 juniors and seniors at a "prestige" private college where I recently taught, not one student could consistently write a sentence without misspellings. Not one. Not one had heard of Adam Smith or knew who he was. Not one had read a word of The Communist Manifesto.

But this is just a tiny sliver of the problem. The ability to perform even the simplest computations is just a memory among most student I see, and their knowledge of world history or geography is zilch.

Moreover, there is a certain horrifying complacency about all this ignorance. It's an attitude that was summed up by a friend's bright, lazy 16-year-old son, who explained to me why he did not want to go to school at UCLA. "I don't want to have to compete with Asians," he said. "They work hard and know everything."

The fact is that the young man will have to compete with Asians whether he wants to or not. He cannot expect to live forever on the financial, material, and human capital that was accumulated by his forebears. At some not too distant point, the intellectual laziness of the typical American young person will seriously and negatively affect his or her way of life. It will also affect the safety, security, and prosperity of the rest of us Americans. A modern industrial state cannot function with a slothful, ignorant labor force. Aircraft crash on carrier decks. Cars break. Computers jam. That's it. No two ways about it. Gar nicht.

But I have more than criticism; I have a humble suggestion about how to make a start at explaining this to young Americans, a beginning at altering their attitudes and perhaps their behavior. Make a movie. Or maybe a series of movies or television shows that dramatize even to the illiterate just how difficult it was for America to get where it is and how easily it can all be lost. I offer the following fable.

As the story opens, our hero, young Kevin Hanley 1990, a 17-year-old high school senior in Anytown, U.S.A., is sulking in his room. He is upset because his parents have insisted that he stay home and study for his European-history test when he wants to go down to the shopping center to look for headphones for his portable compact-disc player. The book he has been forced to read—The Wealth of Nations—puts him to sleep. And in his sleep he dreams.

In his dream, it is 1835, and he is his own great, great great-grandfather at 17, a peon in County Kerry, Ireland. He lives in a sod hut, never clean. He sleeps next to a hog. He is always hungry. He scrounges all winter for food, and the potatoes he plants in summer die of blight. His greatest wish is to learn to read and write so that he might get a job as a clerk in the local parish. With steady wages, he would be able to feed himself and help his family. But the British, who rule this land, discourage education among the Irish. Also, Hanley's poverty allows no leisure for such luxuries. Without education and money, he is powerless—powerless to stop the British from taking away his father for Fenian activities, powerless when his sister is raped by a British soldier. His only hope lies in his children. If they are educated, they will have a better life.

Then Kevin Hanley 1990 dreams he is his own great-grandfather, Kevin Hanley 1928. He, too, is 17 years old, and he works in a steel mill in Pittsburgh. His father emigrated from Ireland and helped build the New York City subway. Kevin Hanley 1928 is far better off than either his father or his grandfather. He can read and write, which means he can follow the instructions for operating an open-hearth furnace and get a decent job. His own wages are incomparably better than anything his ancestors had in Ireland. Moreover, because he can read and write, he can vote; political power offers some legal protection.

Even so, Kevin Hanley 1928, too, believes real hope lies in the future generations. Kevin 1928 has already lost an eye to a spark from the blast furnaces, and he has cuts all over his body from flying debris. He knows that education is the key. He had to go to work before he could finish high school. His son will finish high school; he won't have to work in a factory.

Then Kevin Hanley of 1990 dreams that he is Kevin Hanley of 1945, his own grandfather, fighting on Iwo Jima against the world's most tenacious foe, the Japanese Army. He is always hot, always hungry, always scared. One night in a foxhole, he tells a buddy why he is there: "So my son and grandson can live in peace and security. When I get back, I'll work hard and send my son to college so he won't have to get killed in a union confrontation with the steel mill like my dad did. So he can live by his brains instead of his back."

Then Kevin Hanley of 1990 is his own father, Kevin Hanley of 1966, who studies all the time so he can get into college and then law school. He lives in a tract house in a new development. He has never seen anything but peace and plenty. He does not see why he should have to study so hard. He tells his girlfriend that when he has a son, he won't make him study all the time, as his father makes him.

At that point, Kevin Hanley 1990 wakes up somewhat shaken by his dream. But he also is relieved to be away from Ireland and Iwo Jima and the steel mill. He goes back to sleep.

When he dreams again, he is his own son, Kevin Hanley 2020. He lives in a virtual stockade. There is gunfire all day and all night. There is no rule of law for the working class. His whole generation forgot why there even was law, so there is none. They pay no attention to the political process, so government exists only to transfer even more wealth to the rich. It offers no services to the working class, especially no law enforcement.

Kevin 2020's father works as a janitor in a factory owned by the Japanese. Kevin Jr. works as a porter in a local hotel for wealthy Europeans and Asians. Public education stops at the sixth grade. There is no tax base to pay for decent schools. It has been a long time since Americans demanded a good education for their children.

An elite cadre of Americans who have worked to educate themselves have highly paid jobs working for the Europeans and Asians who dominate American life. The rest are either drones for foreign investors—who consider Americans inherently stupid and lazy, fit only for manual labor—or criminals who supply drugs to the numbed workers, or prostitutes for the wealthy foreigners.

The last person Kevin 1990 sees in his dream is his own grandson in 2050. Kevin 2050 lives in what is basically a favela, like one of the slums that were common in the Rio de Janeiro of 1990. There is no heat, no plumbing, no privacy. He lives by foraging scraps from the Japanese and European tourists who come to see the ruins of American cities and the great national parks reserved for them.

Kevin 2050 has no useful skills. Machines built in Japan and Taiwan do all the complex work, and there is little menial work to be done. All that remains is rifling through trash piles, stealing, selling drugs, and prostitution. Without education, without discipline, he cannot command even a subsistence wage.

In a word, he lives much as Kevin Hanley 1835 did in Ireland. But Kevin Hanley 2050 gets a lucky break. In his wanderings, he is befriended by a visiting Japanese anthropologist studying the decline of America. The man explains to Kevin how the world works. The boy learns that when a man has no money, education can supply the human capital necessary to start acquiring financial capital. Hard work, education, saving, and discipline can do anything. "This is how we rose from the ashes after you defeated us in a war 100 years ago."

"America defeated Japan in war?" asks Kevin 2050. He is astounded. He has never heard of it; it seems as impossible as Brazil defeating the U.S. would sound in 1990. Kevin 2050 vows that if he ever has children, he will make sure that they work and study and learn, that they discipline themselves unto the last generation.

"To be able to make a living by one's mind instead of by stealing," he says. "It would be a miracle. Some day, we could be like the Japanese."

When Kevin Hanley 1990 wakes up, there on the bed next to him is his TV remote control and his copy of The Wealth of Nations. He picks up the masterwork and opens it at random. "A man without the proper use of the intellectual faculties of a man is, if possible, even more contemptible than a coward and seems to be mutilated and deformed in a still more essential part of the character of human nature," says the passage he finds.

As he reads it, his father walks in the door. "All right, son," he says. "Let's go look at that stereo stuff."

"Sorry, Pop," Kevin 1990 says. "I have to study."

(Ben Stein is a lawyer, economist, writer, and actor in Los Angeles.)●

TRIBUTE TO ROBERTO RUIZ, TUCSON, AZ

● Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize Mr. Roberto Ruiz, president of Maya Construction Co. in my hometown, Tucson, AZ, who has been named as recipient of the 1990 Entrepreneurial Success Award for the State of Arizona by the Small Business Administration. This award honors businesses that began small and have grown into large businesses with the help of the SBA. Bob will be honored at a ceremony in Tucson on May 10, 1990, and I wanted to take this opportunity to show my appreciation for his accomplishments and service to my State.

Roberto Ruiz is a true American success story. Born in Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, Mr. Ruiz and his family immigrated to the United States while he was in high school. While attending the University of Arizona, Bob gained his U.S. citizenship before graduating in 1963 with a bachelor of science degree in civil engineering.

With the assistance of the SBA's 8(a) program, Bob and his talented wife Josefina have guided Maya Construction from a two-employee firm to one that currently employs over 350 people. Due to Bob's extraordinary skill and business savvy, Maya Construction has experienced phenomenal growth: from sales of $135,000 in 1979 to nearly $60 million in 1989. Maya Construction is currently the largest Hispanic-owned business in Arizona and in 1988 was listed as the 78th largest Hispanic-owned firm in the United States.

Bob Ruiz has received many awards for his achievements. In 1983 he was named as Small Businessperson of the Year for the State of Arizona, and Minority Contractor of the Year, by the SBA. In 1984 he was personally honored by President Reagan as part of his annual report on the state of small business. In 1986 he was again recognized by SBA, receiving the Administrator's Award for Excellence. Over the years, Maya has been recognized by many national organizations for entrepreneurial excellence.

What is equally impressive about Bob Ruiz is his willingness to serve as a role model for small and minority-owned businesses. Additionally, his activity in local civic and community activities is becoming legendary. Many worthy organizations have benefitted by Bob's generosity. His contributions include:

Providing scholarships for 25 adults who enroll at Pima Community College in programs that would lead to an associate degree in business administration.

Underwriting scholarships for two disadvantaged students at the University of Arizona yearly.

Serving for more than 6 years on the Pima County Private Industry Council as part of the Job Training Partnership Act.

Providing financial support to such worthy organizations as the El Rio Health Center, St. Ambrose Parish, American Youth Soccer, 4-H Scholarship Fund, Boys and Girls Club, Tucson Metropolitan Chamber of Commerce, U.S. Olympic Team, Tucson/Pima Arts Council, Arizona Sonora Desert Museum, Project PPEP, National Hispanic Aging Council, La Frontera Mental Health Center, Arizona Minority Bar Association, Chicanos Por La Causa, Tucson Little 500

Bicycle Classic, Catholic Foundation, Tucson Symphony Orchestra, Little League, Jane Goodall Institute for Wildlife Research, Arizona State University and the White House Commission on Presidential Scholars.

I am proud to call Bob Ruiz my friend. I offer my sincerest congratulations to this distinguished citizen of Arizona and commend him for this most prestigious and deserving honor.●

SENATE BUDGET COMMITTEE ACTION ON THE FISCAL YEAR 1991 BUDGET RESOLUTION

● Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I am disturbed and disappointed by the Senate Budget Committee's action this morning in reporting a budget resolution which, if approved, would direct a reduction from the CBO baseline of some $13 billion in defense outlays in fiscal year 1991.

A reduction of that magnitude in 1 year, which even exceeds the reduction called for in the House-passed resolution by $1½ billion, will ensure that hundreds of thousands of military and civilian personnel of the Department of Defense will be involuntarily separated. Rather than permitting the orderly restructuring of our military forces in response to changing world conditions, such a forced personnel reduction would guarantee a dramatic and chaotic reduction in our defense capabilities, not justified by the world situation.

Mr. President, we have today an All Volunteer Force. This force is made up of the highest quality personnel that we have had in our uniformed services in decades. A precipitious action today which results in the involuntary separation of thousands and thousands of these high-quality personnel could devastate the morale of the remaining forces and could adversely affect the positive image which our Armed Forces now enjoy. This could mean that for years to come we might be unable to recruit and retain such a high-quality volunteer force.

This proposed reduction in defense spending is not justified by changing defense needs, but rather is being driven by arbitrary deficit reduction actions and efforts to discredit the President's cautious but comprehensive judgments, as Commander-in-Chief, about restructuring our defense posture in the face of a changing threat.

Furthermore, the reconciliation instruction contained in the proposed resolution directing the Armed Services Committee to reduce military retirees cost-of-living adjustments below the level of inflation is a perfect example of a deficit reduction action which will not, and should not, be adopted by the Congress.

Mr. President, I intend to work vigorously, with other members of the Armed Services Committee, to amend this resolution on the floor of the Senate to make it more accurately reflect the judgments of the President, which are supported by the American people.

Specifically, I believe the American people support a more gradual decline in defense spending based on the world conditions as they actually exist. When, and if, the changes in the world continue on a favorable course, even greater savings can be made in the following years. However, the Budget Committee's resolution attempts to make the savings before the changes have occurred.

The President has properly reflected in his 1991 Defense request many of those changes which can produce savings this year. Working with the administration and together here on the floor of the Senate, perhaps we can find even greater savings this year.

But I do not believe the American people want, and I do not intend to voluntarily assist in, the helter-skelter dismantlement of our military forces which the proposed budget resolution would cause.●

HENDRIK HERTZBERG, SENIOR EDITOR OF THE NEW REPUBLIC, ENDORSES CONGRESSIONAL TERM LIMITATION

● Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, support for term limitation spans the political and ideological spectrum. The latest evidence is an excellent piece by Hendrik Hertzberg, senior editor of the New Republic.

Mr. Hertzberg is a Democrat, and perceives that term limitation could bring an end to the longstanding Democratic hegemony in Congress. I don't really see how anyone can make the case that term limitation would result in any substantial shift in the ratio between parties in the Congress. We would see new faces more often, but voting patterns would have to shift significantly to change party ratios, and I do not see how a term limit would promote such a shift.

Shifts in voting patterns are always debatable, and seldom fully understood. What is important is that although he perceives term limitation as opposed to his immediate self interest of Democratic control, he has the courage and intellectual honesty to endorse it for the more general good of Congress and the Nation.

Mr. Hertzberg's courage should be an example to us all. He has the vision to see the advantages of term limitation, and he endorses it fully. I think many Members of Congress can see the positive change term limitation would bring. I urge them to be courageous and sign on to Senate Joint Resolution 235.

I ask that Mr. Hertzberg's piece appear in the RECORD immediately following my remarks.

The article follows:

[From the New Republic, May 14, 1990]

TWELVE IS ENOUGH

(By Hendrik Hertzberg)

Before you automatically reject the proposal now making the rounds for a twelve-year limit for members of Congress as a dreadful idea—an anti-democratic, anti-political, mechanistic "reform" that like so many other "reforms" would most likely end up making things worse, a bit of mischievous tinkering with the precious Constitution that has served us so well for 200 years, a misguided gimmick that ignores the real problem (PACs, polls, gerrymandering, special interests, negative ads, cowardly politicians, ignorant citizens, whatever) and is probably nothing but a Republican plot anyway—before you agree with all these dismissals and turn your attention to more pressing matters, consider three numbers.

Number number one: 37.1. Yes, it's a voter turnout figure, the op-ed writer's best friend. This particular figure represents the percentage of Americans over-eighteen who bestirred themselves to go to the polls in 1986, the last time the citizenry was invited to vote for members of Congress without the added glitz of a presidential contest. Compared with the turnout in any other arguably democratic country—France, Nicaragua, Norway, Hungary, El Salvador, Israel, Turkey, Italy, Lithuania, you name it—this is pathetic. It was the lowest since 1926, not counting 1944 when World War II made voting inconvenient for large numbers of people. And the public's true interest in House elections is even lower. According to Congressional Quarterly's Rhodes Cook, if you factor out districts where there was a contest for governor or U.S. senator to lure people out, the turnout was a scandalous 27.6 percent. Only the most perverse elitists argue that this state of affairs is anything but a symptom of extreme political ill health.

Number number two: 98.3. This is the percentage of incumbent members of the House of Representatives who won their "races" for re-election in 1988, up from 98 percent flat in 1966. According to a recent study by David C. Huckabee of the Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress, this number has remained in the 90s since 1974, and it is currently the highest it has ever been since the middle of President Washington's first term. And because more incumbents now choose to run than ever before, the re-election rate for the House as a whole is now in the 90s, too—92.4 percent last time out, to be exact. In the 19th century this figure tendered to hover somewhere between 40 percent and 70 percent, once dropping to as low as 24 percent (in 1842); it hit the 70s after World War I and has been climbing more or less steadily ever since.

The 98.3 figure actually understates the political status of the House. Of the 409 incumbents who ran for reelection, six were defeated in November. But five of these had been tainted by one sort of scandal or another. So the grand total of representatives who lost their seats as a consequence of what we normally think of as politics—that is, a process in which the electorate chooses between competing sets of programs and policies—was exactly one.

Number number three: 36. This is how many years a single party, the Democrats, has controlled the lower house of the national legislature of the United States. By contrast, the British House of Commons has changed hands four times since 1954, the French Chamber of Deputies three times, the West German Bundestag five times, the Canadian House of Commons five times, and the Indian Lok Sabha three times. When it comes to one-party legislative dominance in serious countries, only Japan, Mexico, South Africa, and the Soviet Union are even in our league. And in the last two, unlike in the United States, the ruling party is a pretty good bet to lose the next election. No moral equivalence intended, of course. Or deserved.

In the light of number two and three, the wonder is that number number one is so high. In the overwhelming majority of congressional districts, voting is increasingly an irrational act. Why bother, when 85 percent of the incumbents are getting more than 60 percent of the vote in their districts, when the average incumbent is getting 73.5 percent, when sixty-three members are returned with Brezhnevian majorities exceeding 94 percent? Except in the handful of districts where there are open seats or close races, voting may still make sense as a civic sacrament—as a way of refreshing one's soul with a sense of belonging to a democratic community—but it makes no sense as a form of political action. Better to spend the hour or so it takes to vote writing checks and sending them off to candidates in contested districts.

Against this background, the idea of a twelve-year limit begins to acquire a certain logic. Such proposals are neither new nor flakily marginal. A limit on congressional service was considered at the founding constitutional convention (which laid it aside as "entering too much into detail"), and the idea has won the support, over the decades, of a bipartisan list of luminaries including Abraham Lincoln, Harry Truman, Dwight D. Eisenhower, and John F. Kennedy. The current campaign for a constitutional amendment that would limit service to six two-year terms for House members and two six-year terms for senators (with an exemption for the present crew of incumbents, of course) is led by Senators Gordon Humphrey, Republican of New Hampshire, and Dennis DeConcini, Democrat of Arizona. Their ten co-sponsors span the Senate's ideological spectrum, from Jake Garn on the right to Nancy Kassebaum in the center to Tom Daschle on the left.

Even so, truth in packaging compels the admission that the current push is basically a Republican scam. All but three of the Senate co-sponsors are Republicans. The twelve-year limit was endorsed in the 1988 Republican platform. The letterhead pressure group promoting the idea, something called Americans to Limit Congressional Terms, is run out of a Republican political consultant's office and consists mostly of Republican excongressmen and state legislators (though it does include a few Democrats, of whom the most distinguished is former eight-term Representative Donald M. Fraser, now mayor of Minneapolis). Republicans are understandably eager to support any lunatic notion that holds out the promise of helping them break the Democratic stranglehold on Capitol Hill. But this just might be one of those rare cases where the narrow self-interest of the Republican Party is congruent with the public good.

The arguments for the term limit are surprisingly persuasive, especially where the House is concerned. Almost all of them are variations on a single theme: breaking the Gordian knot of entrenched incumbency, which distorts our democracy from the polling place clear up to the Senate and (especially) House chambers. Out in that fabled land beyond the Beltway, the term limit would mean that at least once every twelve years (and probably more frequently), every citizen would get a fighting chance to vote in a genuinely political congressional election, which is to say one that would turn not on the goodies that good old Congressman Thing has procured for the district of the Social Security checks he has expedited or the campaign funds he has raised or the newsletters he has franked, but rather on the competing political visions and programs of parties and candidates. But the most interesting, and salutary, effects of the limit would be the ways in which it would change the political ecology of Congress itself.

A twelve-year limit would necessarily bring an end to the much-reformed but still pervasive and undemocratic rule of seniority. The House Speaker, the chairmen of important committees, and the other potentates of Congress have long been elevated by a decades-long, quasifeudal process of favor-trading, personal alliance-building, ladder-climbing, and "getting along by going along." The term limit would leave Congress little choice but to elect its chiefs democratically, on the basis of the policies and the leadership qualities of the candidates. Like the Speakers of many of our state legislatures, these leaders would tend to be vigorous men and women in their forties and fifties—people in the mold of Bill Gray, Stephen Solarz, and Henry Hyde. The Dingells and Rostenkowskis would remain where they belong, on the back benches or in private life. This would be an important gain. And the frequent turnover of leaders—one who served more than six years would be a rarity—would be a spur both to brisk accomplishment and to attentiveness to the concerns and needs of the country.

The seniority system occasionally produces good leaders as well as bad ones, but there is no denying that it is grossly biased in favor of the most politically sluggish and unchanging parts of the nation. A swing district—one marked by close elections, and the robust debate and clamorous participation that close elections bring—has a hard time keeping somebody in office long enough to survive the glacial process by which congressional power is accumulated. It is precisely such districts that are most likely to elect representatives alive to the cutting-edge problems that most urgently require action. Systematically disempowering these districts and the people representing them, as the current arrangement so efficiently does, is insane.

A Congress invigorated by frequent infusions of new blood would be a more responsive, more democratic, more varied place. So would a Congress whose majority regularly changed from one party to the other, which a term limit would unquestionably promote. However bad this might be for the short-term partisan interests of Democrats like me, it would be good for the long-term interests of the country—and the party, too. Critics of the term limit idea argue that it would "weaken" Congress; and so it would, but in ways that would strengthen both its most useful functions and democratic governance in general. The one-party Congress has become a world unto itself, and the long period of Republican control of the presidency and Democratic control of Congress has produced an insidious mentality on Capitol Hill. The leaders of the Democratic congressional majority, veterans of decades of supremacy in their own little universe, no longer constitute an opposition. They conceive of themselves as ins, not outs—as leaders of one-half of a permanent coalition government. They may imagine that their own fiefdoms are secure, but their party is reaping almost all of the penalties of incumbency and almost none of the benefits. The foundations of Democratic congressional dominance are being relentlessly undermined, and once the structure topples, as eventually it must, rebuilding it will seem as hopeless a task as destroying it does now. A Congress shaped by a term limit would have a different and healthier mentality. During periods when it was controlled by the party that also controls the White House, it would be energetic in pursuit of that party's program; when in opposition, it would—for a change, and just as energetically—oppose.●

TRIBUTE TO DR. CHARLES E. HORTON, PRESIDENT OF PHYSICIANS FOR PEACE

● Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, while on a recent visit to Norfolk, VA, I had the pleasure of renewing my acquaintance with a remarkable man and an outstanding Virginian, Dr. Charles E. Horton, M.D. Today, I wish to pay tribute to Dr. Horton and to bring to the attention of my colleagues and the American people the truly humanitarian efforts of Dr. Horton and the organization which he founded and which he serves as president, Physicians for Peace.

Dr. Charles Horton began his medical career when he entered the University of Virginia Medical School in 1944. He then received his general surgery training at George Washington University here in Washington, DC. While a medical student, he went to Norfolk, VA, to deliver babies at the old King's Daughter's Clinic and in the homes of needy patients. Following his plastic surgery residency at Duke University from 1952-55, Dr. Horton returned permanently to the Norfolk area. Since that time, Dr. Horton has played a major role in the growth and development of the area generally and, in particular, in the establishment of Tidewater Virginia as a great medical center. He has contributed to the growth and development of his city by serving as a director of the Chamber of Commerce, the president of the Norfolk Rotary Club, a director of the Boy Scouts of America, the United Cancer Society, and the Navy League, and on the vestry of his church, St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

In the field of medicine, Dr. Horton served as the president of the Seaboard Medical Association, as the secretary and then president of the Educational Foundation of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons, as the president of the Norfolk General Hospital Staff, and as the chairman and secretary of the American Board of Plastic Surgery. Additionally, Dr. Horton was one of the original planners and supporters of the Eastern Virginia Medical School in Norfolk. He was the first chairman of the Department of Plastic Surgery at that school. He resigned that position some years later in order to become the director of the Eastern Virginia Graduate School of Medicine, a position in which he served for 10 years. He presently is a professor of plastic surgery and the program director of the plastic surgery residency training program at the school.

During his career, Dr. Horton has also delivered over 100 visiting professor lectures at medical schools and hospitals in the United States and in more than 60 foreign countries, has produced 18 movies and television tapes, and has authored over 250 published book chapters, journals and articles. He is an honorary member of medical societies representing the Philippines, Syria, Jordan, Turkey, Israel, Canada, and South Africa and is an honorary member of the Royal College of Surgeons in Scotland. He is the recipient of an honorary fellowship in the American Association of Plastic Surgeons, being only one of 12 plastic surgeons from all over the world now holding that fellowship. He is the recipient of the Citation of Merit from the American Arab Association, and in 1989, he was awarded the Brotherhood Citation from the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Mr. President, as one might expect from a man as accomplished as Dr. Horton, he has for the past few years been quietly working for peace and understanding in some of the most troubled areas of the world. This work is being done through the organization which Dr. Horton founded and which he serves as president, Physicians for Peace. Since its founding, Physicians for Peace has organized groups of volunteer doctors and nurses to work with doctors in Syria, Jordan, Israel, Turkey, Greece, and Egypt. Physicians for Peace promotes medical cooperation through education, understanding of cultures and regional health care problems, and by providing medical care directly to needy patients. Many of those wounded in the continuing violence in Lebanon have been cared for by Physicians for Peace medical teams. Most recently, Physicians for Peace, under the leadership of Dr. Horton, conducted a mission to Panama from April 1 to 11, 1990. The American team included 12 physicians and two nurses. During this mission, surgery was performed in three Panamanian hospitals, new techniques were taught and demonstrated to Panamanian doctors, and nursing instruction and lectures were provided.

Senior officials in our Government have recognized the valuable work being done by Dr. Horton and Physicians for Peace. In April 1988, following several missions to the Middle East by Physicians for Peace, Secretary of State George Schultz wrote the following:

> I am greatly impressed not only by your team's dedication but also by the warm response received from the people you served. * * * I am convinced that humanitarian service such as that provided by Physicians for Peace can be a great contribution to eventual peace in the region.

Mr. President, I too am impressed and believe that the humanitarian service of Physicians for Peace and of Dr. Charles Horton are perfect examples of the American spirit.

Mr. President, it has been an honor and privilege for me today to call to the attention of the Senate the work of an outstanding Virginian and American, Dr. Charles Horton, and to say to Dr. Horton, on behalf of all Americans, thank you for your service.●

THE URGENT NEED FOR BRENT MARKET REGULATION

● Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, on April 20, 1990, the Wall Street Journal reported that Judge William C. Conner of the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York issued a decision in the case of Transnor versus BP which has important implications for America's crucial oil supplies. In essence, Judge Conner, one of the most highly respected judges in the State of New York, ruled that there was evidence that several large oil companies conspired to manipulate prices on the Brent oil-trading market downward in 1986 as part of a tax fraud scheme. If these allegations are true, this price-rigging scheme caused billions of dollars in economic damage to the oil-producing States and the American economy in general.

A subsequent article published in the April 28 issue of the Economist describes the Brent market as the world's biggest oil-trading forum; crucial to determination of world oil prices because it sets the world "marker" price for oil, against which many producing countries set their oil prices. I would like to include both of these articles in the RECORD.

In his decision, Judge Conner describes the Brent market as an "unregulated and unguaranteed form of futures trading" with two of the market principal trading centers being New York and Houston. Consequently, Judge Conner found that this market came within the jurisdiction of the Commodity Exchange Act.

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission is charged with the duty of using the regulatory powers granted by the Commodity Exchange Act to maintain the integrity of the prices of essential commodities like crude oil by preventing and punishing futures market manipulations of the kind alleged in the Transnor case. Over 2 years ago, I spoke on the floor of the Senate concerning the need for regulation of the Brent market. Despite the importance of this market, little has been done. Consequently, it is shocking to read that the CFTC is actively considering taking a "no action" position on Brent market trading. This course is reportedly being considered in response to intense lobbying by U.S. Brent market traders. A no action decision potentially subordinates the long-term need of the American economy to be protected from oil-price manipulation, to the short-term desire of a few powerful large oil companies to avoid liability for illegal futures trading.

Downward manipulation of prices on the Brent market would have had two devastating effects on the U.S. economy:

First, it would cause many U.S. oil fields to shut down because they are no longer profitable, causing the loss of millions of jobs, and enormous damage to the economies of oil-producing States; and

Second, it would cause imports of foreign oil to soar, increasing our trade deficit and increasing the power of foreign oil producers over America's vital oil supplies.

These things actually happened after the oil price crash of early 1986 which, in the Transnor case before Judge Conner, is alleged to be the result of Brent market manipulation by big oil companies.

Judge Conner's recent decision highlights once again the critical need to bring the Brent market under strict U.S. Government control, to eliminate the price-distorting manipulations to which, according to the Economist, this crucial market has too often been subject in the past.

The CFTC should act now to protect U.S. oil supplies from price manipulations by bringing the Brent market within the control of long overdue, effective regulation.

[The articles follow:]

[From the Economist, Apr. 28, 1990]

OIL TRADING: BRENT BLUES

Ask most people the price of oil and, chances are, they will quote the going rate for a barrel of North Sea Brent, set on the Brent market. Brent is an informal "forward" market, used by many of its 50 or so participants (mainly oil companies, Wall Street investment banks and independent traders) for hedging and speculation. For each of the cargoes of crude oil that form the market's physical basis, numerous paper contracts are traded. There were some $30 billion-worth last year.

Brent is crucial because it sets the world "marker" price for oil (which still accounts for 38 percent of total energy needs). Many oil-producing countries now price at least some of their oil relative to Brent. Most of the oil imported into Europe in 1989—worth over $40 billion—was priced this way.

Over the past four years Brent has run into a number of problems: the market has, for instance, regularly been cornered, pushing up world oil prices by as much as $3 a barrel. Now Brent is facing its stiffest test. It may not emerge intact.

On April 18th, at a Manhattan federal court, Judge William Conner cleared the way for a lawsuit accusing Exxon (the world's second-biggest oil company) and Conoco (the energy arm of Du Pont) of rigging prices in the Brent market. If the defendants lose their case, which comes to trial on May 21st, the Brent marker could collapse. A number of big oil companies could find themselves besieged by new lawsuits lodged by everyone from independent oil traders to the British government.

The plaintiff in the trial, a Bermuda-based oil-trading company called Transnor, alleges that Exxon and Conoco, along with Royal Dutch/Shell and BP (which have both settled out of court), conspired to cause a fall in oil prices between late 1985 and March 1986. In December 1985 Transnor purchased two 600,000-barrel cargoes of North Sea oil on the Brent market, at an average price of $24.50 a barrel, for delivery in March 1986. During the intervening period oil prices tumbled—entirely as a result, it has always been assumed, of an OPEC price war. By March 1986 a barrel of oil cost as little as $13. Transnor refused to take delivery, and sued the four oil companies. Shortly afterwards its oil-trading operations went bust. The firm is now claiming some $230m in damages.

When Transnor launched its case, the big oil companies initially sought a dismissal on the grounds that Transnor was a foreign trader. Judge Conner denied their motion, and a subsequent request for permission to appeal. Shell and BP settled shortly afterwards. The remaining defendants then moved for a summary judgment, a motion denied by Judge Conner last week. His ruling, in essence, was that there is sufficient evidence of liability for a trial to take place.

Judge Conner found Brent to be "primarily a US market", having significant impact on American trade. That means Transnor has standing under American antitrust laws to pursue its claim that it suffered from anti-competitive activity on the market. But the nub of Transnor's case is its allegation that Exxon and Conoco (along with the defendants which have settled) conspired in a process known as "tax spinning"—multiple oil sales and purchases which, at the time, gave oil-producing firms the option, at some future date, to use the lowest-priced of those deals to establish their tax liabilities. The defendants deny conspiracy.

The reason crude-oil prices fell so far so fast in late 1985 and 1986, says Transnor, was only partly due to OPEC's squabbling. Mostly, the oil-trader alleges, it was caused by an oil-company conspiracy to evade taxes. Lower crude-oil prices make refining more profitable, especially when refined oil-product prices fall more slowly than crude prices. By shifting profits from Brent crude-oil production (taxed by Britain at 87 percent) to oil refining and marketing (taxed at 40 percent), Transnor alleges, oil companies' tax liabilities were cut still further. The Manhattan court concluded that tax spins "feigned a non-existent market position and potentially misled other Brent market traders".

Transnor's deals in the Brent market, ruled Judge Conner, constituted futures (not forward) contracts. If this ruling is upheld at trial (or if it is left standing by an out-of-court-settlement), America's Commodity Futures Trading Commission would be compelled to impose tough controls on trading by American firms on Brent—and perhaps even ban trading altogether. Britain's Association of Futures Brokers and Dealers, the Brent market's regulator, will also have to take further action to bring the market to heel. At present it only requires adherence to a feeble code of conduct.

The Transnor case has scared Brent's traders. Several along with a number of oil companies, have stopped doing business with firms trading out of America. Many have quit the Brent market altogether, hedging instead on America's NYMEX and London's International Petroleum Exchange, the two big official oil-futures exchanges. And still others are wondering what their tax liabilities might be if Transnor wins; one independent consultant reckons that spinning may have deprived Britain's taxmen of up to $3 a barrel.

[From the Wall Street Journal (London Edition), Apr. 20, 1990]

JUDGE CLEARS THE WAY FOR LAWSUIT, ACCUSING EXXON AND CONOCO OF RIGGING OIL PRICES

In federal court in Manhattan, Judge William Conner rejected the oil companies' motions to dismiss the suit, which was filed in 1986 by Transnor Ltd., an oil trader based in Bermuda. The suit accuses Exxon Corp., Conoco Inc. and a Conoco subsidiary of conspiring to depress certain crude oil prices in order to evade taxes in Britain. It seeks damages totaling about $261 million, stemming from losses Transnor says it suffered because of the lower prices.

Transnor accused the companies of forcing down the price of Brent oil, a widely traded North Sea crude oil, by selling cargoes of the oil at below-market prices. Transnor had bought two cargoes of Brent oil, but then refused to accept delivery after the market value plunged. Transnor alleges that after forcing the oil prices down, the oil companies used a trading technique to increase profit margins on the refined oil products. Britain taxes refinery profits at a lower rate than crude oil products.

Exxon and Conoco argued that the case should be thrown out on several grounds—including their claim that a conspiracy is unlikely because they would have hurt themselves by depressing oil prices. Judge Conner, however, said it is plausible that the alleged pricing scheme's tax benefits and other advantages could have offset the companies' lower crude oil revenue.

The oil companies, which previously have said the suit is without merit, also claimed that the case should be dismissed because the Brent oil market is an international market. They argued that a U.S. court has no jurisdiction in such disputes. But Judge Conner said that most of the trading in oil contracts is done in New York and Boston.

A spokesman for Exxon said the company was disappointed that Judge Conner refused to dismiss the case. Officials at Conoco, a unit of DuPont Co., couldn't be reached for comment.

Edward Swan, an attorney for Transnor, said the trial is set to begin May 21.●

MEASURES INDEFINITELY POSTPONED AND MEASURES TRANSFERRED TO THE "SUBJECTS ON THE TABLE" PORTION OF THE CALENDAR

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Calendar items Nos. 220 and 291 be indefinitely postponed. I further ask unanimous consent that Calendar items Nos. 396 and 404 be transferred to the "Subjects on the Table" portion of the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MISCELLANEOUS AMENDMENTS TO INDIAN LAWS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar item No. 420, S. 1846, regarding miscellanous amendments to Indian laws.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1846) to make miscellaneous amendments to Indian laws, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection, to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 1846) to make miscellaneous amendments to Indian laws, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Select Committee on Indian Affairs, with an amendment to strike all after the enacting clause, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

SECTION 1. (a) Public Law 101-581 is amended—

(1) by striking out "shall take effect upon enactment of this Act" in section 203 and inserting in lieu thereof "shall take effect upon enactment of this Act if the plan has not taken effect before the enactment of this Act";

(2) by striking out "section 201" in subsections (a) and (c) of section 212 and inserting in lieu thereof "section 206";

(3) by striking out section 213;

(4) by striking out "section 3" in section 702(a) and inserting in lieu thereof "section 703";

(5) by striking out "section 602" in the last sentence of paragraph (1) of section 703(b) and inserting in lieu thereof "section 702"; and

(6) by striking out "section 602" in section 703(c) and inserting in lieu thereof "section 702".

(b) Subsection (c) of the first section of the Act of July 28, 1955 (69 Stat. 392; 25 U.S.C. 608(c)) is amended to read as follows:

"(c) Lands and interests in lands acquired by the Secretary pursuant to subsection (a)(1) and for the benefit of the Yakima Indian Nation pursuant to section 5 of the Act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 985; 25 U.S.C. 465) shall be held in trust by the United States for the benefit of the Yakima Indian Nation."

SEC. 2. (a) The Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450, et seq.) is amended—

(1) by inserting a comma after "688')" in section 4(e) (25 U.S.C. 450b(e)),

(2) by striking out "the appropriate the Secretary" in section 4(j) and inserting in lieu thereof "the appropriate Secretary",

(3) by striking out "pursuant to this Act" each place it appears in section 4(j) and inserting in lieu thereof "under title I of this Act",

(4) by striking out "the Single Audit Act of 1984 (98 Stat. 2327, 31 U.S.C. 7501 et seq.)," in section 5(a)(2) (25 U.S.C. 450c(a)(2)) and inserting in lieu thereof "chapter 75 of title 31, United States Code",

(5) by striking out "the Federal Grant and Cooperative Agreement Act of 1977 (Public Law 95-224; 92 Stat. 3)" in section 9 (25 U.S.C. 450e-1) and inserting in lieu thereof "chapter 63 of title 31, United States Code",

(6) by striking out "an Indian appointed" in section 104(m) (25 U.S.C. 450i(m)) and inserting in lieu thereof "an Indian (as defined in section 19 of the Act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 988; 25 U.S.C. 479)) appointed (except temporary appointments)",

(7) by striking out "sub-contracts in such cases where the tribal contractor has subcontracted the activity" in section 105(a) (25 U.S.C. 450j(a)) and inserting in lieu thereof "subcontracts of such a construction contract",

(8) by striking out "the Single Agency Audit Act of 1984 (chapter 75 of title 31, United States Code)" in section 106(f) (25 U.S.C. 450j-1(f)) and inserting in lieu thereof "chapter 75 of title 31, United States Code",

(9) by striking out "agency personnel" in section 106(i) (25 U.S.C. 450j-1(i)) and inserting in lieu thereof "agency personnel (area personnel in the Navajo Area and in the case of Indian tribes not served by an agency)", and

(10) by striking out "providing notice and hearing" in section 109 (25 U.S.C. 450m) and inserting in lieu thereof "providing notice and a hearing".

(b) Subsection (b) of section 110 of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450m-1(b)) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) The Secretary shall not revise or amend a self-determination contract with a tribal organization without the tribal organization's consent.".

(c) Subparagraph (C) of section 3371(2) of title 5, United States Code, is amended by striking out "section 4(m)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 4".

SEC. 3. (a) Notwithstanding section 18 of the Act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 988; 25 U.S.C. 478), section 2 of that Act (25 U.S.C. 462) shall apply to—

(1) all Indian tribes,

(2) all lands held in trust by the United States for Indians, and

(3) all lands owned by Indians that are subject to a restriction imposed by the United States on alienation of the rights of the Indians in the lands.

(b) The proviso of section 13 of the Act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 986; 25 U.S.C. 473) is amended by striking out "sections 2, 4," and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 4,".

SEC. 4. Subsection (c) of section 1 of Public Law 100-425 is amended by striking out "NE¼E½,NW¼" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "NE¼,E½NW¼".

SEC. 5. Subsection (e) of section 4213 of the Indian Alcohol and Substance Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act of 1986 (25 U.S.C. 2433(e)) is amended—

(1) by inserting ", or purchase or lease of land or facilities for," after "renovation of" in paragraph (1),

(2) by striking out "subject to contracting" in paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof "subject to contracting or available for grants", and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(4) Funds appropriated under the authority of this subsection may be used by any Indian tribe or tribal organization to purchase or lease any land or facilities if—

"(A) the Secretary of the Interior determines that no Federal land or facilities are reasonably available for emergency shelters or halfway houses described in subsection (a) to serve the needs of that Indian tribe or tribal organization, and

"(B) the Indian tribe or tribal organization enters into an agreement with the Secretary of the Interior that requires the Indian tribe or tribal organization to use the land or facilities for emergency shelters or half-way houses described in subsection (a).

"(5) Nothing in this Act may be construed—

"(A) to limit the authority for contracts with, or grants to, Indian tribes or tribal organizations under the Indian Self-Determination Act for the construction, improvement, renovation, operation, repair, land acquisition, or maintenance of tribal juvenile detention facilities, emergency shelters, or half-way houses, or

"(B) to require a lease of tribal facilities to the United States to qualify for financial assistance for the facilities under this or any other Act.".

SEC. 6. (a) Section 317(a) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247b) is amended by inserting ", to Native Hawaiian health centers (as defined in section 8(4) of the Native Hawaiian Health Care Act of 1988)," before "and to other public entities".

(b)(1) Section 318(a) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247c(a)) is amended by inserting ", to Native Hawaiian health centers (as defined in section 8(4) of the Native Hawaiian Health Care Act of 1988)," before "and to scientific".

(2) Section 318(b) of the Public Health Service Act is amended by inserting "Native Hawaiian health centers (as defined in section 8(4) of the Native Hawaiian Health Care Act of 1988)," before "and any other public".

(c) Section 332(a)(2)(A) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 254e(a)(2)(A) is amended by inserting "Native Hawaiian health centers (as defined in section 8(4) of the Native Hawaiian Health Care Act of 1988)," before "and community health".

(d) Section 1001(a) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300(a)) is amended by inserting "and Native Hawaiian health centers (as defined in section 8(4) of the Native Hawaiian Health Care Act of 1988)" before "to assist in the establishment".

(e) Section 1703(a)(1) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300u-2(a)(1)) is amended by inserting "Native Hawaiian health centers (as defined in section 8(4) of the Native Hawaiian Health Care Act of 1988)," before "and other appropriate".

SEC. 7. Title I of the Indian Health Care Improvement Act (25 U.S.C. 1601, et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"ADVANCED TRAINING FOR PSYCHOLOGISTS

"SEC. 118. (a)(1) The Secretary, acting through the Service, shall provide grants to institutions of higher education and health care facilities to enable such institutions and facilities to establish programs to enable psychologists who—

"(A) have a doctorate degree in psychology, and

"(B) agree to perform the service obligations described in subsection (b), to pursue advanced training or research in psychology.

"(2) Each program established under a grant provided under paragraph (1) shall provide psychologists who agree to perform the service obligation described in subsection (b) scholarships and stipends for living expenses incurred while the phychologists participate in the program.

"(b) An individual who participates in a program established under a grant provided under subsection (a) shall incur an obligation to serve in an Indian health program (as defined in section 108(a)(2)), or in a Native Hawaiian health center (as defined in section 8(4) of the Native Hawaiian Health Care Act of 1988 (42 U.S.C. 11707(4))) for a period of obligated service equal to at least the period of time during which the individual participates in the program established under a grant provided under subsection (a). In the event that the individual fails to complete such obligated service, the individual shall be subject to penalties prescribed by the Secretary which provide appropriate recoupment for the loss of the remaining obligated service of such individual.

"(c) The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"(d) There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year $1,000,000 to carry out the provisions of this section.".

SEC. 8. (a) Paragraph (5) of section 1139 of the Education Amendments of 1978 (25 U.S.C. 2019) is amended by striking out "104(a)" and inserting in lieu thereof "103(a)".

(b) Subsection (a) of section 5209 of the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2508) is amended by striking out "105" and inserting in lieu thereof "104".

(c) Subparagraph (C) of section 5314(e)(1) of the Indian Education Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2604(e)(1)(C)) is amended to read as follows:

"(C) No local educational agency may be held liable to the United States, or be otherwise penalized, by reason of the findings of any audit that relate to the date of completion, or the date of submission, of any forms used to establish, before April 28, 1988, a child's eligibility for entitlement under the Indian Elementary and Secondary School Assistance Act.".

(d)(1) Subsection (c) of section 1128 of the Education Amendments of 1978 (25 U.S.C. 2008(c)) is amended—

(A) by striking out "0.133 percent" in paragraph (3)(A) and inserting in lieu thereof "0.2 percent",

(B) by striking out "$4,000" in paragraph (3)(C)(i) and inserting in lieu thereof "$5,000",

(C) by striking out clause (ii) of paragraph (3)(C) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(ii) the lesser of—

"(I) $15,000, or

"(II) 1 percent of such allotted funds,".

(D) by striking out paragraph (2), and

(E) by redesignating paragraphs (3), (4), and (5) as paragraphs (2), (3), and (4), respectively.

(2) Section 5324(c)(4)(B) of the Indian Education Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2624(c)(4)(B)) is amended by striking out "section 1128(c)(4)(A)(i)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 1128(c)(3)(A)(i)".

(e)(1) Subsection (b) of section 5504 of Public Law 100-297 (25 U.S.C. 2001, note) is amended—

(A) by inserting "the Executive Director of the National Advisory Council on Indian Education and of" after "which shall consist of" in paragraph (1),

(B) by inserting "(but not the Executive Director of the National Advisory Council on Indian Education)" after "Task Force" in paragraph (3), and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7) Sums appropriated under the authority of section 5508 shall not be used to pay the salaries of employees of the Department of the Interior or the Department of Education who are assigned as staff to the Task Force; but the salaries of such employees shall be paid out of funds appropriated to the employing Department under the authority of other provisions of law.".

(2) Subsection (a) of section 5506 of Public Law 100-297 is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (5),

(B) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (6) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and", and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7) the chairman of the National Advisory Council on Indian Education.".

(3) Section 5508 of Public Law 100-297 is amended by striking out "1988, 1989, and 1990" and inserting in lieu thereof "1990, 1991, and 1992".

"(f) Subsection (d) of section 1128A of the Education Amendments of 1978 (25 U.S.C. 2008a(d)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) In applying this section and section 106 of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act with respect to an Indian tribe organization that—

"(A) receives funds under this section for administrative costs incurred in operating a contract school, and

"(B) operates one or more other programs under a contract or grant provided under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act, the Secretary shall ensure that the Indian tribe or tribal organization is provided with the full amount of the administrative costs, and of the indirect costs, that are associated with operating the contract school and all of such other programs.".

(g) Subsection (b) of section 5205 of the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2504(b)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if an Indian tribe or tribal organization requests a grant under this part for a tribally controlled school, funds for the operation and maintenance of the school shall be included in any grant provided under this part to the Indian tribe or tribal organization in an amount equal to the amount of operation and maintenance that would be expended for the school under any circumstances for the entire fiscal year for which the grant is provided. The inclusion of such operation and maintenance funds in the grant—

"(A) shall not be subject to any condition or restriction that is not specifically provided under this section, and

"(B) shall not be affected by, or depend upon, the previous existence or nonexistence of a contract between the Secretary and the Indian tribe or tribal organization for such operation and maintenance funds (or any portion of such funds).

SEC. 9. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the term "class II gaming" includes, for purposes of applying Public Law 100-497 with respect to any Indian tribe located in the State of Wisconsin or the State of Montana, during the 1-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act, any gaming described in section 4(7)(B)(ii) of Public Law 100-497 that was legally operated on Indian lands on or before May 1, 1988, if the Indian tribe having jurisdiction over the lands on which such gaming was operated made a request, by no later than November 16, 1988, to the State in which such gaming is operated to negotiate a Tribal-State compact under section 11(d)(3) of Public Law 100-497.

SEC. 10. Section 9 of the Lac Vieux Desert Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians Act (25 U.S.C. 1300h-7) is amended—

(1) by striking out "Notwithstanding" and inserting in lieu thereof "(a) Notwithstanding", and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) The Secretary shall accept as voters eligible to vote on any amendments to the constitution of the Keweenaw Bay Indian Community—

"(1) all those persons who were deemed eligible by the Keweenaw Bay Indian Community to vote in the most recent election for the Tribal Council, and

"(2) any other person certified by the Keweenaw Bay Indian Community Tribal Council as—

"(A) a member of the Keweenaw Bay Indian Community, and

"(B) eligible to vote in any election for the Tribal Council.".

SEC. 11. The White Earth Reservation Land Settlement Act of 1985 (25 U.S.C. 331, note) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(other than laws relating to spousal allowance and maintenance payments)" after "Minnesota law", and also after "laws of Minnesota", in section 3(i), and

(2) by adding at the end of section 7 the following new subsection:

"(e)(1) After publication of the second list under subsection (c), the Secretary may, at any time, add allotments or interests to that second list if the Secretary determines that the additional allotment or interest falls within the provisions of section 5(c) or subsection (a) or (b) of section 4.

"(2) The Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register notice of any additions made under paragraph (1) to the second list published under subsection (c).

"(3) Any determination made by the Secretary to add an allotment or interest under paragraph (1) to the second list published under subsection (c) may be judicially reviewed in accordance with chapter 7 of title 5, United States Code, within 90 days after the date on which notice of such determination is published in the Federal Register under paragraph (2). Any legal action challenging such a determination that is not filed within such 90-day period shall be forever barred. Exclusive jurisdiction over any legal action challenging such a determination is vested in the United States District Court for the District of Minnesota.".

SEC. 12. (a) Paragraph (4) of section 8 of the Native Hawaiian Health Care Act of 1988 (42 U.S.C. 11707(4)) is amended by inserting "or professionals" after "practitioners" each place it appears.

(b) Subtitle D of title II of Public Law 100-690 is repealed.

SEC. 13. The Hoopa-Yurok Settlement Act (25 U.S.C. 1300i, et seq.) is amended—

(1) by adding at the end of paragraph (2) of section (5)(a) the following new sentence: "Children under age 10 on the date they applied for the Settlement Roll who have lived all their lives on the Joint Reservation or the Hoopa Valley or Yurok Reservations, and who otherwise meet the requirements of this section except they lack 10 years of Reservation residence, shall be included on the Settlement Roll.",

(2) by adding at the end of subsection (d) of section 5 the following new paragraph:

"(4) For the sole purpose of preparing the Settlement Roll under this section, the Yurok Transition Team and the Hoopa Valley Business Council may review applications, make recommendations which the Secretary shall accept unless conflicting or erroneous, and may appeal the Secretary's decisions concerning the Settlement Roll. Full disclosure of relevant records shall be made to the Team and to the Council notwithstanding any other provision of law.".

(3) by striking out "counseling," in section (9)(a)(3) and inserting in lieu thereof "counseling and assistance, shall", and

(4) by adding at the end of subsection (a) of section 9 the following new paragraph:

"(4) For purposes of section 14, and any other lawsuit challenging this Act or any action taken under this Act, the Yurok Transition Team shall be a Federal instrumentality and the United States will defend and hold harmless, individually and collectively, the Yurok Transition Team.".

AMENDMENT NO. 1574

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, in behalf of Senator INOUYE, I send a technical amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Maine [Mr. MITCHELL], for Mr. INOUYE, proposes an amendment numbered 1574.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the clerk dispensing with reading of the amendment?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 17, line 11, strike out "section 2" and insert in lieu thereof "sections 2 and 17".

On page 17, line 12, immediately after "462", insert "and 477".

On page 17, between lines 22 and 23, insert the following:

(c) Section 17 of the Act of June 18, 1934 (25 U.S.C. 477), is amended—

(1) by striking out "by at least one-third of the adult Indians," and inserting in lieu thereof "by any tribe,";

(2) by striking out "at a special election by a majority vote of the adult Indians living on the reservation" and inserting in lieu thereof "by the governing body of such tribe";

(3) by striking out "ten years any of the land" and inserting in lieu thereof "twenty-five years any trust or restricted lands".

On page 18, beginning with line 3, strike out all through line 5 on page 22.

On page 22, line 6, strike out "SEC. 8." and insert in lieu thereof "SEC. 5.".

On page 25, line 10, strike out the comma and insert in lieu thereof "or a school operated under the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988,".

On page 25, line 18, immediately after the word "school", insert a comma and the following: "a school operated uder the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988,".

On page 25, line 19, immediately after "programs" insert a comma and the following: "except that funds appropriated for implementation of this section shall be used only to supply the amount of the grant required to be provided by this section".

On page 25, beginning with line 20, strike out all through line 15 on page 26 and insert the following:

(g)(1) Paragraph (2) of subsection 5205(a) fo the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2504(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) to the extent requested by such Indian tribe or tribal organization, the total amount of funds provided from operations and maintenance accounts and, notwithstanding section 105 of the Indian Self-Determination Act (25 U.S.C. 450j), or any other provision of law, other facilities accounts for such schools for such fiscal year (including but not limited to all those referenced under section 1126(d) of the Education Amendments of 1978, or any other law), and".

(2) Subsection (b) of section 5205 of the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2504(b)) is amended by adding the following new paragraph:

"(4) Notwithstanding the provision of paragraph 5204(a)(2) of the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2503(a)(21)), with respect to funds from faciliites improvement and repair, alteration and renovation (major or minor), health and safety, or new construction accounts included in the grant under such paragraph (a)(2), the grantee shall maintain a separate account for such funds and shall, at the end of the period designated for the work covered by the funds received, render a separate accounting of the work done and the funds used to the Secretary. Funds received from these accounts may only be used for the purposes for which they were appropriated and for the work encompassed by the application or submission under which they were received. Where the appropriations measure or the application submission does not stipulate a period for the work covered by the funds so designated, the Secretary and the grantee shall consult and determine such a period prior to the transfer of funds: Provided, That such period may be extended upon mutual agreement.".

On page 26, line 16, strike out "SEC. 9." and insert in lieu thereof "Sec. 6.".

On page 27, line 3, strike out "SEC. 10." and insert in lieu thereof "SEC. 7.".

On page 27, beginning with line 22, strike out all through line 2 on page 28 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

SEC. 8. Section 3(l) of the White Earth Reservation Land Settlement Act of 1985 (25 U.S.C. 331, note) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(not including laws related to spousal allowance and maintenance payments)" immediately after "inheritance laws of Minnesota in effect on March 26, 1986", and

On page 28, beginning with line 24, strike out all through line 4 on page 29.

On page 29, line 5, strike out "SEC. 13." and insert in lieu thereof "SEC. 9.".

On page 30, beginning with line 4, strike out all through line 11 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

(4) by adding at the end of subsection (a) of section 14 the following new sentence: "The Yurok Transition Team, or any individual thereon, shall not be named as a defendant or otherwise joined in any suit in which a claim is made arising out of this subsection.".

On page 30, after line 11, add the following:

SEC. 10. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to retain collections from the public in payment for goods and services provided by the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Such collections shall be credited to the appropriation account against which obligations were incurred in providing such goods and services.

SEC. 11. There is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Health and Human Services, Administration for Native Americans, $1,000,000 for the purpose of conducting a feasibility study for the establishment of a National Center for Native American Studies and Policy Development.

SEC. 12. (a) The following proviso in title I of the Act of June 24, 1967 (81 Stat. 59), under the heading "Office of the Solicitor", is repealed: "Provided, That hereafter hearing officers appointed for Indian probate work need not be appointed pursuant to the Administrative Procedures Act (60 Stat. 237), as amended".

(b) Hearing officers heretofore appointed to preside over Indian probate proceedings pursuant to the proviso repealed by subsection (a), having met the qualifications required for appointment pursuant to section 3105 of title 5, United States Code, shall be deemed to have been appointed pursuant to that section.

(c) The first sentence of section 1 of the Act of June 25, 1910 (36 Stat. 855; 25 U.S.C. 372), is amended by deleting "his decision thereon shall be final and conclusive" and inserting in lieu thereof "his decisions shall be subject to judicial review to the same extent as determinations rendered under section 2 of this Act".

SEC. 13. Notwithstanding the Act of March 7, 1928 (45 Stat. 210–211), and the Act of August 7, 1946 (60 Stat. 895–896), the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to allocate not to exceed $2,000,000 from power revenues available to the San Carlos Irrigation Project to pay for the operation and maintenance charges associated with the delivery of 30,000 acre-feet of water from the Central Arizona Project to the San Carlos Irrigation Project.

Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, I ask for passage of S. 1846, a bill making technical corrections to certain Indian laws. Since this bill was adopted by the Select Committee on Indian Affairs on November 14, 1989, several new changes have needed to be made, including deletion of four sections. These changes are included in the committee amendments that I ask be adopted as part of the bill.

Mr. President, during the 100th Congress, over 30 new statutes on Indian matters were enacted into law. The issues were wide-ranging and some of the legislation was quite extensive. As with any new laws or extensive amendments, technical errors such as incorrect references or citations occur. This bill, S. 1846, corrects errors that appeared in some laws passed in the 100th Congress and, in some cases, errors that occurred in earlier years but that were only recently discovered. Certain of the amendments in the bill are simply intended to better fulfill or clarify the intent of the Congress or to facilitate the administration of the law.

Besides technical corrections to the Indian Reorganization Act amendments and the 1988 amendments to the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act, the bill also amends the 1988 Indian Education Act to provide that the executive director and chairman of the National Advisory Council on Indian Education will participate in the White House Conference on Indian Education. S. 1846 also extends the grace period during which certain tribes in the States of Montana and Wisconsin may continue to operate games as they seek to complete tribal/State agreements under the 1988 Indian Gaming Regulatory Act.

Other acts that are amended are the act to establish a reservation for the Grande Ronde Community of Oregon, the Keweenaw Bay Indian Community Amendment to the Lac Vieux Desert Band Act, the White Earth Reservation Land Settlement Act, and the Hoopa-Yurok Settlement Act.

Finally, the bill provides authority for an appropriation to the Secretary of Health and Human Services for the Administration for Native Americans for the conduct of a feasibility study by the George Washington University for the establishment of a National Center for Native American Studies and Policy Development. This national center would serve as a school of government for tribal governmental leaders, would establish a curriculum in Indian law and Indian affairs, would serve as center for the development of Federal-Indian policy, and would provide a national data center and clearinghouse for historical and cultural information on native peoples.

The bill also contains a section that clarifies the status of the probate judges employed by the Interior Department's Office of Hearings and Appeals to preside over, hear, and resolve heirship claims to Indian allotted lands. Further, the provisions of this section clarify the availability of review of final decisions of the Office of Hearings and Appeals in the Federal courts, consistent with the provisions of the Administrative Procedures Act.

Lastly, the bill clarifies the authority of the Secretary of the Interior to implement, within existing Indian irrigation project power revenues, the provisions of agreements between Federal, State and tribal governments to ensure adequate supplies of water on the San Carlos Apache and Gila River Indian Reservations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Hawaii.

The amendment (No. 1574) was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed, as follows:

S. 1846

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. (a) Public Law 100-581 is amended—

(1) by striking out "shall take effect upon enactment of this Act" in section 203 and inserting in lieu thereof "shall take effect upon enactment of this Act if the plan has not taken effect before the enactment of this Act";

(2) by striking out "section 201" in subsections (a) and (c) of section 212 and inserting in lieu thereof "section 206";

(3) by striking out section 213;

(4) by striking out "section 3" in section 720(a) and inserting in lieu thereof "section 703";

(5) by striking out "section 602" in the last sentence of paragraph (1) of section 703(b) and inserting in lieu thereof "section 702"; and

(6) by striking out "section 602" in section 703(c) and inserting in lieu thereof "section 702".

(b) Subsection (c) of the first section of the Act of July 28, 1955 (69 Stat. 392; 25 U.S.C. 608(c)) is amended to read as follows:

"(c) Lands and interests in lands acquired by the Secretary pursuant to subsection (a)(1) and for the benefit of the Yakima Indian Nation pursuant to section 5 of the Act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 985; 25 U.S.C. 465) shall be held in trust by the United States for the benefit of the Yakima Indian Nation.".

SEC. 2. (a) The Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450, et seq.) is amended—

(1) by inserting a comma after "688)" in section 4(e) (25 U.S.C. 450b(e)),

(2) by striking out "the appropriate the Secretary" in section 4(j) and inserting in lieu thereof "the appropriate Secretary",

(3) by striking out "pursuant to this Act" each place it appears in section 4(j) and inserting in lieu thereof "under title I of this Act",

(4) by striking out "the Single Audit Act of 1984 (98 Stat. 2327, 31 U.S.C. 7501 et seq.)," in section 5(a)(2) (25 U.S.C. 450c(a)(2)) and inserting in lieu thereof "chapter 75 of title 31, United States Code",

(5) by striking out "the Federal Grant and Cooperative Agreement Act of 1977 (Public Law 95-224; 92 Stat. 3)" in section 9 (25 U.S.C. 450e-1) and inserting in lieu thereof "chapter 63 of title 31, United States Code",

(6) by striking out "an Indian appointed" in section 104(m) (25 U.S.C. 450i(m)) and inserting in lieu thereof "an Indian (as defined in section 19 of the Act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 988; 25 U.S.C. 479)) appointed (except temporary appointments)",

(7) by striking out "sub-contracts in such cases where the tribal contractor has subcontracted the activity" in section 105(a) (25 U.S.C. 450j(a)) and inserting in lieu thereof "subcontracts of such a construction contract",

(8) by striking out "the Single Agency Audit Act of 1984 (chapter 75 of title 31, United States Code)" in section 106(f) (25 U.S.C. 450j-1(f)) and inserting in lieu thereof "chapter 75 of title 31, United States Code",

(9) by striking out "agency personnel" in section 106(i) (25 U.S.C. 450j-1(i)) and inserting in lieu thereof "agency personnel (area personnel in the Navajo Area and in the case of Indian tribes not served by an agency)", and

(10) by striking out "providing notice and hearing" in section 109 (25 U.S.C. 450m) and inserting in lieu thereof "providing notice and a hearing".

(b) Subsection (b) of section 110 of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450m-1(b)) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) The Secretary shall not revise or amend a self-determination contract with a tribal organization without the tribal organization's consent.".

(c) Subparagraph (C) of section 3371(2) of title 5, United States Code, is amended by striking out "section 4(m)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 4".

SEC. 3. (a) Notwithstanding section 18 of the Act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 988; 25 U.S.C. 478), sections 2 and 17 of that Act (25 U.S.C. 462 and 477) shall apply to—

(1) all Indian tribes,

(2) all lands held in trust by the United States for Indians, and

(3) all lands owned by Indians that are subject to a restriction imposed by the United States on alienation of the rights of the Indians in the lands.

(b) The proviso of section 13 of the Act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 986; 25 U.S.C. 473) is amended by striking out "sections 2, 4," and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 4,".

(c) Section 17 of the Act of June 18, 1934 (25 U.S.C. 477), is amended—

(1) by striking out "by at least one-third of the adult Indians," and inserting in lieu thereof "by any tribe,";

(2) by striking out "at a special election by a majority vote of the adult Indians living on the reservation" and inserting in lieu thereof "by the governing body of such tribe";

(3) by striking out "ten years any of the land" and inserting in lieu thereof "twenty-five years any trust or restricted lands".

SEC. 4. Subsection (c) of section 1 of Public Law 100-425 is amended by striking out "NE¼E½,NW¼" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "NE¼,E½NW¼".

SEC. 5. (a) Paragraph (5) of section 1139 of the Education Amendments of 1978 (25 U.S.C. 2019) is amended by striking out "104(a)" and inserting in lieu thereof "103(a)".

(b) Subsection (a) of section 5209 of the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2508) is amended by striking out "105" and inserting in lieu thereof "104".

(c) Subparagraph (C) of section 5314(e)(1) of the Indian Education Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2604(e)(1)(C)) is amended to read as follows:

"(C) No local educational agency may be held liable to the United States, or be otherwise penalized, by reason of the findings of any audit that relate to the date of completion, or the date of submission, of any forms used to establish, before April 28, 1988, a child's eligibility for entitlement under the Indian Elementary and Secondary School Assistance Act.".

(d)(1) Subsection (c) of section 1128 of the Education Amendments of 1978 (25 U.S.C. 2008(c)) is amended—

(A) by striking out "0.133 percent" in paragraph (3)(A) and inserting in lieu thereof "0.2 percent",

(B) by striking out "$4,000" in paragraph (3)(C)(i) and inserting in lieu thereof "$5,000",

(C) by striking out clause (ii) of paragraph (3)(C) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(ii) the lesser of—

"(I) $15,000, or

"(II) 1 percent of such alloted funds,".

(D) by striking out paragraph (2), and

(E) by redesignating paragraphs (3), (4), and (5) as paragraphs (2), (3), and (4), respectively.

(2) Section 5324(c)(4)(B) of the Indian Education Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2624(c)(4)(B)) is amended by striking out "section 1128(c)(4)(A)(i)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 1128(c)(3)(A)(i)".

(e)(1) Subsection (b) of section 5504 of Public Law 100-297 (25 U.S.C. 2001, note) is amended—

(A) by inserting "the Executive Director of the National Advisory Council on Indian Education and of" after "which shall consist of" in paragraph (1),

(B) by inserting "(but not the executive Director of the National Advisory Council on Indian Education)" after "Task Force" in paragraph (3), and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7) Sums appropriated under the authority of section 5508 shall not be used to pay the salaries of employees of the Department of the Interior or the Department of Education who are assigned as staff to the Task Force; but the salaries of such employees shall be paid out of funds appropriated to the employing Department under the authority of other provisions of law.".

(2) Subsection (a) of section 5506 of Public Law 100-297 is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (5),

(B) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (6) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and", and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7) the chairman of the National Advisory Council on Indian Education.".

(3) Section 5508 of Public Law 100-297 is amended by striking out "1988, 1989, and 1990" and inserting in lieu thereof "1990, 1991, and 1992".

(f) Subsection (d) of section 1128A of the Education Amendments of 1978 (25 U.S.C. 2008a(d)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) In applying this section and section 106 of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act with respect to an Indian tribe or tribal organization that—

"(A) receives funds under this section for administrative costs incurred in operating a contract school or a school operated under the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988, and

"(B) operates one or more other programs under a contract or grant provided under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act, the Secretary shall ensure that the Indian tribe or tribal organization is provided with the full amount of the administrative costs, and of the indirect costs, that are associated with operating the contract school, a school operated under the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988, and all of such other programs, except that funds appropriated for implementation of this section shall be used only to supply the amount of the grant required to be provided by this section.".

(g)(1) Paragraph (2) of subsection 5205(a) of the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2504(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) to the extent requested by such Indian tribe or tribal organization, the total amount of funds provided from operations and maintenance accounts and, notwithstanding section 105 of the Indian Self-Determination Act (25 U.S.C. 450j) or any other provision of law, other facilities accounts for such schools for such fiscal year (including but not limited to all those referenced under sction 1126(d) of the Education Amendments of 1978, or any other law) and".

(2) Subsection (b) of section 5205 of the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2504(b)) is amended by adding the following new paragraph:

"(4) Notwithstanding the provision of paragraph 5204(a)(2) of the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2503(a)(21)), with respect to funds from facilities improvement and repair, alteration and renovation (major or minor), health and safety, or new construction accounts included in the grant under such paragraph (a)(2), the grantee shall maintain a separate account for such funds and shall, at the end of the period designated for the work covered by the funds received, render a separate accounting of work done and the funds used to the Secretary. Funds received from these accounts may only be used for the purposes for which they were appropriated and for the work encompassed by the application or submission under which they were received. Where the appropriations measure or the application submission does not stipulate a period for the work covered by the funds so designated, the Secretary and the grantee shall consult and determine such a period prior to the transfer of funds: Provided, That such period may be extended upon mutual agreement.".

SEC. 6. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the term "class II gaming" includes, for purposes of applying Public Law 100-497 with respect to any Indian tribe located in the State of Wisconsin or the State of Montana, during the 1-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act, any gaming described in section 4(7)(B)(ii) of Public Law 100-497 that was legally operated on Indian lands on or before May 1, 1988, if the Indian tribe having jurisdiction over the lands on which such gaming was operated made a request, by no later than November 16, 1988, to the State in which such gaming is operated to negotiate a Tribal-State compact under section 11(d)(3) of Public Law 100-497.

SEC. 7. Section 9 of the Lac Vieux Desert Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians Act (25 U.S.C. 1300h-7) is amended—

(1) by striking out "Notwithstanding" and inserting in lieu thereof "(a) Notwithstanding", and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) The Secretary shall accept as voters eligible to vote on any amendments to the constitution of the Keweenaw Bay Indian Community—

"(1) all those persons who were deemed eligible by the Keweenaw Bay Indian Community to vote in the most recent election for the Tribal Council, and

"(2) any other person certified by the Keweenaw Bay Indian Community Tribal Council as—

"(A) a member of the Keweenaw Bay Indian Community, and

"(B) eligible to vote in any election for the Tribal Council.".

SEC. 8. Section 3(l) of the White Earth Reservation Land Settlement Act of 1985 (25 U.S.C. 331, note) is amended—

(1) by inserting "not including laws relating to spousal allowance and maintenance payments)" immediately after "inheritance laws of Minnesota in effect on March 26, 1986", and

(2) by adding at the end of section 7 the following new subsection:

"(e)(1) After publication of the second list under subsection (c), the Secretary may, at any time, add allotments or interests to that second list if the Secretary determines that the additional allotment or interest falls within the provisions of section 5(c) or subsection (a) or (b) of section 4.

"(2) The Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register notice of any additions made under paragraph (1) to the second list published under subsection (c).

"(3) Any determination made by the Secretary to add an allotment or interest under paragraph (1) to the second list published under subsection (c) may be judicially reviewed in accordance with chapter 7 of title 5, United States Code, within 90 days after the date on which notice of such determination is published in the Federal Register under paragraph (2). Any legal action challenging such a determination that is not filed within such 90-day period shall be forever barred. Exclusive jurisdiction over any legal action challenging such a determination is vested in the United States District Court for the District of Minnesota.".

SEC. 9. The Hoopa-Yurok Settlement Act (25 U.S.C. 1300i, et seq.) is amended—

(1) by adding at the end of paragraph (2) of section (5)(a) the following new sentence: "Children under age 10 on the date they applied for the Settlement Roll who have lived all their lives on the Joint Reservation or the Hoopa Valley or Yurok Reservations, and who otherwise meet the requirements of this section except they lack 10 years of Reservation residence, shall be included on the Settlement Roll.",

(2) by adding at the end of subsection (d) of section 5 the following new paragraph:

"(4) For the sole purpose of preparing the Settlement Roll under this section, the Yurok Transition Team and the Hoopa Valley Business Council may review applications, make recommendations which the Secretary shall accept unless conflicting or erroneous, and may appeal the Secretary's decisions concerning the Settlement Roll. Full disclosure of relevant records shall be made to the Team and the Council notwithstanding any other provision of law.".

(3) by striking out "counseling," in section (9)(a)(3) and inserting in lieu thereof "counseling and assistance, shall", and

(4) by adding at the end of subsection (a) of section 14 the following new sentence: "The Yurok Transition Team, or any individual thereon, shall not be named as a defendant or otherwise joined in any suit in which a claim is made arising out of this subsection.".

SEC. 10. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to retain collections from the public in payment for goods and services provided by the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Such collections shall be credited to the appropriation account against which obligations were incurred in providing such goods and services.

SEC. 11. There is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Health and Human Services, Administration for Native Americans, $1,000,000 for the purpose of conducting a feasibility study for the establishment of a National Center for Native American Studies and Policy Development.

SEC. 12. (a) The following proviso in title I of the Act of June 24, 1967 (81 Stat. 59), under the heading "Office of the Solicitor", is repealed: "Provided, That hereafter hearing officers appointed for Indian probate work need not be appointed pursuant to the Administrative Procedures Act (60 Stat. 237), as amended".

(b) Hearing officers heretofore appointed to preside over Indian probate proceedings pursuant to the proviso repealed by subsection (a), having met the qualifications required for appointment pursuant to section 3105 of title 5, United States Code, shall be deemed to have been appointed pursuant to that section.

(c) The first sentence of section 1 of the Act of June 25, 1910 (36 Stat. 855; 25 U.S.C. 372), is amended by deleting "his decision thereon shall be final and conclusive" and inserting in lieu thereof "his decisions shall be subject to judicial review to the same extent as determinations rendered under section 2 of this Act".

Sec. 13. Notwithstanding the Act of March 7, 1928 (45 Stat. 210-211), and the Act of August 7, 1946 (60 Stat. 895-896), the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to allocate not to exceed $2,000,000 from power revenues available to the San Carlos Irrigation Project to pay for the operation and maintenance charges associated with the delivery of 30,000 acre-feet of water from the Central Arizona Project to the San Carlos Irrigation Project.

Mr. MITCHELL. I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill, as amended, was passed.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS BY INTELLIGENCE COMMITTEE AND REPRESENTATION BY SENATE LEGAL COUNSEL

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I send to the desk a resolution on the production of documents by the Senate Committee on Intelligence and representation by the Senate legal counsel, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 278) to authorize representation of and production of documents by the Select Committee on Intelligence in the case of United States versus Barnett.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, the defendant in a criminal proceeding in the Southern District of New York has caused the issuance of subpoenas to the Select Committee on Intelligence and the Select Committee on Secret Military Assistance to Iran and the Nicaraguan Opposition for documents relating to an Iran-Contra witness. Pursuant to the resolution which established the Senate Iran-Contra Committee, all of the committee's records have been transferred to the Intelligence Committee.

The defendant, a Florida lawyer whose law firm had represented Ashland Oil, is charged with a conspiracy to defraud Ashland by selling to the National Iranian Oil Co. confidential Ashland documents regarding a dispute between the two companies about payment for deliveries of crude oil. One of the alleged coconspirators, Roy M. Furmark, had been a witness before the Senate Intelligence Committee and the Iran-Contra Committee. The Senate Legal Counsel has been advised that the materials concerning Furmark are being sought in connection with his expected testimony for the prosecution.

Furmark testified at a closed hearing of the Intelligence Committee in December 1986 and at a closed Iran-Contra deposition in July 1987. His testimony before the Iran-Contra Committee is described in the committee's report. With a few deletions, Furmark's Iran-Contra deposition has been published. The Intelligence Committee reported on Furmark's testimony in its public report in February 1987.

The following resolution will enable the chairman and vice chairman of the Intelligence Committee to provide a transcript of the witness' testimony before that committee to the district court for examination in camera. If the court determines that it should be provided to the defendant in the interest of justice, appropriate steps would be taken to declassify the transcript. To the extent that a privilege against disclosure should be asserted for any aspect of the subpoenas, the resolution vests discretion in the chairman and vice chairman of the Intelligence Committee to assert privilege, and authorizes the Senate Legal Counsel to represent the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, is as follows:

S. RES. 278

Whereas, in the case of United States v. Barnett, No. 89 Cr. 699, pending in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, defendant Charles D. Barnett has caused the issuance of subpoenas for certain documents within the custody and control of the Select Committee on Intelligence;

Whereas, pursuant to sections 703(a) and 704(a)(2) of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, 2 U.S.C. 288b(a) and 288c(a)(2) (1988), the Senate my direct its counsel to represent committees of the Senate with respect to subpoenas issued to them;

Whereas, by the privileges of the Senate of the United States and Rule XI of the Standing Rules of the Senate, no evidence under the control or in the possession of the Senate may, by the judicial process, be taken from such control or possession but by permission of the Senate;

Whereas, when it appears that evidence under the control or in the possession of the Senate is needed for use in any court for the promotion of justice, the Senate will take such action as will promote the ends of justice consistent with the privileges of the Senate;

Whereas, certain of the documents requested have been classified in the interests of national security; Now, therefore be it

Resolved, That the Senate Legal Counsel is directed to represent the Select Committee on Intelligence in the case of United States v. Barnett, No. 89 Cr. 699 (S.D.N.Y.).

SEC. 2. The chairman and vice chairman of the Select Committee on Intelligence are authorized to provide under appropriate security controls copies of relevant documents in the custody and control of the committee which are responsive to subpoenas in the case of United States v. Barnett, except concerning matters for which a privilege should be asserted.

Mr. MITCHELL. I move to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator DOLE be recognized to address the Senate and that, upon the completion of his remarks, the Senate stand in recess under the previous order, until 9:45 a.m. tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask that the prior order be vitiated, and I now ask unanimous consent to withdraw the motion to proceed to S. 135.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The motion to proceed is withdrawn.

Mr. MITCHELL. I now ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, that Senator DOLE be recognized to address the Senate and, upon the completion of his remarks, that the Senate stand in recess until 9:45 a.m. tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Kansas [Mr. DOLE] is recognized.

PAC'S AND THE MONEY CHASE

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, yesterday Senate Republicans unveiled an ambitious new campaign finance reform initiative.

The initiative would ban political action committees. It would ban soft money. It would impose limits on contributions from out-of-State sources. It would increase competition in politics by offering seed money to viable congressional challengers. And it would significantly reduce the cost of campaigns by providing a meaningful broadcast discount.

These proposals may be too bold for some. Too radical for others. Too threating to incumbents. Too offensive to the special interests. But if we are really serious about reforming campaign spending, we can either get serious or continue to make speeches and protect the status quo on Capitol Hill.

Judging by today's newspapers, it appears that the liberal media has grown quite fond of the status quo. Though comprehensive in scope and bold in approach, the Republican campaign finance reform initiative was barely—and frankly, very badly—reported.

Most articles embraced the almost clinical fixation on spending limits. Most articles just repeated the same worn-out and spoon-fed partisan line. And most articles failed to report yesterday's real story—that the Republican initiative would put the beltway special-interest operators out of business for good.

No doubt about it, one of the biggest perks of congressional incumbency is the apparent infatuation of special-interest PAC's with sitting Members of Congress.

In 1988, for example, incumbents received an unbelievable $118 million in PAC contributions, while challengers received a paltry $19 million.

And in 1988, corporate PAC's were the leaders in incumbency charity—giving 80 percent of their dollars to congressional incumbents—regardless of political philosophy and regardless of party affiliation. I might add that I am one of those, so I cannot knock it. I am just telling you the facts. If we are going to change it, we all have to. Everybody cannot figure out how to protect your own seat and my seat; we all have to get into the same wagon and push off.

Two articles appeared in today's Washington Post that highlight the cozy relationship between labor PAC's and Democratic incumbents. Appropriately entitled "PAC-Man Pursues His Hectic Schedule" and "No Off-Year for Fund-Raising Lawmakers," both articles highlight a day in the life of a lobbyist for the letter carriers' political action committee. The letter carriers' PAC happened to contribute $760,000 to congressional incumbents last year—far more than any other PAC in the Nation.

I might say, I think that I calculate about $14,000 went to Republicans, so that is a pretty good ratio. If you are a Democrat, you get $746,000 and Republicans get $14,000.

So if we are really serious about campaign finance reform, these articles teach us a few important lessons about how to stop the never-ending money chase that concerns all of us in Congress.

In this respect, the Republican reform initiative keeps looking better every day.

So it seems to me that there is a reason to take a hard look at it. If we are concerned about so-called reform of the Hatch Act, I think these articles ought to make us think twice, make us think on both sides because maybe some of those Federal employee PAC's may someday be Republican. I do not know when that will be but we will be in control of the White House in the foreseeable future and sooner or later there may be more Republicans working for the Federal Government.

It seems to me if in fact we are serious, and I think most of us are on both sides of the aisle, it is going to be a struggle because some people do not want any PAC reform, do not want any campaign reform at all. If we are going to do it, it is going to be a painful process. Everybody is going to have to give up a great deal.

In my view, if we can do it on a bipartisan basis, it will be worth an effort and it will be done in a way I think that will bring the right results and still make us competitive on both sides of the aisle and give neither side an advantage.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the two articles in the Washington Post be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the articles were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, May 2, 1990]

PAC-MAN PURSUES HECTIC SCHEDULE

COMMITTEES GAVE $57 MILLION IN 1989, MOSTLY TO INCUMBENTS

(By Charles R. Babcock and Richard Morin)

George B. Gould is a popular man, which is not surprising for someone who last year helped to pass our almost $769,000 to political candidates.

He is also a man who takes his job seriously. For Gould, chief lobbyist for the National Association of Letter Carriers, that means making the rounds of the Washington political action committee (PAC) fund-raising circuit, which can make for a long day. But, Gould explained, showing up at the seemingly endless rounds of fund-raising receptions is one way to underscore his support for and friendship with the lawmakers whose votes affect his union and its members.

George Gould's frenetic schedule—46 Washington fund-raising events last week and this—captures the reality of the chase for political dollars in the capital. It is a constant chase that will continue unabated as the Senate soon begins debating proposals to change the existing campaign finance system.

This is how it went for Gould on Tuesday of last week:

He started his day with three-fund-raising breakfasts. His first, at 8 a.m., was for Sen. Terry Sanford (D-N.C.) at Adirondacks, a restaurant at Union Station. He then hopped in a cab for the short ride to the National Democratic Club on the House side of the Capitol for separate events for Reps. Louis Stokes (D-Ohio) and Frank Annunzio (D-Ill.).

That evening, armed with a list of eight events to make in four hours, Gould hitched a ride with another labor lobbyist to a 5:30 reception for Rep. Lee H. Hamilton (D-Ind.) at the Democratic Club. Then he made a short visit with Rep. Matthew F. McHugh (D-N.Y.) at a private home on the way back to the Senate side and an event for Sen. Ted Stevens (R-Alaska) at the Hyatt hotel. The next stop was a fund-raiser for Rep. Thomas J. Manton (D-N.Y.) at the nearby Carpenters Union building.

Gould then picked up his car and drove to a reception at a private home for Rep. David E. Price (D-N.C.) followed by a gathering at Democratic National Committee headquarters of the Speaker's Club, an informal organization of individuals and PACs who donate $5,000 to the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

He then drove downtown to a reception at the Hay-Adams Hotel for Rep. Sam Gibbons (D-Fla.) before showing up at the Palm restaurant for Rep. Douglas H. Bosco (D-Calif.). He skipped dinner at the Palm and headed to suburban Virginia, ending the 12-event day at a sit-down dinner at the home of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.).

He was home at 10.

Last night, he had a seven-reception evening schedule. His personal record is 18 events in one day in September 1988.

The trim, bearded Gould, 50 has personal rules for surviving this routine: He limits his breakfast intake to juice and muffins, doesn't eat at receptions, and eats only one dinner at night. He drinks only soft drinks or soda water. "If I drank I'd be incoherent by 8," he said.

Gould's schedule is busier than most because his union's PAC is traditionally one of the top 10 givers. Last year it donated more money to candidates than any other. It gave $768,820 to a total of 259 House and 34 Senate candidates, including $5,000 or more to 48 House and 14 Senate candidates.

When he started lobbying for the letter carriers 11 years ago, Washington fund-raisers weren't that common, Gould recalled. Now, Tuesday through Thursday is filled with events—breakfasts, lunches, receptions and dinners. And the crowded schedule—coordinated by the national party committees—is forcing occasional Monday and weekend fund-raisers as well.

The role of PAC's is a key issue in the coming campaign reform debate. Many Democrats favor limiting PAC donations from special interest; some Republicans want them abolished. PACs contributed $57 million to candidates in 1989, a more than 25 percent jump from 1987. They also had about $128 million left over to spend this year.

More than 90 percent of last year's PAC donations went to incumbents. In part this was because many challengers hadn't yet been picked. But the figures underscore the huge and growing financial advantage incumbents have over potential rivals because PACs historically give most of their funds to incumbents.

Gould and several other lobbyists who run sizable PACs agreed that their donations favor incumbents. But they also argued that curbing PACs won't solve complaints about increasingly expensive campaigns.

"There's a natural bias toward incumbents built into the system," said Cory Strupp, treasurer of Morgan Cos. PAC, which made nearly $196,000 in donations last year, much of it to members of the Banking committees. "We know them, we've watched them, we've listened to them. It's so much easier to give to someone there." In an effort to help some challengers, Strupp said, his bank's PAC is giving more money this year to national party committees to distribute.

James P. Mooney, head of the National Cable Television proposals to re-regulate the industry, said, "PACs are just a way of funding the system." Currently, he said, "the political community expects you to have a PAC."

Reformers should consider changes in campaign spending practices "including free television time—broadcast and cable," he added. His PAC gave almost $213,000 to candidates last year.

Bob Bergland, head of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, whose PAC led energy givers with $224,000 in donations last year, said his committee also gives mostly to incumbents. Many incumbents, he noted, seek early contributions to build up their campaign treasuries and discourage potential challengers from entering a race.

"Early money is the best money," agreed Gould in explaining how his PAC jumped to first on the donation list last year. "If you have a friend, it's smarter to give it early. We try to raise and give money early."

"Our tendency is to focus on friends in trouble," Bergland said. A former congressman and secretary of agriculture in the Carter administration, Bergland said he was "terribly troubled" by the need of candidates to raise large amounts of campaign money. He said he favors public financing of elections. But absent that change, abolishing PACs would force candidates to seek money from rich individuals as they did in pre-Watergate days, he said.

The letter carriers' Gould isn't among those who complain about the time they have to devote to fund-raising events. "I enjoy it, not every minute of it, but I like people and talking to people and I like politics and talking politics," he said. "Generally, I'm very positive about it."

Gould knows the fund-raising game from both sides. He worked in California in the early 1960s for state Assembly Speaker Jesse Unruh, who gave the phrase "Money is the mother's milk of politics" to the political lexicon. Gould came to Washington in 1965 as top aide to the late representative Charles H. Wilson (D-Calif.) and then worked for the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee for 10 years.

When he joined the letter carriers in 1979, its PAC was small. During the 1987-88 election cycle, the letter carriers gave $1.7 million in donations, placing it No. 8 among all PAC contributors. Ninety percent of that money went to Democrats.

With 345,000 current and retired dues-paying members all over the country, the letter carriers get requests for donations from more candidates than many PACs. The union's PAC is financed by voluntary contributions from members. Donations from 46,000 members average about $26 a year.

The 50 to 60 invitations Gould's office receives each week are considered each Friday morning by a committee made up of Gould, other lobbyists and retired letter carriers. Political activities of active government employees in the union are limited by Hatch Act restrictions that the union is lobbying hard to relax.

The solicitations are categorized based on the union's relationship with the candidate, the candidate's voting record, and his or her stand on issues important to the letter carriers, such as federal health and retirement benefits.

When a decision is made to support a candidate, the check is always mailed, Gould said with a smile. "That's our business. It's a great test of the system and the check always gets there."

Rep. Glen Browder (D-Ala.) will confirm that. The new congressman received $16,000 from the letter carriers PAC last year, including the $5,000 maximum in each of the special primary, runoff and general elections in February and March. The successor to the late representative Bill Nichols (D) also got $1,000 in June toward his first re-election campaign.

Gould usually tries to attend the Washington fund-raisers for candidates the union supports. "I go so they know the letter carriers participated and to get to know them a little personally," he said. He never lobbies at a fund-raiser or raises his union's legislative agenda unless a candidate raises the subject, he said.

Gould is perplexed as he watches the debate on campaign reform. "Short of full public financing, you're just moving the chairs around," he said. "PACs don't drive the campaign, costs do." There is now a professional campaign industry of consultants, pollsters, direct mail and television experts, he noted.

"If you eliminate PACs tomorrow, where would you get the money?" Gould asked. "It's more democratic to get it from PACs like ours, where the average donation is $26, than from $1,000 donors."

KEEPING UP WITH GOULD

Following is a schedule of fund-raising events since April 23 that George Gould attended or plans to attend:

Monday, Apr. 23: Evening reception for Rep. Dante B. Fascell (D-Fla.), chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, at Florida House; barbecue for Rep. Fred Grandy (R-Iowa), a member of the Education and Labor Committee, at Hogs on the Hill restaurant.

Tuesday, April 24: See accompanying story.

Wednesday, April 25: Breakfast with members of Pennsylvania congressional delegation and visiting delegation of about 400 Pennsylvania letter carriers; breakfast at Bullfeathers restaurant for Rep. Cliff Stearns (R-Fla.); lunch fund-raiser for Rep. Benjamin L. Cardin (D-Md.); evening fundraiser for Rep. Al Swift (D-Wash.) at the Democratic Club; "thank you party" for supporters of Rep. Bob Traxler (D-Mich.) at Rayburn House Office Building. (At the Congressional Democratic Dinner at the Washington Hilton that evening, Sen. Max Baucus (D-Mont.) and Reps. Morris K. Udall (D-Ariz.) and Thomas A. Luken (D-Ohio) sat at the letter carriers table.)

Thursday, April 26: Lunch for Rep. Craig A. Washington (D-Tex.), the successor to Rep. Mickey Leland; evening receptions for Rep. Jim Jontz (D-Ind.) at a private home; Rep. Bart Gordon (D-Tenn.) at Democratic National Committee headquarters; and Rep. David R. Obey (D-Wis.) at the Democratic Club.

Sunday, April 29: Fund-raising brunch for Rep. Mervyn M. Dymally (D-Calif.) at Pisces restaurant.

Monday, April 30: Lunch for Rep. William D. Ford (D-Mich.), chairman of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, at the Democratic Club; evening reception for Rep. Lawrence J. Smith (D-Fla.) at Hotel Washington.

Tuesday, May 1: Breakfast for Rep. Beverly B. Byron (D-Md.) at the Democratic Club; evening receptions for Reps. Norman Sisisky (D-Va.) at the Democratic Club and Hamilton Fish Jr. (R-N.Y.) at the Hay-Adams. Also on the schedule were events for Reps. Sander M. Levin (D-Mich.), Kweisi Mfume (D-Md.), Don Young (R-Alaska) and James L. Oberstar (D-Minn.) and a reception/dinner for Rep. Chester G. Atkins (D-Mass.) at Adirondacks restaurant. (Did not attend reception for Rep. Guy Vander Jagt (R-Mich.), chairman of the GOP campaign committee, because Capitol Hill Club site is being picketed.)

Wednesday, May 2: Breakfasts for Sen. J. James Exon (D-Neb.) at La colline and Rep. Brian J. Donnelly (D-Mass.) at the Democratic Club. (Will not attend breakfast for Rep. Bill Lowery (R-Calif.) because Capitol Hill Club site is being picketed.) Evening receptions for Reps. Richard H. Lehman (D-Calif.) and Vic Fazio (D-Calif.) at the Democratic Club; Rep. Constance A. Morella (R-Md.) at the Phoenix Park Hotel; Rep. Dan Burton (R-Ind.) at the American Trucking Association and Rep. Eliot L. Engel (D-N.Y.) at La Colline.

Thursday, May 3: Breakfasts for Sen. Howell T. Heflin (D-Ala.) and Rep. Thomas C. Sawyer (D-Ohio) at the Democratic Club; lunch for Rep. Philip R. Sharp (D-Ind.) at the Democratic Club; evening events for Rep. Robert T. Matsui (D-Calif.) at the Democratic Club and Roy Dyson (D-Md.) at La Colline.

[From The Washington Post, May 2, 1990]

NO "OFF YEAR" FOR FUND-RAISING LAWMAKERS

(By Richard Morin and Charles R. Babcock)

There were no regular federal elections in 1989, an "off year" in political parlance. Incumbent members of Congress and lobbyists know better. When it comes to fund-raising, there is no off year.

Political action committees (PACs) contributed more than $57 million to candidates last year, and incumbents received more than 90 percent of it, according to a computer-aided Washington Post analysis. Not surprisingly, much of the money went to members of committees with jurisdiction over the PACs' industries and unions.

"We're interested in the Banking committees, Energy and Commerce and Ways and Means, the ones that will influence our business the most," said Marty Farmer, lobbyist and holder of the PAC purse strings for Barnett Banks of Jacksonville, Fla., a regional bank with $30 billion in assets. "We're not opposed to an incumbent unless we don't like them . . . like Al D'Amato," a Republican senator from New York known for trying to protect the securities industry against competition from banks.

The "Barnett People for Better Government" PAC gave $183,000 in donations last year, third in the nation among financial industry PACs. The 290 financial PACs donated a total of $4.1 million, the highest of any interest group.

The Post analysis also showed that:

Incumbent Democrats, who enjoy a 5-to-3 advantage over Republicans in Congress, collected a similarly lopsided share of the 1989 PAC dollars, $33.3 million to $18.5 million. The average $833 donation to Democrats was more than $100 larger than the average contribution to GOP members.

A key committee assignment can mean a windfall in PAC dollars, particularly in the 435-member House. For example, the 42 members of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, which has wide jurisdiction over business, collected $4.3 million. Ways and Means Committee members, who write the nation's tax laws, received $3.8 million. Other contribution totals to members of key House committees included Appropriations, $3.7 million; Merchant Marine and Fisheries, $3.6 million; Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, $3.6 million; and Public Works and Transportation, $3.5 million. (Members can serve on more than one committee.)

PAC GIVING IN 1989—SPECIAL INTEREST GIVING TO MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

[Contributions shown in millions of dollars]

Interest Group [1]	Total	House	Senate
Financial industry	$4.1	$2.6	$1.5
Energy industry	3.8	2.2	1.6
Insurance industry	3.4	2.0	1.4
Transportation unions	3.0	2.3	.7
Communications industry	3.0	1.9	1.1
Government unions	2.9	2.3	.6
Transportation industry	2.4	1.4	1.0
Aerospace/Defense industry	2.3	1.4	.9
Real Estate/Construction industry	2.3	1.6	.7
Food industry	2.1	1.2	.9
Construction unions	1.8	1.4	.4
Legal profession	1.4	.8	.6
Pro-Israel PACs	1.2	.3	.9

[1] In compiling this chart, The Washington Post used a computer tape from the Federal Election Commission containing reports on donations made by all PACs in 1989, and a data base developed by Common Causes that identifies the special interest represented by each PAC. Post researchers classified additional PACs not identified by Common Cause.

The Top 25 PACS

Political Action Committee	Total contributions (1989)
Committee On Letter Carriers Political Education	$768,820
American Telephone And Telegraph Co	686,390
Democratic Republican Independent Voter Education Committee (Teamsters)	629,312
American Federation Of State, County and Municipal Employees	600,589
Air Line Pilots Association	547,797
Association of Trial Lawyers Of America	523,800
Carpenters Legislative Improvement Committee	493,801
Realtors Political Action Committee	469,660
National Association Of Retired Federal Employees	467,300
National Association Of Life Underwriters	457,550
Federal Express Corp. Political Action Committee	440,525
National Association Of Home Builders	428,925
American Bankers Association	424,900
Machinists Non-Partisan Political League	410,520

The Top 25 PACS—Continued

Political Action Committee	Total contributions (1989)
United Auto Workers Voluntary Community Action Program	408,478
International Brotherhood Of Electrical Workers Committee	390,910
American Institute of Certified Public Accountants	353,109
National Education Association	341,345
American Postal Workers Union	334,781
Independent Insurance Agents of America	332,050
American Medical Association	332,000
United Food And Commercial Workers	329,943
RJR Nabisco Inc.	315,800
United Parcel Service	304,792
Engineers Political Education Committee	296,050

Source: Contributing to this project were Richard Morin, director of polling, systems consultant Edward Dolbow and Sharon Warden, senior polling analyst.

The Letter Carrier's biggest gifts

To House Members in 1989:
Glen Browder (D-Ala.)	$16,000
Nita M. Lowey (D-N.Y.)	15,000
Bill Sarpalius (D.-Tex.)	10,000
Louise M. Slaughter (D-N.Y.)	10,000
Jill Long (D-N.Y.)	9,500
Thomas J. Ridge (R-Pa.)	7,500
Jolene Unsoeld (D-Wash.)	6,700
David E. Bonior (D-Mich.)	6,180
Bob Clement (D-Tenn.)	6,000
William D. Ford (D-Mich.)	6,000
George E. Sangmeister (D-Ill.)	6,000
Gary L. Ackerman (D-N.Y.)	5,000
Les AuCoin (D-Ore.)	5,000
Jim Bates (D-Calif.)	5,000
George E. Brown Jr. (D-Calif.)	5,000
Dan Burton (R-Ind.)	5,000
James McClure Clarke (D-N.C.)	5,000
Roy Dyson (D-Md.)	5,000
Vic Fazio (D-Calif.)	5,000
Thomas S. Foley (D-Wash.)	5,000
Martin Frost (D-Tex.)	5,000
Richard A. Gephardt (D-Mo.)	5,000
Benjamin A. Gilman (R-N.Y.)	5,000
Fred Grandy (R-Iowa)	5,000
William H. Gray III (D-Pa.)	5,000
Peter Hoagland (D-Neb.)	5,000
G.J. Hockbrueckner (D-N.Y.)	5,000
Frank Horton (R-N.Y.)	5,000
Steny H. Hoyer (D-Md.)	5,000
Frank McCloskey (D-Ind.)	5,000
Constance A. Morella (R-Md.)	5,000
Wayne Owens (D-Utah)	5,000

The Letter Carrier's biggest gifts—Continued

Elizabeth J. Patterson (D-S.C.)	5,000
James H. Quillen (R-Tenn.)	5,000
Edward R. Roybal (D-Calif.)	5,000
Gerry Sikorski (D-Minn.)	5,000
Richard H. Stallings (D-Idaho)	5,000
Fortney Pete Stark (D-Calif.)	5,000
Morris K. Udall (D-Ariz.)	5,000
Henry A. Waxman (D-Calif.)	5,000
Jamie L. Whitten (D-Miss.)	5,000
Ted Weiss (D-N.Y.)	5,000
Gus Yatron (D-Pa.)	5,000
To Senators in 1989:
Paul Simon (D-Ill.)	10,000
J. James Exon (D-Neb.)	9,000
Ted Stevens (R-Alaska)	9,000
Carl Levin (D-Mich.)	8,000
Albert Gore Jr. (D-Tenn.)	7,000
Tom Harkin (D-Iowa)	7,000
John D. Rockefeller IV (D-W.Va.)	6,000
Max Baucus (D-Mont.)	5,000
Joseph R. Biden Jr. (D-Del.)	5,000
Bill Bradley (D-N.J.)	5,000
Howell T. Heflin (D-Ala.)	5,000
Joseph I. Lieberman (D-Conn.)	5,000
Sam Nunn (D-Ga.)	5,000
David Pryor (D-Ark.)	5,000

Defense contractors with threatened programs were among the leading PAC contributors in the defense industry. Textron, maker of the tilt-rotor Osprey plane, gave $44,000 in PAC funds to members of the House Appropriations Committee. The PAC at Northrop, builder of the controversial B-2 "stealth" bomber, contributed $29,000. Grumman, producer of the F-14 jet fighter the Navy no longer wants, donated $27,500 in PAC money.

PACs for the declining American maritime industry—both unions and shipping companies—were major donors to members of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee and the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee. David A. Keene, a spokesman for the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association union, noted that policies crafted by those committees "will dictate the health or growth of the domestic maritime industry. Therefore you would obviously expect everyone in the industry to be working with and supporting members of those committees."

Seats on the tax-writing committees have been avidly sought by members because all special interest groups are interested in befriending someone with the power to tax them or give them a tax break. The friendliest group to members of the House Ways and Means Committee last year was insurance PACs.

Reasons for this include a long-running fight between rival stock and mutual insurance companies over the arcane issue of which segment of the industry should pay the most in taxes. And insurance agents' groups are eager to prevent taxation on certain items they sell.

The House Energy and Commerce Committee held several key votes on clean air amendments last year. The legislation is of vital interest to oil, gas and utility firms. But the heaviest contributions to members of the committee were by the communications industry, followed by energy and utility PACs and financial institutions.

Herb Linnen, a spokeman for AT&T, said his corporation's PAC gave $78,225 to Energy and Commerce members because proposed bills in the committee are likely to affect the future of the telecommunications industry. The company's goal is to prevent its former subsidiaries, the regional Bell operating companies, from finding a legislative way around prohibitions on manfacturing equipment and entering the long-distance market, Linnen said.

MIDDLE EAST NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I was advised earlier by Senator SPECTER that he had heard that there had been a statement made that President Mubarak of Egypt and President Assad of Syria might be willing to enter into negotiations with Israel. Egypt already has, but in this case it would be a new statement for Assad from Syria.

I am not certain the reports are true, but I certainly will encourage President Assad to do that. We raised that with him in our visit to the Mideast a couple weeks ago. It would be an indication of his willingness to make peace with the State of Israel, and it is a point we stressed with him during our visit.

Again, I assume there will be additional reports if they are accurate, but in any event if that is not the case then I would certainly encourage President Assad to do that.

RECESS UNTIL 9:45 A.M. TOMORROW

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order the Senate will stand in recess until 9:45 a.m. tomorrow.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 6:42 p.m., recessed until Thursday, May 3, 1990, at 9:45 a.m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Wednesday, May 2, 1990

The House met at 12 noon and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. GEPHARDT].

DESIGNATION OF SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker.

WASHINGTON, DC,
May 2, 1990.

I hereby designate the Honorable RICHARD A. GEPHARDT to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

THOMAS S. FOLEY,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRAYER

The Reverend Dr. Frank Witman, United Methodist Church, Simi Valley, CA, offered the following prayer:

We thank You, O God, for the Nation in which we live, and for the position of leadership in which we have been set, as a nation among nations. We thank You for Your trust in us as we strive to fulfill that leadership. May our actions, and not just the words on our currency and on the wall of this chamber, reflect "In God We Trust."

Help us to take the blessings You have given, and to express them with humble spirits, because of the ways in which You have touched our lives.

Out of the humility which we have experienced, help us to recognize our servanthood on behalf of those in this Nation whom we serve.

Care for us in the personal needs which we have, that in our being cared for, we would be better in our caring for others.

In the name of Him who came that we might have abundant life. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BALLENGER], who will lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. BALLENGER led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 4404. An act making dire emergency supplemental appropriations for disaster assistance, food stamps, unemployment compensation administration, and other urgent needs, and transfers, and reducing funds budgeted for military spending for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H.R. 4404) "An act making dire emergency supplemental appropriations for disaster assistance, food stamps, unemployment compensation administration, and other urgent needs, and transfers, and reducing funds budgeted for military spending for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, and for other purposes," requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. BYRD, Mr. INOUYE, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. JOHNSTON, Mr. BURDICK, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. SASSER, Mr. DECONCINI, Mr. BUMPERS, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. HARKIN, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. REID, Mr. ADAMS, Mr. FOWLER, Mr. KERREY, Mr. HATFIELD, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. MCCLURE, Mr. GARN, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. KASTEN, Mr. D'AMATO, Mr. RUDMAN, Mr. SPECTER, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. NICKLES, and Mr. GRAMM to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a joint resolution of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S.J. Res 294. Joint Resolution to designate May 4, 1990, as "Department of Education Day."

The message also announced, that pursuant to Public Law 99-498, the Chair on behalf of the President pro tempore, appoints Lynn M. Burns, of Rhode Island, to the Advisory Commission on Student Financial Assistance, to fill the unexpired term of Dr. Dallas Martin, resigned.

The message also announced, that pursuant to section 9355(a), title 10, of the United States Code, the Chair on behalf of the Vice President, appoints Mr. COCHRAN from the Committee on Appropriations; Mr. GRASSLEY from the Committee on Appropriations; Mr. WIRTH from the Committee on Armed Services; and Mr. DECONCINI, at large; to the Board of Visitors of the U.S. Air Force Academy.

The message also announced, that pursuant to section 4355(a), title 10, of the United States Code, the Chair on behalf of the Vice President, appoints Mr. REID from the Committee on Appropriations; Mr. D'AMATO from the Committee on Appropriations; Mr. SHELBY from the Committee on Armed Services; and Mr. BURNS, at large; to the Board of Visitors of the U.S. Military Academy.

The message also announced, that pursuant to section 6968(a), title 10, of the United States Code, the Chair on behalf of the Vice President, appoints Ms. MIKULSKI from the Committee on Appropriations; Mr. HATFIELD from the Committee on Appropriations; Mr. MCCAIN from the Committee on Armed Services; and Mr. SARBANES, at large; to the Board of Visitors of the U.S. Naval Academy.

DR. FRANK WITMAN

(Mr. GALLEGLY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to introduce a good friend and a distinguished community leader from my hometown of Simi Valley, CA, Dr. Frank Witman.

Since 1969, Dr. Witman has been the senior minister of the United Methodist Church in Simi Valley.

Besides serving the spiritual needs of his congregation, Dr. Witman has been a community leader as well. He is active in education and business affairs, was named a Paul Harris fellow by the Rotary Foundation, and has served since 1978 as the chaplain of the Simi Valley Police Department.

He earned a master of theology degree in 1959 from the School of Theology at Claremont, CA, and earned his doctorate in 1977 from the same school.

On behalf of all our colleagues, I want to extend a warm welcome to Dr. Witman, and to thank him for giving our prayer today.

HOUSE-PASSED BUDGET MAKES BIGGER FEDERAL INVESTMENT IN HIGHWAYS AND EDUCATION

(Mr. TANNER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TANNER. Mr. Speaker, yesterday this body passed a budget for fiscal year 1991 which recognizes the responsibility we all share to develop public policy that invests in the future of our country.

Two aspects of that budget that are particularly important to the Eighth Congressional District of Tennessee are highways and education. In both of those areas, the House-passed budget calls for more Federal investment than the President recommended.

In Tennessee, almost 50 percent of our bridges have been rated deficient. Our country's educational status in the industrialized world is a primary source of national concern.

I, and many Americans, are disenchanted by this neglect and callousness over the past decade. We are told by the present and previous administrations that when Congress appropriates money for needed projects and programs to help American citizens who live in this country, work in this country, pay taxes in this country, it is pork barrel—but it is good government to send millions overseas and to foster free trade policies that are sapping our economic life.

Let us now invest in America for our citizens and those who follow us.

FRANKING REFORM

(Mr. MICHEL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, recent articles in various news publications have brought to our attention once again the abuses of the franking privilege.

According to a recent Postal Service projection, the House will exceed this year's franking appropriation by more than $38 million.

It is projected that we will mail 535 million pieces of mail for the entire year. In other words, Mr. Speaker, every man, woman, and child in the United States will receive two pieces of franked mail from their Congressman.

I have always believed Members have the right and the duty to answer letters from constituents. But, let's face it, 535 million people are not writing to their Representatives.

I am introducing a resolution which will cut the number of postal patrons and meeting notices to two per year. The resolution establishes individual Members accounts for mail, as determined by the House Administration Committee. But, when that money is exhausted, the free mailing stops. No more supplementals for the frank—this is pay-as-you-go.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, this resolution calls for complete disclosure of how much we mail and what it costs. This is similar to what is now required in the Senate.

Mr. Speaker, it is time to take a cold hard look at the abuses of the frank and most of all to do something about it.

PRESIDENT'S BUDGET PROPOSAL ECHOS PAST MISTAKES

(Mr. NAGLE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. NAGLE. Mr. Speaker, yesterday this body made a fundamental choice between two alternative views of what America should be about as we move into the 1990's.

The President's view—as expressed in his budget proposal—was that it is enough for the 1991 budget to simply echo the past; that it is enough to repeat the mistakes of the past; that "staying the same" is good enough for America.

I am proud to say the House Budget Committee offered an alternative view.

Their budget said it is time to invest in America; that it is time to strengthen American families and America's working men and women by investing in housing, education, research, and job training.

In short, the committee's budget said it is not good enough for America to sleepwalk into the future, and that America deserves better from its President than a budget even his own party was too embarrassed to bring to the floor for a vote.

President Bush has been given a great gift by the American people. As a new age dawns, he has been given the opportunity and the power to lead a free and great nation. How unfortunate it is that as that new age dawns, this President prefers to reflect on the past.

□ 1210

BUDGET INVESTS IN AMERICA'S FUTURE

(Mr. HOAGLAND asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HOAGLAND. Mr. Speaker, yesterday the House passed a budget to invest in American's future.

The 1991 budget prepared by the House Committee on the Budget does a number of important things. First of all, it cuts the deficit by at least $25 billion, and this is a major improvement of last year's budget, which had in the end about $5 billon in real cuts. Second, it is a 5-year plan. For the first time we are charting the future of our budget out over a 5-year period.

Best of all, by the end of the 5-year period, fiscal year 1995, it will have taken Social Security off budget. It will have reached the Gramm-Rudman target by 1993, and by 1995 we will no longer be dependent upon Social Security revenues to fund the day-to-day operations of the Government. That is extremely important.

It also, over the 5-year period, substitutes some more realistic economic assumptions of the Congressional Budget Office for those of OMB. That is another very important factor. Because one of the reasons the administration's budget was so far out of whack is because of those unrealistic economic assumptions.

PROCEED CAUTIOUSLY WITH SUPERCONDUCTING SUPER COLLIDER

(Mr. BOEHLERT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, shortly this House will take up the authorization legislation for the superconducting super collider, the biggest single nondefense project this Government has undertaken in recent memory.

There are three schools of thought on the superconducting super collider. One school says, "Let us proceed with dispatch. Let us not be confused with the facts. Let us just go ahead, start digging, start building." The second school of thought says, "Wait a minute, we should kill this project. We cannot affort it. It is too expensive." The third school, the one in which I am enrolled, says, "It is good science. The Nation probably should proceed with this project, but we should proceed with caution. Do not let the construction get ahead of the science."

During debate we will have several perfecting amendments, amendments that we think will represent the taxpayers' best interest and also protect the interests of the Nation and science.

I urge my colleagues to pay particular attention to this discussion. The superconducting super collider is a big deal for America, and let us proceed cautiously.

WORKERS MEMORIAL DAY

(Mr. JONTZ asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. JONTZ. Mr. Speaker, this past Saturday April 28 the workers of our Nation remembered their dead at Workers Memorial Day observances across the country.

Every year, more than 10,000 American's are killed on the job; 70,000 are permanently disabled. And more than 6.2 million are injured—100,000 workers die from occupational diseases, and 9 million more are exposed to cancer-causing chemicals.

Perhaps most tragic is the fact that many of these injuries, exposures, and deaths could be prevented. The Federal Government, through the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, has the responsibility to protect workers' health and safety, but they are not getting the job done.

Injury and illness rates for the 20 most hazardous industries actually increased by 10 percent between 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Speaker, this country's working families deserve safe workplaces. I hope that the Congress will address this issue before the next Workers Memorial Day, so that one day unsafe workplaces will truly be a thing of the past.

NEW YORK NAVAL HOMEPORT DESERVES SUPPORT

(Ms. MOLINARI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Speaker, yesterday two of my House colleagues offered legislation that would undo 5 years of military planning and effort and could thwart New York City's chances of financial survival. I am referring to recent efforts to kill all new naval homeports, including the port in New York which is 90 percent complete.

Among the reasons cited by my colleagues for this drastic move is the opposition to the port by New York City Mayor David Dinkins. David Dinkins visited us last week to spread irresponsible rhetoric against "sailing a potential Chernobyl into New York harbor" as he referred to U.S. Navy ships. He also claimed he was obligated to this course based on the mandate he received when elected in November.

I find this last assumption significantly challenging as David Dinkins was, in fact, elected with less than a 1 percent margin in a city where Democrats outnumber Republicans by 7 to 1. Mr. Dinkins, in fact, speaks about the homeport opposition while failing to acknowledge the abundance of support which exists throughout New York State for a homeport.

Governor Cuomo supports the port, as does Senator D'AMATO; the New York State Assembly has passed a resolution advocating the naval station while the Senate has done so twice. The speaker of the New York City Council and the majority of councilmembers as well as veterans, business and labor groups, and thousands of men, women, and children are all working in support of the port.

Finally, Mr. Speaker. I want to issue an open invitation to any of my House colleagues who still believe, as I do that the U.S. Navy—even in these days of diminished conflict—should still be the strongest seafaring fleet in the world. To those Members who believe military preparedness is more important than political posturing I invite you to join me during Fleet Week in June to welcome the Navy to her new home on Staten Island.

JOYRIDE FOR THE PHILIPPINES IS OVER

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, 3 years ago Corazon Aquino came to this Congress wearing yellow. She was asking, though, for more green, greenbacks that is, more cash. Even though she had already gotten half a billion dollars, $500 million, from this Congress, she asked for another $200 million, and after a 45-minute speech, she got an additional $100 million, and Members were wearing yellow; it was a real love-in.

I said then that if Congress hands out more green to the Philippines, we are going to end up singing the blues. Since then, Corazon Aquino has snubbed Dick Cheney doing a fine job at the Pentagon, and yesterday protestors marched on the gates of our bases down there and marched on our Embassy demanding that America go home, "Yankee go home. We don't want your bases."

Mr. Speaker, I am saying here today: The love-in should stop. It is time to tell the Philippines no more bases, no more money, no more participation, no more cash, the joyride is over.

Maybe Congress will realize that we do not buy friends, you gain respect.

Why do we not invest that money in America and put these countries in order?

THE FREEDOM TO WORK ACT

(Mr. GOSS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, in listening to some of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, I am reminded of some words of Shakespeare—"The lady doth protest too much, methinks."

Lately members of the other party have stood here in an apparently orchestrated program sounding their disharmony with the administration—but their criticisms hit a sour note because of one inescapable fact: Their party controls the Congress.

We all want to measure up to the goal of improving the quality of life for all Americans. That might happen if less time were spent President-bashing—and more time spent getting important legislation onto the floor for the voting process.

Just for example, the Older Americans Freedom to Work Act has been stuck in committee for almost 1 year, even though it has the support of more than 200 Members and the American people. This bill would do away with the discriminatory Social Security earnings limit that penalizes older Americans for working. It's a matter of fairness.

There are many good bills like this one that have been lost in the cacophony of partisanship. Perhaps we could take heed from other words of Shakespeare—"It's time for more matter with less art."

NEW INFORMATION ON THE GANDER TRAGEDY

(Mr. TALLON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TALLON. Mr. Speaker, I want to draw my colleagues' attention to an article in last Sunday's Chicago Tribune magazine which sheds new light on the Gander tragedy of 4 years ago which killed 248 soldiers of the Army 101st Airborne Division.

The Chicago Tribune has distributed copies of the article to every Member of Congress. I encourage all of my colleagues to read this enlightening six-page expose. As well, I have copies available in my office.

Also, I want to urge anyone who has any information on this tragedy to come forward to help us in getting to the bottom of this mystery.

INTRODUCTION OF THE STRIPED BASS PROTECTION ACT

(Mr. SAXTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Speaker, I am introducing a bill today to protect Atlantic striped bass in Federal waters. This bill will place a 3-year moratorium on the fishing of Atlantic striped bass in the exclusive economic zone [EEZ] of the United States. The moratorium will apply to both sport and commercial fishermen.

Congress has taken a special interest in this noble fish since 1984, when it passed the Atlantic Striped Bass Conservation Act. Indeed, this law has brought the bass stocks on the road to recovery.

This year the Atlantic States Marine Fisheries Commission took action to relax conservation measures in State waters by lowering minimum size limits, lifting moratoriums, and allowing directed fisheries. Many feel this action is premature and may endanger the conservation efforts achieved over the last few years.

That is why I am introducing this legislation today. Only a small percentage of striped bass are taken from Federal waters, but it is an important percentage—the larger spawning stock.

The National Marine Fisheries Service is currently pursuing the prohibition of harvesting striped bass in the EEZ. However, it is estimated that the earliest this ban could be in place is in the fall.

I invite my colleagues to cosponsor this bill to try to get protection in place as soon as possible and for a minimum of 3 years.

□ 1220

TIME TO INVEST IN THE FUTURE OF AMERICA

(Mr. LIPINSKI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, the cold war is over, and it's time for us to start investing in the future of America, not the protection of Europe and Japan. But, while the people in Red Square are telling their government to get out of town, the Bush administration is asking for more weapons. While America continues to build bombs which have no value, our friends around the world are building futures for their children. Mr. Speaker, it's time for America to wake up and create a national policy which makes us competitive.

Our roads are in disrepair. Our air and water needs help, and many of our high school graduates can't even find this great Nation on a map. We need to reinvest in these fundamental building blocks of a sound economy. How can America be competitive with decaying national infrastructure? If America is going to compete in the world, it has to start getting its own house in order. It's time for bridges, not bombs. Yet, the President and Arnold Schwartzenegger are at the White House trimming fat off their middles. I just hope they paid attention yesterday when the Democrats trimmed the fat off the budget.

CONTINUE AID TO EL SALVADOR

(Mr. DREIER of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, toward the end of his excellent op-ed piece in Monday's Washington Post, El Salvador's President Alfredo Cristiani said that we cannot allow the Marxist Faribundo Marti National Liberation Front, the FMLN, to win in Washington what they failed to win in El Salvador.

Well, what have we seen develop in Washington, Mr. Speaker? We have seen the Committee on Foreign Affairs in the last few days bring about a 50-percent cut in assistance to the duly elected government of El Salvador, and we have seen the task force which was charged with determining the validity of the case against Colonel Benavides dealing with the horrible massacre of Father Ellacuria and the other Jesuits last November come to the conclusion that they should support that 50-percent cut.

Then what happened, Mr. Speaker? Well, just today we saw two advisers of President Cristiani brutally murdered and an attempt made by the FMLN to kill President Cristiani, that done on the very day that negotiations were to proceed between the FMLN and the government of El Salvador.

Mr. Speaker, if we are going to bring about a resolution to this crisis in a country where there has been a dramatic increase in the flow of weapons from Nicaragua into El Salvador, it is essential that we continue this important aid package.

VOTE TO AUTHORIZE SUPERCONDUCTING SUPER COLLIDER

(Mr. CHAPMAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. Speaker, oftentimes one of the toughest questions we have to answer as legislators is, is it an appropriate expenditure of American tax dollars to invest in basic research and development?

Today on the floor of the House we will make the decision as to whether or not to authorize a high-technology research and development system, the superconducting super collider. In answering the question is that an appropriate expenditure and should we in the Government be involved as a partner in basic research and development, I think we should look to the past to see what that kind of investment has meant to us before.

We are told that fully 60 percent, 60 percent of our Gross National Product today, is a direct result of high energy physics research and discoveries of the atom, the components, the development of applied research that have led to the high-technology industries that are driving our economy today.

We in this body owe the taxpayers and citizens of our country the decisions that will make sure that competitiveness in the future and economic security are a part of what we are about.

Let us vote today to authorize the superconducting super collider.

TAXATION WITHOUT REPRESENTATION

(Mr. EMERSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, on a cold day in December 1773, our forefathers raided three ships in Boston Harbor, dumping precious tea into the waters, as they rallied against the tyranny of taxation without representation.

Fourteen years later, the U.S. Constitution promised that Americans would never again suffer taxation without representation.

Yet the Supreme Court recently handed down a decision which I find somewhat incredible. In the case of Missouri versus Jenkins, the Court gave Federal judges—appointed officials—a blank check to order local elected officials to raise taxes.

I am today joining in introducing a bill to limit Federal courts, from laying or increasing taxes, either directly or indirectly. The court's decision convolutes the mandates of the Federal Constitution, and it cannot be allowed to stand.

The Constitution reserves the power of taxation solely for the legislative branch of Government. Only those who are elected to be the voice of the people, and who must account for their actions at the polls each and every election day, should have the power to impose taxes on the people.

Judge Russell Clarke, a Federal judge in Kansas City, imposed a sweeping, $600 million desegregation plan on the school district. He also levied a property tax on the residents of Kansas City to pay for the plan, which includes a planetarium, an Olympic-size swimming pool, a 25-acre farm, movie editing and screening rooms, and a temperature-controlled art gallery.

Mr. Speaker, when our children study the history of world civilizations, we point with pride to ancient Greece and the roots of participatory democracy. But as Justice Kennedy said in his dissent, "Such lessons will be of little use to students who grow up to be taxpayers" in Kansas City.

HELP LITHUANIA REALIZE THE DREAM OF FREEDOM

(Mr. SARPALIUIS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SARPALIUS. Mr. Speaker, we must look at what the American dream is. What do we represent? We represent freedom, democracy, liberty. That dream is the same dream that the people of Lithuania have. Why in the world are we supporting communism in the country of Lithuania?

What they want is that same American dream. I have with me today a copy of the first newspaper ever printed in the country of Lithuania that was not edited by the government. That is what freedom is all about.

When I came to Lithuania, when I visited that country recently, you should have heard the enthusiasm of those people, where they said now we get to worship our God publicly, now we get to go to church on Sundays. That is what the American dream is all about.

So I challenge our President to recognize the country of Lithuania, and give them that same dream that we cherish so much in this country, the dream of freedom.

HUMAN RIGHTS IN EL SALVADOR MUST IMPROVE

(Mr. BATES asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BATES. Mr. Speaker, through more than 10 long years of civil war, the people of El Salvador have endured tremendous suffering. Much of that suffering has been at the hands of their own military. Much of that suffering has been at the hands of U.S. tax-supported military. It is time, Mr. Speaker, in fact, it is past time, to end our support of human rights abuses in El Salvador.

We must send a serious message to the Salvadorean military, judicial system, and government, that we will not continue to support a system where repression is tolerated and where human rights abuses go unpunished.

Mr. Speaker, military aid to El Salvador should be eliminated, at least made conditional upon improvements in the human rights situation in El Salvador. If human rights are to improve in El Salvador, there must be reforms in the military and those responsible for the murder of the priests must be brought to justice.

□ 1230

SDI TECHNOLOGY DISPLAY

(Mr. KYL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KYL. Mr. Speaker, I would like to extend a special invitation to you and my colleagues to visit the special "SDI Tech," technology display which has just started at noon today. It is in the House Armed Services Committee hearing room, room 2118, Rayburn. It is going to be conducted today and tomorrow.

Today between 12 and 1 o'clock members of the press are invited, and at 1:30 this afternoon Vice President QUAYLE is going to stop by to view this technology. There is a special opportunity for Members only between 4 and 7 o'clock this afternoon to visit with the contractors and the laboratories which have SDI technology on display, to visit with them about it. For example, Dr. Lowell Wood of the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory will be there and will actually show Members Brilliant Pebbles and describe how it works. In addition, tomorrow it will be open from 9 to 3 o'clock and members of the public are invited to stop by for these special displays.

We have achieved a lot of progress with the SDI technology. Here is an opportunity for all Members to see just exactly what we have achieved, and I urge my colleagues to stop by room 2118 in the Rayburn Building to visit this SDI technology.

CORRECTION OF MISREPRESENTATION OF EVENT HELD BY REPRESENTATIVE TRAXLER

(Mr. TRAXLER asked and was given premission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAXLER. Mr. Speaker, an article entitled "PAC-Man Pursues Hectic Schedule," in today's paper unfortunately leaves the reader with the belief that is totally false and an inaccurate impression that an event I hosted in the Rayburn House Office Building on April 25 was a political fundraising event.

Mr. Speaker, I want my colleagues to know that I would never violate the House rules by hosting a fund-raiser in a House office building. This was an annual event as an expression of gratitude to coincide with my special election date and nothing more and nothing less.

I thank the Speaker for this opportunity to correct the record.

INTRODUCTION OF THE J. KENNETH ROBINSON POST OFFICE BILL

(Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extent his remarks.)

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I rise today, with the entire Virginia delegation, to introduce legislation to designate the post office in Winchester VA, as the "J. Kenneth Robinson Postal Building."

I believe that such a tribute to a man who gave so many years of service to his community, Virginia and to our country is appropriate and deserved.

As most of you know, Kenneth Robinson served as a Member of this body for 14 years. He was the ranking member of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. He also served with uncommon distinction as a member of the Appropriations Committee.

As I have said before, Kenneth left a legacy of service and accomplishment that few men in longer lifetimes have been able to approach.

I hope all of you will consponsor this bill.

STRATEGIC HOMEPORTING—AN IDEA WHOSE TIME HAS PASSED

(Mr. PICKETT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PICKETT. Mr. Speaker, after 8 years, the strategic homeporting program looks as inappropriate today as it did in 1982. Last week, the General Accounting Office told the Armed Services Committee that the program exceeds cost estimates by $200 million and is behind schedule.

The GAO also reported that original cost estimates ignored the cost of structures and support facilities essential to homeport operations that will cost additional millions. Many residents in proposed new homeport communities are expressing growing opposition to these projects. With these developments, the GAO recommendation that "before the Navy proceeds with the strategic homeporting program it must reconsider the need for the program in light of changing world events and budget cutbacks" is even more compelling.

Mr. Speaker, by adopting legislation which was introduced late yesterday to suspend the strategic homeporting program, Congress has the rare chance to save hundreds of millions of dollars without cancelling a weapon system, without closing a base, without eliminating personnel, without decommissioning a ship, and most important, without reducing America's military strength.

I ask all members to join me in this effort.

THE B-2 PRODUCTION TERMINATION ACT

(Mr. ROWLAND of Connecticut asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ROWLAND of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, in our continuing effort to inform the American people about the cost and duplication of the B-2 bomber, I would like to point out that last week Secretary Cheney came before the House Armed Services Committee to present the findings and recommendations of his major aircraft study. One of the programs reviewed was the B-2 bomber, and Mr. Cheney recommended trimming the total procurement from 132 aircraft to 75.

For the last few years the Pentagon informed us that 132 was the magical number. They had to have 132 bombers. Now it is 75. We believe it should be 15.

The 75 B-2's represent a cut of 40 percent in the total program and drives the cost per bomber up to $880 million. We still have not adequately addressed the lack of effective stealth technology, the hairline fractures in the airframe and the questionable nature of the mission.

The procurement funding for the remaining 60 bombers under the plan is still running at an average of $8 billion to $9 billion per year, and yesterday the Democratic majority passed a budget which will have a devastating cut in the defense budget. We cannot have major cuts and the B-2 bomber.

Support the B-2 Production Termination Act and build 15 bombers.

FULBRIGHT PROGRAM IS A SUCCESS

(Mr. CLARKE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CLARKE. Mr. Speaker, the Fulbright Scholarship Program, started in 1946, is a student exchange program between the United States and other countries that has worked well.

Almost 50,000 living Americans have received Fulbright fellowships for study abroad. Most of them are at work in American business, education, government and other fields with a better understanding of the world we live in.

There are dramatic results in the case of Fulbright alumni from some other countries. Three members of Poland's Solidarity-led government had Fulbright scholarships. A majority of South Korea's cabinet received Fulbright awards for study in America. One of Soviet President Gorbachev's senior advisers, Aleksandr Yakolev, studied American History as a Fulbright scholar at Columbia.

Former Fulbright scholars hold influential positions in many other countries. More than 30 nations now contribute to the cost of the program. For example, West Germany pays 80 percent of the cost of its exchange.

The administration's fiscal year 1990-91 budget recommends no substantial change for the Fulbright program. Because of rising costs this will continue a 23-percent drop in the number of Fulbright exchange students.

When the peace dividend actually takes place the Fulbright Program deserves consideration for an increase. Its record is too good to overlook.

MISSOURI VERSUS JENKINS

(Mr. LIVINGSTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, late last month, the U.S. Supreme Court issued its now-famous Missouri versus Jenkins verdict. That decision upheld a Federal judge's order that local property taxes in Missouri be raised to fund construction of a magnet school system developed by that same judge. As if the tax increase alone were not outrageous enough, the judge's order directly contravenes procedures set forth in Missouri's constitution, which mandates voter approval of property tax increases.

Mr. Speaker, the High Court's decision makes a mockery not only of the Missouri Constitution, but also the U.S. Constitution, by permitting a Federal judge to circumvent the principle of no taxation without representation. The decision arrogates to unelected, unaccountable, life-tenured judges the power to tax the American people—and the people have no recourse.

In short, Mr. Speaker, the idea that we, as legislators, have sole power of the purse, has turned out to be like the Maginot Line—a mere inconvenience that the Judiciary can simply go around at will.

I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to join us in cosponsoring H.R. 4683, the Judicial Taxation Prohibition Act, which would prohibit this sort of encroachment on our proper, constitutional powers.

IN SUPPORT OF H.R. 770, THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT OF 1989

(Mr. WEISS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, we all know that the composition of the American work force has changed dramatically over the past three decades. Women have entered the work force in such great numbers that both parents are now working outside the home in the vast majority of American families.

Dozens of States have stepped in to provide family and medical leave policies, but the Federal Government has done nothing to reflect these changes.

However, there is a proposal in Congress to help families deal with the burdens they face in the 1990's. The Family and Medical Leave Act would give people the flexibility to take time off to start a family or to take care of a family health problem. It is hardly a radical proposal to give job security to new parents or employees who must care for a sick relative.

H.R. 770 enjoys significant bipartisan support. It is supported by the Congressional Caucus for Women's Issues. A recent survey showed that over 4 out of every 5 Americans support the Family and Medical Leave Act. Yet, President Bush does not support H.R. 770. Once again, it seems, the President's actions contradict his rhetoric.

I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to actively support the Family and Medical Leave Act.

H.R. 4380, THE SUPERCONDUCTING SUPER COLLIDER

(Mr. SMITH of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of Texas. Mr. Speaker, as we vote on the issue of SSC funding today, we are sending a signal to our Nation's students, scientists, and engineers. Do we want America to be the world leader in the area of advanced physics research? The answer is a resounding "yes!"

Over the coming years, technological ability will replace defense superiority as a measure of global leadership. At no other time will it be so important to be at the forefront of science and technology. The SSC will give us the tool to do just that.

Some Members of Congress have concerns that the SSC will "crowd out" smaller science projects. The SSC likely will do just the opposite. By allowing greater involvement by universities, for example, the SSC will allow students to propose new and ingenious experiments to be conducted at the SSC, students who otherwise would not have access to such a facility.

We can show our commitment to American scientific leadership by strongly supporting the SSC.

□ 1240

TIME TO PHASE OUT UNITED STATES MILITARY AID TO EL SALVADOR

(Mr. MOODY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MOODY. Mr. Speaker, earlier reports of FMLN attack on the residence of El Salvador's President Alfredo Cristiani have now proven to be false. However, we must condemn the recent attack on the eve of the peace talks.

But we must also condemn the continued violence by the Government against its own citizenry. Seventy thousand El Salvadorans have been killed so far in the war—mostly unarmed civilians, many of them executed at point-blank range by uniformed soldiers and/or death squads.

Last month marked the 10th anniversary of the murder of Archbishop Romero, a murder never seriously investigated by the Government.

Since that time there have been numerous atrocities such as the murder of the American nuns, Las Obas and Strastiani, massacres and the killing of U.S. agricultural workers, also never prosecuted.

Most recently we have seen the massacre of the Jesuit priests and their housekeeper by armed soldiers acting on orders from above. Again the Government shows no serious inclination to bring the high-up authors to this dastardly act to justice.

Peace will never come to this tortured land—nor human rights abuses end on both sides—unless United States policy is redesigned to bring about an end of the war by phased out United States aid, very much like we did in Nicaragua.

STRENGTHENING POLITICAL PARTIES

(Mr. WOLF asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, our Nation's political parties give us ideas, passion, and the discipline to make tough choices—three items which our political system desperately needs.

Our parties are unifying forces which provide reliable, consistent, and coherent communication with the American voters. However, our parties are losing the struggle for influence because their hands are tied by contribution limitations. Under the current system, parties have no more ability to make direct contributions to their own nominees than special interest political action committees.

Mr. Speaker, to strengthen our political parties and ensure that more challengers can run competitive races, we should remove all limits on political parties' contributions to candidates. Of course, full disclosure and reporting to the Federal Election Commission must be required.

Let's take away the special interest influence and give it back to our citizen-based political parties, and therefore to the American people, where the power and accountability belong.

LOWER MERCED RIVER MAY BE ADDED TO WILD AND SCENIC RIVER ACT

(Mr. CONDIT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CONDIT. Mr. Speaker, 3 years ago the 100th Congress adopted legislation that guaranteed Yosemite Valley's river, the Merced, would be protected for future generations to enjoy by adding its main stem and beautiful south fork to the Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

Today it is my pleasure to introduce legislation that would extend this protection to the lower portion of the Merced River. This section was put in as a study section by the 100th Congress so that the local county of Mariposa would have the opportunity to develop a domestic water system compatible with the requirements of the Wild and Scenic River Act. The legislation I propose today would accomplish this goal.

This legislation is supported by the Wilderness Society, the Merced Canyon Committee, the Mariposa County Board of Supervisors and the Mariposa County Water Agency.

The pristine quality of the lower Merced River make it a worthy addition to the Wild and Scenic River Act so that present and future generations can enjoy and experience its beauty.

THE SPORT ACT OF 1990

(Mr. CONTE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing the Sport Act of 1990—a special program of recreational training for youthful residents of public housing developments.

Mr. Speaker, this program is designed to turn the kids of public housing away from drugs and toward a healthier and happier lifestyle.

The program I am proposing dedicates 5 percent of public housing drug elimination grants to programs promoting sports and cultural activities in public housing.

The program, which would provide grants to PHA's, voluntary organizations and local governments, would replace a similar program administered by HUD prior to the HUD Reform Act of 1989.

When Congress eliminated the Secretary's discretionary fund, late at night in the final hours of the last session, it also eliminated the authority under which Jack Kemp's "bats and balls" program was previously operated. My bill would provide authority and guidelines for a new program to promote organized sports activities at public housing developments.

Under the Sport Act, grants would be awarded for an array of activities, including acquisition of sports equipment, development of recreational areas and operation of sports leagues.

I invite my colleagues to join my sports-minded friends, the distinguished MO UDALL and TOM MCMILLEN, and myself in cosponsoring this important legislation. Be a sport: cosponsor the Sport Act of 1990.

OUR COUNTRY NEEDS MR. SEIDMAN RUNNING FDIC

(Mr. SCHUMER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, there is even more bad news for the country and the American taxpayer on the S&L bailout.

At the same time that the estimated cost of the bailout is skyrocketing—from a nightmarish $160 billion to an unimaginable upper range of $500 billion—the President is planning to replace the one experienced manager we have on the job. That would be a mistake.

William Seidman has been a voice of integrity and intelligence in the cesspool of the S&L scandal.

Mr. Speaker, the country needs Mr. Seidman running FDIC more than ever. Without him, the costs are likely to go even higher.

That is why 23 members of the Banking Committee sent you a letter yesterday, urging you to not let Mr. Seidman leave.

Why should this country abandon the service of one of the few credible regulators who have experience in cleaning up the S&L mess?

When S&L time bombs are going off all over the country we simply cannot afford the 6 months to train new senior regulators, the people who must defuse those time bombs.

It has been 9 months since the S&L bailout was passed. In that time the administration has ignored the problem as if it would go away if no one paid attention.

I am deeply concerned that this administration is blaming the messenger for bad news. Getting rid of Mr. Seidman may temporarily cool the political heat. But the fire will burn even worse without him.

H.R. 2589, THE WORKERS POLITICAL RIGHTS ACT

(Mr. DELAY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, the debate over campaign reform has been increasing and the American public needs to know that the Republicans are the voice of real campaign reform in the House.

House Republicans endorsed a proposal for serious campaign reform more than 7 months ago. That proposal incorporates the provisions of a bill I introduced, H.R. 2589, the Workers Political Rights Act.

In June 1988, the United States Supreme Court decided the case of the Communication Workers of America versus Harry Beck.

The high court held that unions may be allowed to force workers to contribute to pay for collective bargaining, contract administration and grievance adjustment, but not for nonrepresentational activities such as political lobbying and campaign-related activities.

The first amendment to the Constitution guarantees each person's right to political dissent. It is a basic liberty which has set America apart from all other nations for more than 200 years.

Unfortunately union leaders appear to disagree. They have refused to inform their members of rights as defined under the Beck decision. They continue to stonewall union members who want to stop the flow of their money into many of the leftist causes and candidates that union leaders support. Hundreds of cases of workers seeking to restore their political freedom clog our judicial system.

Thomas Jefferson once wrote:

To compel a man to furnish contributions of money for the propagation of opinions in which he disbelieves and abhors, is sinful and tyrannical.

The Republican Members of the House agree and we want to stop this oppressive practice and restore the basic political rights of American workers.

Unfortunately, the Democrats have been deafening in their silence on this issue. Democrats have refused to say that they will stop this political tyranny and protect the American worker.

The American public knows that Republicans are the voice for real campaign reform and will protect the political rights of all workers.

Democrats need to realize there can be no serious campaign reform without Beck.

PUERTO RICAN PLEBISCITE

(Mr. SERRANO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today on behalf of my 3.3 million fellow American citizens from the island of Puerto Rico who clamor to exercise their right to determine the political status of their native island with respect to the United States as a whole.

It is with a special purpose that I refer to native Puerto Ricans as my "fellow American citizens." I am certain that no Member of this esteemed body is unaware of their unique status, but many Americans are. Indeed, I must confess, with apologies for any embarrassment I may cause him, that even a young member of my own staff did not know that native Puerto Ricans are United States citizens. His confusion probably stemmed from the fact that Puerto Rico has a rare Commonwealth status that makes it neither a State within the Union, nor an independent country, but something in between.

It is not surprising that many are uncertain about these matters. The status of Puerto Rico simply does not concern most Americans.

However, Mr. Speaker, Puerto Rican Americans are ever conscious of the status of their native island. For them the status of Puerto Rico is not an idle piece of trivia, but a reality that is fundamental to their very identities. It is an issue that cannot be neglected.

I strongly urge that the people of Puerto Rico be provided the opportunity to determine for themselves, by referendum, whether their island shall remain a Commonwealth, seek admission as a State of the Union, or become an independent nation.

Our colleagues in the Senate have introduced a bill, S. 712, which calls for a referendum in Puerto Rico in the summer of 1991 to determine the island's political status. It is imperative that we do not fall behind in this effort and that we develop our own bill in the House as soon as possible. This will allow our brothers and sisters in Puerto Rico to make a choice in the referendum without lengthy and unnecessary delays.

One improvement over S. 712 that I would like to see incorporated in a House resolution on the status referendum would be to provide that all Puerto Rican-born United States citizens, wherever they may now live, be allowed to take part in the referendum. The present Senate bill would unfairly exclude from participation Puerto Rican-born American citizens who happen not to live on the island at the time of the referendum.

Mr. Speaker, it is time for the House of Representatives to act expeditiously on this issue. The holding of the referendum in Puerto Rico in 1991 is not only good for the people of Puerto Rico, but for the credibility of American democracy in this era of stunning democratic progress. As we in the United States strive to encourage and foster these developments around the world, it is essential that we hold true to our principles at home and provide the people of Puerto Rico the opportunity to decide the political status of their native island.

□ 1250

SOVIET MILITARY BUILDUP

(Mr. BURTON of Indiana asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, the Democrat budget passed yesterday would cut $33 billion in defense. Not just cutting the fat or waste, but their budget cuts into the muscle and bone of our defense. Before the Democrats did this, they should have checked into what the Soviets have been doing.

Here are the facts: The Soviets last year increased their defense spending by 17 percent of their GNP. The Soviets have not slowed down their shipbuilding program. In 1989, they added 7 guided missile destroyers, an aircraft carrier, and 9 more submarines, and 10 more are under production. The Soviets have increased SS–25 production from 125 to 220 in the last year. The Soviets have dramatically increased their bomber production. The Soviets increased T–80 tank production from 3,000 the year before last to 4,000 last year.

Mr. Speaker, before we decimate our defenses, as my Democrat friends want to do, we should be informed and not make the same mistakes which were made prior to World War II.

POLICY STATEMENT NEEDED ON EL SALVADOR

(Mr. CARDIN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, the brutal killing of six Jesuit priests, their cook, and her daughter horrified the world and reinforced the perception—and reality—that there is absolutely no punishment for those who vilate human rights in El Salvador.

The just released Moakley report issued by Speaker FOLEY's task force on El Salvador to monitor the investigation by Salvadoran authorities into the November 16 massacre states that "as of mid-April the investigation and preparations for prosecuting the case have come to a virtual standstill." The task force ran into real problems when discussing the matter with high officials in the Salvadoran armed forces, who for the most part, have not been questioned about the murders. Some were upset that the blame for the murders was being heaped on the military, yet none expressed regret at the immorality of the incident. While they may have thought that the murders were stupid and regretful, none condemned them for being wrong.

The task force expresses my frustration that "the institutional nature of the problems in El Salvador is demonstrated, as well, by the fact that the Jesuits' case reflects the Salvadoran justice system at its best, not its worst." This conclusion is reached after millions of American dollars have been sent to El Salvador to support judicial reform.

The Moakley report only serves to reinforce the importance of the negotiations that are due to being between the Cristiani government and the FMLN. There is real optimism about these talks and a sense that the discussions are different from those in the past.

The time is ripe for Congress to make a fundamental policy statement on El Salvador. Over the past decade the U.S. Government has contributed over $3.5 billion in this war torn country where over 70,000 people have lost their lives.

I applaud the approach of the House Foreign Affairs Committee which recently included a provision in the foreign aid authorization bill to withhold 50 percent of U.S. military aid to provide a set of incentives and disincentives to keep both sides at the negotiating table. This provision will enhance President Cristiani's ability to respond to the needs of his country. Neither economic support funds nor development aid are affected by this provision. For far too long the military has had a free reign in El Salvador at the expense of the American taxpayers. It is time to send them a message that will encourage real reform. The Foreign Affairs Committee approach does just that.

FRANKING

(Mr. FRENZEL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing House Resolution 386 to reform the frank. My bill and the bill introduced today by my Republican leader, BOB MICHEL, are both designed to eliminate House franking overdrafts.

We have all seen the press reports that have pointed a finger at the House for overdrawing the postal account by some $38 million. The House is overdue to solve the problem of runaway franking costs. Both the Frenzel and the Michel bill would put an end to franking benefits.

The Frenzel bill would accomplish the following:

First, establish an official mail allowance account for each Member that would be based on the actual House franking appropriation. This provision alone would save $35 to $40 million in 1992.

Second, the Frenzel bill further limits postal patron mailings from the current 3 to 1. It also limits town meeting notices to one. If the House adopted only this provision, the resulting savings would be some 300 million pieces of mail or some $30 million in taxpayer paid postal costs.

Third, requires the House to disclose in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD twice a year, showing total number of mailings and the number of pieces in each.

Fourth, postal patrons and town meeting notices shall contain the following disclaimer "Prepared, published and mailed at taxpayer expense." The Senate has adopted this requirement.

Fifth, all mass mailings, including direct response mail over 500 pieces, will now need a written advisory from the Franking Commission.

Sixth, finally, the bill prohibits the use of official mail allowance to pay for third class bulk rate express mail. In 1988, the House paid $10 million to have our third-class orange bags sent by air, rather than by truck to the postal centers.

Clearly, this House must act to cut franking expenses. The most recent postal estimates show that the House franking deficit is more than the Senate's total spending for the frank. Both the Frenzel and the Michel bill would address this deficit. We should act now.

EL SALVADOR DESERVES SHOT AT FREEDOM

(Mr. DORNAN of California asked permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DORNAN of California. Mr. Speaker, one of our prior deputy ambassadors to the United Nations a few years back called the General Assembly up there a cavern of wind. Well, that is what this Chamber is turning into on defense and foreign policy—a cave of hot air and wind.

I do not understand these speeches on El Salvador. The liberals in this Chamber were wrong, wrong, wrong on Nicaragua. They did everything they could to throw every road block in the way to pressure the nine Communist commandante thugs into having an election. Once they had the election, the people spoke out. El Salvador has a fine president, Cristiani, a graduate of Georgetown. They are trying to kill him again, and on the eve of the peace talks, I mean within 48 hours, what did the Communists do for Farobundo Marti in El Salvador? They blow up powerlines and kill people. That is how they go into peace talks if they are a Communist in Central America—kill people.

We have Democrats up here who act like allies—excuse me, liberals up here who are trying to chop the Cristiani government, the rightwing death squads and the leftwing death squads. The Communists will rip that country apart if they pull out our support. Let Members at least give El Salvador a better shot than we gave Nicaragua which, so far, achieved liberty in spite of the worst efforts of this Chamber and the other one, as a matter of fact, the U.S. Senate. In spite of the road blocks, Mrs. Chamorro is the President of what can be a free Nicaragua. Let Members stop trying to hurt El Salvador, and let Members give them a shot at freedom.

SUPERCONDUCTING SUPER COLLIDER PROJECT AUTHORIZATION ACT OF 1990

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 379 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 379

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 4380) to authorize appropriations for the Superconducting Super Collider, and for other purposes, and the first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and which shall not exceed one hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. It shall be in order to consider the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology printed in the bill as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the five-minute rule and each section shall be considered as having been read. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MONTGOMERY). The gentleman from Texas [Mr. FROST] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, for the purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], and pending that, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 379 is an open rule providing for the consideration of H.R. 4380, the Superconducting Super Collider Project Authorization Act of 1990. The rule provides for 1 hour of general debate to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology. The rule also provides for one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

House Resolution 379 provides that when the bill is considered for amendment under the 5-minute rule, that it shall be in order to consider the amendment in the nature of a substitute now printed in the bill as original text for the purpose of amendment. The rule further provides that each section of the bill shall be considered as having been read and at the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and allows any Member to demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute. Finally, Mr. Speaker, the rule provides that the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except the motion to recommit with or without instructions.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 4380 authorizes funds for the research development, design, construction, and operation of the superconducting super collider. Last year, the Congress agreed to proceed with the construction of the SSC and this year's modest authorization level will allow the project to move forward. The bill authorizes funding for the SSC in three stages: First $220 million for initial R&D activities; second, $1.17 billion upon submission of specified planning documentation, the completion of a prototype design and certification that industry can begin prototype magnet production; and third, $5.98 billion for completion of the project when the Secretary of Energy certifies the successful completion of the in situ magnet assembly test.

The SSC authorization, as reported by the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, also addresses the concerns of cost overruns by limiting Federal funding for the project to $5 billion and requires the State of Texas to contribute not less than $1 billion and international and other non-Federal contributions to be between one-fifth and one-third of the total project cost.

Mr. Speaker, I believe the costs associated with the SSC project are a justifiable expense for our Government. The SSC represents a golden opportunity to help ensure that the United States remains on the cutting edge of scientific research. It means that the United States will lead the way in discovering new techologies and developing innovative solutions to the problems we will encounter in the 21st century. It also promises to pay tremendous dividends in another way, by encouraging our Nation's youth to pursue educational opportunities in science and engineering. The completion of the SSC should be a priority item in our pursuit of national excellence; it will provide an opportunity for the United States to lead the world in the development of science and technology for many years to come.

Mr. Speaker, I urge adoption of House Resolution 379 so that the House may proceed to the consideration of this most important legislation.

□ 1300

Mr. Speaker, I yield, for the purpose of making a unanimous-consent request only, to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS].

PERMISSION FOR COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY TO SIT ON TODAY DURING THE 5-MINUTE RULE

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary may be permitted to sit on today while the House is reading for amendment under the 5-minute rule.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MONTGOMERY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I have advised the chairman of the committee that I have a meeting that has been set up with Secretary of Agriculture Yeutter involving the entire California delegation for 3 o'clock today. It is an important meeting, and I cannot be in two places at one time. If the gentleman will agree to stop the deliberations of the Judiciary Committee at 3 o'clock, so the delegation can meet with Secretary Yeutter and I can be there, because I am involved in the issue, I will withdraw my reservation of objection. But I have some amendments I want to offer to the bill, and I cannot be in two places at one time.

I appreciate what the gentleman is trying to do to move this along, but I have this problem as well.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, I say to my friend, the gentleman from California, that we would be finished if it were not for the fact that the gentleman had three more amendments, having already had one, and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MCCOLLUM] had another amendment, having had some, and the gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. DOUGLAS] had four——

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, it takes 10 Members standing to object to this request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, may I continue?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair understands the gentleman has a further comment, and the Chair recognizes the gentleman.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, let me continue and say that I have cleared this with the ranking Republican, the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH]. He is to have called the Republican management, and he agrees this is essential if we are going to finish the Americans With Disabilities Act today, as most of us had hoped, including the White House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that it takes 10 Members to object, and the Chair will count Members standing.

An insufficient number has arisen.

Without sufficient objection, the request is granted.

There was no sufficient objection.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, at the outset, let me just take this opportunity to commend the gentleman in the chair on the award he received last night at a very nice affair on the Korean War Memorial.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join with the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FROST] in urging support for this open rule.

House Resolution 379 is a fully open rule. There are no waivers of House rules or restrictions placed on amendments under the terms of this rule. And so the House will have ample opportunity to debate the merits of H.R. 4380, which makes authorizations for the superconducting super collider project in Texas.

Mr. Speaker, as the United States, and indeed the entire world, prepares to enter the 21st century, it is absolutely essential for our country to stay at the cutting edge of scientific advancement and discovery. The superconducting super collider will help enable us to do that.

We are excited over the successful mission last week which placed the Hubble space telescope in orbit. That device will enable scientists to peer all the way to the edge of the universe—and all the way back to the beginning of time itself. The superconducting super collider will help enable scientists to unravel the mysteries of the universe that the Hubble space telescope will be photographing.

Mr. Speaker, these are exciting times. Enactment of H.R. 4380 will help keep America No. 1 in the realm of scientific exploration and technological development, the fruits of which are a benefit to all mankind.

And so I urge support of this open rule.

Mr. Speaker, I have no requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device and there were—yeas 406, nays 0, not voting 27, as follows:

[Roll No. 90]

YEAS—406

Anderson	Dingell	Huckaby
Andrews	Dixon	Hughes
Annunzio	Donnelly	Hunter
Applegate	Dorgan (ND)	Hutto
Archer	Dornan (CA)	Hyde
Armey	Douglas	Inhofe
Aspin	Downey	Ireland
Atkins	Dreier	Jacobs
AuCoin	Duncan	James
Baker	Durbin	Jenkins
Ballenger	Dwyer	Johnson (CT)
Barnard	Dymally	Johnson (SD)
Bartlett	Dyson	Johnston
Barton	Early	Jones (GA)
Bateman	Eckart	Jones (NC)
Bates	Edwards (CA)	Jontz
Bellenson	Edwards (OK)	Kanjorski
Bennett	Emerson	Kaptur
Bentley	Engel	Kasich
Bereuter	English	Kastenmeier
Berman	Erdreich	Kennedy
Bevill	Espy	Kennelly
Bilbray	Evans	Kildee
Bilirakis	Fascell	Kleczka
Bliley	Fawell	Kolbe
Boehlert	Fazio	Kolter
Boggs	Feighan	Kostmayer
Bonior	Fields	Kyl
Borski	Fish	LaFalce
Boucher	Flake	Lagomarsino
Boxer	Foglietta	Lancaster
Brennan	Ford (MI)	Lantos
Brooks	Ford (TN)	Laughlin
Broomfield	Frank	Leach (IA)
Browder	Frost	Leath (TX)
Brown (CA)	Gallegly	Lehman (FL)
Brown (CO)	Gallo	Lent
Bruce	Gaydos	Levin (MI)
Bryant	Gejdenson	Levine (CA)
Buechner	Gekas	Lewis (CA)
Bunning	Gephardt	Lewis (FL)
Burton	Geren	Lewis (GA)
Bustamante	Gibbons	Lipinski
Byron	Gillmor	Livingston
Callahan	Gilman	Lloyd
Campbell (CA)	Gingrich	Long
Campbell (CO)	Glickman	Lowery (CA)
Cardin	Gonzalez	Lowey (NY)
Carper	Goodling	Luken, Thomas
Carr	Goss	Machtley
Chandler	Gradison	Madigan
Chapman	Grandy	Manton
Clarke	Grant	Markey
Clay	Gray	Marlenee
Clement	Green	Martin (IL)
Clinger	Guarini	Martin (NY)
Coble	Gunderson	Martinez
Coleman (MO)	Hall (TX)	Mazzoli
Coleman (TX)	Hamilton	McCandless
Combest	Hammerschmidt	McCloskey
Condit	Hancock	McCollum
Conte	Harris	McCrery
Conyers	Hastert	McCurdy
Cooper	Hatcher	McDade
Costello	Hawkins	McDermott
Coughlin	Hayes (IL)	McEwen
Courter	Hayes (LA)	McGrath
Cox	Hefley	McHugh
Coyne	Hefner	McMillan (NC)
Crane	Henry	McMillen (MD)
Dannemeyer	Herger	McNulty
Darden	Hertel	Meyers
Davis	Hiler	Mfume
de la Garza	Hoagland	Michel
DeFazio	Hochbrueckner	Miller (CA)
DeLay	Holloway	Miller (OH)
Dellums	Hopkins	Miller (WA)
Derrick	Horton	Mineta
DeWine	Houghton	Moakley
Dickinson	Hoyer	Molinari
Dicks	Hubbard	Mollohan
Montgomery	Roberts	Spratt
Moody	Robinson	Staggers
Moorhead	Roe	Stallings
Morella	Rogers	Stangeland
Morrison (CT)	Rohrabacher	Stark
Morrison (WA)	Ros-Lehtinen	Stearns
Mrazek	Rose	Stenholm
Murphy	Rostenkowski	Stokes
Murtha	Roth	Studds
Myers	Roukema	Stump
Nagle	Rowland (CT)	Sundquist
Natcher	Rowland (GA)	Swift
Neal (MA)	Roybal	Synar
Neal (NC)	Russo	Tallon
Nelson	Sabo	Tanner
Nielson	Sangmeister	Tauke
Nowak	Sarpalius	Tauzin
Oakar	Sawyer	Taylor
Oberstar	Saxton	Thomas (CA)
Obey	Schaefer	Thomas (GA)
Olin	Scheuer	Thomas (WY)
Ortiz	Schiff	Torres
Owens (NY)	Schneider	Towns
Owens (UT)	Schroeder	Traficant
Oxley	Schuette	Traxler
Packard	Schulze	Udall
Pallone	Schumer	Unsoeld
Panetta	Sensenbrenner	Upton
Parker	Sharp	Valentine
Parris	Shaw	Vento
Pashayan	Shays	Visclosky
Patterson	Shumway	Volkmer
Paxon	Shuster	Vucanovich
Payne (NJ)	Sikorski	Walgren
Payne (VA)	Sisisky	Walker
Pease	Skaggs	Walsh
Pelosi	Skeen	Washington
Penny	Skelton	Watkins
Perkins	Slattery	Waxman
Petri	Slaughter (NY)	Weber
Pickett	Slaughter (VA)	Weiss
Pickle	Smith (IA)	Weldon
Porter	Smith (NE)	Whittaker
Poshard	Smith (NJ)	Whitten
Price	Smith (TX)	Williams
Pursell	Smith (VT)	Wise
Quillen	Smith, Denny (OR)	Wolf
Rangel		Wolpe
Ravenel	Smith, Robert (NH)	Wyden
Ray		Wylie
Regula	Smith, Robert (OR)	Yates
Rhodes		Yatron
Richardson	Snowe	Young (AK)
Ridge	Solarz	Young (FL)
Rinaldo	Solomon
Ritter	Spence

NAYS—0

NOT VOTING—27

Ackerman	Frenzel	Rahall
Akaka	Gordon	Saiki
Alexander	Hall (OH)	Savage
Anthony	Hansen	Serrano
Bosco	Lehman (CA)	Smith (FL)
Collins	Lightfoot	Torricelli
Craig	Lukens, Donald	Vander Jagt
Crockett	Matsui	Wheat
Flippo	Mavroules	Wilson

□ 1327

So the resolution was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MONTGOMERY). Pursuant to House Resolution 379 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee on the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 4380.

□ 1329

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 4380) to authorize appropriations for the superconducting super collider, and for other purposes, with Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

Under the rule, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE].

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I my consume.

□ 1330

Madam Chairman, today, as we discuss the proposed superconducting super collider [SSC] project, we are debating one of the most important science and technology pieces of legislation that will come before the House of Representatives during the 101st Congress. What is at stake in H.R. 4380 is nothing less than American leadership in science, technology, and education. And if we are not willing to fight for leadership in these areas, we are not going to create the new wealth of tomorrow. Science, space, technology, and education—those are the areas from which we will create American jobs in the 21st century.

There can be no question that the SSC will be a critical component of our commitment to scientific and technological excellence. It will be the largest particle accelerator ever built, with 10 times the power of the premier machines currently operating in the United States and Europe. We believe that the SSC will be the most significant ground-based science project to be undertaken by the United States in the last quarter of the 20th century.

Madam Chairman, opponents of the SSC have attempted to give the impression that questions concerning both its cost and the technologies needed to build it have bitterly divided the scientific community and the Congress. In fact, nothing could be further from the truth. As one would expect from any multibillion-dollar project, there have been vigorous debates over the past 4 years concerning the importance of the SSC to this Nation's scientific future. But whenever the project has been subject either to a scientific review or to a congressional vote, the message has been clear: keep the project on schedule. In 1988, we overwhelmingly passed a bill which authorized funding for the SSC, although the bill was not taken up in the other body. Last summer, the House killed an amendment 330 to 93 which would have delayed SSC construction. In January of this year, a high-level technical review panel which included five Nobel Laureates strongly endorsed the goals and the design of the SSC. And just 4 weeks ago, on March 28, the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, by a 78-percent margin, approved for floor consideration the bill that we have before us today.

Why has every scientific review body and every congressional vote come down so strongly in favor of the SSC?

First of all, as even its opponents concede, the SSC is good science. The objective of the SSC is to increase our fundamental understanding of matter and the universe in which we live. The SSC has undergone more scientific review than any physics project in history, and one conclusion remains clear: a machine with the size and power of the SSC will be needed to make the next fundamental breakthroughs in particle physics.

Second, if history is a valid indicator, the eventual benefits that will flow from the SSC to our economy and to our way of life will include some that we cannot imagine, much less predict, today. Lasers, fiber optics, semiconductors and digital computers are just some of the technologies that have resulted from knowledge developed through past advances in physics. In the diagnosis of illness, magnetic resonance imaging and CAT scans, which utilize superconducting magnets, enable doctors to determine the precise location and size of tumors. The x ray beams from electron accelerators are being used today by industry to produce the next generation of computer chips that will be the heart of future supercomputers. Whether the advances of the future lie in these or entirely new fields, their impact will be great; it is estimated that at least one-third of today's GNP is based on accelerator-related technology.

Third, the SSC will help reverse the significant decline in scientific and technical interest among our Nation's youth. The tangible and clearly apparent commitment to scientific preeminence represented by the SSC will serve as an inspiration for a new generation of American students to pursue careers in math and science, much as the Apollo Moon Space Program did in the 1960's. The project will send an unmistakable signal to our Nation's future leaders that their current leaders are committed to national excellence in science and technology.

The benefits that the SSC will bring to science education are already being realized. More than 100 universities in over 30 States are participating right now in research opportunities associated with the SSC. In addition, the State of Texas will soon establish a $100 million fund to enhance research at the SSC site and to support research at universities nationwide. A portion of this money will be used for schools with developing physics programs, including historically black colleges. The challenge of building an SSC and the possibility of conducting experiments at the SSC site are already creating a surge of excitement among faculty, graduate, and undergraduate students across the Nation.

Given the size, complexity, and importance of the SSC, its funding should not be left to the vagaries of the annual appropriations process. If the SSC is to be the centerpiece of this Nation's commitment to scientific and technological excellence, then we should provide the program with the stability and continuity that it needs to flourish. The bill before the House today is designed to provide the SSC program with just that stability.

Madam Chairman, let me say a few words about the provisions of H.R. 4380, the Superconducting Super Collider Act of 1990.

The bill provides the Secretary of Energy with the authority and the funding necessary to undertake the research, development, and construction of the SSC. In addition the bill creates the position of the Director of the Office of the SSC, charged with the responsibility of managing the overall project.

Federal expenditures for the project are limited to $5.0 billion.

The bill provides that the State of Texas will contribute at least $1.0 billion, and provides for the refund of State contributions if the project is terminated by the Federal Government prior to October 1, 1995.

There is a requirement that between one-fifth and one-third of the project costs will be raised from international participants. No more than 50 percent of any major component or system, including the superconducting magnets, may be produced by foreign firms. The bill limits the award of contracts for SSC construction to domestic firms, to foreign firms that are based in countries that contribute to the SSC, or to foreign firms that agree to perform a majority of contractual activities for the SSC in the United States.

Authorization for funding is released in phases, subject to the achievement of certain technical milestones.

First, funds in the amount of $220 million are made available for the initial steps of the project for magnet R&D, and for the design of key facilities.

Second, funds in the amount of $1.17 billion become available after the submission of specified planning documents, the completion of a prototype magnet design, and the certification that industry can begin prototype magnet production. These funds will allow the SSC management team, in conjunction with industry, to complete an on-site magnet assembly test in late 1992.

Third, funds in the amount of $5.98 billion—nearly 80 percent of the total project cost—become available only after certification by the Secretary of Energy that the magnet assembly test has been successful and that the Department of Energy has the necessary financial commitments from the State of Texas and from international sources.

Finally, the bill directs the Secretary to make every effort to devise innovative strategies for minimizing the cost of the project.

Madam Chairman, these are technically and financially responsible provisions. They will ensure that none of the partners in this endeavor—neither the Federal Government, the State of Texas, nor our international participants—will expend inordinate construction monies if the technologies necessary to build the project are not demonstrated. Tough safeguards are in place to protect our investment.

Now is the time to move forward with the SSC, not to hamstring it with further unnecessary delays. Scientists and engineers from around the world are ready to proceed. The last element that is needed to assure the stability of the program is a clear signal from the Congress, in the form of this authorization bill, that we intend to see the SSC project through—within cost and on schedule, and with fair and equitable participation by our State and international partners.

In summary, I strongly believe that enactment of this bill will help protect the SSC from the year-to-year vagaries that plagues so many of the long-term R&D programs that this country undertakes. When we pass this bill, we will be assuring our partners from the State of Texas that their investment will be protected, and assuring the other 49 States that State-Federal partnerships can work effectively in high-technology areas. When we pass this bill, we will be saying to potential international partners that the United States is firmly committed to building the world-class state of the art high-energy physics facility and that we welcome their participation. And finally, when we pass this bill, we will be sending a signal to the world and to our young people that we intend to maintain our leadership in a field that has yielded enormous benefits to society and that we are willing to invest in the technologies that will move this country forward.

BIOGRAPHIES OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY'S HIGH ENERGY PHYSICS ADVISORY PANEL, SUBPANEL ON SSC PHYSICS

On December 21, 1989, the Department of Energy [DOE] requested Dr. Francis Low, the chairman of DOE's High Energy Physics Advisory Committee [HEPAP] to form a blue ribbon subpanel to review and comment on the SSC final design. In particular, DOE wanted the subpanel to consider that while the optimum design for physics research is one that provides the highest energy and luminosity technically feasible, budget constraints might require the design to be less than optimum.

The subpanel was convened and met January 6–8, 1990. Its report was submitted and discussed at the HEPAP meeting on January 12, 1990. Brief biographies of the members of the subpanel follow.

Dr. Signey D. Drell, the chairman of the HEPAP's 1990 Subpanel on SSC Physics, is currently the director of the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center.

Dr. Drell was employed previously as a consultant to a number of organizations including: Los Alamos Science Laboratories, the Office of Science and Technology, the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, the National Security Council, and the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence. He has also been a professor of physics at the University of Illinois, Stanford University, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

His research has been directed towards quantum field theory; elementary particle physics; understanding of the structure of hadrons, particularly the quark confinement problem; and arms control and national security.

Dr. Drell was educated at Princeton University—AB 1946, and the University of Illinois—AM 1947; Ph.D. physics 1949.

Dr. William Brinkman is currently employed at AT&T Bell Laboratories.

He was employed previously as the vice president for research at Sandia National Laboratories, and as the director of the chemical physics research laboratory and the physics research laboratory at the Bell Laboratories. He has also served as a NSF research fellow at Oxford University.

His research includes solid state theory; itinerant magnetism and spin fluctuations; electron tunneling theory; and the theory of metal-insulator transitions.

Dr. Brinkman was educated at the University of Missouri at Columbia (BS 1960; MS 1962; Ph.D. physics 1965).

Dr. Alexander Chao is currently employed at the Superconducting Super Collider Laboratory.

Previously, he worked with the SSC Central Design Group at Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory, and as a physicist at the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center.

His research has been primarily in accelerators.

Dr. Chao was educated at Taiwan University at Tsin-Hua (BS 1970) and the State University of New York at Stony Brook (Ph.D. 1974).

Dr. James Cronin is currently employed as a professor of physics at the University of Chicago.

He was employed previously as a physicist at Brookhaven National Laboratory, and as a professor at Princeton University. In addition, Dr. Cronin has served as a Member of the Panel on Elementary Particle Physics for the National Academy of Sciences.

His research has been in elementary particles; the development of improved detection techniques; and C-P (charge-parity) violation.

He was awarded the Nobel Prize in physics in 1980.

Dr. Cronin was educated at Southern Methodist University (BS 1951) and the University of Chicago (MS 1953; Ph.D. physics 1955).

Dr. Ernest Henley is currently the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Washington.

He was employed previously as an electrical engineer at Airborne Instruments Laboratory and the Microwave Laboratory at the University of California, and as a physicist at the MIT Radiation Laboratory. In addition, he has been an exchange scientist to the USSR and a distinguished scholar to the People's Republic of China. Dr. Henley has also been a professor of physics at Stanford University, and Columbia University.

His research has been in theoretical nuclear and particle physics, including symmetries.

Dr. Henley was educated at the City College of New York (BEE 1944) and the University of California (Ph.D. physics 1952).

Dr. Leon Lederman is currently a professor at the University of Chicago.

Previously, Dr. Lederman was the Director of Fermi National Accelerator, Laboratory, and the Director of Nevis Laboratories. In addition, he has been a Member of the Board of Directors for Universities Research Association, a collaborator with the European Center for Nuclear Research in Geneva, and the U.S. Representative to the International Committee on Future Accelerators. Dr. Lederman has also been a professor of physics at Columbia University.

His research has been in properties and interactions of elementary particles. He received the Nobel Prize for physics in 1988.

He was educated at the City College of New York (B.S. 1943) and Columbia University (AM 1950; Ph.D. physics 1951).

Dr. Tsung-Dao Lee is currently the Enrico Fermi Professor of Physics at Columbia University.

He was employed previously as an astrophysicist at the University of Chicago, a physicist at the University of California, and as a Member and professor of the Institute for Advanced Study. In addition, Dr. Lee is a honorary professor at several universities in China, including Beijing University.

His research is in field theory; statistical mechanics; gravity and particle physics. He was awarded the Nobel Prize in Physics in 1957.

Dr. Lee was educated in China and at the University of Chicago (Ph.D. physics 1950).

Dr. Robert B. Palmer is currently located at Brookhaven National Laboratory.

He is also associated as a physicist with the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center. Previously, Dr. Palmer was a research associate at Imperial College in London.

His research has been in particle and accelerator physics.

Dr. Palmer was educated at Imperial College in London, England (BS 1956; Ph.D. physics 1964).

Dr. James M. Paterson is currently an Adjunct Professor of Physics at Stanford University involved with research at the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center.

He was employed previously as a research associate in physics at the Cambridge Electron Accelerator at Harvard University.

His research has been in the design and development of particle accelerators, and their use in elementary particle physics research.

Dr. Paterson was educated at the University of Glasgow, Scotland (BSc 1959; Ph.D. physics 1963).

Dr. Chris Quigg is currently employed by Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory.

He was employed previously as the Head of the Theoretical Physics Department at Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory, and as a professor at the State University of New York at Stony Brook. Dr. Quigg has also served on advisory committees to Stanford Linear Accelerator Center, Brookhaven National Laboratory and Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory.

His research is in the phenomenology of elementary particles.

Dr. Quigg was educated at Yale University (BS 1966) and the University of California at Berkeley (Ph.D. physics 1970).

Dr. Norman F. Ramsey, Jr. is currently the Higgins Professor of Physics at Harvard University.

He has also been a professor of physics at the University of Illinois and Columbia University, and the director of a nuclear laboratory. In the 1940s, Dr. Ramsey was associated with the Radiation Laboratory at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the Atomic Energy Project Laboratory at Los Alamos, and he was the head of the physics department at Brookhaven National Laboratory. In addition, Dr. Ramsey has served as President of Universities Research Association, Chairman of the AAAS Physics Section, Eastman Professor at Oxford University, and as Chairman of the Board of Governors of the American Institute of Physics.

His research is directed towards nuclear moments; molecular beams; high energy particles; nuclear interactions in molecules; deuteron quadrupole moment; molecular structure, diamagnetism; thermodynamics; proton-proton scattering; high energy accelerator; atomic masers; electron scattering; and neutrons. He was awarded the Nobel Prize in physics in 1989.

Dr. Ramsey was educated at Columbia University (AB 1935; Ph.D. physics 1940) and Cambridge University (MA 1941; DSc 1954).

Dr. Jack Sandweiss is currently the Donner Professor of Physics at Yale University.

He was employed previously as a physicist and professor at the University of California. In addition, Dr. Sandweiss has been a consultant to the Laboratory of Marine Physics at Yale University, Brookhaven National Laboratory, and Argonne National Laboratory and National Accelerator Laboratory.

His research is in high energy physics; bubble chamber technique; physics of strange particles; and counter and spark chamber techniques.

Dr. Sandweiss was educated at the University of California (BS 1952; Ph.D. physics 1956).

Dr. James L. Siegrist is currently located at the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory.

Previously, he was employed with the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center.

His research has been in wire chamber/counter experiments; and computer employment in research weak interaction experiments.

Dr. Siegrist was educated at Stanford University (Ph.D. 1979).

Dr. Steven Weinberg is currently Josey Professor of Science at the University of Texas in Austin.

Previously, he was a professor of physics at Columbia University, the University of California at Berkeley, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Higgins Professor at Harvard University. Dr. Weinberg has also served as a Sloan Foundation fellow, a senior scientist with the Smithsonian Astrophysics Observatory, a scholar with the Library of Congress, and the director of the Jerusalem School of Theoretical Physics.

His research is in elementary particles; field theory and cosmology. He was awarded the Nobel Prize in Physics in 1979.

Dr. Weinberg was educated at Cornell University (AB 1954) and Princeton University (Ph.D. physics 1957).

Dr. Victor F. Weisskopf is currently a Professor of Physics for the Emer Institute at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

He was employed previously as a research associate at the University of Berlin, the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology and the University of Copenhagen, as a professor of physics at the University of Rochester, and as a group leader at Los Alamos Science Laboratory. Dr. Weisskopf has also served as a Rockefeller Foundation fellow and the Director General of the European Center for Nuclear Research.

His research has been in quantum mechanics; electron theory; theory of nuclear phenomena; and nuclear physics.

Dr. Weisskopf was educated at the University of Gottingen (Ph.D. physics 1931).

□ 1340

Mr. TRAXLER. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROE. Yes, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. TRAXLER. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Chairman, it has been my pleasure to collaborate on a number of science projects with the gentleman. Let me say that the problem that I foresee as an issue for this Congress is that the major science projects which the gentleman and I are pleased to work on regretfully, for various reasons that I have not been able to understand, start out at a figure of X, but are completed at a figure of at least 3X.

So as the chairman of the authorizing committee, I guess my question to the gentleman is: What assurances can the gentleman give this body and the American taxpayer that the numbers we are looking at in this bill constitute the final completion figure or, in the alternative, can the gentleman assure us that he would not support any further funding beyond that which is in the bill for this project?

Mr. ROE. Well, I think first the gentleman asks a very valid question. I do not know anything that the Government has done at the Federal level or the State level or municipal level that has not in some instances cost more money, in many instances cost more funds.

I agree with the gentleman on that point. We have put a ceiling of $5 billion for Federal funding in this particular bill and we intend to stick with that figure.

We are going to have amendments that will be offered that are going to further move to guarantee that ceiling level. That is our intent.

In addition to that, there is a series of tests that we are providing and certain milestones have to be passed where the Congress will have a chance to take another look at that point if they determine to take some other direction.

So from my point of view, with the information and facts we have before us today, we intend to put a $5 billion ceiling, which we have done in the legislation, on Federal expenditures on this legislation.

Mr. TRAXLER. I appreciate the gentleman's response, if the gentleman will yield further.

I want to say, Madam Chairman, that this is a very troublesome issue for me as we have worked together over the years.

I wish to say to the gentleman and I think the body and to the science community as a whole that from my perspective there needs to be a realism and an honesty in numbers.

I have a suspicion that what occurs is the Congress is lowballed on the initial numbers so that we buy into a science project. I am not just talking about this project; I am talking about major science projects. We buy into them, and then a constituency develops for that project outside of this body in private industry and within this body and across the dome in the other body of Members whose districts will benefit particularly from such projects; which is not to say that is an evil practice. I would also add that I could be part of that.

Mr. ROE. I would also apply that to the Congress of the United States.

Mr. TRAXLER. I do think it is important for the process that the Congress hold the feet of these individuals who promote major science to the fire and hold them accountable on the numbers that they are providing to us at the time we approve of the projects and buy in and authorize and appropriate the moneys.

Otherwise, as the gentleman well knows——

Mr. ROE. If I may reclaim my time because we have other speakers and we do not have much time.

Mr. TRAXLER. May I just complete in 30 seconds?

Mr. ROE. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. TRAXLER. As the gentleman well knows, we could find ourselves as we have been in the past, adding more and more authorization and more and more money as a project grows and grows and grows.

I might say that the information I have is that this project will not be completed for less than $14 billion and $16 billion is more realistic.

Mr. ROE. Now wait, wait, wait; I am not going to yield any more time because I am not going to spend a half hour in debate. But I do want to respond to that one point.

As far as this authorizing committee is concerned, this authorizing committee has held hearings for the last 3 or 4 years, and this authorizing committee is coming to the floor with the facts, not imagination, as we know them today. We are taking the first time and we are saying there is a provision in the bill that provides for a ceiling of that $5 billion.

I do not know what the Committee on Appropriations is going to do. I do not know what the other body is going to do. But that is the intent, and that is what we are presenting to the body today.

Now if the gentleman is asking me as chairman of that committee is that our intent, that is our intent. What happens beyond that I am really not quite sure.

That is what we are going to stick with. So that is what our position is.

Mr. McCURDY. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROE. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. McCURDY. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding. Madam Chairman, I want to commend the chairman for his willingness to work with Members to try to improve the bill to ensure that there is cost containment, that there are guarantees against major cost overruns or increases in this program. I think his willingness to continue to accept these amendments adds certainly to this bill. And I thank the gentleman for his flexibility.

Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by Representatives WOLPE and ECKART which would require the GOA to evaluate each of the reports made by the Department of Energy about the progress of the superconducting super collider.

Under this authorizing legislation, the obligation of funds is tied to completion of critical tasks. The successful completion of these tasks, is certified solely by the Department of Energy. It is vital that at each of these phases, an accurate and unbiased assessment about the present and future costs of the project be made. The GAO could make such an evaluation and possibly save the Federal Government billions of dollars.

As a member of the Armed Services and Science, Space and Technology subcommittees which have research and development oversight, I am skeptical of research programs that are to ambitious in scope and funding outlays. Past experience has shown that these massive projects are extended for years and have ever escalating costs.

The Department of Energy assured us last year that the total cost of the superconducting super collider would be $5.9 billion, but less than 6 months later these costs have escalated to $8 billion. Other particle accelerator projects, which have technology that is similar to the super collider, have either gone over budget or have been terminated after numerous Federal dollars were poured into them. An evaluation by the GAO could prevent, or at the very least warn members of Congress of potential major cost overruns.

Further, there are still many questions left unanswered about the benefits that the United States can gain from the massive investment we are making in this technology. Not small among these questions, is the potential for gain in world markets from our massive Federal investment in this atom smashing technology. During this time of fiscal constraint, can we truly afford to pour billions of dollars into science that may not have any commerical applications? Evaluation by the GAO may answer some of these questions.

Finally, I would like to emphasize the strong reservations I hold about the super collider. I am fearful that many worthy science projects may be denied funding because we are spending all our science dollars on a few big ticket items. As was pointed out recently by the Christian Science Monitor, for the first time since World War II, the National Science Foundation and the National Institutes of Health funded less than 30 percent of the research projects they considered excellent and worthy of funding because they did not have enough money in their budgets.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment which will ensure that our Federal dollars are being spent wisely.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I would hope that the gentleman will understand when we do make these improvements we will be able to get some additional votes that we did not get the last time.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 4380. By statutorily capping the Federal funding of the SSC for good and setting a mandatory floor for international contributions which must be met before over 80 percent of the funds authorized can be expended, the bill Chairman ROE brings before the House today is a step in the right direction. Most importantly, H.R. 4380 immediately limits taxpayer exposure by requiring that magnet redesign be completed and that the Secretary of Energy certify that the magnets can actually be manufactured before any construction begins. No new appropriations can be spent until this happens.

Madam Chairman, with that said and given any additionally necessary fiscal and technical controls added today, by unlocking the fundamental law of matter, quite seriously, the superconducting super collider has the potential to find technological solutions to some of today's most vexing problems. It could impact on everything from our industrial competitiveness to global environmental quality. The trouble is the specificity and magnitude of these great things promised are unknown, they cannot be fully explained, and remain many years down the road.

This is simply the nature of basic research. But history tells of many unpredicted scientific breakthroughs and the advances they have brought the world, from nuclear medicine and energy to semiconductors. In this regard, it is noteworthy that the SSC is brought to us as the high energy physics community's highest priority. We in the House must understand and fully appreciate that this is an investment in our future. Our children's economic standard of living and social quality of life depend on this kind of deferred gratification. And this kind of investment.

Yet serious concerns with this project remain. The SSC has experienced technical problems, such as those requiring the current magnet redesign effort, and repeated significant cost escalations from $4.4 billion in 1986, to $5.9 billion in 1988, to around $8 billion today. That is almost 100 percent in less than 5 years. And who knows how much more it will balloon to. Because of this troubling trend, I fear this project is going to devour resources from many other highly merited, worthwhile science and technology development efforts. After all, these programs, such as Human Gene Mapping, Energy Department Facility Cleanup, and Hydrogen, Solar, and Fusion Energy R&D, must all compete in the same appropriations bill. Those programs that lack large coalitions are at serious risk.

Because of these concerns, however, H.R. 4380 is badly needed. First, the bill fully addresses the technical questions by requiring that tough technology milestones be met for magnet design, manufacture and an "in situ" string test before funding required before the funds can be made available.

Second, it addresses directly the paramount fiscal concern through the $5 billion ceiling on taxpayer expenditures. Make no mistake about it, this is not going to be like the debt ceiling. This must be a hard, explicitly permanent cap that is not to be violated. It if is this member, for one, as the ranking member of the authorizing committee, will actively oppose any further Federal support.

I would hope that the Committee on Appropriations will also follow and will say that not only is this an authorization cap, this is an appropriations cap. Not one dime more than $5 billion in Federal expenditures for this program.

Instead, any additional resources can and should come from the SSC's international participants, other non-Federal sources, and creative funding mechanisms such as leasebacks.

Let us be perfectly clear, when the House votes for this legislation today it is going on record that the SSC will not cost the taxpayer one dime more than $5 billion.

□ 1350

Whether the total project cost is $7.5 billion as authorized in the bill, $8 billion as predicted, or heaven forbid, even higher. At the same time, a few improvements to H.R. 4380 are not unreasonable. The gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT] will offer an amendment that simply says the $5 billion Federal cap is, in fact, real by requiring the Energy Secretary to certify that it can and will be met. He would be required to do so before being able to spend the last, largest chuck of the money, $6 billion, so we do not get so far out on a limb that we have no choice but to spend more. This would guarantee that this Congress is fully informed early enough in the process, after $1 billion instead of $7 billion, if the cost to the taxpayer is going to be higher yet again.

An amendment by the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT] and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE] will make it clear that the Texas original donation of land which was a precondition for site selection is not to be considered a part of the $1 billion in SSC construction support they are now required to provide. If it is, the total cost goes up.

Another provision by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER] deletes administration language to exclusively include Texas' investment risk free. No other investment is assured—not our foreign partners, and certainly not the U.S. taxpayer, and this was never a condition of the original commitment. It does not take into account the derived past, present, and future benefit of this investment in Texas. Most dangerously, it prejudices a purely objective decision on the project by building in artificial termination costs.

Language requiring a GAO review for new money that is spent, is prudent as long as it does not require additional delays. Finally, I will request a change in the effective date of the Federal cost cap to assure the inclusion of $130 million that was appropriated in fiscal years 1988 and 1989.

With or without these perfecting amendments, H.R. 4380 is a good bill. Each amendment simply makes it better. I will vote for each and for final passage.

I commend the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE] and committee member from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT,] for their leadership in bringing fiscal and technical discipline to this enormous capital project. I would like to recognize two members of the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, the gentlemen from Texas [Mr. SMITH] and [Mr. BARTON] for their tireless efforts on behalf of the super collider. This legislation is a product of their collective contributions, and would have been found lacking if not for each of them.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Madam Chairman, let me associate myself with the remarks of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER], and emphasize that the $5 billion contained in the authorization of Federal contributions, in the eyes of this Member, is a $5 billion ceiling. I also will not support any additional authorization or appropriation if there are cost overruns to it.

The concern that I have, which will be addressed in my amendment, relates to the refund provision to the State of Texas contained in page 14 of the reported bill. As it stands, under the reported bill, if before October 1, 1995, the Secretary of Energy determines that the SSC project should be terminated, then the State of Texas will get a complete refund for both its cash payments as well as its in-kind payments which would include the construction of highways, power lines and towers, sewers, and the like. This can be up to the billion dollars that the State of Texas has committed to the project.

Now, if this language stays in the bill, I can hear the argument that will be made once the first cost overrun is made. That is, give the project $200 billion more so that they can save from having to pay Texas back a billion dollars. If Congress does that, then the next time a cost overrun occurs we will, "Give us $300 million or $400 million more"—again, to save having to refund to the State of Texas a billion dollars. So that way we end up underwriting the overruns, a way of preventing the refund from occurring that is mandated under section 14 of the bill. That is why I will be offering an amendment to strike this provision of the bill, unless some kind of an arrangement is worked out to prevent this kind of a bootstrapping arrangement where cost overruns get subsidized by the Congress in the name of "preventing us from making a higher expenditure and refunding the State of Texas what they have contributed," both in cash and in-kind contribution.

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I laud the gentleman for the amendment and will be supportive of that amendment when it comes to the floor.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from Tennessee [Mrs. LLOYD].

Mrs. LLOYD. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 4380, the Superconducting Super Collider Project Authorization Act of 1990.

In supporting this bill, I do so because I believe the superconducting super collider is good. Since 1983, the merits of the SSC concept have been discussed and debated within the scientific community. The consensus that has emerged is that the SSC is the most important physics undertaking in the United States during the last quarter of this century. This project will provide the tools for scientists to expand their knowledge and understanding of matter. Understanding the material that makes up our world has been a goal of science since the time of the ancient Greek scholars. If successful, the SSC will complete our understanding of the standard of how particles and forces interact to form matter.

The second point I want to emphasize is that this project will provide a tremendous boost to science education in our Nation. In fact, this has already begun. Teams of scientists and graduate students from universities throughout the country are coming together to plan, design, and develop experiments for the SSC. These experiments will be tested, analyzed, and refined over the next 9 years. Already, there is excitement building in the science community; the effect on graduate students is evident and will be even more dramatic as the SSC project nears completion.

This excitement and energy will in turn be transferred to other students in the years ahead. Our young scientists and students need this challenge; they need to know that science is important to our Nation. During this past year our subcommittee has held a number of hearings on science education; time and again we have heard teachers say that the students need challenge and excitement. I believe this SSC can excite our students and rekindle their interest in science.

Finally, I believe it is important that the Congress provide a clear signal of our support for this project. An undertaking of this importance and magnitude should begin with the support and approval of Congress. The Congress should concur that the proper provisions are in place to both assure success of the project and also fulfill our responsibilities in overseeing Federal expenditures. Unless we send a clear, unequivocal message of support, this project will surely become one more example of a major project which we have started and failed to finish.

I urge your support for H.R. 4380, the Superconducting Super Collider Project Authorization Act of 1990.

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT].

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of H..R 4380. I agree with my chairman that this sort of research becomes a great nation, that unforeseen benefits will flow from it, and that this bill includes many significant safeguards that have been absent from previous legislation. I will vote for final passage of the bill.

But, I will also vote for—and indeed offer—amendments to the bill. If anything, these amendments should be more appealing to supporters of the SSC than to its detractors because the supporters have more to lose if the plans go awry. And the project is much more likely to proceed as adverstised with the amendments.

Too many supporters of the SSC—scientists and politicians alike—have fallen in love with the SSC, and their devotion has left them a little blind and defensive. It's the job of their friends—those of us who support basic research—to force them to step back and take a more unbiased look at the object of their desire. What will kill the SSC in the long-run is not the attacks by its opponents, but the bloated claims of its strongest supporters, which will leave the Congress feeling misled and betrayed.

First, we must recognize that this project still faces many technical hurdles. Chief among these is mass producing the magnets—the step that ended up derailing the Isabelle collider after 6 years of funding.

I am not arguing that industry cannot produce the magnets—only that doing so will require a great technical leap, which like all such leaps, is likely to be slowed by unforeseen difficulties. No less a supporter of the project than Dr. Bromley has pointed this out repeatedly in House and Senate testimony.

In fact, Dr. Bromley—who in addition to being the President's science advisor is a noted physicist—Dr. Bromley has argued that 25 or 30 industrially produced magnets ought to be tested before any construction gets underway. That is far more restrictive than the conditions set by H.R. 4380.

Supporters of the project should not be arguing simultaneously that the SSC will vastly stretch American technical know-how and that the project will proceed trouble-free with no further cost escalations and no cost overruns.

Second, while the SSC will advance American science and technology, it is wrong to pretend that the future of the American scientific enterprise is riding on it.

There are other expensive areas of scientific inquiry that are higher priorities—global climate change research and high performance computing—just to name two that are on Dr. Bromley's priority list. We have to be careful to ensure that other fields of science are not starved to pay for the SSC.

One field that is not being starved right now is physics. While the SSC sometimes is portrayed as all that is standing in the way of a mass exodus of physicists, the Department of Energy is actually embarked on a number of major construction projects in physics, including an upgrade of the accelerator at Fermilab.

And as for the claims about what the SSC will do for education, I think it is quite telling that the State of Texas has offered to pay private school tuition for the children of some SSC researchers. The project may not even benefit the public schools in Ellis County, TX—never mind the remainder of the Nation.

So I am not one of those supporters who has learned to stop complaining and love the SSC. But then again, I never viewed Dr. Strangelove as a model scientist.

The people who are model scientists are known for their objective pursuit of truth and their rigorous analysis of evidence. And those are the same traits that ought to characterize the debate over science policy.

The kind of debate that treats news weeklies as if they were scientific journals is likely to kill this project in the end by raising scientific and financial expectations that just cannot be met.

□ 1400

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MCMILLEN].

Mr. MCMILLEN of Maryland. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of this authorization bill. I would like to commend the chairman of the committee for including in this legislation strong international participation cost caps.

Madam Chairman, I urge adoption of the legislation.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. HALL].

Mr. HALL of Texas. Madam Chairman, today I rise in support of H.R. 4380, a bill to authorize the superconducting super collider [SSC]. Mr. Chairman, as a member of the Science, Space, and Technology Committee, I have had the opportunity to watch Chairman ROE work tirelessly, with an unflagging commitment to see this project through, and bring to the floor a good bill, a clean bill, a bill that seeks to complete this project on time and on budget. I would like to thank the chairman for the leading role he has taken. All those who support the SSC should be commended, because support for the SSC is also support for education, for science, for U.S. economy, for U.S. industry, for advancements in medicine, for competitiveness, and for American leadership.

Madam Chairman, as a member of the authorizing committee, I have also had the opportunity to see the opponents of the SSC work tirelessly to strap the bill down with controversy and rhetoric. And I would like to remind my colleagues that last year you said no to these tactics and yes to the SSC with a resounding 330 to 93 vote. Before that, in 1988, you also said yes by passing an authorization bill, although the other body did not take up the measure. In January of this year the high energy physics advisory panel [HEPAP], which is comprised of the premiere high energy physicists in the world, said yes with their review and endorsement of the SSC. And, of course, the Science Committee said yes by reporting this bill out of committee and to the floor, which brings us to where we are today. And we are here today to answer one basic question: Will the returns be worth the investment?

Let us think about the educational returns. It is no secret that science education in America is on a rapid decline. As few as one-third of graduate students enrolled in American university science programs are American citizens. The SSC will be a unique laboratory with no other comparable facility being planned anywhere else in the world. Therefore it will serve to create a major educational resource for the Nation by attracting the very best creative young minds in our country and in the world. These returns are already being reaped by 57 universities in 28 States receiving SSC fiscal year 1990 funding. And it is the intention of the SCC laboratory to emphasize its educational role at all stages of the laboratory's development and operation, providing different types and levels of educational effort during different phases of the project.

The potential impact on industry is best measured by the benefits of past U.S. research and investments into particle accelerators. From advances in micro circuits, lasers, medical treatments and the understanding of disease, the fruits of investment in basic particle research is all around us. Already research for the SSC has uncovered even more potential industry-related spinoffs such as: More efficient techniques for tunneling that will save millions of dollars in the construction of sewers, water systems, and subways; improved microwave amplifiers that boost the effectiveness of satellite communications; a coil of superconducting cable that could store electricity when demand is low and release it when demand is high; and enhancements in computer hardware and software necessary for us to remain competitive in the race for leadership in the development of supercomputers. In pure financial terms, it is estimated that at least one-third of today's gross national product [GNP] is based on accelerator-related technology.

Recent improvements in superconducting cable and magnets have made dramatic advances in medical treatments possible. Magnetic resonance imaging [MRI] and CAT scans, which use superconducting cable, allow doctors to locate and diagnose tumors with more accuracy and speed. Loma Linda University in California is planning to use an accelerator to treat cancerous tumors by destroying the tumor without damaging the surrounding healthy tissue. Accelerator research produces particle beams which are being used to study the physical characteristics of viruses, including the virus which causes AIDS.

As chairman of the Subcommittee on International Scientific Cooperation, I am pleased to report that the Department of Energy has completed its international plan and will soon begin consultations with potential foreign contributors to the project. It is important that we have the kinds of foreign contributions and participation in the project that are mutually beneficial—to us and to the contributing countries. That is the essence of a good deal, and I believe there is a broad middle ground that the United States and potential foreign contributors can find that will further each country's nationalistic scientific objectives and, at the same time, advance mankind's understanding of particle physics. H.R. 4380 directs the Secretary to obtain commitments of contributions of at least 20 percent but not more than one-third of the total cost of the project. I think that this range is reasonable, but we should not expect these contributions to be made overnight. We should be patient, because contributions and negotiations of this magnitude will take time.

Madam Chairman, the timing of this authorization bill is critical. The merits can obviously stand on their own against annual funding battles, if necessary. But our priorities must be set in order to answer the question we must all ask ourselves today: Will the 101st Congress vote to guide America back into its traditional leadership role in technology, or will we argue and nit-pick this program to the extent that our scientific community finds itself playing the role of outside observer? We must make a strong statement, as we have in past votes on the SSC, that we believe the SSC will become an unparalleled international center for science, education, and technological applications. Providing this program with the stability and continuity that it needs to flourish, by voting for H.R. 4380, is a swift and sure way to make a strong statement for science, for education, for industry, for medicine, for America.

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RITTER].

Mr. RITTER. Madam Chairman, I want to commend our chairman, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE], and the ranking Republican member, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER], for taking a very positive step with this bill to try to lessen some of the superconducting super collider's financial and scientific uncertainties, and to try to put a lid on the obligation of the Federal taxpayers. A reasonable assessment of the process is absolutely necessary, but this bill may be too little and too late.

Madam Chairman, as we have seen with the cost increases and magnet difficulties, construction of the superconducting super collider still has major question marks, and the potential for an open-ended financial commitment by the Federal Government, just like with any other R&D project. There is nothing permanent in the cap placed on the SSC by this legislation.

The SSC was sold initially as a machine to do basic research. It was not sold to the Congress initially as a research and development project in and of itself, but that is what it has become, and just like with any other research and development projects, we cannot place at the outset limits on the final cost because we do not know exactly where it is going. The SSC final price tag could be $10 billion or even more.

Henson Moore, the DOE's Deputy Secretary, said that the price tag "is probably $8 billion, but that's a preliminary, almost back-of-the-envelope figure." According to recent press reports, when that figure becomes more certain, it is quite possible the SSC's proponents will come back to the Congress and ask for more money.

Until our companies can produce the SSC's magnets, no cost estimate is reliable, and there is no congressional action that can hold the project's cost in check. There is no magic wand that will say that this R&D project to build this equipment will cost a certain amount, and that is it.

The magnet redesign alone has increased the cost by $1.3 billion. Numbers like that make me wonder if the SSC will ever be built, even if we authorize the funding for it now. The Lord knows we do not need another Clinch River Breeder Reactor project.

□ 1410

The bill requires that prototype magnets be able to be made before the next $1.17 billion is obligated. Again, there are no assurances that the magnets will work or that our companies can mass produce them. But I do want to commend the chairman and the ranking member for coming up with a bill that at least seeks to meet those benchmarks.

Then there are the international contributions which the DOE has been seeking for several years. Those are supposed to make up between 20 and 33 percent of the total cost, but all the DOE has to show for its work is a small pledge from India. Henson Moore's recent statements indicate that the DOE may not get more than $1 billion from other nations, less than what is called for in this bill. If this happens again American taxpayers will be called upon to make up the difference.

I also wonder whether the super collider is supercritical to our Nation's competitiveness. There are a lot of reports by a lot of people in a lot of different industries that spending $8 billion or more on this particular basic science project would severely impact other far more deserving areas of science. Even in basic research, the New York Times, in its editorial, reported other branches of physics may starve to feed the SSC. The Washington Post reported recently that basic researchers in other fields are "beginning to see the handwriting on the wall." Some are leaving fields such as AIDS research and cancer research, citing funding cutbacks.

My colleagues, advanced materials, automated manufacturing, biotechnology, high-definition video systems, photonics, and optoelectronics all are far closer to the cutting edge of America's global challenges and competitive challenges than the SSC, and all are flat-funded almost or going negative. Before we commit ourselves to spend the still unknown and spiraling numbers of billions of tax dollars, we should stop and ask whether now is the right time to build an SSC.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. SARPALIUS].

Mr. SARPALIUS. Madam Chairman, I commend the chairman on his work on this important piece of legislation.

All of us, as Members of Congress, should have a vision of the future, and, oh, what an investment this is in our future.

If we can stop and think that today we are spending over $20 billion a year in defense to protect the Japanese while, in turn, they are investing in high technology. We now have an opportunity here to make a tremendous step in high technology.

Step into the future with me and see what this investment would be. We will be able to have an x-ray machine that one can stand in front of and find any tumors or cancers in their body. Through the compressed energy, we will be able to have a battery this size that will operate an automobile, a battery a little larger to provide enough energy for a home. We will be able to develop the Dick Tracy watch with a telephone in the watch.

You can let your imagination wander. Oh, what an investment this would be for us and for our young people in the future.

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FAWELL].

Mr. FAWELL. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me and I rise in support of the bill.

Madam Chairman, throughout our history, Americans have led the way in exploring new frontiers and creating new technologies to meet the challenges of the future. Through such bold endeavors as the Space Program, our Nation has demonstrated its commitment to maintaining our leadership in science and technology, on which our future—and our children's future—depends.

America's scientific and technological edge is at risk of being surpassed by Japan and Europe. At stake is not only our traditional leadership in science and technology, but also our opportunity to explore new frontiers in knowledge that will result in advances in medicine, computers, telecommunications, and other critical technologies.

American's ability to maintain our leadership in science will depend on our commitment to projects like the SSC. Time and time again witnesses appearing before the Science Committee stress the importance of basic research to the health of our economy. Past American investments in particle physics prove this point.

Over the past 60 years, U.S. investments in particle accelerators have ushered in a new era of science and technology that has resulted in rapid advances in microcircuits, lasers, medical treatments, and the understanding of disease. The results are all around us; television sets, disc players, computers, and CAT scans all owe their existence to particle accelerators. In pure financial terms, it is estimated that at least one-third of our gross national product is based on our knowledge of the atom.

Madam Chairman, we cannot afford not to build the SSC. For the future of science and for the future of our economy, let us get on with this project.

Madam Chairman, in addition, I might add that this whole concept as it comes about is a tremendous educational tool for America to interest young people in going into science and technology and especially energy physics.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

Mr. TRAFICANT. Madam Chairman, I want to start out by commending the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE], the chairman, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER], the vice chairman, for taking on an initiative that I think is the greatest research and development project in American history.

Thirty years ago John Kennedy snorted out a challenge to America. He said that if we were going to meet the competition and the future needs of our country we are going to have to put our money where our mouth was, and he pledged just that. He embarked this Nation on a space program and a research and development program to attain those goals. He just did not talk. He did it. We were the first to make it to the Moon, and we are now beginning to reap the dividends and the harvest of those efforts.

Today we are embarking upon the next phase. Other nations put more money into research and development. There is no excuse for that. Ladies and gentlemen, it is time, and today is that day.

Let me also say this: We should all be proud today to stand here in the well supporting a project that is going to Texas. I think it is fitting with the energy background of that great State and the problems they have had to be the host of this project. They met the criteria. Today we are Texans and Americans.

Later now in the program I have an amendment. That amendment is right to the point. It says that if the President cites a nation for a trade practice that is detrimental and injures American business and commerce, then those companies domiciled in that country so listed by our President are ineligible to bid on these contracts.

Madam Chairman, I want the support of Congress. That is a policy statement. Let me say this: At this point it deals with India. It is more of a policy statement for the future, but if India is going to get away with putting $50 million into the superconducting super collider and then telling our President, who is doing a good job, Mr. Bush, to go to hell on trade, costing his country billions of dollars, then we should analyze it right here today an tell them to keep their $50 million and let the President do his job with India through his negotiators in trade.

Madam Chairman, I ask for the support of the Members. I commend the chairman and the vice chairman for this bill.

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS].

Mr. LEWIS of California. Madam Chairman and my colleagues, I addressed myself, or tried to address myself, to the superconducting super collider about the time it was possible this project would find its way into the economy in California.

Frankly, I addressed myself to the issue, because I first had to ask myself the question: "Why, for goodness sakes, are we going to talk about spending billions of dollars of American money in a research area like this?" That fundamental question is important for the House's consideration.

So let this layman try to share with my colleagues a piece of that which affected my conclusion.

□ 1420

First and foremost I learned that the Loma Linda University Medical Center in my district had been doing experiments with the Fermilab in Illinois regarding superconductors and that process that involves the slamming together of protons at very high speeds. I learned the following. It seems that in this experiment a much smaller conductor was used to slam together hydrogen protons at very high speeds. When that occurred the proton pops loose. That proton I understand, from this layman's understanding, is highly receptive of very major concentrations of radiation.

That radiated particle, can be rifled at tissue that is cancerous tissue. Now, currently the problem with treating cancer with radiation is that often there is a flash point or heat point on the other side and the treatment kills other tissue, kills organs that are vital, and people die.

In this case the particle with such concentration does not have that flash point. By beaming such particles as a part of treatment they may save 90 percent of these people who currently die as a result of direct treatment by radiation for cancer. This is a fantastic breakthrough that reflects the critical importance of America making these kinds of investment in basic research.

I hope those who are concerned about the future of humankind will focus upon this kind of fundamental Federal role and responsibility. In that regard let me paraphrase the remarks of Nobel Laureate in physics Dr. Leon Lederman. Speaking of the Loma Linda superconducting super collider project: "This effort is a quintessential example of technology spinoff from abstract basic research to humanitarian and economic utility."

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLPE].

Mr. WOLPE. Madam Chairman, I wish I could today stand with the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE], my chairman, in support of this legislation. I have enormous respect for the gentleman from New Jersey for his work in advancing our Nation's research and development efforts and for his commitment to all critical basic research.

I recognize the deeper felt conviction that this project is of crucial value to our Nation's future. I appreciate his acceptance of certain amendments in the committee process and on the floor today, including one I will be offering with the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ECKART], that in my judgment strengthens this bill and establishes stronger measures of accountability.

But in my judgment, this authorization at this time is simply premature. There are simply too many unanswered questions. The bottom line is that the authorization for this project is getting far ahead of our scientific understanding necessary to build this project.

We have already gone from an initial estimate of some $3 billion as the total cost of the project to $4.4 billion, and now $8 billion, and construction has not even begun. It is the taxpayer that is very likely to be stuck with the bill, far in excess of the $5 billion that is being described as the taxpayers' share of this venture.

My first concern is that the taxpayers are shouldering an enormous risk while details of the project remain shrouded in uncertainty. I do not question the value of high energy physics research. It is the history of this project, of the super collider itself, that has me concerned.

Second, much more is at stake here than even the enormous projected taxpayer cost. My second major concern is that building the super collider will in fact crowd out other scientific research that in many respects will be far more critical to our Nation's future.

It is important to underscore as we move into the general debate under the 5-minute rule in just a few minutes that the scientific community is deeply divided, even the physics community, on the wisdom of this project.

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BARTON].

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Madam Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 4380, a bill to authorize the superconducting super collider high energy particle accelerator. The first point that I would like to make is that I have tremendous respect for those that do not support the project quite as strongly as I do. I understand that a project of this size and this scope needs to be examined in great detail, and I truly respect those that are trying to do that with some of the amendments that are being offered today.

I would like to say that this project, while some classify it as a Texas project, is actually a national project located in Texas. Right now we have at the laboratory in De Soto over 500 scientists that are working to make the project a reality. We have an equal number of scientists and industrialists around our great Nation that are working on various subcontracts. In fact, we have people working in over 39 States of these United States.

We have negotiations either under way or expected to be under way with many, many foreign nations around this world.

In Texas as we speak the State is beginning the land acquisition process. In fact, within the next month we expect to have the first $250 million of Texas bonds sold in the open market. The proceeds from that bond issue are going to be used to actually begin to acquire the land.

The Department of Energy has asked the Texas National Research Commission to acquire approximately 17,000 acres of land. That process is going to take approximately 2 years.

We have right now scientists beginning to define the experiments that are going to be conducted. The requests for proposal for the experiments in the four detection chambers are due later this year. So there is a lot of progress that is beginning to be made.

I would like to speak a little bit about some of the costs of the project, because some of the amendments that are going to be offered later in the debate will deal with the cost.

The first point I would like to make is that the cost of the project is not actually being overrun at this point in time. In fact, to date the money that has been obligated to be spent, we are spending slightly less than is actually being appropriated.

The cost estimate of the project is a different story. Back in 1986 the original estimate for the generic design, when they did not know where it was going to be located, was $4.4 billion. By 1988 they had revised that estimate to $5.3 billiion, which when you adjust for inflation would come up to $5.9 billion. That is the estimate that was used in the debate last year.

We expect within the next month or 2 months that the Department of Energy is going to release the very specific engineering design estimate based on the magnet design that has been chosen. We expect that to be somewhere between $7½ and $8 billion. We think that is going to be a very good estimate. That is why in this bill we have got the cap of $5 billion on Federal participation. We expect to do everything we can to meet that estimate.

This project, the SSC, if we start construction in 1991, which is the current plan, will be 1998 before the project is operational. Once it is operational in 1998, it is going to have a life expectancy of 20, 30, perhaps 40 years. So we need to authorize it.

This is not the kind of project that we should do a year-by-year debate on the House floor on. It is a multiyear project to construct. It is a multidecade project to operate. So we need the authorization bill that Chairman ROE has brought to the floor.

The bottom line is the SSC is an investment in the future of this country. It is an investment in our economic competitive position in the world. One-third of our gross national product today results from research that was originally done in high energy physics. One-third. Economic competition is going to be the life blood of this country of ours in the 21st century. In order to lead the world economically, we need basic research projects like the SSC.

Madam Chairman, I would urge Members to vote yes on the SSC when we come to the final vote on H.R. 4380.

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. BRYANT].

Mr. BRYANT. Madam Chairman, I would like to first commend the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE] for his pioneering efforts in this area. I believe history books will tell future readers who was responsible for pressing forward in such an innovative area that has caused such an enormous contribution, which we are on the verge of making today.

Madam Chairman, the superconducting super collider is the moon shot of the 1990's. The fact of the matter is it comes at a time when America's predominant role in the world scientific community is threatened. What I am speaking about is the fact that today it is very appropriate we are taking up the super collider issue, because the front pages of newspapers all over America read that the government of Japan is targeting yet another American technology.

Today, the United States holds the lead in the world in an advanced computer technology known as massively parallel processing, a software technology that allow thousands of processors to work together at high speeds.

□ 1430

Now having achieved dominance in supercomputing, the Japanese are now announcing that they are targeting the United States in the area of parallel processing. What does that have to do with the SSC?

The fact of the matter is that the project is one of the primary forces driving progress in American parallel processing efforts, and it will give us vanguard technology in many other areas as well.

I believe this will be the showcase project of our Nation's science program for the future, and it should be. Building the collider will help preserve America's technological lead, not only in the area of the superconducting super collider, but many others as well.

Finally I want to make this point: A superconducting super collider is going to be built somewhere no matter what.

Two overseas accelerators with capacities greater than America's current largest, Fermilab, are currently in the planning stages, one in the Soviet Union and one in Switzerland. The superconducting super collider would be stronger than both, if built. But should the Soviets or the Europeans build accelerators and the United States decides not to build, the United States will lose many of the world's top scientists. I submit we have already received a great deal from the super collider research. I submit it would be false economy not to go forward at this time and to keep our lead in the area of scientific research in the world.

Mr. ARMEY. Madam Chairman, I want to take a few minutes to tell you why I strongly support the SSC and will oppose attempts to attach harmful amendments to H.R. 4380. I welcome open debate on the SSC. This project is eminently defensible and worthwhile.

In fact I would compare the SSC to past projects in its potential to contribute to the betterment of our civilization and our understanding of the underlying principles of the world which surrounds us. History books are full of examples of similar excursions and explorations intended to expand the frontiers of knowledge about our planet and beyond.

The Nation has a long tradition of supporting scientific research and exploration. For example, President Jefferson sent Lewis and Clark out West to explore the uncharted frontier. The information they came back with provided the next generation of westward travelers with a preview of the conditions they would encounter, terrain, weather, and native American tribes.

A more recent example is the Space Program. President Eisenhower supported the creation of NASA to explore the wonders of space. Each phase of NASA's existence has built upon our knowledge and allowed our country to lead the way into outer space. Could our communications satellite systems which benefit the entire Nation, and the world for that matter, have been placed into orbit without the benefit of the scientific foundation laid down by NASA in the 20 years between 1960 and 1980? The answer shouldn't surprise anyone. Most of the innovative products and services which we take for granted in 1990 are in some way beholden to the research which was done 20 or 30 years ago during the early days of our space effort.

The superconducting super collider is essential to the scientists of tomorrow and will equip those scientists with the basic research which will provide the United States the knowledge and the tools to continue our success in so many fields well into the 21st century. The dollars this Nation, the State of Texas, and foreign contributors will invest to make the SSC a reality will help maintain our leadership in high-energy physics and will lead to advances in communications, electronics, computers, and countless other fields.

We have a responsibility to provide a firm foundation for the next generation of Americans. The collider is an integral piece of that foundation. More than that, we have a duty to uphold our historical tradition of leading the way into the future through ambitious exploration.

I am proud the collider will be built in Texas. But the collider itself is more important than where it will be built. Individual scientists, universities, and companies from around the country will participate in building and using the collider. This is truly a national project and I am proud to support it.

Some have raised questions about this project. A few Members have doubted Texas' financial commitment. Let me tell you this, Texas will provide every single dollar that is called for in the sealed bid they submitted. Well-intentioned Members have suggested that perhaps we are not capable of manufacturing the magnets which are central to the success of the SSC, or that we can produce them in the necessary quantities or to the design specifications called for in the blueprints. Of course we can. I'm sure there were similar skeptics about NASA 30 years ago. I'm confident that our scientific community will overcome the small obstacles that will inevitably arise along the way. NASA faced countless problems through the years, each one successfully solved by the practical American geniuses of the day.

The same is true of the SSC. The SSC is a multiyear project and it will still be unlocking doors 20 years from now. There will, of course, be problems along the way, but we have the will to succeed. And succeed we will.

The SSC is necessary and within our abilities. Let's overcome any obstacles in our path and build it. Let's make an investment our grandchildren will appreciate.

Mr. BROOKS. Madam Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 4380, which authorizes the superconducting super collider. The SSC will be the world's largest particle accelerator and will make the United States the leader in high-energy physics. It will also advance our fundamental understanding of matter and will benefit our Nation in several important areas, especially science education.

H.R. 4380 addresses the SSC in its entirety, while incorporating several checks on the project to insure that Federal funds are spent wisely. The bill requires international contributions equalling at least 20 percent of the SSC's total cost and caps Federal expenditures at $5 billion. My own State of Texas, which was selected as the site of the SSC by an independent review panel, has also pledged to put up at least $1 billion in State funds to help finance the SSC.

I believe the SSC is vital if this Nation is to lead the world in science and technology and I urge my colleagues to join me in voting for H.R. 4380.

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute now printed in the reported bill shall be considered by sections as an original bill for the purpose of amendment, and each section shall be considered having been read.

The Clerk will designate section 1.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute be printed in the RECORD and open to amendment at any point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

The text of the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

H.R. 4380

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Superconducting Super Collider Project Authorization Act of 1990".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) basic scientific research has laid the groundwork for the development of technologies that have improved the Nation's economic competitiveness as well as its standard of living;

(2) many current technologies in the United States were made possible by the development of modern particle accelerators, and past investments in basic research in high energy physics have been repaid many times over in terms of new technology, new jobs, enhanced national security, and advances in medicine;

(3) while the United States has maintained preeminence in high energy physics, substantial scientific challenges are being posed by facilities located outside of the United States;

(4) the SSC is the next logical step in maintaining the Nation's leadership in high energy physics;

(5) the State of Texas, which was selected competitively by the Department of Energy as the site for the SSC, has committed to assist the Federal Government by providing substantial capital and resources to offset construction and operating costs of the SSC;

(6) progress in high energy physics is dependent on access to premier scientific instruments located around the world;

(7) when completed, the SSC will be the premier tool of high energy physics which will attract the most talented scientists in the international community;

(8) international cooperation on the SSC will accelerate its benefits to all and will reduce its cost to the United States Government; and

(9) the completion of the SSC is critically dependent upon the successful production of the superconducting dipole magnets.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this Act are to—

(1) authorize funds for the SSC;

(2) authorize the Secretary of Energy to enter into arrangements for the research and development, design, construction, and operation of the project;

(3) authorize the Secretary to seek commitments to the construction of the SSC from international and other non-Federal sources;

(4) establish guidelines for the receipt of contributions from international and other non-Federal sources;

(5) establish policies for the awarding of construction and construction-related contracts; and

(6) authorize a Director of the Office of the Superconducting Super Collider, to facilitate management of the SSC.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this Act—

(1) the term "Authorizing Committees" means the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate;

(2) the term "construction" means all activities necessary for completion of the SSC and its supporting infrastructure, and includes conventional construction and the research, development, design, fabrication, installation, testing, and preoperation of technical systems;

(3) the term "conventional construction" means the design and construction of civil works, facilities, and other infrastructure necessary to construct the SSC, including tunnels, buildings, and roads, necessary to house and support the technical systems, and utilities as necessary for the direct support of elements of the SSC project authorized in accordance with the schedule set forth in section 7, to the extent such utilities are not otherwise readily available;

(4) the term "conventional construction plan" means the description of—

(A) methods of contracting for architectural and engineering and construction services;

(B) project responsibilities, including construction management services when appropriate;

(C) delineation of facilities and infrastructure to be constructed;

(D) schedules; and

(E) estimated costs;

(5) the term "facility site plan" means the configuration, including the location, size, and shape, of the property on which the SSC is to be constructed, which will form the basis for the procurement of land for the SSC;

(6) the term "magnet assembly test" means an in situ test consisting of not less than 10 nor more than 100 dipole magnets, and the appropriate supporting magnets, and cryogenic, vacuum, and utility support systems configured in upper and lower beam lines, to ensure that the magnets will operate in series as a unit at its full potential in accordance with program objectives;

(7) the term "magnet development plan" means the management plan that specifies project organization, schedules, facilities, estimated costs, performance criteria, design, specifications, fabrication, testing, and production release criteria for magnets;

(8) the term "magnet industrial production plan" means the description of the requirements for producing magnets of all types required for the SSC, as well as the superconducting cable, in a manufacturing environment, including management, organization, type of contracts, technical and administrative control provisions, technical specifications, procedures for testing, quality control, acceptance criteria including testing requirements and warranties, and the supply, transportation, emplacement, and installation of the magnets and related facilities and equipment;

(9) the term "preproduction phase" means activities associated with the development of production techniques and methods, tooling, and the production of magnets to ensure that the magnets to be manufactured are producible to design and performance specifications at acceptable cost and yield, including associated facilities;

(10) the term "prototype magnets" means magnets produced in carrying out the magnet development plan for the purpose of confirming the final criteria and specifications prior to beginning production of the magnets;

(11) the term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Energy";

(12) the term "SSC" means a superconducting super collider, a scientific facility known as a particle beam accelerator, which can provide data that will assist scientists in formulating a unified field theory, and to thus answer scientific questions regarding the nature of matter, and which includes associated infrastructure such as magnet test facilities, laboratories, warehouses, offices, visiting scientist housing, roads, and other infrastructure necessary to support the SSC and associated equipment and personnel; and

(13) the term "technical systems" means the facilities, hardware, machinery, and equipment that comprise the injector systems (linear accelerator, low energy booster, medium energy booster, high energy booster, and beam transport systems), the collider ring systems (magnets, cryogenics, vacuum systems, main power supplies, radio frequency system, and detectors) and other systems required to inject, energize, guide, monitor, and control the proton beams.

SEC. 4. OFFICE OF THE SUPERCONDUCTING SUPER COLLIDER.

(a) DIRECTOR.—There shall be in the Department of Energy an Office of the Superconducting Super Collider, whose sole function shall be to facilitate the management and decisionmaking of the Federal Government as it undertakes the largest scientific project ever authorized for the Department of Energy, with a Director who shall be compensated at the rate of pay payable for level IV of the Executive Schedule under title 5, United States Code, and who shall report directly to the Secretary of Energy and supervise the SSC Project Office established by section 4(b) and the Superconducting Super Collider Laboratory to ensure that responsibility and accountability is placed with a minimum number of levels of management within the Department of Energy, and that all supporting and ancillary activities are carried out to further the mission of the project.

(b) PROJECT OFFICE.—There shall be established an SSC Project Office located at the site of the SSC, to be supervised by the Director of the Office of the Superconducting Super Collider, to provide the necessary support activities for the SSC.

(c) SUNSET.—Subsection (b), and the amendment made by subsection (a), shall cease to be effective 2 years after the completion of the construction of the SSC.

SEC. 5. PROJECT AUTHORIZATION.

The Secretary may enter into arrangements with universities or with State institutions, nonprofit entities, public utilities, industry, international sources, Federal agencies, or other persons, or with consortia thereof, for participation in the research and development, design, construction, or operation of the SSC.

SEC. 6. ESTABLISHMENT OF FUND AND AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF FUND.—There is established in the Treasury of the United States a separate fund to be known as the Superconducting Super Collider Fund. Such fund shall have deposited in it—

(1) unexpended balances of appropriations made for the SSC before the date of enactment of this Act;

(2) State of Texas cash contributions received under section 8(a);

(3) international cash contributions received under section 8(b);

(4) other non-Federal cash contributions received under section 8(c); and

(5) appropriations made pursuant to subsection (c) of this section.

(b) NONCASH CONTRIBUTIONS.—For purposes of the expenditure limitations set forth in subsection (c)(2) of this section and section 7, noncash contributions received under section 8 shall be treated as though they were cash contributions deposited in the Superconducting Super Collider Fund, with a value equal to the fair market value of the contribution at the time it was made, as determined by the Secretary.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—(1) There are authorized to be appropriated to the Superconducting Super Collider Fund, as described in subsection (a)(5), amounts necessary for expenditures for the SSC in accordance with section 7. In no case shall the sum of—

(A) the aggregate of appropriations under this paragraph;

(B) balances described in subsection (a)(1); and

(C) amounts expended after September 30, 1989, and before the date of enactment of this Act, exceed $5,000,000,000 for construction of the SSC.

(2) There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary from the Superconducting Super Collider Fund amounts necessary for expenditures for the SSC in accordance with section 7, to remain available until expended.

SEC. 7. USES OF THE FUND.

The Secretary may make expenditures from the Superconducting Super Collider Fund, to the extent provided in appropriations Acts, for construction and activities associated with construction, including equipment procurement and research and development, as follows:

(1) Not to exceed $220,000,000 shall be available for obligation after October 1, 1989, for—

(A) research and development for magnet and technical systems;

(B) the design of on-site civil works and facilities including the main ring tunnel; and

(C) research and development associated with preproduction phase.

(2)(A) An additional $1,170,000,000 shall be available for obligation 30 days after submission by the Secretary to the Authorizing Committees of—

(i) a facility site plan, approved by the Secretary;

(ii) a magnet development plan;

(iii) a complete summary project plan, containing management and organization plans, current cost estimates and schedules, a conventional construction plan, and a magnet industrial production plan, approved by the Secretary;

(iv) a written report on the status of the Supplemental Environmental Impact Statement;

(v) a written report on the status of agreements for international contributions to the SSC; and

(vi) a certification that prototype magnet design is complete and that prototype magnets can be produced by industry.

(B) Funds described in subparagraph (A) shall be available for—

(i) the continuation of purposes described in paragraph (1);

(ii) the on-site conventional construction of above ground facilities, including only the Magnet Development Laboratory, Magnet Test Laboratory, Laboratory/Office Complex, and on-site associated roads, service facilities, and utilities;

(iii) the construction of the first below ground tunnel segment consisting of a length no greater than 8 miles, with appropriate access structures, related appurtenances, supporting systems, and on-site supporting utilities;

(iv) the construction of prototype magnets and all necessary supporting systems and utilities;

(v) the installation and operation of prototype magnets, and all necessary supporting systems and utilities, for the purpose of conducting a magnet assembly test;

(vi) the construction of the injector systems, including all associated subsystems and utilities, except for the construction of the high energy booster; and

(vii) activities related to the preproduction phase.

(3) An additional $5,980,000,000 shall be available for obligation, 30 days after submission by the Secretary to the Authorizing Committees of a report—

(A) certifying the successful completion of the magnet assembly test;

(B) certifying the securing of the commitments required under section 8 (a) and (b); and

(C) containing any revisions to the summary project plan required by paragraph (2)(A)(iii) that are necessitated by the results of the magnet assembly test, for activities leading to the completion of the construction of the SSC including purposes described in paragraphs (1) and (2)(B), including research and development, conventional construction of the remainder of the 46 miles of the main ring tunnel, and the remainder of the technical systems including the high energy booster.

SEC. 8. NON-FEDERAL CONTRIBUTIONS.

(a) STATE OF TEXAS CONTRIBUTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall negotiate with the State which has been selected as the site for the SSC, to mutually agree on a schedule for making cash and in-kind contributions to the SSC and on the composition of such contributions. The aggregate value of such cash and in-kind contributions shall be not less than $1,000,000,000.

(2) REFUND.—(A) If, before October 1, 1995, the Secretary terminates the SSC project, the Secretary shall make a refund of cash payments and in-kind contributions made by the State of Texas from amounts available to the Secretary.

(B) Refunds for in-kind contributions shall be based on the fair market value of the contribution at the time it was made, as determined by the Secretary, and shall be returned to the State of Texas in a form and on such terms and conditions as may be mutually agreeable to the Secretary and the State of Texas.

(3) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "in-kind contributions" means contributions other than cash that the Secretary determines have a direct impact on the functioning of the SSC, whether on or off the actual project site, and the expenditures which would not have been made but for the SSC; including materials and labor associated with conventional construction; technical expertise or studies; improvements made to infrastructure necessary to adequately serve the site area (such as roads and highways, airports, water and sewer, electricity and power); real estate and interests in real estate; contributions or improvements made to educational or academic facilities in support of necessary research related to the SSC; appropriate housing and other benefits for those associated with the SSC; and the cost of subsidies provided to the SSC (such as energy, water, or materials provided at less than market cost).

(b) INTERNATIONAL CONTRIBUTIONS.—The Secretary shall secure commitments for contributions from international sources with a value of not less than 20 percent nor more than 33 and one-third percent of the total cost of the SSC.

(c) OTHER CONTRIBUTIONS.—The Secretary may accept contributions for the SSC from other non-Federal sources.

(d) CREATIVE FUNDING MECHANISMS.—The Secretary shall make every effort to devise strategies that minimize the cost of constructing the SSC through the use of creative funding mechanisms such as leasebacks, the transfer of title to a facility constructed by a non-Federal party to the United States, third party financing, guaranteed loans, and interest subsidies for conventional construction. The Secretary may propose legislation to Congress to implement these mechanisms as needed.

(e) USE OF CONTRIBUTIONS.—Amounts received by the Secretary as cash contributions to the SSC shall be deposited into the Superconducting Super Collider Fund.

(f) CONTRIBUTIONS OF SERVICES.—The Secretary may accept contributions of services and other noncash items in accordance with section 652 of the Department of Energy Organization Act (42 U.S.C. 7262) to be used to carry out the purposes of the Superconducting Super Collider Project Authorization Act of 1990.

SEC. 9. ELIGIBLE CONTRACT RECIPIENTS.

(a) DETERMINATION BY SECRETARY.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, the Secretary shall award a contract in connection with the SSC only to—

(1) a domestic firm;

(2) foreign firms based in a country that is contributing to the SSC;

(3) a foreign firm that will perform the majority of its contractual activities for the SSC within the United States; or

(4) a joint venture between a foreign firm and a United States company which—

(A) is expressly organized to bid for SSC contracts; and

(B) indicates an intention to conduct a substantial portion of its contract activities in the United States.

(b) EXCEPTIONS.—For contracts that cannot be fulfilled from sources which meet the requirements of subsection (a) or can only be fulfilled by such firms at a substantially higher cost, the Secretary may award such contracts to other firms 30 days after the submission of a report to the Authorizing Committees explaining the reasons for the contract award.

(c) FOREIGN MANUFACTURE.—Not more than 50 percent of any major system or component purchased for the SSC may be manufactured in foreign countries, unless the Secretary determines that such system or component is not manufactured in the United States and available from a domestic firm and the Secretary submits a report, at least 60 days before entering into a contract for such system or component, to the Authorizing Committees explaining the reasons for such determination.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) the term "domestic firm" means a corporation or other entity organized under the laws of the United States or a State of the United States, more than 50 percent of which is owned by United States nationals, and that conducts a substantial portion of its business and manufacturing activities in the United States; and

(2) the term "foreign firm" means a corporation or other entity not described in paragraph (1).

SEC. 10. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

The Secretary shall prepare an annual SSC status report to be submitted to the Authorizing Committees no later than December 1st of each year beginning in 1990 until completion of construction of the SSC. Such report shall include—

(1) an assessment of accomplishments compared with program objectives, explanations for deviations from any objectives, and, as appropriate, revised projections for future performance;

(2) a schedule which includes project milestones and which shows the actual date of completion compared to previous scheduled completion dates for each major construction and technical system activity;

(3) a program cost statement showing the actual cost of each major construction and technical system activity identified pursuant to paragraph (2), compared to previous estimated costs of such activity; and

(4) an accounting of the funds deposited in the Superconducting Super Collider Fund, including a specific accounting of contingency funds.

SEC. 11. LIMITATION ON USE OF FUNDS.

No funds authorized to be appropriated under this Act may be used for any activity not directly related to the construction of the SSC.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. ROE

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ROE: Page 8, line 7, insert "a rate not to exceed" after "shall be compensated at".

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, this amendment is technical in nature and was requested by the Budget Committee after it reviewed the provision in our bill which creates a new position of Director of the Office of the Superconducting Super Collider. The bill language as reported by the committee was being read to create an entitlement for the pay of the Director, which was not intended. The amendment I am offering clarifies that such was not the intent of the committee.

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, we accept the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE].

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. ROE

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ROE: Page 8, lines 22 and 23, strike "Subsection (b), and the amendment made by subsection (a)," and insert in lieu thereof "This section".

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, this amendment is technical in nature and is offered to correct the section so that the sunset provision will apply to both the Director and the project office 2 years after completion of construction of the SSC. This was the intent of the committee. Several words in section 4 were inadvertently retained in the committee reported amendment after the section was amended in committee. Without this change, the sunset section, section (c), only sunsets the project office.

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, we accept the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE].

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. ROE

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ROE: Page 14, line 7, insert "For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term 'in-kind contributions' shall not include real estate and interests in real estate." after "$1,000,000,000.".

Page 14, after line 7, insert the following new paragraph:

"(2) RETURN OF REAL ESTATE.—If the Secretary terminates the SSC project, the Secretary shall return to the State of Texas real estate and interests in real estate contributed by the State of Texas for the purposes of the SSC project. Any return of real estate or interests in real estate under this paragraph shall be in lieu of a refund for such real estate or interests in real estate under paragraph (3).".

Redesignate subsequent paragraphs accordingly.

Mr. ROE (during the reading). Madam Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, this amendment is intended to clarify the committee's intent that the State of Texas' $1 billion contribution does not include real estate or interests in real estate. It is also intended to make clear that, in the event the SSC project is terminated, the Secretary of Energy will return to the State of Texas any real estate or real estate interests that the State has contributed to the SSC project.

This amendment has been brought to our attention by our committee colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT], and the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE]. I thank the gentlemen for the contribution they have made to the improvement of this important legislation. I urge approval of the amendment.

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Madam Chairman, if I understand the gentleman's amendment, what we are assuring here is that we do in fact maintain the land contribution as originally understood by the committee and by the participants and so on?

Mr. ROE. If the gentleman will yield, that is absolutely correct.

Mr. WALKER. This is something which I think is a very good addition to the bill and I appreciate the chairman offering it. I think that this will help firm up what the $1 billion contribution from Texas means, and will assure that the land that was contributed is in fact something which is in addition to the $1 billion contribution as was originally anticipated under the bids for this project in the first place.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, I would like to thank the chairman for the sensitivity with which he has handled this amendment. I expressed some concern as a result of my initial inquiry into this whole matter involving the Texas land contribution, and I expressed some concern that the land contribution would be subtracted from the $1 billion that Texas has agreed to put up for this project as its contribution. I was afraid that they were going to try to subtract that from the $1 billion and come up with a lesser contribution. We all know that right from the beginning all of those candidate sites agreed that the land would be up front as part of the project as the local contribution and in addition they were able to offer something more, which they did.

So this amendment could save the American taxpayer somewhere in the neighborhood of $50 million. I brought this to the chairman's attention and he was very responsive. I want to thank him for his acceptance of it.

Mr. WALKER. I thank the gentleman from New York and also our colleague from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE], who is also concerned about this issue. I think the leadership they have provided is what has helped the committee come to the floor with this amendment and it does assure, I think, what could be a significant savings to the taxpayer.

I must say that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BARTON] has also been very cooperative in this, and I think it was Texas' intent we are clarifying now in the language and the nature of it, and what we have now is an amendment that accommodates a lot of interests, and I think it is a very positive step forward and I thank the chairman for the amendment.

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Madam Chairman, I, too, rise in support of this particular amendment. I want to lay out though in a little bit more detail some of the background.

Back in 1987 when the Department of Energy released the request for proposals for location of the SSC there were 43 proposals sent into the Department of Energy. Those 43 proposals came from I believe 25 States. Every State that submitted a proposal to be sited as the home of the SSC, as part of that specification they had to specify that they would contribute the land to the project. Every State that made the final list made that specification.

So there is absolutely no argument that Texas, as the home of the SSC, should provide the land, and that land should not be counted as a contribution, no question at all.

I would like to point out that since 1988 when the State of Texas was chosen as the home of the SSC, the original plan at that time was to begin land acquisition in March 1989. We have yet to buy 1 acre of land.

In 1989 Texas was in the midst of a recession and land prices were lower. It could have been obtained much more inexpensively then than it will probably be obtained now.

□ 1440

So that is point No. 1.

Point No. 2, in 1988 the Department of Energy was asking for a little over 15,000 acres. Today they are asking for a little over 16,000 acres.

In 1988 the Department of Energy was only requiring that a little over 7,000 acres be purchased outright, which is called fee simple. The remaining acreage would have been purchased, only the subsurface rights, which is called stratified fee.

Today the Department of Energy wants over 10,000 acres purchased outright. If you purchase the land outright, it is going to be more expensive.

So the commitment that Texas was willing to make, as every other State was willing to make at that point in time, is not the same commitment that we are being required to make today.

Having said that, we know the cost constraints that are on the Federal budget. We understand the need for any State to honor whatever commitment it made at that point in time.

So we will support this amendment, but we want folks to know that it is a different requirement in terms of dollar outlay today than it was in 1988. And it could be a significant addition. It could be as much as $50 million, $75 million, which, in any State's budget, that is not chicken feed.

Having said that, I would support the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE].

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. WALKER

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WALKER: Page 10, line 13, strike "1989" and insert in lieu thereof "1987".

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, this amendment simply makes a technical change that I thought had been agreed to and incorporated in the markup vehicle the Science Committee approved a few weeks ago.

It was my understanding at the time, that it was wholly consistent with the chairman's intent that the Federal spending cap be a true $5 billion—not $5 billion plus some amount of previous funding.

A sum of $33 million was, in fact, appropriated for the SSC in fiscal year 1988 and $97,585,000 was appropriated in fiscal year 1989. That is over $130 million before the effective date now in the bill.

My amendment simply moves the effective date back to make sure this $130 million is counted against the cap—so its a real cap not a charade.

This amendment is really just truth in advertising.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the chairman of the full committee.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Chairman, we have reviewed the gentleman's amendment; it is an improvement to the bill and we have no objection to the amendment at all.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENTS OFFERED BY MR. WOLPE

Mr. WOLPE. Madam Chairman, I offer amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendments offered by Mr. WOLPE: Page 11, line 10, strike "30" and insert in lieu thereof "60".

Page 12, after line 3, insert the following: "Within 30 days after such submission, the Comptroller General shall submit to the Authorizing Committees an evaluation of the materials contained in such submission.".

Page 13, line 8, strike "30" and insert in lieu thereof "60".

Page 13, line 23, insert "Within 30 days after such submission, the Comptroller General shall submit to the Authorizing Committees an evaluation of the report submitted under this paragraph." after "high energy booster.".

Page 18, after line 25, insert the following: The Comptroller General shall submit to the Authorizing Committees an evaluation of each report submitted under this section.".

Mr. WOLPE. Madam Chairman, the amendment that I am offering is very simple. It would require the General Accounting Office [GAO] to undertake evaluations of the super collider project plans and milestones and cost estimates at critical phases of this project's development.

These evaluations are needed to ensure that an impartial arbiter monitors the SSC's progress and that Federal tax dollars that are to be spent are in fact well spent.

The GAO has no vested interest, bureaucratic or financial, in this project. We need the GAO, in my judgment, to verify what the Department of Energy is telling us in the weeks and months ahead.

If the Congress does not closely monitor this project, in my view 5 years from now we are going to see that the SSC has taken over the Federal R&D budget.

The Federal Government, on occasion, believe it or not, has actually finished projects on time and under budget. We are being told today that cost overruns are inevitable. Well, we all know that the Apollo 11 landed on the Moon 6 months before the end of the decade in July 1969. We may not all be aware that the project also finished over $18 billion under budget.

I simply do not accept the view and I do not think taxpayers accept the view that cost overruns and schedule slippage are inevitable.

Well-planned and well-managed projects are finished on time and under budget.

What is happening now, frankly, in my view, is that today's bureaucracy and special interests have become very adept at pushing the camel's nose under the tent.

On March 31, 1986, just 4 years ago, the SSC's central design group released a report indicating that the actual cost of this project was going to come in at around $3 billion. It even had a $529 million set aside for contingencies.

Now we are being told that we are talking about an $8 billion project. We are being told that we have to authorize construction even before we know how to construct the project.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLPE. Madam Chairman, I would be pleased to yield to the chairman, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE].

Mr. ROE. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Chairman, I assure we are not—I think there is a point we have to correct one statement. Nobody is authorizing construction at this point. So I would hope that we would try to get our facts straight a little bit.

Mr. WOLPE. Well, if I may reclaim my time, I think the whole purpose of this legislation is to put in place the super collider initiative. If I am incorrect in that, I stand corrected, but it seems to me that that is the whole thrust and purpose of the legislation before us.

There are three particular concerns. The first is that the cost estimates have ballooned from $5.9 billion to nearly $8 billion just in the last 6 months. They are going to go even higher, in my judgment.

The current design has not yet been tested. Previous project designs are responsible for over $1 billion in the increased cost estimate. Future design changes or problems in any phase of the project could add billions more to its cost.

Finally, I think we ought to be really concerned when a former Director of Energy Research for the Department of Energy sends Secretary Watkins a memorandum saying the following about those who are responsible for the management of this project, and I quote directly from the memorandum:

It is my view that the contractor is incompetent to manage and construct the SSC project. The contractor should be replaced. . . . Otherwise this program will experience massive overruns and, in their course, require extraordinary management attention due to the international and national political complications. Enormous damage can be done to the scientific enterprise and DOE science programs by continuing with the present contractor and personnel.

When you have the man responsible for oversight of this project make that kind of observation, I submit to my colleagues that we all ought to be concerned. The American taxpayer ought to be concerned. And we ought to put in place every possible means of independent oversight and accountability that can be established.

That is the purpose of the amendment that I have offered.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLPE. Madam Chairman, I am pleased to yield to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT].

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Chairman, I think the gentleman has an outstanding amendment. I rise in full support of it.

Madam Chairman, I think it is very important that we have an outside group of experts, one with no vested interest in the project, to review the cost estimates. The former DOE officials, as the gentleman has observed, have complained that the project is not being adequately reviewed by disinterested parties. I think it is important to mention that.

Madam Chairman, I want to compliment the gentleman on his amendment, and I am in full support of it.

Mr. WOLPE. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for his comments, and I want to express my appreciation to him for the leadership he has exercised in crafting a number of other amendments that will be offered in due course that I think will at least strengthen the bill and provide some measure of increased protection.

But I think the fundamental issue is that we are moving prematurely at this stage to advance this initiative. The scientific community itself is divided on this issue. No less an expert than the immediate past president of the American Physical Society demonstrates the division within the scientific community itself.

Let me quote from a letter sent by this leading physicist to one of my colleagues:

The profession of physics has made a large contribution to knowledge, technology, the other sciences, and education in the past 50 years. Those contributions came from the synergism, balances, and evolution of many subfields. Referring to the SSL and to particle physics in particular, of the approximately 40,000 members of the American Physical Society those in that subfield constitute about 8.5%. Referring to the contributions of subfields to technology: particle physics itself (therefore the SSL!) has made negligible contributions * * *.

Today we are really in trouble in regard to the support and understanding by the public of a balanced physics enterprise; many important subfields are below critical support levels and highly capable students are leaving. The great majority of training is done by the small science subfields. Other fields (chemistry, materials science) are suffering similarly. In my opinion Congress should call time out on large prestige projects and build up their information on the totality and the interplay of subfields in the scientific disciplines which are important to this Nation.

To conclude, I appreciate all the work that has been done on this bill and I respect those who have worked hard on it. I feel the taxpayers deserve as much protection as we can give them. That is the purpose of these amendments. I want the taxpayers to feel that we are looking out for their interests.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Madam Chaiman, we have reviewed this amendment, and I think from our point of view it adds a dimension that I think is an important one. We want to compliment the gentleman for offering the amendment. We have no objection to the amendment on this side.

Mr. RITTER. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Madam Chairman, I want to call my colleagues' attention to a letter that I received from an individual who wrote a letter to the editors of Time magazine, talking about costs of these high-energy physics programs. He relates his own experience as a business manager with a much smaller, what he calls D-Zero Project at Fermilab, and the kind of unforeseen cost buildups that occur in these kinds of projects and the risks that they have to cancel such project.

I'd like to read from this letter, and then I will ask unanimous consent that it be placed in the RECORD at this point in the debate.

□ 1450

John Penn who is the former business manager of D-Zero, at Fermilab says:

The moral to all this is that physicists have no conception of costs. They are definitely not "money people." And as scientists, they are more than willing to discard that which does not work and start all over. Even though in places such as Fermilab and the Department of Energy there may be financially oriented people, the truth is that physicists—such as Dr. Leon Lederman, head of Fermilab, ultimately call the shots.

The SCC is going to be a black hole into which we will be shoveling money for many, many years.

I think the gentleman's amendment in putting GAO in a critical position to oversee the costs of this project is a good one. I support it fully.

Mr. ECKART. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RITTER. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. ECKART. Madam Chairman, I just want to associate myself with the gentleman's remarks and to stand in support of my colleague from Michigan's amendment, and thank the chairman, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE], and the ranking member from Pennsylvania for their accepting it. An independent review of this activity by the GAO, I think, is very important. It creates the appropriate milestones and will give Members a better handle on actual costs, and will provide accountability and verification of the promises and projections made for the performance of this project. The wisdom of the leadership of the committee in accepting it, and my colleague, the gentleman from Michigan in offering it is self-evident, given the reality to the rhetoric, and is necessary for the taxpayer to understand what exactly we are supporting.

Mr. OBEY. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment.

I wanted to just address this amendment at this time in order to try to make a somewhat larger point. I congratulate the gentleman for offering the amendment. I think it is a good one. I think it will help to bring the House back to reality to some degree on this issue.

I am one Member who believes that we ought to increase, not decrease, our investment in science. I think our civilian science budget has been extraordinarily short-changed over the past decade. However, I think that even with this amendment we are going to be continuing the aura of unreality, which has permeated the discussion on this issue.

Last year, a number of us questioned the cost estimate for the super collider. We were told we should not worry about it, that those costs were and would be under control. At that time we were assured by DOE that the costs would be about $4.4 billion. Since then, Secretary Moore indicated that DOE would not support the package if it cost more than $5.9 billion. Now, DOE estimates that when it is all over it will probably cost about $8 billion. I think the problem is, as the gentleman from Michigan said earlier in debate, that political action on this issue is simply ahead of the science.

Now, I think what happens on this amendment will help to some degree, but I think what happens on this entire bill is that Congress is being roped in to buy an idea before we actually know, or before the agency knows, what the costs are going to be.

Congressional Quarterly pointed out in an article recently that DOE has consistently low-balled their cost estimates on virtually every project within their command over the past 20 years. The dean of space engineers at NASA said the following: "You always try to put the best picture on it. If you don't quote a low cost, you ain't going to get it to begin with." He then went on to talk about the "willful self-delusion" which occurs on a routine basis on projects like this.

It seems to me that this project is the best example I can point to of the new kind of pork which is going to be permeating this budget. We have some 2,600 contracts let under this project. As one of the committee members indicated earlier, we have 30 universities in 25 States already participating in this program. That is precisely what is wrong with it. At my State university, for instance, we had a call from one of the physicists at my State university saying, "I hope you will support that super collider because we will be able to deal with it." But the fact is that the taxpayer's interest is not served by that kind of action. I was in the weird position with the president of my university telling me that "This is a bad expenditure of public money" while we have individual scientists within his university saying it is a good expenditure because they get some of the money.

Now, I simply suggest that this is another example of an outrageously out-of-control item in the budget. And the problem is that if we do not have control of the costs on items like this, what is going to happen is that a lot of other vital science will get squeezed right of the budget. We will not have enough funding for the scientific programs that are truly at the heart of our competitiveness as an economy and as a society.

I am happy to see this amendment, but I intend to vote against the entire bill because very frankly, Congress is being suckered on this. DOE is going to get their nose in under the tent, and then "Katie bar the door," as far as costs, and we will not be able to stop it because virtually every university in this country and every State in this country will lobby Members to support this package because they get a tiny piece of the action. The time to stop this is now before it destroys the balance in our scientific programs. If we want to get their overall budget house in order, fine. Right now, we do not have the revenue to support this package or a lot of other programs, and we should not delude ourselves into thinking that we are funding this package with the bill that we provide today. This is just the first initial cost. It will explode far beyond the numbers that we see here today, and we ought not to do that.

Mr. WOLPE. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBEY. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WOLPE. Madam Chairman, I want to express my appreciation to the gentleman for his statement.

(On request of Mr. WOLPE and by unanimous consent, Mr. OBEY was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. OBEY. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLPE].

Mr. WOLPE. Madam Chairman, I think the real strategy that is being pursued is one of getting the contracts out as quickly as possible, so as to put in place a lot of vested interests that will have an economic stake in the continuity of the project. This will undermine any kind of opportunity to make a rational judgment about the merits of the project, and will move its construction way ahead of any kind of justification for it.

In the same Congressional Quarterly piece I believe the gentleman was citing in his statement, it reports that the Energy Department says it has already awarded 2,600 contracts in 36 States. Six hundred companies in 42 States have expressed an interest in getting a piece of the action. Forty-two universities, and 7 research laboratories in 25 States have received Federal money from the program. A printout from fiscal 1990 disbursements from the Energy Department shows money flowing into about 800 entities in about 40 States.

I do not think I have ever seen the Energy Department act as efficiently as they have in the allocation of these contracts.

Mr. OBEY. They are taking a good lesson from the Pentagon, and spreading it around. This will follow the space station. In 1984 we were told the space station will cost $8 billion. Today, we are told it will cost $36 billion. We simply cannot afford to begin to undertake these programs until we have an accurate understanding of roughly what the cost is going to be, and since DOE in the last 10 years has had a cost increase in projects similar to this of about 46 percent, we ought not take their word on this stuff, because their word has been demonstrated to be no good.

(On request of Mr. RITTER and by unanimous consent Mr. OBEY was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. RITTER. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBEY. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RITTER. Madam Chairman, I want to associate myself with the gentleman's remarks. We do not often agree on the floor of this House on many things, but I think he is right on target in calling attention to the way this project is moving through the Congress. It is moving through the Congress as a masterful exercise in political science, as opposed to science itself, because if we poll the scientific community outside of the physics community, there is really no support for the project. If we poll the industrial research community, those players in the front lines facing global competition every day, outside of those who will participate in the contracts, there is no support.

I will be very surprised if there is any Member of this House who has not heard from a constituent university or a constituent industrial contractor, urging support for this bill. So what we have here is a masterful orchestration at which the taxpayer is the loser. We are into an open-ended R&D commitment. That is what this project is. It is not a machine to do R&D. It will be one day. But until such time as it is, it is open-ended, and I commend the gentleman.

□ 1500

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] has expired.

(On request of Mr. ECKART, and by unanimous consent, Mr. OBEY was allowed to proceed for 30 additional seconds.)

Mr. ECKART. Madam Chairman, if my colleague will yield to me, what my colleague has so artfully pointed out is the Pentagonizing of this project. A simple look at the map colored in appropriately where contracts have already been placed reflects most clearly how this project has been spread already beyond the intimate bounds of the State of Texas.

So I think my colleagues have raised a very significant point. The close scrutiny of this amendment, I think, is necessary to address some of the concerns, although it will not necessarily alleviate all of them.

Mr. OBEY. Madam Chairman, I would say that the amendment will help. What would help most of all is if we did not pass this legislation or anything like it until we know what we are doing, and we simply do not know that on this project.

Mr. BRUCE. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words, and I yield to the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE].

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I want to say to my colleagues that I just could not sit still another minute and allow that kind of dialog to go on, assuming there is some great big subterfuge here.

Let me ask the proponents this: I happen to support the GAO amendment. I think it is a good amendment. But we are using every opportunity to run the program down. If Members are opposed to it, for God's sake, say so. They should not use all kinds of surreptitious means to say, "Well, we think here it is going to cost $14 billion," and this and that.

Who are these experts? Where are these experts that we are talking about? We are talking about spreading out the science and technology in the universities. Do we want all the Texas universities to participate? Do all the scientists live in Texas? Do all the people who are going to do all the work live in Texas? Is it a national program, or is it not a national program?

If it is a Texas program, then vote no. That is what Members should do instead of being surreptitious and coming back and saying, "Oh, there's a little bit here," and "I heard about $14 billion here, and then there is a little bit there."

What are the facts as we compare it to this and compare it to that? The fact remains that it is a national program. There are 38 States that participated in this program, and we all put up tens of millions of dollars to participate in the program in the first place. With integrity and honesty, we all put our best foot forward, and Texas happened to win. I wish it could have been New Jersey that won. But now, because it did not go in one of the other States, some of those very people are up here saying what a terrible idea it is and figuring and conniving every way to kill this program.

If anyone thinks this gentleman from New Jersey is stupid, he is not. We have gone along with these amendments and worked with Members to crystalize them and clarify them. Why? Because they are right. I would not sit here and approve an amendment because I need a Member's vote. At least I am honest. I am for something. If I am against it, I am against it. I am not going to use this surreptitious way of offering amendments and other ways to try to undermine and destroy. That is not necessary. Where does truth prevail?

Now, 49 or 50 States are participating. Do we want the other States to send their scientists and their engineers? Do Members want us to say that everybody should come from New Jersey or Texas? Is that what the issue is? Is that the way to undermine this when the chairman and the vice chairman have accepted an amendment because the amendment is right?

So I would hope that the Members would deal with the issue up front on the merits of the case and not take the point of view of sowing ten thousand wild seeds to undermine and destroy something when it is not based on fact.

Mr. OBEY. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROE. Yes, I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. OBEY. Madam Chairman, I hope the gentleman is not suggesting that this Member in any way engaged in surreptitious conduct. I think I said quite explicitly on the floor that this amendment would help marginally, but I think we ought to oppose the entire package. I think I have been quite up front about it.

No one is questioning the integrity of the gentleman in the well. I am questioning the integrity of the numbers provided by the Department of Energy because, based on past performance, they never give us honest numbers.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I would like to respond to that. I have known the gentleman for 25 years, and I feel the same way. Someone suggested earlier that Roe did not believe in the $5 billion cap, but I do. This is the first time I am aware of that any bill has come before this House where we have come back and said we mean it, that if they cannot build it for that amount of money, then we just will not build the thing. That is the way to look at it. That is the position we have taken, and I think it is fair.

Mr. OBEY. Madam Chairman, would the gentleman be willing to bet me 10 bucks here and now that the cost will not exceed $9 billion?

Mr. ROE. We cannot wager on the floor of the House. The gentleman knows that.

Mr. OBEY. I thank the gentleman for making my point.

Mr. SKAGGS. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Madam Chairman, I support the Wolpe-Eckart amendment and urge my colleagues to do likewise. I will not belabor the issue. I would merely point out that I think we are taking a very prudent step in adopting this amendment. It will give us a time-out at a critical juncture in the SSC project to make sure that the substantial sums of money that are going to be expended will really be able to get the job done, and that we have the assurance from an independent agency that we are on track with a fiscally responsible project.

Madam Chairman, I support the Wolpe-Eckart amendment, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

When this legislation was before the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, the committee agreed with me that we ought to find an independent means to assess the uncertain cost estimates made by DOE before we proceeded to spend huge sums on the SSC.

For that reason, the committee approved report language to this bill calling for that kind of independent evaluation, by the GAO or other competent entity. The Wolpe-Eckart amendment would write this requirement into law, choosing the nonpartisan and respected General Accounting Office to perform the assessment work.

This kind of independent assessment is important because DOE, over the years, has developed a history of mismanaging major projects, leading to huge cost overruns or poorly designed facilities.

Let me cite just one example located in the district I represent in Colorado. In the 1970's, DOE planned a $180 million plutonium processing facility at the Rocky Flats plant there, a facility that was completed a decade later after a 30-percent cost overrun. It was completed only in a fatuous sense, because major design flaws kept it from ever being used as planned, and in fact it's largely been abandoned; today, it is a quarter-billion dollar white elephant, sitting idle.

More relevant to today's debate, DOE also has a history of technical and cost-overrun problems with particle accelerator devices like the SSC. For example, in Upton, NY, a 2½-mile tunnel sits empty and unused, after the Federal Government spent tens of millions of dollars in the early 1980's on another accelerator project. We simply can't afford the same mistake with the SSC.

This independent cost estimate is doubly important today, and not just because the new 1990 price tag of $8 billion is nearly double the 1988 price tag of $4.4 billion and considerably higher than the 1989 price tag of $5.9 billion. Just recently, referring to the rapidly escalating costs, Energy Secretary Watkins told the House Appropriations Committee "I just don't trust the numbers I have in the system now."

And he shouldn't trust those numbers. Especially when another high ranking DOE official described the new $8 billion price tag as a "back of an envelope estimate." That one comment alone—that the $8 billion estimate is a back of the envelope figure—that one comment alone should justify this plain-sense amendment.

I applaud the Secretary for his candor on the uncertainty in DOE's cost estimates. We in Congress should take heed. This amendment allows the SSC project to continue until we would start to spend some big money on actual construction. Only at that point would this amendment kick in. All this amendment says is, when DOE presents Congress its SSC plan, we take a short time out and assess the plan to make sure it is fiscally responsible.

If DOE has done its work well, this amendment will cost the project only a slight delay. But if there is a problem, this amendment could save American taxpayers hundreds of millions or even billions of dollars. I urge my colleagues to vote for this amendment to ensure fiscal responsibility in constructing the SSC.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendments offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLPE].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Madam Chairman, I demand a recorded vote, and pending that, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The CHAIRMAN. Evidently a quorum is not present. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 2, of rule XXIII, the Chair announces that she will reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the period of time within which a vote by electronic device, if ordered, will be taken on the pending question following the quorum call. Members will record their presence by electronic device.

The call was taken by electronic device.

The following Members responded to their names:

[Roll No. 91]

Akaka	Dickinson	Huckaby
Anderson	Dicks	Hughes
Andrews	Dingell	Hunter
Annunzio	Dixon	Hutto
Anthony	Donnelly	Hyde
Applegate	Dorgan (ND)	Inhofe
Archer	Dornan (CA)	Ireland
Armey	Douglas	Jacobs
Aspin	Downey	James
Atkins	Dreier	Jenkins
AuCoin	Duncan	Johnson (CT)
Baker	Durbin	Johnson (SD)
Ballenger	Dwyer	Johnston
Barnard	Dymally	Jones (GA)
Bartlett	Dyson	Jones (NC)
Barton	Early	Jontz
Bateman	Eckart	Kanjorski
Bates	Edwards (CA)	Kaptur
Beilenson	Edwards (OK)	Kasich
Bennett	Emerson	Kastenmeier
Bentley	English	Kennedy
Bereuter	Erdreich	Kennelly
Berman	Espy	Kildee
Bevill	Evans	Kleczka
Bilbray	Fascell	Kolbe
Bilirakis	Fawell	Kolter
Billey	Fazio	Kostmayer
Boehlert	Feighan	Kyl
Boggs	Fields	LaFalce
Bonior	Fish	Lagomarsino
Borski	Flake	Lancaster
Bosco	Foglietta	Lantos
Boucher	Ford (MI)	Laughlin
Boxer	Ford (TN)	Leach (IA)
Brennan	Frenzel	Leath (TX)
Brooks	Gallegly	Lehman (CA)
Broomfield	Gallo	Lehman (FL)
Browder	Gaydos	Lent
Brown (CA)	Gejdenson	Levin (MI)
Brown (CO)	Gekas	Levine (CA)
Bruce	Gephardt	Lewis (CA)
Bryant	Geren	Lewis (FL)
Buechner	Gibbons	Lewis (GA)
Bunning	Gillmor	Lipinski
Burton	Gilman	Livingston
Bustamante	Gingrich	Lloyd
Byron	Glickman	Long
Callahan	Gonzalez	Lowery (CA)
Campbell (CA)	Gordon	Lowey (NY)
Campbell (CO)	Goss	Luken, Thomas
Cardin	Gradison	Machtley
Carper	Grandy	Madigan
Carr	Grant	Manton
Chandler	Gray	Markey
Chapman	Green	Marlenee
Clarke	Guarini	Martin (IL)
Clay	Gunderson	Martin (NY)
Clement	Hall (OH)	Martinez
Clinger	Hall (TX)	Matsui
Coble	Hamilton	Mavroules
Coleman (MO)	Hammerschmidt	Mazzoli
Coleman (TX)	Hancock	McCandless
Combest	Hansen	McCloskey
Condit	Harris	McCollum
Conte	Hastert	McCrery
Conyers	Hatcher	McCurdy
Cooper	Hawkins	McDade
Costello	Hayes (IL)	McDermott
Coughlin	Hayes (LA)	McEwen
Courter	Hefley	McGrath
Cox	Hefner	McHugh
Coyne	Henry	McMillan (NC)
Crane	Herger	McMillen (MD)
Crockett	Hertel	McNulty
Dannemeyer	Hiler	Meyers
Darden	Hoagland	Mfume
Davis	Hochbrueckner	Michel
de la Garza	Holloway	Miller (CA)
DeFazio	Hopkins	Miller (OH)
DeLay	Horton	Miller (WA)
Dellums	Houghton	Mineta
Derrick	Hoyer	Moakley
DeWine	Hubbard	Molinari
Mollohan	Roe	Staggers
Montgomery	Rogers	Stallings
Moody	Rohrabacher	Stangeland
Moorhead	Ros-Lehtinen	Stearns
Morella	Rose	Stenholm
Morrison (CT)	Rostenkowski	Stokes
Morrison (WA)	Roth	Studds
Mrazek	Roukema	Stump
Murphy	Rowland (CT)	Sundquist
Murtha	Rowland (GA)	Swift
Myers	Roybal	Synar
Nagle	Russo	Tallon
Natcher	Sabo	Tanner
Neal (MA)	Saiki	Tauke
Neal (NC)	Sangmeister	Tauzin
Nielson	Sarpalius	Taylor
Nowak	Savage	Thomas (CA)
Oakar	Sawyer	Thomas (GA)
Oberstar	Saxton	Thomas (WY)
Obey	Schaefer	Torres
Olin	Scheuer	Torricelli
Ortiz	Schiff	Towns
Owens (UT)	Schneider	Traficant
Oxley	Schroeder	Traxler
Packard	Schuette	Udall
Pallone	Schulze	Unsoeld
Panetta	Schumer	Upton
Parker	Sensenbrenner	Valentine
Parris	Serrano	Vander Jagt
Pashayan	Sharp	Vento
Patterson	Shaw	Visclosky
Paxon	Shays	Volkmer
Payne (NJ)	Shumway	Vucanovich
Payne (VA)	Shuster	Walgren
Pease	Sikorski	Walker
Pelosi	Sisisky	Walsh
Penny	Skaggs	Washington
Perkins	Skeen	Watkins
Petri	Skelton	Waxman
Pickett	Slattery	Weber
Pickle	Slaughter (NY)	Weiss
Porter	Slaughter (VA)	Weldon
Poshard	Smith (IA)	Wheat
Price	Smith (NE)	Whittaker
Pursell	Smith (NJ)	Whitten
Quillen	Smith (TX)	Williams
Rangel	Smith, Denny (OR)	Wilson
Ravenel		Wise
Ray	Smith, Robert (NH)	Wolf
Regula		Wolpe
Rhodes	Smith, Robert (OR)	Wyden
Richardson		Wylie
Ridge	Snowe	Yates
Rinaldo	Solarz	Yatron
Ritter	Solomon	Young (AK)
Roberts	Spence	Young (FL)
Robinson	Spratt

□ 1532

The CHAIRMAN. Four hundred sixteen Members have answered to their names, a quorum is present, and the Committee will resume its business.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, would it be permissible for the chairman to ask for a unanimous-consent statement indicating that the committee supports this amendment vote?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has not stated a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. ROE. I thank the Chair.

RECORDED VOTE

The CHAIRMAN. The pending business is the demand of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BARTON] for a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 420, noes 0, not voting 13, as follows:

[Roll No. 92]

AYES—420

Akaka	Duncan	Kasich
Anderson	Durbin	Kastenmeier
Andrews	Dwyer	Kennedy
Annunzio	Dymally	Kennelly
Anthony	Dyson	Kildee
Applegate	Early	Kleczka
Archer	Eckart	Kolbe
Armey	Edwards (CA)	Kolter
Aspin	Edwards (OK)	Kostmayer
Atkins	Emerson	Kyl
AuCoin	Engel	LaFalce
Baker	English	Lagomarsino
Ballenger	Erdreich	Lancaster
Barnard	Espy	Lantos
Bartlett	Evans	Laughlin
Barton	Fascell	Leach (IA)
Bateman	Fawell	Leath (TX)
Bates	Fazio	Lehman (CA)
Beilenson	Feighan	Lehman (FL)
Bennett	Fields	Lent
Bentley	Fish	Levin (MI)
Bereuter	Flake	Levine (CA)
Berman	Foglietta	Lewis (CA)
Bevill	Ford (MI)	Lewis (FL)
Bilbray	Ford (TN)	Lewis (GA)
Bilirakis	Frank	Lipinski
Billey	Frenzel	Livingston
Boehlert	Frost	Lloyd
Boggs	Gallegly	Long
Bonior	Gallo	Lowery (CA)
Borski	Gaydos	Lowey (NY)
Bosco	Gejdenson	Luken, Thomas
Boucher	Gekas	Machtley
Boxer	Gephardt	Madigan
Brennan	Geren	Manton
Brooks	Gibbons	Markey
Broomfield	Gillmor	Marlenee
Browder	Gilman	Martin (IL)
Brown (CA)	Gingrich	Martin (NY)
Brown (CO)	Glickman	Martinez
Bruce	Gonzalez	Matsui
Bryant	Gordon	Mavroules
Buechner	Goss	Mazzoli
Bunning	Gradison	McCandless
Burton	Grandy	McCloskey
Bustamante	Grant	McCollum
Byron	Gray	McCrery
Callahan	Green	McCurdy
Campbell (CA)	Guarini	McDade
Campbell (CO)	Gunderson	McDermott
Cardin	Hall (OH)	McEwen
Carper	Hall (TX)	McGrath
Carr	Hamilton	McHugh
Chandler	Hammerschmidt	McMillan (NC)
Chapman	Hancock	McMillen (MD)
Clarke	Hansen	McNulty
Clay	Harris	Meyers
Clement	Hastert	Mfume
Clinger	Hatcher	Michel
Coble	Hawkins	Miller (CA)
Coleman (MO)	Hayes (IL)	Miller (OH)
Coleman (TX)	Hayes (LA)	Miller (WA)
Combest	Hefley	Mineta
Condit	Hefner	Moakley
Conte	Henry	Molinari
Conyers	Herger	Mollohan
Cooper	Hertel	Montgomery
Costello	Hiler	Moody
Coughlin	Hoagland	Moorhead
Courter	Hochbrueckner	Morella
Cox	Holloway	Morrison (CT)
Coyne	Hopkins	Morrison (WA)
Crane	Horton	Mrazek
Crockett	Houghton	Murphy
Dannemeyer	Hoyer	Murtha
Darden	Hubbard	Myers
Davis	Hughes	Nagle
de la Garza	Hunter	Natcher
DeFazio	Hutto	Neal (MA)
DeLay	Hyde	Neal (NC)
Dellums	Inhofe	Nielson
Derrick	Ireland	Nowak
DeWine	Jacobs	Oakar
Dickinson	James	Oberstar
Dicks	Jenkins	Obey
Dingell	Johnson (CT)	Olin
Dixon	Johnson (SD)	Ortiz
Donnelly	Johnston	Owens (NY)
Dorgan (ND)	Jones (GA)	Owens (UT)
Dornan (CA)	Jones (NC)	Oxley
Douglas	Jontz	Packard
Downey	Kanjorski	Pallone
Dreier	Kaptur	Panetta
Parker	Saxton	Sundquist
Parris	Schaefer	Swift
Pashayan	Scheuer	Synar
Patterson	Schiff	Tallon
Paxon	Schneider	Tanner
Payne (NJ)	Schroeder	Tauke
Payne (VA)	Schuette	Tauzin
Pease	Schulze	Taylor
Pelosi	Schumer	Thomas (CA)
Penny	Sensenbrenner	Thomas (GA)
Perkins	Serrano	Thomas (WY)
Petri	Sharp	Torres
Pickett	Shaw	Torricelli
Pickle	Shays	Towns
Porter	Shumway	Traficant
Poshard	Shuster	Traxler
Price	Sikorski	Udall
Pursell	Sisisky	Unsoeld
Quillen	Skaggs	Upton
Rangel	Skeen	Valentine
Ravenel	Skelton	Vander Jagt
Ray	Slattery	Vento
Regula	Slaughter (NY)	Visclosky
Rhodes	Slaughter (VA)	Volkmer
Richardson	Smith (IA)	Vucanovich
Ridge	Smith (NE)	Walgren
Rinaldo	Smith (NJ)	Walker
Ritter	Smith (TX)	Walsh
Roberts	Smith, Denny (OR)	Washington
Robinson	Smith, Robert (NH)	Watkins
Roe	Smith, Robert (OR)	Waxman
Rogers	Snowe	Weber
Rohrabacher	Solarz	Weiss
Ros-Lehtinen	Solomon	Weldon
Rose	Spence	Wheat
Rostenkowski	Spratt	Whittaker
Roth	Staggers	Whitten
Roukema	Stallings	Williams
Rowland (CT)	Stangeland	Wilson
Rowland (GA)	Stark	Wise
Roybal	Stearns	Wolf
Russo	Stenholm	Wolpe
Sabo	Stokes	Wyden
Saiki	Studds	Yates
Sangmeister	Stump	Yatron
Sarpalius		Young (AK)
Savage		Young (FL)
Sawyer

NOT VOTING—13

Ackerman	Goodling	Rahall
Alexander	Huckaby	Smith (FL)
Collins	Lightfoot	Smith (VT)
Craig	Lukens, Donald
Flippo	Nelson

□ 1540

Mr. SIKORSKI changed his vote from "no" to "aye."

So the amendments were agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. BOEHLERT

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BOEHLERT: Page 13, line 13, strike "and (b); and" and insert in lieu thereof "and (b);".

Page 13, after line 13, insert the following new subparagraph:

(C) certifying that the construction of the SSC can be completed without exceeding the limitation on appropriations under section 6(c)(1); and

Page 13, line 14, strike "(C)" and insert in lieu thereof "(D)".

Mr. BOEHLERT (during the reading). Madam Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, this amendment is nothing more than a truth in advertising provision.

While we are talking about truth in advertising, it is my hope that the forthcoming debate will be devoid of some of the exaggerated claims which have been made up to this juncture.

The SSC will not cure cancer, will not solve the problem of male pattern baldness and will not guarantee a World Series victory for the Chicago Cubs. It involves good science, but we must be cautious and prudent as we proceed. I would not be supportive if the chairman had not accepted a number of my amendments designed to protect the taxpayer's interests and assure us that the construction not get ahead of the science.

My amendment simply states that before the Department of Energy gets its final increment of money under the bill, the Secretary must certify that the SSC can be built without exceeding the $5 billion cap on appropriations in this bill.

The debate over this amendment can be summarized in a single question: Would Congress prefer to learn whether the $5 billion cap will be breached after the $5 billion is spent or before?

There is only one answer that is fiscally responsible. The cap is meaningless unless it operates as a brake on spending. If we just let the Department spend down the $5 billion and then come back and say, "Well, gee, we just ran up against that cap, and we need a billion or so more to finish up," what will we have accomplished? The cap will be as porous as the debt ceiling.

The appropriations cap was not my idea. The chairman included it in the bill because he felt—for both political and fiscal reasons, I suspect—he felt that the Federal financial exposure should not be unlimited. The figure of $5 billion was considered reasonable; it's a 25-percent increase over previous estimates.

Now this bill has been sold as one that limits Federal liability to $5 billion—not a mere pittance.

So all I'm asking is: Are we serious about this cap? If we are, let's run the project in a way that allows us to review the cap early on—before we have no choice but to raise it.

This is in keeping with the process inherent in the other provisions of the bill. The Secretary already must certify that the minimum international commitments have been obtained and that the cost estimates for the project are accurate and up to date. This amendment would add the spending cap certification at that same point. In other words, Congress would get a complete fiscal picture of the project before the bulk of the money is released.

Some have presented this as a killer amendment. How can this be? The cap is already in the bill. If we are serious about the cap, this amendment would not change its impact; it would just allow Congress to review the project at a more responsible point.

If we're not serious about the cap, if we are actually authorizing such sums, then let's be honest about what we're doing.

This bill is set up like an installment payment plan for a car—a very expensive domestic car. Wouldn't we protect consumers from an installment plan in which the dealer could say after the last payment, "The price has gone up since you bought the car; you have to pay for another year or junk the car."

This amendment is the equivalent of consumer legislation. We ought to know what the SSC is going to cost the Federal Treasury before we make our last payment.

This is an amendment that simply enforces language that is already in the bill. Anyone who supports H.R. 4380—and I will vote for final passage—ought to support this amendment.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOEHLERT. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE].

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I think the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT] further fortifies the discussion we have had all day on the floor on this very important issue. It is reasonable to expect that this certification will have to be made based on the completion of out-year milestones and also based on the best information available at the time this certification is made. I think the gentleman is adding a new dimension, but a firmer dimension, and from this side of the aisle, we accept the amendment of the gentleman.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, reclaiming my time, I am glad to see that, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT].

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. TRAFICANT

Mr. TRAFICANT. Madam Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TRAFICANT:

At the end of section 9, insert the following new subsection:

(—) RESTRICTION ON CONTRACT AWARDS.—No person or enterprise domiciled or operating under the laws of a foreign government may enter into a contract or subcontract made pursuant to this Act if that government unfairly maintains, in government procurement, a significant and persistent pattern or practice of discrimination against United States products or services which results in identifiable harm to United States businesses, as identified by the President pursuant to section 305(g)(1)(A) of the Trade Agreements Act of 1979.

Mr. TRAFICANT (during the reading). Madam Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

MODIFICATION TO AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. TRAFICANT

Mr. TRAFICANT. Madam Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that on line 2 the word "operating" be deleted and the word "incorporated" be placed in its stead.

The text of the amendment, as modified, is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TRAFICANT: At the end of section 9, insert the following new subsection:

(—) RESTRICTIONS ON CONTRACT AWARDS.—No person or enterprise domiciled or incorporated under the laws of a foreign government may enter into a contract or subcontract made pursuant to this Act if that government unfairly maintains, in government procurement, a significant and persistent pattern or practice of discrimination against United States products or services which results in identifiable harm to United States businesses, as identified by the President pursuant to section 305 (g) (1) (A) of the Trade Agreements Act of 1979.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Madam Chairman, the amendment speaks for itself. The amendment speaks to the trade law and the fact that under section 301 the President shall fight those particular countries whose trade policies literally are injurious and damaging to American business and commerce. This amendment basically states that any country so cited by the President under our trade law as having procurement policies at their national level which injure American industry and business, would then be prohibited and ineligible from bidding on contracts let underneath and pursuant to this particular act.

I would basically state that it deals with India at this particular point. India has basically told our administration to go to hell. Now, there is some $50 million in contributions. India under the bill would still be able to contribute, but at this particular point would be the only nation so cited.

This is a policy move, a policy move that I believe the Congress should support, and one that we should move in the direction of.

Mr. PENNY. Madam Chairman, would the gentleman yield?

Mr. TRAFICANT. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY].

Mr. PENNY. Madam Chairman, I just want to stress that I think the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT] has hit on a modest but important policy initiative, and that is simply to say when the Federal Government is going to spend billions of dollars on a construction program within our borders, that is reasonable to confine participation in that expenditure and in that construction to those countries with whom we have a positive and free-fair-trading relationship, and that at the very least if we have cited nations for flagrant violations of fair-trade practices, that they not be part of that club that is allowed to participate in these types of projects.

For that reason I would rise in support of the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT] and urge the House to act favorably upon it.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Madam Chairman, reclaiming my time, I appreciate the remarks of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY] very much, and with that, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. McMILLEN of Maryland. Madam Chairman, I rise in strong support of passage of H.R. 4380, the superconducting super collider project authorization. We've heard glowing praise of how this project, the likes of which have not been seen in the annals of American science, will unlock the myriad of mysteries regarding the nature and structure of matter. This will provide us with insight into the origins of the universe and will lead us to understanding how best to harness energy forces to serve mankind. The SSC will surely inspire a generation of younger Americans to serve their country through the disciplines of science and engineering.

What is at stake here is America's leadership in the realm of basic and applied scientific research. Not initiating this program or even delaying it will relegate the United States to a second tier in world's scientific community.

Embarking on this awesome initiative, however, should not be construed as a blank ckeck to those at the helm of the superconducting super collider. We need sophisticated cost and fiscal controls on this operation to ensure that our science dollars—both Federal and Texan—are well spent. Further, we should strive to ensure that our international partners are fully involved, so that the SSC's enormous cost is borne by those who stand to gain from its research advancements. I commend Chairman ROE of the Science Committee for crafting a bill that takes into account these concerns.

Chairman ROE once said that "science is our country's new wealth—our key to future prosperity." No greater example of this exists than the superconducting super collider, an endeavor that is sure to yield tangible and usable benefits for generations to come.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment, as modified, offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

The amendment, as modified, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will rise informally.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HOYER) assumed the chair.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair lays before the House the following enrolled bill:

H.R. 1011. An act to provide for the establishment of the National Commission on Wildfire Disasters, to provide for increased planning and cooperation with local firefighting forces in the event of forest fires, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Committee will resume its sitting.

SUPERCONDUCTING SUPER COLLIDER PROJECT AUTHORIZATION ACT OF 1990

The Committee resumed its sitting.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. SENSENBRENNER

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Madam Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SENSENBRENNER: Page 14, lines 8 through 18, strike paragraph (2).

Page 14, line 19, redesignate paragraph (3) as paragraph (2).

□1550

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Madam Chairman, my amendment is simple and straightforward. It would delete the provision in H.R. 4380 which guarantees the State of Texas a refund for its contributions to the SSC if the project is terminated before October 1, 1995. My amendment could save the Federal Government $1 billion or more.

The principle underlying my amendment is that of risk-sharing. It is only fair that the participants and beneficiaries in a major Government science project share in both the rewards and the risks of that undertaking. This is, by definition, what a partnership is all about. And this is the type of relationship which has been envisioned by Federal Government negotiators with the State of Texas thus far. Yet the SSC refund provision contained in H.R. 4380 would dramatically alter this relationship.

The State of Texas completed vigorously to host the SSC project. Texas did so because of the enormous potential economic benefits that will accompany the construction and operation of the SSC. Indeed, the State of Texas recognized that the economic attraction of hosting the SSC is so great that it pledged $1 billion to the project, with no strings attached. Let me emphasize this point because it is central to my argument that a legislated bailout clause is unnecessary and unwise.

My discussions with officials at the Department of Energy indicate that the administration has made no representation to the State of Texas that it would be reimbursed for any part of its contribution to the SSC project in the event the project is not completed. Furthermore, the proposal submitted by the State of Texas contains no reference to any obligation on the part of the Federal Government to reimburse the State for any part of its contribution in the event the project is cancelled. In other words, the refund provision contained in H.R. 4380 has not been a condition for State participation as negotiated thus far. I ask my colleagues why it should be thrown in as an incentive now, after the State bid has already been accepted.

There are several compelling reasons for opposing a legislated bailout clause for the State of Texas. First, as the administration, a strong supporter of the SSC project, has communicated to us, the refund provision contained in this bill will set a dangerous precedent. The U.S. Government may find itself unable to negotiate future joint science projects without this type of risk protection for the State participant, adding untold billions of liability and potential debt to the deficit. That is why the National Taxpayers Union describes the Texas bailout provision of H.R. 4380 wholly repugnant and fully supports my amendment.

Second, changing the rules of the game for Federal and State cooperation in the SSC project raises a serious controversy. Perhaps if other States competing for the SSC had known that their contributions would be guaranteed, their bids would have been significantly different.

Finally, I am concerned that the mandatory refund provision may have the undesirable effect of forcing the Federal Government to proceed with the SSC even if a situation arises where the cost of the project escalates out of control. The Federal Government may rationalize that it is cheaper to absorb these cost-overruns than to cough up the $1 billion to bail out Texas.

In closing, let me clarify that my amendment is not an anti-SSC amendment and does not jeopardize the future of the SSC in any way, shape or form. The Texas bailout clause, which my amendment would delete, would only be applicable in the event that the SSC project is canceled. The intent of my amendment is simply to preserve the original intent of the Federal-State cooperative arrangement. However, the bill before us changes completely the nature of this Federal-State venture. Under H.R. 4380, Texas would no longer be an equity partner, but would merely be acting as a creditor extending a guaranteed loan to the Federal Government. Under these terms, Texas would be guaranteed a positive rate of return on its investment whether the SSC is constructed or not. Clearly, such an arrangement is a win-win proposition for the State of Texas, but there is no attraction for the Federal Government and the American taxpayer.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. SENSENBRENNER was allows to proceed for 3 additional minutes.)

Mr. OBEY. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. I yield to my colleague from Wisconsin.

Mr. OBEY. Madam Chairman, I would simply like to say that the gentleman I think has laid out a number of very good reasons to support his amendment. I think he is certainly correct in pointing out that without his amendment there will be an added disincentive for the Federal Government to evaluate on their merits the cost/benefit ratio associated with this project.

The other thing I would say is that the bill as it stands, without the gentleman's amendment, would retain the quaint idea that if the U.S. Government is persuaded on the merits to finally pull the plug on this project, as presently financed, the only taxpayers who would get their money back would be taxpayers from the State of Texas. I find that idea quaint, and I do not think we ought to be supporting it.

I think the gentleman from Wisconsin in correct in offering his amendment.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. I thank my colleague from Wisconsin for his comments.

Amplifying on that further, this bill requires that there be certain international cost-sharing to be negotiated between the Department of Energy and certain foreign governments. If the precedent is set that Texas gets a refund should the SSC not be completed, every one of these foreign governments is going to be coming in demanding identical refund treatment, and that will further expose the potential liability of the Federal Government over and beyond the $1 billion that is contained in the guarantee to the State of Texas.

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Madam Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

We want the SSC to be a project that is designed to succeed, not a project that is almost guaranteed to fail. I would like to point out that right now, as we debate this amendment on the House floor, the State of Texas, through the auspices of the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission and officials at the Department of Energy are negotiating on how to spend the Texas money that has been promised, the $1 billion.

Texas put that money up in a good faith effort to save Federal dollars, to save Federal tax dollars. We did not put that money up hoping that at some point in the future the project would be terminated and we would be asking to be reimbursed.

Having said that, because as of today we have one international commitment of $50 million from the Government of India, it is expected that in the first 2 to 3 years of the construction phase of the project the State of Texas is going to be asked to frontload its contribution perhaps as much as $600 or $700 million.

□ 1600

If for some reason, and we hope that day never arrives, but if for some reason it was made a decision here in the Capitol, in the Congress of the United States, to terminate the project, I think it is reasonable to expect that if the taxpayers of Texas have obligated their funds in a good-faith effort, they should be reimbursed that.

Having said that, when Mr. SENSENBRENNER made it known that he was prepared to offer this amendment, we tried to negotiate a compromise in which any funds that were expended, any State funds that were expended that were for roads or power lines, anything for which there is an alternative use not related to the SSC, we would not expect to be reimbursed. But if in fact the State spends its funds to purchase the first lot of superconducting magnets, and we are going to purchase approximately 10,000 of those magnets, if the project were to be terminated, there is no alternative use for a 60-foot-long magnet. So we need this provision in the bill. It was in the bill last year that passed the House. This is not a new thing. We want to work to be successful, we do not want to work at cross purposes.

So I would ask that we vote against the Sensenbrenner amendment, keep the bill as it came out of committee, keep the bill as it has been in the past and keep the partnership intact instead of creating a division.

Mr. RITTER. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment.

Madam Chairman, first of all, the great State of Texas stands to be, let us face it, the major beneficiary of the construction of the superconductor super collider. It has quite generously offered up $1 billion of contributions, some of which are contributions directly to the superconductor super collider construction, some of which may be of use alternatively, but which would not have been built had there not been a superconducting super collider project. In any event, in the original bid documents, the original document where the State of Texas offered up this $1 billion cost-share states, and I quote, that the TNRLC, that is, the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission, is completely open to alternative allocations that DOE considers most beneficial, subject only to the condition, and this is the key language, subject only to the condition, the one condition, that the Dallas-Fort Worth site is selected for construction and operation of the SSC. No mention was made of any refund in case the SSC project didn't go forward. A refund was simply not part of the agreement.

Now there are fabulous benefits, we all know, to the State of Texas coming from the SSC. Is it not unreasonable to expect Texas to absorb some risk? Or is it all gravy?

I guess that is my question for my colleagues from the State of Texas.

Madam Chairman, does anyone from the State of Texas want to respond to that question?

Mr. CHAPMAN. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RITTER. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. CHAPMAN. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Chairman, let me just point out and I will have some time later myself, but let me point out to the committee I do not know of any Federal commitment that creates jobs, be it a science project, a defense contract, or any other expenditure of America's taxpayer dollars in which, if it is large enough—and let us take the defense budget as an example—in that circumstance, as the gentleman knows, not only if there is a cancellation of an ongoing project does the contractor get reimbursed, he gets a profit. He gets his expenses plus a profit. Texas is not asking for a profit.

Mr. RITTER. The gentleman makes a good point.

Mr. CHAPMAN. So there are numerous examples in which the American taxpayer not only has paid reimbursement, does pay reimbursement, not only that, virtually guarantees a profit to the recipient. That is not the case here.

Mr. RITTER. Reclaiming my time, the gentleman makes an interesting point.

But, let us take a look at the Clinch River breeder reactor project. Did the expenditures by the private contractors in that particular effort, did they receive reimbursement? I believe the answer is no. They did not receive reimbursement.

Mr. BRYANT. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RITTER. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BRYANT. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Chairman, yes, let us take a look at another example. How about Fermilab?

When Fermilab was built, there was no provision like the Sensenbrenner or the Ritter amendment here. There was no provision that they could not be reimbursed. There was no contribution in fact. What about the Stanford linear accelerator?

Mr. RITTER. If I may reclaim my time, I would like to comment on the Fermilab and the Stanford linear accelerator. These projects never involved an offer of $1 billion. There was no State offer.

Mr. BRYANT. That is exactly right.

Mr. RITTER. You have got the language, we have the language right here in the bid document. A refund was never in the original offer.

Mr. BRYANT. That is correct.

Mr. RITTER. That was the original offer. So we are now going back on the original offer and saying, "Yes, there is going to be a bailout if things don't go right."

Mr. BRYANT. Then I would ask what the gentleman is complaining about. Inasmuch as Texas has come forward with a billion dollars, but in the case of Fermilab, in the case of the Stanford linear accelerator nobody came forward with any money, what is the gentleman's complaint?

Mr. ARMEY. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RITTER. Madam Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARMEY].

Mr. ARMEY. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Chairman, I listened to the gentleman's remarks very carefully. I have to say that I was mightily flattered as a Texan, by his remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RITTER] has expired.

(On request of Mr. ARMEY and by unanimous consent Mr. RITTER was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. ARMEY. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman continue to yield?

Mr. RITTER. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. ARMEY. Madam Chairman, if in fact the superconducting super collider is to be built with taxpayers' money, it must be done so out of a confidence that in the long run it will give us a level of increased science and engineering knowledge that benefit not only the entire Nation but future generations.

And for the generous gentleman to allege that Texas is the primary benfactor of the bill in the superconducting super collider more than any other State is to allege that Texas somehow is more capable of benefiting from better and more science and engineering.

Mr. RITTER. Reclaiming my time, I think we are in "Alice-in-Wonderland" if we do not believe that Texas is the major beneficiary of the $8 billion construction project. Yes, eventually the basic science would accrue to all mankind.

Let me just make one other point: No one, no one required Texas to come forth and offer up a billion dollars. They did it of their own volition.

In the offer, there was never a caveat that said, "We offer this billion dollars, but in the event the project doesn't go through, we want it back." That may have had some impact on a decision somewhere in the process of the superconducting super collider.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RITTER. Madam Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT].

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Chairman, I think the gentleman is making some very good points in support of the Sensenbrenner amendment. Let me submit to my colleagues in the room: Unless this amendment is passed, we are going to be tying the hands of the administration as it goes abroad to negotiate with international partners for participation. What is an international partner going to say? The partner is going to say, "Hey, we want the same deal as Texas; if it doesn't work out the way we want it, we want to be reimbursed."

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RITTER] has again expired.

Mr. ARMEY. Madam Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman be allowed to proceed for 3 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, reserving the right to object, the Chair here would like to respond.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RITTER] controls the time.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I reserve the right to object. I would like to call to the attention of my good friends, my dear friends, that we would like to enter into the discussion too. We do not mean to be short, and I am not going to object to the 3 minutes, but let us have an opportunity to respond to a couple of the issues. Would that be okay?

Mr. RITTER. I have no objection.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, would the gentleman continue to yield?

Mr. RITTER. Madam Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Chairman, I think another key point is this: The administration does not support the Texas refund language in the bill. I do not need to remind my colleagues that the administration is a cheerleader for this project, particularly because it is going to be located in Texas.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RITTER. Madam Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER].

□ 1610

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Madam Chairman, I have a statement of administration policy that says the administration supports changes that would delete the provision providing the State of Texas with a refund of its contribution if the project is terminated.

This amendment is Texas-bashing. Why would the No. 1 Texan in the White House support my amendment?

Mr. HALL of Texas. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RITTER. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. HALL of Texas. Madam Chairman, I think the gentleman from Pennsylvania knows the high regard I have for him. We have worked through many amendments before on this and the other, but when the gentleman said it benefits only Texas, I would like to ask a question.

Mr. RITTER. Madam Chairman, if I may reclaim my time, I am not saying it benefits only Texas. I am saying, and Members should be realistic, the main beneficiary of building the SSC is the State of Texas. That is obviously why Texas offered up a billion dollars in contributions.

Madam Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. HALL of Texas. Madam Chairman, I know the gentleman is very aware of the facility at CERN and DESY where they brought the crystals from Russia, they brought the magnets from China, and brought them from all over the world. That is an international project. There was not just a point of the fact that it was near the Swiss-French border that they all got together and built that. The whole world benefits. Should not the whole world benefit in this? Clearly, the whole United States benefits from it.

Mr. RITTER. The gentleman makes a good point. It is definitely an international project. I was simply trying to point out that Texas gets the bulk of the building activity and the construction jobs and the vast related resources expended there.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the last word. I have not said whether I am opposed or in agreement to this amendment, but I would like to make a couple of points.

First of all, No. 1 on the Clinch breeder reactor, the United States spent $1.5 billion of the taxpayers' money as Members know. A billion and a half dollars they expended, and then willy-nilly 4 or 5 years later, it was decided not to go ahead with the Clinch breeder reactor. Why was that decided? Who made that great decision along the line? Somehow in the malaise of Congress and the administration, a decision was made, regardless of where it came from, for $1.5 billion. Too bad. Just cancel it, throw it away.

Do Members know what they did? They had $1 billion worth of tubes and tanks, stainless steel in warehouses all over. They did not come from Tennessee or Texas, they came from all over the country. Do Members know what they did? I want every person in this country to hear me today—they threw them away. They sold them for scrap because somebody changed their mind.

Now, we are talking about spending $5 billion of taxpayers' money, $1 billion from Texas, and Members make the analogy that, well, then, we are giving back to Texas. I remind Members of something. It is $1 billion in addition to the people's money from Texas, above their Federal taxes. They went to a referendum in Texas, and the people voted, 2 to 1, in favor of this program. So for every dollar that is lost here, we lose two from Texas.

Think I am from Texas? I am not, I am from New Jersey. So let Members get the record straight, and I think the issue before Members legitimately is this: We are trying to craft a piece of legislation that is fair and equitable and achieves a goal. It is not the words we are talking about, it is the result of the superconductor super collider, what we can do, and achieve for mankind. Not building 5 million hurdles so it is impossible to move ahead. That is what this debate is all about. That is what these issues are about.

Now, back to another point, we are talking about in the way this guarantees in established or this refund is established. It has a ceiling and a limit. It is 1995. Those tests will not be completed until 1993. So Texas is not going to get any big bundle back. They are not going to get $1 billion back, and if I were from Texas, and I were putting up the billion dollars that I am putting up, and being abused on the floor of the House, because it is a State's right, and I am trying to participate. I am trying to build a partnership, I am putting $1 billion up, people vote 2 to 1 in my State to build something that was good for America, and Members are making it now evil and ugly that they are terrible people, that is not fair.

I am saying to Members the level I am talking about, I have not said yea or nay, is based on what Texas would contribute. If the Congress comes back, and let me ask Members something, let me ask Members a question, suppose Congress comes back in its great wisdom and Congress says, "Well, gee, we struck a good deal now. It is equitable. It is fair. We are protecting the Texas taxpayer. We are protecting the U.S. taxpayer. More important, we will create something that is great." Now, all of a sudden we come back, and in 2 years we say, "Too bad," like we did with the Clinch breeder. We had the magnets going, we had this, but we quit. We do not want to do it anymore. We are going to walk away and take our marbles and go home.

What does that leave the State of Texas? That is the question I propound.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROE. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I would like to ask him a question.

If this was so important to the State of Texas that there be a refund provision, why did they not put that in their bid that they submitted to the Department of Energy? They did not. The only condition on the bid was that it was subject to the condition that the Dallas-Fort Worth site be selected. They could have funded their refundment provision, and that would have been on the table at the time the DOE was reviewing the proposals from the various States. DOE may very well have selected it. If that was the case, then that would have been settled, but it was not.

I come as someone who supported Texas in the selection process, even though my Governor did not. I think that what is being done here is changing the rules in the middle of the game.

(On the request of Mr. DELAY and by unanimous consent, Mr. ROE was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, since when do bids become contracts—when someone makes a bid. That is an open offer, and usually in general terms, as the gentleman from Pennsylvania pointed out, that is an offer. When the details are worked out, as they have been worked out in this bill, then it becomes a contract, and the details are given.

When do people, or when does anyone, when has anyone been held to be responsible for a general bid, as if it were a contract?

Mr. ROE. Reclaiming my time, if the gentleman would allow me to respond, I think it might be helpful to clarify what really happened on the way to the Forum.

Senator DOMENICI from the other body passed an amendment on a bill that precluded any of the States that were putting in their bid to include any enhancements per se as part of their bid. They came back and said, "You have to bid on a so-called level plain." I hate that word, but that is the word we have to use. "But you can present an envelope in what the sweetener would be coming from that prospective State," and the envelope was not to be opened, under the Domenici amendment until after the determination was made as to what State would be awarded that bid.

So from what I understand, the Department of Energy did not know what was in Texas' envelope or in anyone else's envelope, and they first went to the selection process. They finally selected the bids coming from Texas, and after that they opened up the envelope where the billion dollars was in the envelope. So it was an added start. It was not part of the original bid.

Madam Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BRYANT].

Mr. BRYANT. Madam Chairman, is it not the case that the bill that passed 2 years ago authorizing this project included identical language as the bill today, and would it therefore be fair to ask the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER] if he felt that strongly where he was 2 years ago, and I am informed by the staff of the committee that the offering by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER] would radically change the nature of the agreement that was entered into 2 years ago when the House passed the authorizing bill in the first place.

□ 1420

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, there was an amendment made. There was a vote on the last one. It did not include the entire issue; it included the cash contribution only.

If I may continue to answer the gentleman's question, the language went like this: Any cash payments made by the selected State shall be refunded in cash by the Secretary in the event the facility is cancelled or in the event funds are not appropriated to complete construction of the facility.

Mr. BRYANT. In other words, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER] is trying to change the status quo 2 years later; is that correct?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE] has expired.

(On request of Mr. SENSENBRENNER, and by unanimous consent, Mr. ROE was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROE. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman from New Jersey for yielding.

The gentleman from Wisconsin is not trying to change the status quo; the Texas people are, because they have put in a mandatory refund provision for in-kind contributions, which does include roads, power lines, and sewers. They are the ones who are upping the ante. I think it is bad policy, and my amendment will strike that.

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROE. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Madam Chairman, I thank the committee chairman for yielding.

Madam Chairman, I think the gentleman would admit that we offered to compromise on that. We offered to write language that would guarantee that with respect to any use for which State funds had been expended and for which there was no alternative use, in other words, any roads, any power lines or anything like that, we would not expect to be reimbursed for those, and the gentleman turned that down.

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Madam Chairman, there is a great old country and western song called "All My Ex's Live in Texas." Part of our debate here today is on the question that says, "all my taxes go to Texas."

This is a question of how we are going to deal with a very fundamental question within the SSC debate. Texas got the SSC bid or made the bid and got accepted based upon the fact that they were willing to donate the land and that they were willing to give a billion dollars toward the construction of the facility.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I would say to my dear good friend that the billion dollars was not part of the original deal. That was in the envelope.

Mr. WALKER. Oh, yes, I understood that.

Mr. ROE. All right. I misunderstood the gentleman.

Mr. WALKER. I said that they got the contract or they were accepted based upon the fact that theirs was the best bid, and I think we accept that.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield again?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, the billion dollars was not known nor was it part of the bid originally.

Mr. WALKER. All right, I accept the gentleman's amendment.

But what we are now dealing with is the question of what should be the exposure of the American taxpayers throughout this process. We have determined in this bill that the exposure of American taxpayers for the construction of the SSC shall be $5 billion, not a dime more. That is what this bill says, and we mean for that to be a very, very firm cap.

Now, what the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER] is doing is assuring us that we have a cap-keeper, that in fact that cap can be kept throughout the process. The reason why this amendment is important to that end is for this reason: If in fact we say that we are going to reimburse Texas if we pull out of the project, the argument will always be at the time that we come up against that cap that we have got to spend the additional $200 million or we have got to expend an additional $300 million, because we could owe Texas up to a billion dollars if we end this project.

So we will be given the argument that breaking the cap for a couple of hundred of million dollars really saves us money because otherwise we would have to pay off the Texas entitlement.

I am convinced that we mean it in this bill when we say there shall be a $5 billion cap, period. I do not want things out there driving the process over and above the $5 billion cap. The Sensenbrenner amendment essentially says that that cap is in fact firm, and that if we decide to end the project, everybody is going to take a little bit of a risk; the American taxpayers will take a risk and spend some of their money at that point maybe on a project that will not go to completion. Texas will be in the same position, and our international partners will be in the same position. Everybody will be in the same boat. If we decide to end the project, everybody takes a risk because it did not pan out. If we in fact change the formula here and it is only the American taxpayer and it is only the commercial companies and it is only the international partners who are at risk and Texas is going to get reimbursed in full, that, it seems to me, is something which will constantly drive us toward exceeding the cap rather than keeping the cap.

Everyone who believes that that cap is an important part of this bill ought to be for the Sensenbrenner amendment. If Members think the cap has to be exceeded at some point, if they are willing to expend any amount of money it takes to build this project in the future, then they should vote against the Sensenbrenner amendment. If that is where Members are on this project and they are willing to spend any amount of money that comes down the pike, all right. I realize there are some Members in the Chamber who are willing to do that, but I am not. I am saying that the cap is firm, it needs to be kept firm, and the Sensenbrenner amendment makes certain that happens, so we ought to support it.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, I thank my colleague for yielding.

Madam Chairman, I can understand what the Members from Texas are doing. I see them all on their feet. They are big, they are parochial, as we all are with our respective States at the appropriate moment. But what the Texas Members are saying reminds me of Groucho Marx's old line: "Who are you going to believe, me or your own two eyes?"

Let us look at what the agreement says. The agreement says that the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission is completely open to alternative locations that the Department of Energy considers most beneficial, subject only to the condition that the Dallas-Fort Worth site is selected for construction in the operation of the superconducting super collider. There are no other provisions. That was the only proviso, subject only to the condition that the Dallas-Fort Worth site is selected.

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman. I think he helps emphasize my point. This entitlement—and that is what it is—was not anticipated in the early deliberations.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. WALKER was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, this entitlement was not anticipated. We ought not to change it into an entitlement now. We ought to say very clearly that everybody is at risk in this process, no one is entitled to anything should it not pan out, and everyone benefits if we go to completion.

Mr. BRYANT. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BRYANT. Madam Chairman, I would just like to ask the gentleman, does he dispute the fact that 2 years ago the authorizing bill specifically provided that cash contributions would be reimbursed if the Federal Government bailed out of this program? Does the gentleman dispute that?

Mr. WALKER. It did in fact say, "cash contribution," but what you have done now is you have made the entire $1 billion of whatever Texas does into an entitlement. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER] addresses that.

Mr. BRYANT. Madam Chairman, let me ask the gentleman this question: I think it would be fair for us to elaborate on this.

What is the gentleman talking about? The deal from the begining was that we would get the cash reimbursed in the event the Federal Government decided not to go forward. That is what was in the law in the first place. Where was the gentleman 2 years ago?

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I will say to the gentleman that I do not believe that anything we did 2 years ago gave Texas an entitlement to the entire contribution which they voluntarily provided. That is exactly where we are right now.

Mr. BRYANT. Madam Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman's acknowledging that it is in the current bill at the present time that we would be reimbursed if the Federal Government did not go forward. It is astonishing to me that the gentleman does not acknowledge that the amendment offered from the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER] would made a dramatic change in the deal.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] has again expired.

(On request of Mr. SENSENBRENNER, and by unanimous consent, Mr. WALKER was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Madam Chairman, the provision the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BRYANT] is talking about never passed the Senate, and as a result it was never enacted into law. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] is exactly correct in that the provision in the bill which my amendment proposes to strike goes far beyond that which was passed by the House last year. That is what the objection is to this legislation.

Mr. WILSON. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. WALKER. I am glad to yield to the gentlman from Texas.

Mr. WILSON. Madam Chairman, my colleague, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BARTON] said a few minutes ago—and I remember this to be true also—that we gave the gentleman and the sponsor of the amendment the opportunity that Texas would not be reimbursed for any infrastructure that would be useful in other ways other than the super collider, and that that amendment was turned down; is that correct?

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I think the gentleman from Wisconsin decided that the amendment he wrote for himself was the amendment he wanted to offer. The gentleman is certainly entitled to that position.

Mr. WILSON. But the gentleman is leading the House to believe that Texas wanted all of that back, but the truth is that we offered to give that back and were turned down; is that right?

□ 1630

Mr. WALKER. In all honesty, Madam Chairman, I do not think that there is anything to prevent anybody from coming to the floor right now and offering that as a compromise, but the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER] has decided that he wants to offer his amendment. I think that is what he is entitled to do.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] has expired.

Mr. HAYES of Louisiana. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

The point I would like to make, Madam Chairman, is really very simple.

The State of Texas made a bid. The bid was sealed. The bid was later opened by the Department of Energy. The bid was accepted. The $1 billion at issue does not have a timetable. It is an amount, but it does not have any condition requiring it to flow at any instant, and, if I were the next Governor of the State of Texas, I would not send a dime into this project until I had the assurances that the taxpayers of my State, who supported a major bond issue in a time in which it is impossible to pass bond issues, had the assurances that they will receive in return for cancellation their own property and money back, and consequently I think those who are urging the adoption of this amendment are penalizing the generosity of Texas and are jeopardizing the project.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYES of Louisiana. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, I would like to ask my colleague; perhaps he knows; he is a neighbor, but did the referendum include any language whatsoever about a refund? Did the people of Texas, as they considered that referendum, know they were voting, they were taking a risk, they were gambling and they hoped they won?

Madam Chairman, I hope they win big with this project. I hope it is completed and operates as it is intended. I am just suggesting that they went in it with their eyes open wide.

The administration is opposed to this Texas refund language. That is critically important to remember.

Mr. HAYES of Louisiana. Madam Chairman, I believe the gentleman from Texas [Mr. WASHINGTON] wishes the time to respond.

Madam Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Madam Chairman, I was a member of the Texas Legislature at the time that this was discussed, and it was. It was not written into the language, but there was a clear understanding because many of us were reticent about getting behind this bonding package when we had no assurances as to what the Federal Government was going to do once we put our necks out there, our political necks out on the limb, and we did do it, and we did it in good faith, and it was done in good faith based on the understanding, the clear understanding, that the Federal Government was standing behind us on the measure before we went to our taxpayers and asked for all these bonds to be issued.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, would the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. HAYES], my colleague, yield so I can respond to that?

Mr. HAYES of Louisiana. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, clearly the answer to that question is: "No, it was not in the referendum. The refund language was not in the referendum."

Now there may have been a clear understanding in the Texas Legislature, but I would submit to my colleagues that there are a lot of clear understandings in the Texas Legislature that do not go beyond that.

Mr. HAYES of Louisiana. Madam Chairman, reclaiming my time, the matter before the voters of the State of Texas was an authorization for indebtedness. It would have been inappropriate to include such a provision, and, if anyone does not believe that the voters of the State of Texas are very concerned about money in their current budget crisis, I would suggest that the gentleman follow Interstate 10, stop at a few local saloons and ask the people in there if they would like to give away $1 billion. The answer would be very, very clear to the gentleman and in words that we are not allowed to use here on the floor of the House of Representatives.

Mr. ARMEY. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYES of Louisiana. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. ARMEY. Madam Chairman, I had not intended to participate in this debate, but, quite frankly, I do think we need to make something clear here.

Madam Chairman, the people of Texas share with the people across this Nation a vision of the future.

Now that is really the question we have to address on the superconducting super collider, and I say to my colleagues, "If you believe that this investment will bring to our children wondrous sights that you and I cannot today imagine, vote for it. If you believe it will be a waste of the taxpayers' money, vote against it. But the committee is convinced."

Now, the State of Texas stood up to the plate first, and they said, "We'll put our $1 million on the line because we believe in the future, and we are willing to enter a partnership with the Federal Government, and then they realized that the Federal Government doesn't have a very good track record. We better cover ourselves in case somebody changes their mind on that."

The Federal Government determined what the cost projection would be, and then somebody put it in the bill. I hope it was a Texan, but, whether it was a Texan or not, it was accepted by the committee, that should the Federal Government fail to complete their side of the bargain, the State of Texas would receive recompense for the investment they made up front first out of consideration for the children of this Nation.

Madam Chairman, I think this is a wrong move, and let me also say——

Mr. HAYES of Louisiana. Madam Chairman, if I might reclaim my time——

Mr. ARMEY. If I may make my final point?

It is not without precedent in authorizing legislation that we put in recompensation for States or other local governments that put their money up front, and the Federal Government did not see the project through. I can cite for my colleagues cases where this has happened before. This is not a novel innovation.

Mr. HAYES of Louisiana. If I may reclaim the remainder of my time just to make this point, Madam Chairman?

I do not believe that Travis drew a line in the dirt in the mission in San Antonio, and he stated that those who crossed it were going to die; it was implicit in the comment, but that Texans with faith in the future of subsequent generations gave their lives without being specifically asked. And a vote that determines a large amount of money; they gave dollars for future generations of Americans to make them competitive with the Japanese and the rest of the world and to allow all of us to benefit from science. I think that, if there is a debt, it is much larger than $1 billion, and it is not owed by Texas, it is owed to it.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Yes, Madam Chairman, I am on the committee, and I just will be very brief.

Madam Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

I would like to enter into the RECORD at this point, and I will be glad to share it with my colleagues, if they would like me to read it, a letter to our colleague, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] who is on the Committee on Appropriations, dated June 26, 1989, from the Governor of the State of Texas, William P. Clements, Jr., at which time he said, among other things:

We in Texas strongly believe that the SSC will be the most important machine ever constructed and look forward to participating in this endeavor as the Federal Government's financial partner.

STATE OF TEXAS,
Austin, TX, June 26, 1989.

Hon. JOHN MYERS,
U.S. House of Representatives, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN MYERS: I want to commend you and the Members of the House Appropriations Committee for recommending an appropriation of $200 million for the Superconducting Super Collider for fiscal year 1990. Your leadership on this critical national project is appreciated.

As you know, the State of Texas will contribute $1 billion to defray the cost of construction and operation of the SSC and will deliver all the land necessary for the project without cost to the Federal Government. If the Congress adopts the House Appropriations Committee's recommendation of $200 million, with $110 million being dedicated for the initiation of construction activities, the State is fully prepared to make a substantial contribution in fiscal year 1990. Over the remainder of the construction phase, the State will make annual contributions in proportion to the Federal appropriation for the project.

We in Texas strongly believe that the SSC will be the most important machine ever constructed and look forward to participating in this endeavor as the Federal government's financial partner.

With best regards,

Sincerely,

WILLIAM P. CLEMENTS, JR.,
Governor.

But the letter never, never, and I will share it with my colleagues, mentions anything about a refund.

Let me reemphasize a couple of points.

First, the No. 1 cheerleader for Texas in this Nation's Capital, who now occupies the Oval Office, is against the Texas refund legislation. The administration strongly opposes the Texas refund legislation because they feel it will be setting a very dangerous precedent. We all should recognize that we will be tying the hands of our negotiators as we send them abroad to elicit international participation in this venture.

Madam Chairman, I would remind my colleagues that there is an absolute 20-percent floor on international participation, so we are going to be looking for millions and millions from abroad. They are going to say, "We want the same deal as Texas," and in response to my chairman, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE], for whom I have the greatest respect, in response to my chairman's earlier comments suggesting that this is Texas bashing, I would submit to him it is nothing of the sort.

As a matter of fact, Madam Chairman, some of my best friends come from Texas.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield to his chairman?

Mr. BOEHLERT. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I never even slightly suggested that the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT] would be Texas bashing in any stretch of the imagination.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, reclaiming my time, I point out this is not Texas bashing. This is looking out for the best interests of the American taxpayers. It is not Texas bashing to suggest we should not let the construction get ahead of the science. It is not Texas bashing to suggest the General Accounting Office should be reviewing this project step by step. It is not Texas bashing whatsoever.

Madam Chairman, what we are trying to do is guarantee, as much as humanly possible, those of us who support this project, and incidentally I support the project. I voted for it in committee. I intend to vote for it here on the floor today. I think it is pretty good science; it is not the best, it is not the No. 1 priority on my list.

However, Madam Chairman, we should proceed, but we should proceed very cautiously, very prudently. I want to protect the interests of the taxpayers with a cap. I want to make certain we do not allow Texas to think that it is going to get some good deal if this thing does not materialize, as we all hope, because we are all at risk here.

Madam Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BRYANT. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Madam Chairman, I would just like to reemphasize that 2 years ago the law very plainly said that Texas would be reimbursed for the cash that it put in the project if the Federal Government abandoned it.

Madam Chairman, with that I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE].

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I have to wait to see if the other Members are going to be interested in what I have to say.

□ 1640

Madam Chairman, I will proceed in any case. I would hope that my colleagues will listen, I say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROE. I have not even started yet.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Well, I just want to make an observation.

Mr. ROE. Well, of course.

Mr. BOEHLERT. I say to the committee chairman, his Republican colleagues in the committee always listen when he speaks.

Mr. ROE. Oh, I know.

I cooled off from there to here because I want to use the word balderdash, balderdash.

First, the Department—oh, I cleaned that act up—the Department of Energy are the ones who engaged, and rightfully so, a very special team of scientists to further review after the last legislation and the last activity was taken, to further review what we should be doing right as another step in the superconducter super collider, and on that seven-man committee were five Nobel laureates, five of the finest people in the world recognized by their peers for their proficiency and their achievements in high-energy physics.

The Department of Energy and Secretary Watkins decided it would be right, and he was right, let us gather together the best we can find to take another look to be sure before we take another step forward, and that is a matter of record. That is a matter of fact.

Those seven members of that subcommittee came back to the full committee, who advised the Secretary of Energy, Mr. Watkins, Admiral Watkins, on all the energy matters of the country. That is a very special committee. That committee voted unanimously to support the recommendations that came from the seven-man subcommittee. The seven-man subcommittee came back and said:

We want to make, and we think it is essential, that if the United States is to be the premier country and this machine is to be the premier machine, what we should be doing is improving three or four major technical changes on this particular instrument and increasing the length of the tunnel by another 3 miles.

And the added cost was $1.2 billion; $900 million of which went for revisions to the machine and $400 million went to adding the other 3 miles on the tunnel.

Did anybody tell Texas about that? Did that alter the situation? Did that change this whole debate? Of course it did, because the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, made a decision when they voted this bill out, and they came back and said the following.

They said:

We know the cost is going to be higher by $1.2 billion. The best brains in the country and in the world have recommended it. The Department of Energy approved it, and if we are going to build the SSC at all, we should build it right or not build it at all.

That was discussed in our hearings and it was discussed by the administrators and everybody who came into that room.

So this great big thing about these overruns and these overcosts, there was $1.2 billion added in the last 3 or 4 months, not because it was added money. It was because we changed the design and we made it the most supreme piece of equipment we could produce with the best knowledge in the world. That is the truth.

Now we come back and say, "Well, isn't this terrible?"

I want to conclude this. I have had too much to say today, but we have spent a lot of time on this. Let me say this. This has been an excellent debate. It has been wonderful and a good one. There is probably no program in this country or anything we have done in this Congress that has had the scrutiny, and legitimate scrutiny, that this project has had, but there is one element that people could be missing and missing very seriously now. Are we trying to build something? Are we trying to create something? Are we trying to do something, or are we figuring 50 million reasons why we cannot and should not do it?

We would never have gone to the Moon by Apollo. We would not be in space today. We would not have our satellite today if there were so damn many doubters.

Every single constraint we can possibly put into the legislation, short of knocking it down and killing it, we have done. You cannot spend a Sou Marti, inch by inch, test No. 1, you have got to have your magnets tested in Fermi lab and it has got to be done.

No. 1, you cannot move ahead. You must certify to that effect.

Second, you cannot take the second test, the institution test, the environmental test. You have got to certify to that.

Third, you cannot spend a penny more than $5 million, or you have got to certify that.

If you add one more constraint, I would suggest you put an amendment in now and simply come back and say let us cancel and destroy the SSC.

No, I will not yield time. Get your own time. Pardon me for being so volatile, but that is how I feel, and obviously I am emotionally involved.

Mr. WILSON. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

No. 1, to my colleague, the gentleman from Lousiana, who so eloquently pointed out the Alamo, I would like to point out that there were 25 members of the New Orleans Zouaves there also that day.

There are a couple things we are saying. We are all just saying the same things over and over again, as we usually do when we go on this long, so I will continue to say some things over and over that have been said over and over, and I am sure the speaker who follows me will say some of the things I have said over and over; but obviously in the bid it was pointed out that if it be built in the particular area, the Dallas-Fort Worth area which it was, the assumption was clear and obvious that the billion dollars was contingent upon it being built. That is prima facie and evident to any fair mind.

I would again point out that when the Fermi lab was built, the land was donated to the Federal Government. The Stamford-Linier accelerator was built entirely with Federal funds from the Department of Energy. The Hubble space telescope was built with funding exclusively from NASA.

This billion dollar contribution is absolutely unprecedented and should serve as a model for other State-Federal cooperation, and if the Federal Government were to cop out on this commitment, it would absolutely be the end of any kind of federalism which we all protest that we so much appreciate.

So I would ask to vote no on the amendment, as I am confident the House will do.

Mr. HALL of Texas. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Madam Chairman, let me just speak very briefly. I will not take my full 5 minutes, but I want to speak logically about this. I do not think anybody can change the fact that Texas committed to provide $1 billion, plus the land, to help build a national user facility. I do not think anybody can dispute the fact that the SSC is not a local public works project in the same sense as a dam or a highway or a sewer treatment facility. This SSC is going to be used by the entire Nation, not just the people of Texas, just as CERN and DESY, where people came from all over the world and brought what they had and put it together there, it is for mankind.

I think this is a similar project here that all of you have supported at one time, or most of you have supported at one time and probably support now in the final analysis.

What does Texas have to lose, other than the billion bucks?

The gentleman from Pennsylvania referred to some song, "All Our Ex's Went To Texas," or something like that. Tennessee Ernie Ford had a song, too. It said, "Sixteen tons and what do you get? Another day older and deeper in debt." That is exactly what we will get if this thing falls by the wayside. That is the reason that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. WASHINGTON] stood on the floor of the Texas Senate and asked the people of Texas to put up $1 billion.

Let me tell you, "There ain't much resale value for a partially constructed SSC." They would have a wasteland, I say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania. I know the gentleman is going to help me in just a minute.

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, I just want to tell him that there also is another old country song, though, called, "You Get the Gold and We Get the Shaft."

Mr. HALL of Texas. I cannot think who the author was of that, but I bet it is the same guy who wrote the Pennsylvania Polka.

We have had hundreds of conversations. I think I personally have talked with almost everyone in here about this facility. We have taken, in the subcommittee we turned down and we accepted amendments. In the committee, we had full hearings and here on the floor today we have taken the Conte amendment. We have worked out the Boehlert amendment. We passed other amendments. We are working now to accept the Eckart amendment. We have accepted amendments that were not killer amendments. We have accepted, I believe, one other amendment. We accepted the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

□ 1650

We accepted the other Boehlert amendment. I think we are getting down to where this is the killer amendment that this facility and this bill cannot accept and cannot tolerate.

Mr. OBEY. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Madam Chairman, 99 times out of 100, I would think that the arguments used against the Sensenbrenner amendment were valid. Under normal circumstances I do believe the Sensenbrenner amendment would be illegitimate, because I do think we have a Federal system, and I do think that we ought to recognize that, no matter whether we support or oppose the specific piece of legislation before us. But we are not under normal circumstances in dealing with this bill.

We are operating under extraordinary circumstances and have been for some time. Those circumstances are called Gramm-Rudman, and under Gramm-Rudman, when one piece of the budget eats up a larger piece than is expected, then the other parts of the budget get squeezed down.

What bothers me is that we all know we are not operating under real numbers when it comes to the super collider. The author of Gramm-Rudman himself has recognized that, and he happens to be from Texas. I noted that he said that we should not worry about whether or not a supplemental is going to be required. He has stated that if in 4 or 5 years down the line we are going to need an extra $800 million to pay for the super collider, then we will have to deal with that at that time.

I would suggest that that statement demonstrates the correctness of the Sensenbrenner amendment in this case, because on this issue we are not being dealt with for real when it comes to the numbers. I would simply point out that when the author of the Gramm-Rudman process under which we are all forced to live today, when the author of that process now suggests that we should not worry about the implications of Gramm-Rudman down the line, that we ought to just swallow what happens today and then Texas can come in for $800 million later on, that statement delegitimizes the Gramm-Rudman process. And with all due respect to the author of Gramm-Rudman, I just think that that means that the Sensenbrenner amendment is correct. Because what the Sensenbrenner amendment does is to say that if these numbers are illegitimate, if Congress is being sold the super collider under false pretenses with phony numbers, then the perpetrator of the fraud ought to pay the bill, and I would suggest that that is why we ought to pass the amendment, because the Senator from Texas ought to be required to live under his own legislation.

Mr. HAYES of Louisiana. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBEY. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. HAYES of Louisiana. Madam Chairman, unlike a military construction project in which the item being constructed from start to finish is to be done, the project of the superconducting super collider is the most ambitious scientific experiment in the history of mankind, but it is done in stages. If the magnet technology does not work, then the technology moving the rest of the costs forward cannot happen, and I would hope that the gentleman realizes that in our committee we put in those kind of fail-safe devices with testing stages along the way.

Mr. OBEY. With all due respect, I understand the fail-safe provisions that the committee says it has put in. But my point is that the DOE simply cannot be trusted to level with this Congress about costs. It is obvious that the Senator from Texas knows that. He has already admitted as much, that we are going to have $800 million more, and under those circumstances, I think his taxpayers ought to have to foot that bill, not just mine.

Mr. HAYES of Louisiana. If the gentleman will yield further, I would suggest that the gentleman's difference is with a Member of the other body and with an agency, but that the project here, with the stages of funding, proves its science as it goes, unlike so many comparable projects in other fields where there is no assurance whatsoever at the end of the trail and the aggregate spending that the project will work. This bill justifies its conditional spending.

Mr. OBEY. Reclaiming my time, the gentleman is correct with respect to one comment. I have no bone to pick with any member of the Texas delegation in this House. But I do have a bone to pick with a Member of the other body who does not want to live under rules which he himself has created and forced upon the entire Congress and the entire Federal Government.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman should avoid references to Members of the other body.

Mr. PICKLE. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBEY. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. PICKLE. Madam Chairman, if a State enters into an agreement or contract with the Federal Government on a project such as this and at any given point 2 or 3 years down the line, the Federal Government just says, "We cannot go forward" for any number of several reasons and, "We are going to back out of this and shut the project down," that now puts a State on notice, all States, that they would hesitate to enter into these kinds of projects. So in all fairness, once it gets started, if it is in the legislation, then it ought to be abided by, and we ought to keep our agreement.

I think that is what Texas feels, and any other State, that if you do not do that, then all the other States are going to say, "I am going to have second thoughts before I will ever enter into a project like this."

Mr. OBEY. As I said earlier, under normal circumstances, I would agree with that. But when we know right now that DOE is simply not leveling with us in terms of the costs, when we know we are going to have an explosion in the cost of this project, I think in that case we have to deal with an extraordinary process, and I think the gentleman from Wisconsin is correct to offer the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER].

The question was taken; and the chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Madam Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 256, noes 163, not voting 14, as follows:

[Roll No. 93]

AYES—256

Anderson	Bereuter	Broomfield
Annunzio	Billrakis	Brown (CO)
AuCoin	Bliley	Bruce
Barnard	Boehlert	Buechner
Bates	Bonior	Bunning
Bellenson	Borski	Burton
Bennett	Boxer	Campbell (CA)
Bentley	Brennan	Campbell (CO)
Carper	Johnston	Rohrabacher
Chandler	Jontz	Ros-Lehtinen
Clarke	Kasich	Rostenkowski
Clay	Kastenmeier	Roth
Clement	Kennedy	Roukema
Clinger	Kennelly	Rowland (CT)
Coble	Kildee	Rowland (GA)
Coleman (MO)	Kleczka	Russo
Conte	Kolbe	Sabo
Cooper	Kostmayer	Saiki
Costello	LaFalce	Sangmeister
Coughlin	Lagomarsino	Sawyer
Courter	Lantos	Schaefer
Cox	Leach (IA)	Schneider
Crane	Lent	Schroeder
Crockett	Levin (MI)	Schuette
Dannemeyer	Lewis (FL)	Schulze
Darden	Lewis (GA)	Schumer
Davis	Lipinski	Sensenbrenner
DeFazio	Long	Sharp
Derrick	Lowery (CA)	Shaw
DeWine	Lowey (NY)	Shays
Dicks	Machtley	Shumway
Dornan (CA)	Marlenee	Shuster
Douglas	Martin (IL)	Sikorski
Downey	Martin (NY)	Sisisky
Dreier	Mazzoli	Skelton
Duncan	McCandless	Slattery
Durbin	McCloskey	Slaughter (NY)
Dyson	McCollum	Slaughter (VA)
Early	McDade	Smith (NE)
Eckart	McDermott	Smith (VT)
Edwards (OK)	McEwen	Smith, Denny (OR)
Emerson	McGrath	Smith, Robert (NH)
Evans	McHugh	Smith, Robert (OR)
Fawell	McMillan (NC)	Snowe
Feighan	Meyers	Solarz
Fish	Mfume	Solomon
Flake	Michel	Spence
Foglietta	Miller (CA)	Spratt
Frank	Miller (OH)	Stangeland
Frenzel	Miller (WA)	Stark
Gallegly	Moakley	Stearns
Gejdenson	Molinari	Studds
Gekas	Moody	Sundquist
Gilman	Moorhead	Swift
Gingrich	Morella	Synar
Glickman	Morrison (CT)	Tauke
Gordon	Mrazek	Thomas (CA)
Goss	Murphy	Thomas (GA)
Gradison	Myers	Thomas (WY)
Grandy	Neal (MA)	Traxler
Green	Neal (NC)	Udall
Guarini	Nielson	Upton
Gunderson	Oberstar	Vander Jagt
Hall (OH)	Obey	Vento
Hamilton	Olin	Vucanovich
Hammerschmidt	Oxley	Walgren
Hancock	Packard	Walker
Hansen	Panetta	Walsh
Hastert	Parris	Waxman
Hefley	Patterson	Weber
Henry	Paxon	Weiss
Herger	Payne (VA)	Weldon
Hertel	Pease	Wheat
Hiler	Penny	Whittaker
Hoagland	Petri	Williams
Hopkins	Porter	Wolf
Horton	Poshard	Wolpe
Houghton	Quillen	Wyden
Hughes	Ravenel	Wylie
Hunter	Ray	Yates
Hyde	Regula	Yatron
Inhofe	Rhodes	Young (FL)
Ireland	Ridge
Jacobs	Ritter
James	Roberts
Jenkins	Robinson
Johnson (SD)	Rogers

NOES—163

Akaka	Berman	Carr
Alexander	Bevill	Chapman
Andrews	Bilbray	Coleman (TX)
Anthony	Boggs	Combest
Applegate	Bosco	Condit
Archer	Boucher	Conyers
Armey	Brooks	Coyne
Aspin	Browder	de la Garza
Atkins	Brown (CA)	DeLay
Baker	Bryant	Dellums
Ballenger	Bustamante	Dickinson
Bartlett	Byron	Dingell
Barton	Callahan	Dixon
Bateman	Cardin	Donnelly

Dorgan (ND)	Lancaster	Richardson
Dwyer	Laughlin	Rinaldo
Dymally	Leath (TX)	Roe
Edwards (CA)	Lehman (CA)	Rose
Engel	Lehman (FL)	Roybal
English	Lewis (CA)	Sarpalius
Erdreich	Livingston	Savage
Espy	Lloyd	Saxton
Fascell	Luken, Thomas	Scheuer
Fazio	Madigan	Schiff
Fields	Manton	Serrano
Ford (MI)	Markey	Skaggs
Ford (TN)	Martinez	Skeen
Frost	Matsui	Smith (IA)
Gallo	Mavroules	Smith (NJ)
Gaydos	McCrery	Smith (TX)
Gephardt	McCurdy	Staggers
Geren	McMillen (MD)	Stallings
Gibbons	McNulty	Stenholm
Gillmor	Mineta	Stokes
Gonzalez	Mollohan	Stump
Goodling	Montgomery	Tallon
Grant	Morrison (WA)	Tanner
Gray	Murtha	Tauzin
Hall (TX)	Nagle	Taylor
Harris	Natcher	Torres
Hatcher	Nowak	Torricelli
Hawkins	Oakar	Towns
Hayes (IL)	Ortiz	Traficant
Hayes (LA)	Owens (NY)	Unsoeld
Hefner	Owens (UT)	Valentine
Hochbrueckner	Pallone	Visclosky
Holloway	Parker	Volkmer
Hoyer	Pashayan	Washington
Hubbard	Payne (NJ)	Watkins
Hutto	Pelosi	Whitten
Jones (GA)	Perkins	Wilson
Jones (NC)	Pickett	Wise
Kanjorski	Pickle	Young (AK)
Kaptur	Price
Kolter	Pursell

NOT VOTING—14

Ackerman	Johnson (CT)	Nelson
Collins	Kyl	Rahall
Craig	Levine (CA)	Rangel
Flippo	Lightfoot	Smith (FL)
Huckaby	Lukens, Donald

□ 1719

The Clerk announced the following pair:

On this vote:

Mr. Craig for, with Mr. Rangel against.

Mr. TOWNS changed his vote from "aye" to "no."

Mrs. VUCANOVICH and Messrs. ANNUNZIO, HERTEL, WHEAT, SCHAEFER, PARRIS, SOLARZ, STARK, PANETTA, SMITH of Vermont, LEWIS of Georgia, DERRICK, CROCKETT, and GUARINI changed their vote from "no" to "aye."

So the amendment was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. ECKART

Mr. ECKART. Madam Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ECKART: Page 15, lines 22 through 25, strike "such as leasebacks" and all that follows through "conventional construction." and insert in lieu thereof "that will not require additional expenditures, or potential expenditures, of Federal funds for construction.".

□ 1720

Mr. ECKART. Madam Chairman, the provisions of this amendment make a significant change in the area labeled creative financing. It would ensure that the cap is a reality, that additional expenditures will be forbidden beyond matters appropriated by the Congress.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ECKART. Madam Chairman, I yield to the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE].

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Chairman, the committee has reviewed the gentleman's amendment and has no objection to accepting the amendment.

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ECKART. Madam Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Chairman, I initially had some problems with it because it did not relate specifically to construction. The gentleman has modified the amendment to deal with construction only. We are very happy on the minority side to accept the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. ECKART. Madam Chairman, I thank both of my colleagues. This provision to limit creative funding would be an appropriate addition to the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ECKART].

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. STOKES

Mr. STOKES. Madam Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. STOKES: Page 19, after line 4, insert the following new section:

SEC. 12. MINORITY PARTICIPATION IN THE SUPERCONDUCTING SUPER COLLIDER.

(a) FEDERAL FUNDING.—The Secretary of Energy shall, to the fullest extent possible, ensure that at least 10 percent of the Federal funding for the development, construction, and operation of the Superconducting Super Collider be made available to business concerns or other organizations owned or controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals (within the meaning of section 8(a) (5) and (6) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 637(a) (5) and (6))), including historically black colleges and universities and colleges and universities having a student body in which more than 20 percent of the students are Hispanic Americans or Native Americans. For purposes of this section, economically and socially disadvantaged individuals shall be deemed to include women.

(b) OTHER PARTICIPATION.—The Secretary of Energy shall, to the fullest extent possible, ensure significant participation, in addition to that described in subsection (a), in the development, construction, and operation of the Superconducting Super Collider by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals (within the meaning of section 8(a) (5) and (6) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 637(a) (5) and (6))) and economically disadvantaged women.

Mr. STOKES (during the reading). Madam Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. STOKES. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of my amendment and the bill, and I want to commend the distinguished chairman, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE], for bringing this important legislation to the floor.

Madam Chairman. I rise in support of H.R. 4380, the authorization of the appropriations for the superconducting super collider. I want to commend the distinguished Chairman, Mr. ROE, for bringing this important legislation to the floor.

As you know, the superconducting super collider is one of the most advanced and ambitious high physics projects ever undertaken by our Nation. Yet, our scientific and engineering workforce, the backbone of our technological strength and leadership, is eroding. A recent report by the congressionally established task force on women, minorities, and the handicapped in science and technology finds that our Nation faces a shortfall of scientists and engineers by the year 2000. It further states that we can meet these shortfalls by utilizing all our talent, especially those traditionally underrepresented, including minorities and women. My amendment helps us achieve that goal by doing just that. In fact, the language of this amendment is identical to language included in H.R. 2696, the energy and water appropriations bill for fiscal year 1990 which passed the House last June, cleared Congress last September, and became Public Law 101-101 with the President's signature on September 29, 1989.

Madam Chairman, my amendment should more appropriately be called the Mickey Leland amendment. Just before his untimely demise, Mickey Leland had contacted me at the time the energy and water appropriations bill was being marked up by the Appropriations Committee. It was he who requested that I sponsor the amendment, which was accepted and made a part of that bill which is in the current law. So this is really an opportunity for me and the House to once again remember a Member of this body who was respected and admired, and who, once again, affords us the opportunity to show our commitment to equal opportunity for minority business.

Madam Chairman, traditionally, minority-owned businesses, historically black colleges and universities, and other minority educational institutions, have not been included in projects of this magnitude. Consequently, our Nation faces a situation constituting de facto exclusion of qualified contractors from such projects, as well as a situation that fails to utilize an available and technically expert scientific work force. My amendment would require the Secretary of Energy to ensure that at least 10 percent of the total Federal funding for the superconducting super collider project be made available to minority-owned business or institutions. By agreeing to this amendment, we will help to enhance and guarantee minority involvement in the scientific and technological industries which are bound to shape our Nation's future.

The estimated cost of overall development of the SSC will be between $4 to $6 billion. Adoption of this amendment will ensure that equal opportunity will be targeted toward competent, qualified minority institutions, businesses and students. At a time when our Nation is losing its competitive edge in the international marketplace, I sincerely hope that the House will adopt this amendment, and reaffirm its commitment to our pursuit of scientific and technological excellence by ensuring full participation of minorities in the areas of science and technology. This is key to ensuring our future strength in this arena.

Madam Chairman, I strongly urge my colleagues to support this necessary and worthwhile amendment, and final passage of H.R. 4380.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STOKES. Madam Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE], the chairman of the committee.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Chairman, the committee has reviewed this amendment. We have no objection. This is the same amendment that was in the original legislation last time, and we have no objection

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. WALKER TO THE AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. STOKES

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WALKER to the amendment offered by Mr. STOKES: Page 2, after line 5, insert the following new subsection:

(c) USE OF QUOTAS PROHIBITED.—Nothing in this section shall permit or require the use of quotas or a requirement that has the effect of a quota in determining eligibility under subsection (a) or (b).

Mr. WALKER (during the reading). Madam Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, this is an amendment that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] and I have worked together on. I was concerned about the language that it could ultimately be interpreted as permitting the use of quotas. I have developed language which just offers a simple prohibition of quotas in the bill. I think the gentleman from Ohio is prepared to accept this amendment at this point, and I would be glad to yield to him.

Mr. STOKES. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES].

Mr. STOKES. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Chairman, the gentleman is correct; we have had discussion involving his amendment to my amendment, and I have no objection to his amendment.

Mr. WALKER. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE].

Mr. ROE. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Chairman, on this side of the aisle we have no objection to the gentleman's amendment to the amendment.

Mrs. BOGGS. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I yield to the gentlewoman from Louisiana [Mrs. BOGGS].

Mrs. BOGGS. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Chairman, I wish to commend the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] for working out the amendment to his satisfaction and to the satisfaction of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] and this Member who are sponsors of the amendment.

Mr. WALKER. I thank the gentlewoman. I think it has worked out very well as a result of the negotiations.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES].

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES], as amended.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there other amendments to the bill? If not, the question is on the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

□ 1730

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA) having assumed the chair, Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 4380) to authorize appropriations for the superconducting super collider, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 379, she reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute adopted by the Committee of the Whole? If not, the question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. HAYES of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 309, nays 109, not voting 15, as follows:

[Roll No. 94]

YEAS—309

Akaka	Bosco	Courter
Alexander	Boucher	Cox
Anderson	Boxer	Coyne
Andrews	Brennan	Dannemeyer
Annunzio	Brooks	Darden
Anthony	Browder	de la Garza
Applegate	Brown (CA)	DeLay
Archer	Brown (CO)	Dellums
Armey	Bruce	DeWine
Aspin	Bryant	Dickinson
Atkins	Bustamante	Dicks
AuCoin	Byron	Dingell
Baker	Callahan	Dixon
Ballenger	Campbell (CO)	Donnelly
Barnard	Cardin	Dorgan (ND)
Bartlett	Chandler	Dornan (CA)
Barton	Chapman	Downey
Bateman	Clarke	Dreier
Bennett	Clay	Dwyer
Bentley	Clinger	Dymally
Berman	Coleman (MO)	Edwards (CA)
Bevill	Coleman (TX)	Edwards (OK)
Bilbray	Combest	Emerson
Bilirakis	Condit	Engel
Billey	Conte	English
Boehlert	Conyers	Erdreich
Boggs	Cooper	Espy
Borski	Costello	Fascell

Fawell	Lewis (GA)	Rose
Fazio	Lipinski	Roth
Feighan	Livingston	Rowland (GA)
Fields	Lloyd	Roybal
Fish	Lowery (CA)	Russo
Flake	Lowey (NY)	Sabo
Foglietta	Luken, Thomas	Saiki
Ford (MI)	Madigan	Sangmeister
Ford (TN)	Manton	Sarpalius
Frank	Markey	Savage
Frost	Martin (IL)	Saxton
Gallegly	Martinez	Schaefer
Gallo	Matsui	Scheuer
Gaydos	Mavroules	Schiff
Gejdenson	Mazzoli	Schumer
Gekas	McCandless	Serrano
Gephardt	McCloskey	Shaw
Geren	McCollum	Shumway
Gibbons	McCrery	Skaggs
Gillmor	McCurdy	Skeen
Gilman	McDade	Skelton
Gingrich	McDermott	Slaughter (NY)
Gonzalez	McGrath	Slaughter (VA)
Goodling	McHugh	Smith (IA)
Gordon	McMillan (NC)	Smith (NE)
Goss	McMillen (MD)	Smith (NJ)
Grant	McNulty	Smith (TX)
Gray	Meyers	Smith (VT)
Green	Mfume	Smith, Denny (OR)
Guarini	Michel	Solarz
Hall (OH)	Miller (OH)	Spence
Hall (TX)	Miller (WA)	Staggers
Hammerschmidt	Mineta	Stallings
Hansen	Moakley	Stearns
Harris	Molinari	Stenholm
Hatcher	Mollohan	Stokes
Hawkins	Montgomery	Stump
Hayes (IL)	Moorhead	Swift
Hayes (LA)	Morella	Tanner
Hefner	Morrison (WA)	Tauzin
Hochbrueckner	Mrazek	Taylor
Holloway	Murtha	Thomas (CA)
Hopkins	Myers	Thomas (GA)
Horton	Nagle	Torres
Houghton	Natcher	Torricelli
Hoyer	Neal (MA)	Towns
Hubbard	Nielson	Traficant
Hughes	Nowak	Traxler
Hunter	Oakar	Udall
Hutto	Ortiz	Unsoeld
Inhofe	Owens (NY)	Valentine
Ireland	Packard	Visclosky
Jenkins	Pallone	Volkmer
Johnson (SD)	Panetta	Vucanovich
Johnston	Parker	Walgren
Jones (GA)	Parris	Walker
Jones (NC)	Pashayan	Walsh
Kaptur	Patterson	Washington
Kasich	Payne (NJ)	Watkins
Kennedy	Pelosi	Waxman
Kennelly	Perkins	Weber
Kleczka	Pickett	Wheat
Kolbe	Pickle	Whittaker
Kolter	Poshard	Whitten
Lagomarsino	Price	Wilson
Lancaster	Pursell	Wise
Lantos	Quillen	Wolf
Laughlin	Ravenel	Wyden
Leach (IA)	Ray	Wylie
Leath (TX)	Rhodes	Yates
Lehman (CA)	Richardson	Yatron
Lehman (FL)	Rinaldo	Young (AK)
Lent	Roberts	Young (FL)
Levin (MI)	Robinson
Lewis (CA)	Roe
Lewis (FL)	Rogers

NAYS—109

Bates	DeFazio	Hefley
Bellenson	Derrick	Henry
Bereuter	Douglas	Herger
Bonior	Duncan	Hertel
Broomfield	Durbin	Hiler
Buechner	Dyson	Hoagland
Bunning	Early	Hyde
Burton	Eckart	Jacobs
Campbell (CA)	Evans	James
Carper	Frenzel	Johnson (CT)
Carr	Glickman	Jontz
Clement	Gradison	Kanjorski
Coble	Grandy	Kastenmeier
Coughlin	Gunderson	Kildee
Crane	Hamilton	Kostmayer
Crockett	Hancock	LaFalce
Davis	Hastert	Long
Machtley	Ritter	Smith, Robert (OR)
Marlenee	Rohrabacher	Snowe
Martin (NY)	Ros-Lehtinen	Solomon
McEwen	Rostenkowski	Spratt
Miller (CA)	Roukema	Stangeland
Morrison (CT)	Rowland (CT)	Stark
Murphy	Sawyer	Studds
Neal (NC)	Schneider	Sundquist
Oberstar	Schroeder	Synar
Obey	Schuette	Tallon
Olin	Schulze	Tauke
Oxley	Sensenbrenner	Thomas (WY)
Paxon	Sharp	Upton
Payne (VA)	Shays	Vander Jagt
Pease	Shuster	Vento
Penny	Sikorski	Weiss
Petri	Sisisky	Weldon
Porter	Slattery	Williams
Regula	Smith, Robert (NH)	Wolpe
Ridge

NOT VOTING—15

Ackerman	Kyl	Nelson
Collins	Levine (CA)	Owens (UT)
Craig	Lightfoot	Rahall
Flippo	Lukens, Donald	Rangel
Huckaby	Moody	Smith (FL)

□ 1749

The Clerk announced the following pair:

On this vote:

Mr. Rangel for, with Mr. Craig against.

Mr. STANGELAND changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois changed her vote from "nay" to "yea."

So the bill was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

□ 1750

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks, and to include extraneous matter, on H.R. 4380, the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ALEXANDER). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, had I been present, I would have voted "aye" on rollcall No. 90, No. 92, and No. 94 and "nay" on rollcall No. 93.

INTRODUCTION OF THE JUDICIAL TAXATION PROHIBITION ACT

(Mr. HANCOCK asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous material.)

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Speaker, apparently the Supreme Court decided 2 weeks ago that the American Revolution did not count. That is how Missouri Circuit Judge Robert Dierker described in a letter to me the Supreme Court's Missouri versus Jenkins decision which endorsed taxation by judicial decree. He is right.

A Federal judge in Kansas City is now free to double property taxes. Never mind that the Constitution clearly states in article I, section 8 that "Congress shall have Power To lay and collect Taxes," reserving all nonspecified powers to the States. Never mind that Alexander Hamilton stated in The Federalist Papers "The Judiciary . . . has no influence over either the sword or the purse."

Justice Kennedy got it right when he wrote that "taxation imposed by the unelected, life-tenured Federal judiciary disregards fundamental precepts for the democratic control of public institutions."

Yesterday, with a bipartisan group of 33 of my colleagues, I introduced legislation to correct the Supreme Court's fundamental error. Our bill, H.R. 4683, would exercise the powers delegated to Congress under article III of the Constitution to take the remedy of taxation away from all Federal courts inferior to the Supreme Court. I urge my colleagues to cosponsor this legislation and tell the courts to "Read our lips, No Taxation Without Representation!"

H.R. 4683

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Judicial Taxation Prohibition Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND DECLARATIONS.

The Congress finds and declares that—

(1) a variety of effective and appropriate judicial remedies are available for the full redress of legal and constitutional violations under existing law, and that the imposition or increase of taxes by courts is neither necessary nor appropriate for the full and effective exercise of Federal court jurisdiction;

(2) the imposition or increase of taxes by judicial order constitutes an unauthorized and inappropriate exercise of the judicial power under the Constitution of the United States and is incompatible with traditional principles of American law and government and the basic American principle that taxation without representation is tyranny;

(3) Federal courts exceed the proper boundaries of their limited jurisdiction and authority under the Constitution of the United States, and impermissibly intrude on the legislative function in a democratic system of government, when they issue orders requiring the imposition of new taxes or the increase of existing taxes; and

(4) the Congress retains the authority under article III, sections 1 and 2 of the Constitution of the United States to limit and regulate the jurisdiction of the inferior Federal courts which it has seen fit to establish, and such authority includes the power to limit the remedial authority of inferior Federal courts.

SEC. 3. PROHIBITION OF JUDICIAL IMPOSITION OR INCREASE OF TAXES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 85 title 28, United States Code, is amended by inserting between sections 1341 and 1342, the following:

"§ 1341A. Prohibition of judicial imposition or increase of taxes.

"(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no inferior court established by Congress shall have jurisdiction to issue any remedy, order, injunction, writ, judgment, or other judicial decree requiring the Federal Government or any State or local government to impose any new tax or to increase any existing tax or tax rate.

"(b) Nothing in this section shall prohibit inferior Federal courts from ordering duly authorized remedies, otherwise within their jurisdiction, which may require expenditures by Federal, State, or local government where such expenditures are necessary to effectuate such remedies.

"(c) For purposes of this section, the term "tax" includes, but is not limited to, personal income taxes; real and personal property taxes; sales and transfer taxes; estate and gift taxes; excise taxes; user taxes; corporate and business income taxes; and licensing fees or taxes.".

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 85 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by inserting between the item relating to section 1341 and the item relating to section 1342, the following new item:

"1341A. Prohibition of judicial imposition or increase of taxes.".

SEC. 4. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This Act and the amendments made by this Act shall take effect on the date of enactment.

REGULATION OF SOFT MONEY CAMPAIGN SPENDING

(Mr. DICKINSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous material.)

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. Speaker, today, the editorial page of the Montgomery Advertiser contained an article regarding the abuse of soft money contributions, and how the effort to write the Beck decision into law merits the attention of Congress.

On June 29, 1988, the Supreme Court ruled in Beck versus Communication Workers of America that compulsory union dues cannot be spent for anything but collective bargaining. All union members have the right to know what their dues are being spent for, and all union members have the right to refuse to pay for practices with which they do not agree.

Only last Wednesday, there was a disturbing article in the Wall Street Journal where opponents of California reapportionment plans asked organized labor to contribute some $1 million to the effort in lieu of regular campaign contributions. In this case, union dues would once again be used as campaign contributions, but because the law does not regulate soft money, the expenditures technically fall outside of limit and disclosure requirements. Would union members ever find out what their dues were being spent on? No.

No one knows how much soft money is spent on political activities since it is not reported. This is why the the codification of the Beck decision is not enough for real campaign finance reform.

Meaningful reform must go beyond the codification of Beck, and a provision must be incorporated into the campaign finance reform package that will: Compel disclosure of soft-money spending, regulate soft-money spending, and restrict soft-money spending.

[From the Montgomery Advertiser, May 1990]

CONGRESS LOOKS AT "SOFT MONEY" ISSUE

(By James J. Kilpatrick)

WASHINGTON.—In the hardball league of big-time politics, "soft money" constitutes a key element of the game. This is the money that goes not directly to a candidate, but only generally for such gauzy purposes as "voter education."

As Congress nudges its way toward election reform, the topic of soft money cries out for attention. How much money are we talking about? No one knows for certain, because soft money is not reported. It is well established, however, that the great bulk of it comes from labor unions. Congressional Quarterly quotes one estimate that unions spent "at least $45 million" in the 1988 elections, all but $5 million on activities that favored Democrats.

Corporations and trade associations, to be sure, may also contribute soft money to voter education and registration, but industry tends to the timid side. Its soft money—there isn't much of it—generally is spent as a manifestation of civic virtue.

Sen. Mitch McConnell of Kentucky heads a Republican task force on campaign finance. He wants to write a provision into the pending bill for election reform that would compel disclosure of soft-money spending. More than that, he proposes "to regulate and restrict it," a goal more easily promoted than achieved. Democrats understandably oppose the idea.

Republicans will mount a companion effort to add another desirable amendment to the bill. This would write into law the salutary substance of what is known as the "Beck decision." It is an effort that merits more attention than it has received thus far.

The Beck case dates from 1976, when 20 employees of AT&T and its subsidiaries brought formal charges against the Communications Workers of America (CWA) and four of its local unions. Harry Beck and the other plaintiffs were not members of the union, but under a union-shop contract they were compelled to pay fees and dues that were equivalent to those paid by union members. Their complaint was that most of these payments went to purposes that were irrelevant at best and odious at worst.

Specifically, Beck and his coworkers objected to spending by the CWA in support of causes and candidates they opposed. They contended that their payments to the union, wrested from them under the coercion of a union-shop contract, could be used only for the legitimate purposes of collective bargaining, contract administration and grievance adjustment.

The case was bitterly fought. In the union's view, the relevant provisions of the National Labor Relations Act put no restrictions whatever upon their spending. If Harry Beck didn't like it he could join the union and argue his position from within.

The trial court was not persuaded. It insisted upon a detailed accounting of CWA expenditures. After months of haggling, an astonishing figure emerged: Only 21 percent of the outlays were for purposes reasonably related to collective bargaining with AT&T and its subsidiary companies. The other 79 percent went for other union activities—for publications, for entertainment, for lobbying, for organizing workers in other companies, and so on.

Twelve years after the suit began, it reached the Supreme Court. In June 1988, Justice William Brennan spoke for a five-member majority. The law, he said, does not leave unions free "to exact dues equivalents from non-members in any amount they please, no matter how unrelated these fees may be to collective bargaining activities." Non-members may be compelled to pay fees intended to defray the costs of bargaining in their behalf—they cannot derive benefits as free riders—but beyond that limit, no.

Regrettably, the court did not reach the constitutional issue. The National Right to Work Legal Defense Fund, which supported Beck's suit, contended that under the peculiar circumstances of a union-shop contract, the union functions in effect as an agency of the state. No state may abridge a right of free speech. Harry Beck's right was plainly being abridged, but the high court put off the question.

The statutory interpretation enunciated in Brennan's opinion ought to be written into law. Union members of course have a right voluntarily to form a political action committee and support any candidate they like. They have no right to hijack non-members along the way.

[From the Wall Street Journal, Apr. 25, 1990]

CALIFORNIA DEMOCRAT GROUP ASKS LABOR TO GIVE $1 MILLION

(By Jill Abramson and Jeffrey H. Birnbaum)

WASHINGTON.—Top California Democrats, who have launched a drive to defeat two Republican-backed reapportionment plans, asked organized labor to give $1 million to the effort in lieu of regular campaign contributions.

Yesterday, after other California lawmakers resisted the unusual proposal, and after inquiries were made by this newspaper, the state's Democratic House delegation abandoned it. But the lawmakers still are moving forward with an aggressive "soft money" fund-raising campaign even as Congress debates ending or limiting such contributions.

Soft money, which consists of contributions to state party organizations and state-level political committees, falls outside of the limits and disclosure requirements of the federal election laws.

The California Democrats' goal is to raise at least $2 million, according to several people involved in the effort. Labor almost certainly will still be asked to make a significant contribution, although not as part of the swap initially proposed at a meeting of delegation members with labor leaders earlier this month. Other major Democratic donors in California are also being asked to make big contributions.

State Rep. Vic Fazio heads the California Democrats' reapportionment drive, known as IMPAC 2000. He denied that labor was given any specific contribution target, but other people who are knowledgeable about the meeting said the $1 million figure was discussed. Mr. Fazio also asserted that there is nothing untoward about soliciting labor support for such an important effort. He said Republicans are pouring hundreds of thousands of dollars to try to pass the initiatives, which, he added, "aren't something that were put on the ballot by public citizens' groups."

The use of soft money is especially sensitive in California since the disclosure that U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston (D., Calif.) received more than $800,000 in soft-money contributions from savings-and-loan executive Charles Keating for voter-registration drives. Sen. Cranston faces a Senate Ethics Committee investigation into his ties to Mr. Keating.

As many as a dozen of the 27 Democratic incumbents in Calfiornia could be endangered when House districts are redrawn starting next year, according to several political analysts in the state. The two June ballot propositions, both of which are supported by the Republican Party, would change the way redistricting is done. One would set up a panel of retired judges to handle reapportionment. The other would require a two-thirds vote of both houses of the California Legislature to adopt a reapportionment plan. Current law requires approval only by a simple majority of the Legislature, which is controlled by the Democrats.

If both measures pass, the one with the largest number of votes would be adopted.

Over the past few weeks, some of the Democrats in the California delegation began to resist the proposed arrangement with labor, at least in part because they need labor contributions themselves. At least two of the members in tough contests were to be exempt from the swap, but a wider reluctance to forego the campaign income apparently killed the effort.

In addition, even though the monies would have come from several unions, at least some of the lawmakers privately worried about the appearance of taking so much from a single interest group. Labor leaders themselves had been skittish about the proposed swap.

Several prominent Democratic donors, including film producer and investor Frederick Field, have been asked to make large contributions to California IMPAC 2000. Besides that effort, Democrats in the California state Legislature also have fundraising campaigns in high gear. Altogether, California Democrats hope to raise more than $5 million to defeat the ballot propositions.

Republicans, meanwhile, have their own big soft-money program to pass the two propositions. According to Bob Marks, campaign director for one of the proposition drives, supporters of the two ballot initiatives have already raised more than $1 million and hope to raise at least $2.5 million more. A $400,000 television advertising campaign has been budgeted.

The Republican National Committee has kicked in more than $500,000 to support the two propositions. David Packard, finance chairman of Californians for Political Reform, one of the ballot proposition groups has contributed $25,000. Donald Fisher, chairman of the Gap Inc. clothing store chain, gave $10,000. A number of law firms and oil companies have made large donations as well.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the 60-minute special orders granted to the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. MARTIN] and the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SLAUGHTER] for today be switched so that the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SLAUGHTER] will appear first, and the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. MARTIN] will appear third on the list.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

WASHINGTON POST BURIES THE FACTS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BILBRAY). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MCEWEN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MCEWEN. Mr. Speaker, as my colleagues are aware, this past weekend perhaps the largest political gathering in the history of this Nation took place on The Mall when an estimated 500,000 to 700,000 people gathered together to express their support for the preservation of life as incorporated in our Declaration of Independence for this cause: Governments are instituted among men for the preservation of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Mr. Speaker, all of us also know that the Washington Post is biased in its journalism. Anyone who has watched its reporting, especially the last week before an election, has seen their preferences for their political opinion, and all of us are fully aware of that. And yet I think that they reached a new height, or a new low, when on Sunday morning, when they failed to report at all what was undoubtedly the largest political gathering in the history of this city.

Mr. Speaker, the New York Times reported the gathering in the upper front page, left-hand side, in which they diminished the figures to 200,000. That was the lowest that anyone had estimated. Others had estimated it went as high as 700,000.

However, Mr. Speaker, even at that figure, recognizing that the "I have a dream" speech given by Dr. Martin Lurther King in 1963 was a quarter of a million people, one would have to recognize that, if the lowest estimate was 200,000, that indeed a performance of that level of political activity ought to at least merit an honorable mention in the Washington Post.

However, Mr. Speaker, if my colleagues look all through the front page, they look all through the front section, they will find out the Washington Post did not think it merited even an inch, and, if they look through section B, they will find out it did not even merit one column inch, and then, if my colleagues look at section C, they will see about four paragraphs, and it says, "Refer to page C-17."

My colleagues, this, the largest political gathering in the history of the United States of America in Washington, DC, was reported on the obituary page of the Washington Post.

Mr. Speaker, let me tell my colleagues that I refuse to believe that that was coincidental, and I believe that a responsible organization ought to at least make some pretense of being fair in reporting the facts rather than burying such an important event as that.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 2364, AMTRAK REAUTHORIZATION AND IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1990

Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (H.R. 2364) to amend the Rail Passenger Service Act to authorize appropriations for the National Railroad Passenger Corporation:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. Rept. 101-471)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 2364) to amend the Rail Passenger Service Act to authorize appropriations for the National Railroad Passenger Corporation, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Amtrak Reauthorization and Improvement Act of 1990".

SEC. 2. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 601(b)(2) of the Rail Passenger Service Act (45 U.S.C. 601(b)(2)) is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (D);

(2) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (E) and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(F) not to exceed $630,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989;

"(G) not to exceed $656,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990;

"(H) not to exceed $684,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1991; and

"(I) not to exceed $712,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1992.".

SEC. 3. INCENTIVES FOR PASSENGER SERVICE AGREEMENTS.

Title VIII of the Rail Passenger Service Act (45 U.S.C. 642 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 810. INCENTIVES FOR PASSENGER SERVICE AGREEMENTS.

"(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in instances where a publicly funded commuter transportation authority established under Virginia law contracts to indemnify the Corporation for liability for operations conducted by or on behalf of the publicly funded commuter transportation authority or to indemnify a railroad over whose tracks such operations are conducted, liability for all claims, whether for compensatory or punitive damages, arising from any accident or incident occurring in the District of Columbia against the Corporation or the publicly funded commuter transportation authority in connection with operations conducted by or on behalf of such publicly funded commuter transportation authority, or against a railroad over whose tracks such operations were conducted at the time of the accident or incident, shall not be in an amount greater than the limits of the liability coverage maintained by the publicly funded commuter transportation authority to indemnify the Corporation or the railroad. In no event shall the publicly funded commuter transportation authority maintain an aggregate limit of liability coverage less than $200,000,000.

"(b) Subsection (a) shall not be effective unless the Corporation or a railroad seeking coverage hereunder has entered into an operating agreement with a publicly funded commuter transportation authority established under Virginia law to provide access for revenue service to its property in connection with the operations of the publicly funded commuter transportation authority.".

SEC. 4. AUTHORIZATION TO USE FUNDS FOR SIMILAR PURPOSES.

Proceeds from the sale of all or part of the railroad line for which funds were provided, for acquisition and rehabilitation, under section 511 of the Rail Safety and Service Improvement Act of 1982 may be used for similar purposes with respect to any railroad line connecting with such line, for the purpose of continued rail service on such lines.

SEC. 5. COOPERATION WITH STUDY.

The National Railroad Passenger Corporation shall cooperate with the efforts of the Washington State Department of Transportation in designing and carrying out a study of the feasibility of reestablishing rail service between Seattle, Washington, and Vancouver, British Columbia.

SEC. 6. ROUTING FEASIBILITY STUDY.

The National Railroad Passenger Corporation shall conduct a study to evaluate the short-term and long-term revenue and cost implications of separating the existing California Zephyr-Desert Wind-Pioneer train into two service routes serving separate western destinations via a southern route and a central route through Iowa. The Corporation shall include in this evaluation the projected cost for required additional passenger equipment, any projected loss, and any revenue and ridership gains, associated with offering a second service route. A detailed report on the findings of the study shall be submitted by the Corporation to the Congress within 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 7. RESIDENCE OF EMPLOYEES.

(a) Section 11504(a) of title 49, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(a) No part of the compensation paid by a rail carrier providing transportation subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission under subchapter I of chapter 105 of this title to an employee who performs regularly assigned duties as such an employee on a railroad in more than one State shall be subject to the income tax laws of any State or subdivision of that State, other than the State or subdivision thereof of the employee's residence.".

(b) Section 11504(b) of title 49, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1) No part of the compensation paid by a motor carrier providing transportation subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission under subchapter II of chapter 105 of this title or by a motor private carrier to an employee who performs regularly assigned duties in 2 or more States as such an employee with respect to a motor vehicle shall be subject to the income tax laws of any State or subdivision of that State, other than the State or subdivision thereof of the employee's residence.

"(2) In this subsection 'employee' has the meaning given such term in section 204 of the Motor Carrier Safety Act of 1984 (49 App. U.S.C. 2503).".

(c) Section 11504(d) of title 49, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "express, sleeping car,"; and

(2) by striking "with—" and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "with the State and subdivision of residence of the employee.".

SEC. 8. JURISDICTION OF THE INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION OVER ACQUISITION OF CONTROL OF CERTAIN RAIL CARRIERS.

(a) Section 11348 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by redesignating subsections (a) and (b) as subsections (b) and (c), respectively, and by inserting before subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(a)(1) Acquisition of direct or indirect control of a class I rail carrier by a person that is not a carrier and does not directly or indirectly control, and is not directly or indirectly controlled by, a carrier may be carried out only with the approval and authorization of the Commission.

"(2) The Commission may begin a proceeding to approve and authorize a transaction referred to in paragraph (1) on application of the person seeking that authority. When an application is filed with the Commission, the Commission shall notify the chief executive officer of each State in which property of the carrier involved in the proposed transaction is located, and shall notify that carrier.

"(3) In a proceeding under this subsection, the Commission shall consider the following:

"(A) The effect of the proposed transaction on the adequacy of transportation to the public.

"(B) The total fixed charges that result from the proposed transaction.

"(C) The interest of carrier employees affected by the proposed transaction.

"(4) The Commission shall approve and authorize a transaction under this subsection when it finds the transaction is consistent with the public interest. The Commission may impose conditions governing the transaction, including the subordination of all or any portion of any new debt created as part of the proposed transaction to any pre-existing debt owed to the United States sufficient to provide reasonable protection to the United States. When the transaction contemplates a guarantee or assumption, by a carrier, of payment of dividends or of fixed charges or will result in an increase of total fixed charges, the Commission may approve and authorize the transaction only if it finds that the guarantee, assumption, or increase is consistent with the public interest.

"(5) The Commission shall publish notice of an application under this subsection in the Federal Register by the 15th day after the application is fied with the Commission and after a certified copy of it is furnished to the Secretary of Transportation. However, if the application is incomplete, the Commission shall reject it by the end of that period. The order of rejection is a final action of the Commission under section 10327 of this title. The published notice shall indicate that the application involves the acquisition of control of a class I rail carrier, to be decided within the time limits specified in paragraph (6).

"(6) Commission procedures with respect to an application filed under this subsection shall be as follows:

"(A) Written comments about an application may be filed with the Commission within 20 days after notice of the application is published under paragraph (5). Copies of such comments shall be served on the Secretary of Transportation, who may decide to intervene as a party to the proceeding. That decision must be made by the 15th day after the date of receipt of the written comments, and if the decision is to intervene, preliminary comments about the application must be sent to the Commission by the 15th day after the date of receipt of the written comments.

"(B) The Commission must conclude evidentiary proceedings by the 75th day after the date of publication of notice under paragraph (5). The Commission must issue a final decision by the 15th day after the date on which it concludes the evidentiary proceedings.

"(7) The final decision of the Commission under paragraph (6)(B) is a final action of the Commission under section 10327 of this title. If the Commission does not issue a final decision within the time limits provided under this subsection, it shall send a written notice to Congress that a decision was not issued and the reasons why it was not issued, and shall thereafter on a weekly basis report to Congress on the steps that have been taken toward the issuance of such final decision.

"(8) Nothing in this subsection shall preclude the Commission from approving more than one application filed under this subsection with respect to the acquisition of control of the same rail carrier.

"(9) In this subsection, the term 'control' does not refer to use of a voting trust in a proceeding subject to section 11343 of this title.".

(b) Within 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Commission shall issue interim regulations implementing the provisions of the amendment made by subsection (a). Such interim regulations shall take effect upon issuance, notwithstanding section 553 of title 5, United States Code. Final implementing regulations shall be issued and in force not later than 180 days after such date of enactment.

SEC. 9. RAILROAD UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT AMENDMENT.

(a) Section 8(a)(1)(B)(vi) of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act (45 U.S.C. 358(a)(1)(B)(vi)) is amended by inserting "the National Railroad Passenger Corporation and" immediately after "the contribution of" in the first sentence.

(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall be effective as of January 1, 1989.

SEC. 10. STUDY OF LOAN GUARANTEE NEEDS.

The Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the Administrator of the Federal Railroad Administration, shall study and survey the present and potential need and demand among class II and class III railroads for Federal guarantees of obligations as provided for by section 511 of the Railroad Revitalization and Regulatory Reform Act of 1976 (45 U.S.C. 831). Such study and survey shall examine the present and potential need and demand for such guarantees to fund rehabilitation and improvement facilities or equipment, acquisition of new railroad facilities, and refinancing of existing debt. The Secretary of Transportation shall report to Congress no later than 90 days following the date of the enactment of this Act the results of such study and survey. Such report shall include an analysis of the present and potential need and demand for Federal guarantees of class II and class III railroad debt, the amount of guarantee authority required to meet that need, and a projection of demand for such Federal guarantees through fiscal year 1995.

And the Senate agree to the same.

From the Committee on Energy and Commerce:

JOHN D. DINGELL,
THOMAS A. LUKEN,
DENNIS E. ECKART,
JIM SLATTERY,
RICK BOUCHER,
NORMAN F. LENT,
BOB WHITTAKER,
THOMAS J. TAUKE
(except for section 4 of the House bill and section 4 of the Senate amendment),
TOM BLILEY
(solely for section 4 of the House bill and section 4 of the Senate amendment),

Additional conferees from the Committee on the Judiciary (solely for section 4 of the House bill and section 4 of the Senate amendment):

JACK BROOKS,
R.L. MAZZOLI,
DON EDWARDS,
HAMILTON FISH, JR.,
CARLOS J. MOORHEAD,

Managers on the Part of the House.

FRITZ HOLLINGS,
JAMES J. EXON,
RICHARD H. BRYAN,
CHARLES S. ROBB,
LARRY PRESSLER,

Managers on the Part of the Senate.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 2364) to amend the Rail Passenger Service Act to authorize appropriations for the National Railroad Passenger Corporation, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The Senate amendment struck out all of the House bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute text.

The House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate with an amendment which is a substitute for the House bill and the Senate amendment. The differences between the House bill, the Senate amendment, and the substitute agreed to in conference are noted below, except for clerical corrections, conforming changes made necessary by agreement reached by the conferees, and minor drafting and clarifying changes.

1. SHORT TITLE

House bill

Designates short title as "Amtrak Reauthorization and Improvement Act of 1989."

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

House bill with a technical amendment changing the year cited. Designates short title as "Amtrak Reauthorization and Improvement Act of 1990."

2. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

House bill

Authorizes the appropriation of $630,000,000 in fiscal year (FY) 1989, $656,000,000 in FY 1990, $684,000,000 in FY 1991, and $712,000,000 in FY 1992.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

House bill. Both provisions are identical.

The conferees are aware of the ongoing efforts by the Coalition of Northeastern Governors (CONEG), Amtrak and the Federal Railroad Administration to explore ways of improving service and travel times on the northern portion of the Northeast Corridor. The Conferees support these efforts, and look forward to continued progress in this area.

One of the elements of improving service on the Northeast Corridor may involve the procurement of additional dual-propulsion locomotives that can operate on both the electrified and non-electrified portions of the Northeast Corridor and Northeast Corridor feeder lines. This may be an important part of the overall Northeast Corridor Improvement Project (NECIP) effort, and the conferees urge that Amtrak consider the procurement of dual-propulsion locomotives, to the exent permitted under the NECIP authorization and to the extent that additional funds are made available for this purpose under that program.

3. INCENTIVES FOR PASSENGER SERVICE AGREEMENTS

House bill

Provides that liability for compensatory and punitive damages for accidents or incidents occurring in the District of Columbia against Amtrak, the Virginia publicly-funded commuter transportation authority, or a railroad over whose tracks such operations were conducted at the time of the accident or incident is limited to the liability coverage maintained by the Virginia publicly-funded commuter authority. Requires the Virginia commuter authority to maintain an aggregate limit of liability coverage of at least $200,000,000.

Senate amendment

Identical provision, except that the Senate provision requires that Amtrak or another railroad seeking coverage under the limitation of liability, in order to receive such coverage, must have entered into an operating agreement with the Virginia commuter authority to provide access for revenue service to its property in connection with the operations of the Virginia commuter authority.

Conference agreement

Senate amendment. The House bill and the Senate amendment would both amend the Rail Passenger Service Act to limit liability over approximately three miles of railroad track in the District of Columbia and northern Virginia to enable the Northern Virginia Transportation Commission to operate service between Virginia and Washington, D.C.

4. AUTHORIZATION TO USE FUNDS FOR SIMILAR PURPOSES

House bill

Provides that the proceeds from the sale of all or part of a railroad line for which acquisition and rehabilitation funds were provided under section 511 of the Rail Safety and Service Improvement Act of 1982 may be used for similar purposes with respect to any railroad line connecting with such line, in order to continue rail service on the line.

Senate bill

No provision.

Conference agreement

House bill.

5. COOPERATION WITH STUDY

House bill

Requires that Amtrak cooperate with the Washington State Department of Tranportation on a study of the feasibility of reestablishing service between Seattle and Vancouver, British Columbia.

Senate bill

No provision.

Conference agreement

House bill.

6. ROUTING FEASIBILITY STUDY

House bill

Requires Amtrak to study the consequences of rerouting the California Zephyr through northern Illinois and central Iowa over the tracks of the Chicago and North Western Railroad, and submit a report on the finding to Congress within six months after enactment.

Senate amendment

Requires Amtrak to study routing trains on the Chicago and North Western Railroad through northern Illinois and central Iowa while preserving existing service in Illinois and Iowa. Requires that the study include an analysis of the short-term and long-term consequences on passenger revenue and operating costs of delays of trains interconnecting with the California Zephyr. Provides for a report to Congress within six months after enactment.

Conference agreement

Senate amendment with an amendment. The conference agreement adopts the Senate provision requiring Amtrak to conduct a study on the feasibility of providing two separate routes between Chicago and Omaha. With two routes, service could potentially also be provided to Wyoming. The conferees note that there has been a pattern of delays of trains going from Salt Lake City to Chicago because three different trains originating on the West Coast must arrive and be consolidated before continuing East. The present train is operating near its capacity. The provision does not prevent Amtrak from conducting another study on the feasibility of rerouting Amtrak service between Chicago and Omaha.

7. RESIDENCE OF EMPLOYEES

House bill

Provides that no rail employee shall be subject to income tax laws of any State or subdivision of that State other than that of the employee's residence. Provides that the employing rail carrier file income tax returns and reports only with the State and subdivision of residence of the employee.

Senate amendment

Similar provision, except that the Senate amendment also provides that no compensation paid by a motor carrier providing transportation subject to certain jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) or by a private motor carrier to an employee who performs duties in two or more States shall be subject to the income tax laws of any State or subdivision of that State, other than that of the employee's residence. The Senate amendment uses the definition of the term "employee" provided in the Motor Carrier Safety Act of 1984.

Conference agreement

Senate amendment.

8. JURISDICTION OF THE INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION OVER ACQUISITION OF CONTROL OF CERTAIN RAIL CARRIERS

House bill

Provides the ICC with explicit jurisdication to approve proposals for the acquisition of control of a class I rail carrier by a person that is not a carrier and, through direct or indirect ownership, does not control, and is not controlled by a carrier. The ICC is to commence a proceeding to authorize and approve such a proposal upon application. Procedures are established for the following: notice of the proceeding in the Federal Register, the time period for submitting written comments, the conduct and completion of evidentiary proceedings, and the rendering of a final decision on an expedited basis. The ICC's examination would review whether a particular proposed transaction, with such conditions as may be necessary, would be consistent with the public interest if it were to be consummated. In conducting its review, the ICC is required to consider the following: (1) the effect of the proposed transaction on the adequacy of transportation to the public; (2) the total fixed charges that would result from the proposed transaction; and (3) interest of the carrier's employees affected by the proposed transaction. Multiple proposals could be approved and authorized, leaving the final decision on which proposal would be implemented to the shareholders of the carrier to be acquired.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

House bill with an amendment reflecting similar legislation, S. 1005, reported by the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation. The amendment: (1) clarifies jurisdiction over the acquisition of direct or indirect control of a class I rail carrier by a person that is not a carrier; (2) clarifies that the ICC review of the guarantee or assumption of payment of dividends of fixed charges focuses on a guarantee or assumption by a carrier; (3) authorizes 15 days, rather than 10 days as in the House bill, for publication of a notice in the Federal Register, consistent with general Federal printing schedules; (4) ensures that these provisions do not apply to the creation of a voting trust in a proceeding subject to section 11343 of title 49 U.S.C.; and (5) provides for the issuance of interim regulations within 30 days after the date of enactment, which shall take effect upon issuance, and final implementing regulations to be issued and in force not later than 180 days after enactment.

The inclusion of this provision in the final conference agreement is intended to close a loophole that exists in current ICC authority over rail acquisitions. It addresses the anomaly under current law which subjects to ICC review, under 49 U.S.C. section 10901, a proposal by a non-carrier to acquire any segment of a rail line, but which enables a non-carrier to escape public interest review by the ICC if the non-carrier seeks to acquire control of an entire carrier.

The conferees believe that the purchase of a class I carrier is a transaction of significance to the public. Because only 16 class I rail carriers are currently in operation, if the financial resources of the entity that is acquiring control of any one of these carriers are insufficient or if there is an inadequate commitment to maintenance of the line being acquired, the stability of the Nation's rail network could be severally affected.

Similarly, since Amtrak does not own the tracks over which it operates, except in the Northeast Corridor, consummation of the purchase of a class I carrier, in the absence of sufficient financial resources or adequate commitments to maintenance, could result in a serious diminution in the quality of, and ability of Amtrak to provide, passenger service. The inclusion of this provision in the conference agreement will enable the ICC to consider the effect of the proposed transaction on the adequacy of freight and passenger transportation to the public. (A copy of a letter from the President of Amtrak addressing the need for a provision of this nature is contained in the House report accompanying this measure.)

9. RUIA AMENDMENT

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Provides that Amtrak be treated as a publicly funded rail carrier under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act in 1989 and 1990.

Conference agreement

Senate amendment.

10. STUDY OF LOAN GUARANTEE NEEDS

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires that the Secretary of Transportation (Secretary) study the potential need and demand among class II and class III railroads for Federal guarantees of obligations under section 511 of the Railroad Revitalization and Regulatory Reform Act of 1976. The guarantees would include funding for rehabilitation and improvement of facilities or equipment, acquisition of new railroad facilities, or refinancing of existing debt. Provides for a report to Congress within 120 days after enactment on the results of the study. Requires an analysis of the present need and demand for Federal guarantees of railroad debt, the amount needed, and projected demand through FY 1995.

Conference agreement

Senate amendment with technical amendments. The conference agreement requires that the Secretary issue a report on the present and potential need and demand among class II and class III railroads for Federal guarantees of obligations under section 511 of the Railroad Revitalization and Regulatory Reform Act of 1976 no later than 90 days after enactment.

From the Committee on Energy and Commerce:

JOHN D. DINGELL,
THOMAS A. LUKEN,
DENNIS E. ECKART,
JIM SLATTERY,
RICK BOUCHER,
NORMAN F. LENT,
BOB WHITTAKER,
THOMAS J. TAUKE
(except for section 4 of the House bill and section 4 of the Senate amendment),
TOM BLILEY
(soley for section 4 of the House bill and section 4 of the Senate amendment),

Additional conferees from the Committee on the Judiciary (solely for section 4 of the House bill and section 4 of the Senate amendment):

JACK BROOKS,
R.L. MAZZOLI,
DON EDWARDS,
HAMILTON FISH, JR.,
CARLOS J. MOORHEAD,

Managers on the Part of the House.

FRITZ HOLLINGS,
JAMES J. EXON,
RICHARD H. BRYAN,
CHARLES S. ROBB,
LARRY PRESSLER,

Managers on the Part of the Senate.

OXYGENATED FUELS AND REFORMULATED GASOLINE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ALEXANDER] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, the House is expected to take up H.R. 3030, the Clean Air Act amendments, before the end of this month.

One of the most important issues to be debated, both in terms of air quality and in terms of opportunities for alternative fuels, is the reformulated gasoline issue.

While the clean air bill contains important provisions dealing with automotive technology and tailpipe emissions standards, never before has there been an attempt—except in the case of lead—to deal with air pollution by cleaning up the fuel that goes into the cars.

Some background: Previous legislation required the phaseout of lead in gasoline. Lead was used as an octane booster. To replace the lost octane, the major oil refiners put into gasoline a higher percentage of what are called the aromatic compounds.

Aromatic conjures up images of fresh air. But in terms of gasoline, it means poison air.

The aromatics are benzene, toluene, and xylene. They are all very photochemically reactive—that is, they have a high propensity to react with sunlight in the atmosphere and form ground level ozone, which is better known as smog.

Benzene, toluene, and xylene are also highly toxic. Benzene is a particularly dangerous carcinogen. In fact, some people say that if OSHA regulated service stations as workplaces, not a service station in the country would remain open; they would all exceed the OSHA limits for benzene exposure.

As major oil companies have engaged in octane wars, trying to attract consumers by advertising higher and higher octane ratings for their premium gasolines, they have made gasoline dirtier than ever before.

The Senate clean air bill calls for reformulated gasoline to be the only gasoline sold in the nine worst ozone pollution areas, beginning in 1995. The bill calls for reformulated gasoline to contain no more than 25 percent aromatics. Currently, most gasoline contains 35 to 40 percent aromatics.

However, the Senate bill also realizes that not all of the consumer demand for higher octane was manufactured by oil company advertising. People do want to make sure their engines don't knock. To put back some of the lost octane, the Senate bill requires reformulated gasoline to contain at least 2.7 percent oxygen, by weight.

Where do you get oxygen? From either alcohol fuels, such as ethanol made from American grain, or alcohol-based ethers, like MTBE—derived from methanol—or ETBE—derived from ethanol.

The Senate bill could create enough ethanol demand, by some estimates, to increase farmgate income by between half a billion and $2 billion a year.

The House bill, as reported by the Energy and Commerce Committee, is not as specific. It merely requires that EPA set standards for reformulated gasoline. Ethanol and clean air advocates fear that without congressional direction, the standards will not turn out to be as strong as they should be.

Amendments are anticipated on this subject. In committee, Mr. RICHARDSON offered an amendment that lost by just one vote that would have set standards similar to those in the Senate bill in more than 40 of the most polluted cities. Some members may offer amendments to strengthen the provisions even more.

The beauty of reformulated gasoline is that it can dramatically reduce tailpipe emissions in cars already on the road while using fuel components like ethanol and ethers that reduce our dependence on foreign oil.

If you're from the city and want cleaner air, you should support the strongest possible reformulated gasoline provisions in the clean air bill. If you're from the countryside and want to provide a new market for farmers, you should do likewise.

LOUISIANA LOSING VAST AMOUNTS OF WETLANDS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. TAUZIN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, today I have introduced, along with most of my colleagues in the Louisiana delegation, H.R. 4703, the National Wetlands Conservation and Restoration Act. The act is designed to do some very important serious things in regard to this complex issue in America. It is designed for the first time to give us a chance legislatively to address the issue of what is and what is not a wetland to be protected in America. As you know, there is a great controversy brewing in this country over the definition of the term wetland. Farmers and other users of land only recently discovered under a new memorandum of agreement and new delineation maps prepared by the Corps of Engineers, many millions of acres of farm land and other lands under which we live and work are to be reclassified as wetlands.

Additionally, as we look at the problem of the loss of wetlands in America, we come to the conclusion that the 404 permit system by which the Corps of Engineers is supposed to protect our wetland base is simply not working. In Louisiana alone we lose 50 square miles of wetlands every year along our coast, and the 404 program has turned out to be not a help, but a hindrance to that process. Environmentalists complain that permits and applications for projects to conserve the wetlands that are being lost are hung up in the 404 process for over 2 years without relief. Landowners complain that the process is so cumbersome that their own efforts to protect and conserve their lands go to nought, and in fact are never realized.

As a result, the 404 permit process has left us with no relief.

The bill we have filed today does two important things. First, it sets up a process by which we can debate and define the term wetlands, to say where we can live, where we can develop, where we can farm, and to say where we cannot, where wetlands will be protected and what wetlands they are.

Second, the bill sets up for the first time in wetlands protection history a system for private financing of the conservation efforts that must be undertaken to save the losing battle in our wetlands in America.

In Louisiana alone, the 50 square miles that this Nation loses in wetlands is an irreparable loss. Louisiana has about 40 percent of the Nation's wetlands. We produce 28 percent of the Nation's landing in fish and fish products, and yet that land, that wetland estuary is eroding at enormous rates.

Landowners have no incentive today to do anything about it. The bill we have filed today, along with my colleagues from Louisiana, BOB LIVINGSTON, JIM MCCRERY, JERRY HUCKABY, JIMMY HAYES, CLYDE HOLLOWAY, and RICHARD BAKER, goes a long distance in providing an incentive for landowners to do just that, to invest in conservation projects and to have those investments returned to them in the form of conservation credits which can be used then in mitigation efforts. It provides a system to encourage the donation of wetlands to refuge and wildlife habitat. It is a good effort, I believe, in addressing the problem both of saving the real wetlands and making sure we define what is and what is not real wetlands in America.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAUZIN. I am happy to yield to my friend, the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON].

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend for yielding to me, and I congratulate him for his work in this area. I wholeheartedly and enthusiastically cosponsor this legislation, because I think for the first time in the many, many years that we have been dealing with this terrible problem of erosion of our wetlands, we finally see in this legislation the opportunity to provide landowers, private landowners the incentive to set aside wetlands. We have never had that in any bill that has been proposed before, and I applaud the gentleman for his initiative.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his cosponsorship.

Let me point out to the other Members of the House, this is not a Louisiana bill. This is a national wetlands policy bill designed to give every State the chance to make sure that we protect the real wetlands, that we define what is not real wetlands and then we set up a system by which private landowners can go about getting expedited permits to save the wetlands that are being lost, and, in fact, to recoup their investments through mitigation or conservation credits.

It is a good approach for America's wetlands. It is a good approach for all those who are concerned about this controversy in delineating what is and what is not wetlands, and it is a good approach for the first time in insuring that America's base of wetlands is not continuously lost and eroded without some real action.

It finally provides a trust fund so that Federal and State joint action can occur, that we can conduct major projects in saving our coastal wetlands which are particularly threatened across America, to insure that those coastal wetlands remain productive.

I invite my colleagues to join us in cosponsorship of this major legislation.

Mr. Speaker, a great tragedy is occuring in Louisiana as we meet here today. Our great State of Louisiana, in which is located some 40 percent of the Nations wetlands, is losing vast amounts of wetlands each year to the Gulf of Mexico. The causes of our wetlands losses are complex and the roots of this problem lie in the great flood control projects which began in the 1920's. Most of the southern part of our State is either at or very near sea level. This has exposed our people to the constant threat of flooding from heavy rains or from great storms. The Army Corps of Engineers has constructed hundreds of miles of levees which have both protected us from harm and have begun now to expose us to harm.

Prior to the construction of these levees, the Mississippi River each spring spread across our delta vast amounts of silt which resulted in the building up of our lands. Since the construction of the levee system along the river, this process has not continued and as a result of this and other assaults on our coastal marshes, we now find that we are seeing our beautiful marsh lands disappearing. Salt water encroaches into the fresh and brackish water marshes causing the loss of vegetation and the enlargement of small lakes, become large arms of the sea.

In addition, in our desire to support the energy needs of our country, we have allowed mineral development along our coast. Part and parcel of that development has been the necessity of allowing channels through which drilling equipment could pass and pipelines by which oil and gas flowed through Louisiana and on to the northeast for use as fuel to heat homes and run vehicles. Louisiana has reaped the harvest of that mineral production but has also paid a very high price in lost wetlands.

In addition, the hurricanes and other violent storms that annually hit our coast, take their toll on our barrier islands. These same islands are our last protection for the 2 million inhabitants of our coastal plains. Without our barrier islands, the next hurricane will bring with it death and destruction on an enormous scale and billions of dollars in property damage.

I have been following the President's announced policy of "no net loss of wetlands" with both support and concern. While I support the goal and the reasons behind the goal, I know and the people of my State know, that it is impossible for Louisiana to meet the "no net loss" goal even if we do not allow one additional inch of development to proceed in our State. The reason for this is simple.

Louisiana is losing over 50 square miles of wetlands to the Gulf of Mexico each year. Under the new Federal manual for delineating wetlands executed by the Corps of Engineers, the EPA, the Soil Conservation Service and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, it has been estimated that 53 percent of our total land mass is now wetlands. The Soil Conservation Service has estimated that our State has 11,988,000 acres of wetlands of which 4,810,000 acres are in agricultural production. With this enormous annual loss of coastal marshes and with most of our State already classified as wetlands, no one has been able to explain to me where the additional land will come from for us to achieve the no net loss of wetlands goal in Louisiana. It is simply impossible in our State.

I believe that our fight in Louisiana is to stop the erosion of our coastal marshes.

Our wetlands provide many benefits to our State including incredibly rich wildlife habitat and refuges, productive fisheries propagation, preservation of estuaries which serve many purposes, maintenance of water quality for surrounding areas, barriers to wave damage and erosion barriers, protection of large population areas from the ravages of storms, floods, and hurricanes; and commercial and recreational fishing. We want to continue to enjoy the many and diverse rewards our wetlands provide to us.

Most importantly, over half our population lives along our coastal marshes. The cultural and ethnic heritage of our great State has its roots, its spirit and its soul in the coastal wetlands of Louisiana. Our people are the fishermen, hunters and trappers who have harvested the bounty of south Louisiana's coast for over 200 years. They are also the rough necks who spend weeks at a time on drilling rigs in the Gulf of Mexico. We have Indian tribes whose ancestors have lived and fished in these coastal areas for generations. For most of these people, coastal Louisiana is not just a place to live, but a way of life. There are those who believe that the residents of south Louisiana should be relocated and that the Gulf of Mexico should be allowed to take our land. Those people simply do not understand the great loss that would be not only for our State but for the cultural heritage of this country. It simply cannot be allowed to happen.

Our State has made great strides in addressing our coastal wetlands losses by establishing a wetlands conservation and restoration fund in our Constitution. We presently have $26,000,000 in the trust fund and have announced an aggressive program to begin funding projects to stop the loss of our coastal marshes. These projects will include freshwater diversion, marsh management, hurricane and surge protection levees, the planting of vegetation, and other such expensive projects some of which are still unproven.

However, the funds available from our State will not be sufficient to stop the tremendous loss of land. We need additional funds to stop this disaster. We have accepted our responsibility to provide inexpensive and dependable fuel for our entire country. It is the responsibility of the country, to insure that our State does not wash away.

I am sure that many of you in the House of Representatives have heard from your constituents and particularly your farmers about the problem of extending the term "wetland" to millions of acres of land which we ordinarily think of as dry land. The term "wetlands" as used by the Corps of Engineers in the section 404 permitting program, has evolved over the years. When Congress originally enacted section 404, the authority of the Corps of Engineers was over "navigable waters of the United States." The corps thereafter began to expand that term to include wetlands and in February 1989 the corps and three other Federal agencies agreed to a method of determining wetlands which has had far reaching implications. This new Federal Manual for Delineating and Determining Wetlands has been interpreted in such a manner as to extend the Corps of Engineers section 404 permitting jurisdiction over many millions of additional acres of land which were not previously thought of as wetlands.

In addition, these same four Federal agencies recently entered into a memorandum of agreement in which they set forth the procedures for processing the 404 permits in order to meet the "no net loss" goal and what mitigation might be required in order to obtain a 404 permit. Under the new MOA, if the permit applicant can't construct his project without damaging wetlands and can't find an alternative site, he might be required to create a new wetland in some other area.

What has this meant for my constituents? It has meant that in most of my district any construction activities now require a 404 permit before any dirt can be moved. What does that do to the economy of my district? It means that every construction project, whether it be a home or a shopping center or a church, will have added costs associated with the 404 permit process. It may also mean that under the new memorandum of agreement an additional cost of a project may be the cost of a mitigation project such as purchasing land and setting it aside as a new wetland.

Another impact on my district is the devaluation of land after the land has been determined to be a wetland. As a result of the devaluation of land, our tax assessments will be reduced and as a result of the reduction in our tax assessments, there will be considerably less funds available for our schools and as a result of reduced funding of schools, our children will be less educated and will not be able to find good jobs as adults, thereby causing increased poverty and with poverty, increased dependence on federally funded poverty programs.

Another impact on my district is that land which has been used as security for loans and other indebtedness may be devalued. Our banks and savings and loan industries have already seen enormous losses as a result of the downturn on our economy. They have been left with large holdings of real estate, the value of which has been depressed because of general economic conditions. The redesignation of real estate as wetlands will mean that the financial institutions in my district will have enormous losses due to the loss of the value of their security interests.

Another impact on my district is that our farmers will have severe limits on how their land can be used. They may continue their normal agricultural practices on their farm lands, but they cannot use their lands for any other purposes without a corps of engineers 404 permit. A farmer in my district cannot give his son or daughter a portion of his lands for the purpose of building a home, unless a 404 permit is obtained. The land cannot be developed without a permit.

The result of all of this is that the Corps of Engineers will have an enormous impact on economic development in my district and in our State. This change in the definition and in the procedures for issuing permits was done without authorizing legislation from Congress and without going through the formal rule making procedures of the Administration Procedures Act. The corps did not hold the first public hearing to find out what impact these new rules would have on the lives of my constituents or on the lives of your constituents. This simply is not what a democracy is all about.

There are those who believe that the 404 permit program is the answer to the wetlands problems of this country. However, I believe that the 404 program has not been successful in preventing the loss of wetlands primarily because there has been no clear legislative mandate to the corps for wetlands protection. The 404 program has been a "can't do" program rather than a "can do" program which is what we now need in Louisiana. We need a program with the clear purpose of protecting wetlands and with a mandate to undertake projects to protect, restore, and conserve wetlands. We also need a program that recognizes that much of our wetlands are privately owned and provide incentives to landowners to protect and conserve our wetlands.

Each State has unique wetlands problems. In some States the primary threat to wetlands and wildlife habitats comes from development. Each State should play a key role in setting up a program to protect its wetlands with the Congress setting the minimum standards for protection.

Today I am introducing the Wetlands Restoration and Conservation Act which is designed to address these problems. Here is how it works:

First, it requires the Corps of Engineers to define the term wetlands through rulemaking pursuant to the Administrative Procedures Act, including the holding of four public input hearings and it specifically excludes habitable lands and prior converted agricultural lands from that definition.

Second, it designates lands as either protected wetlands or habitable lands, which are fastlands, within levees, uplands and ridges, and requires States with a delegated program to provide a system of permits for protected wetlands.

Third, it allows States to establish their own programs for conserving and protecting wetlands, as long as they meet the requirements of the act.

Fourth, it requires expedited permitting of conservation projects to create, save, restore, protect, or enhance coastal wetlands so that we can begin to stop the loss of wetlands without unnecessary delays.

Fifth, it provides a system of conservation credits to be earned by landowners for conducting such conservation projects. This is an important incentive to private property owners to help us in the effort to save wetlands while still recognizing their property interests. These conservation credits may be sold or mortgaged and then used as mitigation thus providing the private money to save real wetlands.

Sixth, it establishes a wetlands protection trust fund, to fund conservation projects with an 85/15 Federal-State match. The fund is to be financed with 5 percent of the Federal mineral revenues from Outer Continental Shelf oil and gas activities.

The unique nature of this legislation is that for the first time it creates a system by which the States and the Federal Government can aggressively fight to prevent wetlands loss with the active frontal assistance of the wetland landowners through the earned conservation credits system. And it properly provides a system for making the critical choice of what is and what is not a real wetland to be protected.

COMMENDING THE HONORABLE JOHN O. MARSH, JR., FOR DEDICATED PUBLIC SERVICE AS SECRETARY OF THE ARMY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, John Marsh has departed as Secretary of the Army and returned to private life. John Marsh has had a long and distinguished career of public service. This includes active Army service, Army Reserve, Army National Guard, four terms as the Representative from the Seventh Congressional District from Virginia, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Legislative Affairs, National Security Adviser to Vice President Ford, counselor to President Ford and as Secretary of the Army for over 8 years. His tenure as Secretary of the Army made him the longest serving Secretary of any of the Armed Services in history.

While serving as Secretary of the Army, John Marsh brought the Army from one of the low points in its history, referred to as the "hollow Army," to an Army that is the most ready, best trained, and with the highest quality personnel in its history. He has emphasized the qualities that make a great Army through the use of themes. He began this annual theme program with "Yorktown, Spirit of Victory," and continued with physical fitness, excellence, the family, leadership, values, the Constitution, training, and ending in 1989 with the noncommissioned officer. These themes promoted and enhanced the esprit and spirit of the Army and turned the corner to bringing the Army back from the condition that existed following Vietnam with low morale, low readiness, and poor training.

After leaving as Secretary of the Army, John Marsh has continued his public service by serving as a special legislative council to Secretary of Defense Cheney and currently as the Chairman of the Reserve Forces Policy Board.

The Army and the country owe John Marsh our deepest gratitude for his many years of distinguished and unrivaled service to the Nation. This body especially will miss his counsel, his friendship, and his leadership. I ask my colleagues to join me in commending John Marsh in recognition of his years of dedicated public service.

ANNUNZIO ASSAILS BANKERS' COMMENTS ON CREDIT UNIONS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, I am shocked and appalled to hear and read recent comments by a representative of the American Bankers Association who told a conference in New Orleans that credit unions are taking a Socialist-Communist message to other countries, especially those in Eastern Europe. An ABA tax lobbyist, Linda Rearick, said banks have obviously made the choice to be corporate-solution financial institutions. Credit unions, she said, are member-owned and member-operated and those kinds of things, which suggests that actually, since corporate formation and capitalism is really the American way, credit unions are sort of taking the Socialist-Communist message to Third World countries.

Here, in 1990, in the twilight of communism, the ABA is throwing McCarthyite charges at credit unions. These are the same tactics that the bankers used in the 1950's against credit unions.

I would like to point out that Dennis Sharpe, president and chief executive officer of the EdCo Credit Union in Des Moines and development educator for the World Council of Credit Unions, responded that the credit union movement has been the only organization hailed by the State Department, the United Nations, and others for bringing democracy to the developing nations of the world.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to tell a little story about communism and credit unions. One of the first things that the Solidarity union movement sought was the development of financial institutions to serve these Polish people. And what kind of financial institution did the non-Communist Solidarity Party want?

Did Solidarity want banks? No. They had a bank in Poland. It was the large, impersonal, unresponsive, anticonsumer, not-to-be-trusted State bank. And to make it more acceptable to the Polish people, the Government reformed it. The Government broke the one large, impersonal, unresponsive, anticonsumer, not-to-be-trusted state bank into eight large, impersonal, unresponsive, anticonsumer, not-to-be-trusted state banks.

Solidarity did not want banks. It wanted to establish credit unions. It wants to establish them at the Gdansk shipyards and the Nova Huta steel mills and other places around the country. Does Solidarity want credit unions because they are communistic, as the ABA would try to convince the world? Solidarity wants credit unions because they are democratic. Solidarity wants credit unions because they are owned and controlled by their members.

As chairman of the House Banking Subcommittee on Financial Institutions, I have strongly supported the movement toward credit unions in Eastern Europe. I was a primary sponsor of an amendment that became part of the Support for Eastern European Democracy Act which requires the Agency for International Development to consider providing funding to the World Council Credit Unions, as well as the National Credit Union Administration, to provide technical assistance to establish Eastern European credit unions. As a matter of fact, during oversight hearings on the savings and loan reform law last month, I welcomed and met with a group of Polish visitors who were in the United States to study credit unions.

The ABA's Ms. Rearick used another tactic aimed at the credit union movement in her remarks in New Orleans. She tried to divide and conquer by saying that credit unions are beginning to disagree on a tax issue—that smaller credit unions are in favor of taxing larger credit unions. That comment is, in a word, hogwash. And it came through loud and clear at the meeting.

According to the Credit Union Times, there was little doubt about the unity of the credit union movement. The estimated 500 credit union executives cheered wildly when their representative on the conference panel, Bucky Sebastian of GTE Federal in Tampa, FL, accused the bankers of lying to Congress. He pointed out that the common bond of the first credit union in 1909 was to serve everyone in the community of Manchester, NH. Nothing has changed since then, he said.

Mr. Speaker, there is a common bond among credit unions, despite the rhetoric of the banks. The various bankers' newsletters have been filled with supposedly horrible examples of how credit unions actually allow people to become members of credit unions. Imagine, credit unions allow spouses to join the same credit unions. And, would you believe, children can join, too.

After listening to the bankers, you would think that people were forced to join credit unions. Bankers don't like to mention that membership in a credit union is voluntary.

I am a strong supporter of credit unions. It is my hope that the banks will cease and desist in their efforts to thwart the goals of credit unions, namely the providing of services for their members.

TRIBUTE TO THE LATE HON. J. KENNETH ROBINSON

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SLAUGHTER] is recognized for 60 minutes.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on the subject of my special order tonight.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, it is with great sadness that I rise today to speak about a friend, counselor, and teacher, J. Kenneth Robinson.

Kenneth Robinson died on Sunday, April 8, 1990. He was 73. He died the way he lived, with courage and conviction. In his heart he carried God, his family, and his country. I thought it would be appropriate and fitting to take some time here to talk about our friend, this fine great man, and what he left behind.

First, Kenneth Robinson was a faithful and devout family man. His wife of 43 years, the former Katheryn Rankin, survives him. Kit, as she is much more widely and affectionately known, is one of the finest and most graceful ladies that I have ever known.

Kenneth is also survived by six of his seven children: Patrick, Keveney, Jim, Kelly, Ray, and Sallie. J. Kenneth Robinson, Jr., is deceased.

Keveney and Steven, plus their two children, Kate and Taylor, I believe are to be here, and Jim and Lynn and Sallie and Kelly are here with us this evening to hear our tribute.

Also, I quickly want to mention that there are a couple former Congressmen who are here with us this evening, Jack Edwards and Dick Ichord.

On behalf of myself and all of my colleagues who have asked to participate in this special order, I want to say to Kit and the family, please know that we share the loss you feel and we extend our deepest sympathy. All of us stand ready to help in whatever manner we might.

□1810

And, Kit, your kindness and your companionship have been known for many years. I hope now you and your family will be able to call upon us if you should so desire.

Kenneth graduated from Virginia Tech in Blacksburg, VA, with a bachelor of science degree in horticulture. He was deeply attached to the rural and agrarian world in which he was raised, and in this respect, he greatly reflected the true Jeffersonian tradition that he so often admired.

Kenneth was a successful orchardist and farmer, and despite his many endeavors and callings, he never left the family's orchard and fruit-picking businesses.

While Kenneth held numerous posts in a wide variety of civic, fraternal, and community organizations including local and State chambers of commerce, probably none of his extracurricular activities made him happier than his service on the Board of Visitors for the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, CO. He loved being on the board as much as he loved the fact that Kit served on the board at Virginia Tech.

I cannot leave this subject of his extracurricular activities without noting how appropriate it is that we are honoring Kenneth the week of the famous Apple Blossom Festival in Winchester, VA. The festival which is well known throughout the Nation was dear to Kenneth who was a past president of it.

Mr. Speaker, at this point I want to ask that some of those present give a few remarks in Mr. Robinson's memory, our friend, Kenneth. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTEN].

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, it has been my privilege to serve with many fine and effective Members of Congress. Ken Robinson was certainly one of them. We worked together. Ken began service on the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee from 1975 until he left the House at the end of the 98th Congress. We also served together on the Agriculture Subcommittee during that time. We were close friends.

Ken was elected to the House at the beginning of the 92d Congress and to the Committee on Appropriations on October 26, 1971. He was initially assigned to the Labor-HEW and Foreign Operations Subcommittees by Frank Bow who was the ranking Republican member of the committee.

Truly Ken Robinson was a strong person, and an able and successful Member of Congress, who contributed greatly to the people of his district, State, and Nation.

Ken and his family contributed greatly to our service and life in Washington. To his wife and family we express our sorrow at Ken's untimely passing.

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I now yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. PARRIS].

Mr. PARRIS. Mr. Speaker, Ken Robinson was my friend, first and foremost. As a colleague in the Congress, Ken Robinson was a man of honor, talent, and a tenacious will to fight the tough battles we so often face in Congress. Ken and I not only served in the Congress together, but were colleagues in the Virginia General Assembly as well beginning many years ago.

Ken was a man who knew his priorities. His loyalties were not determined so much by the typical partisan divisions that occur on Capitol Hill. Rather he determined his loyalties by the desires and aspirations of his own constituents. His was a quiet but resolute strength which he drew from his deep faith in the founding principles of our Nation.

An example of Ken Robinson's dedication to service was his fierce commitment to America's defense. My colleagues know very well his distinguished service on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. He was extremely knowledgeable about America's most guarded secrets and intelligence operations and effectively used his position to responsibly strengthen America's ability to know what was happening throughout the world. Additionally, many of his efforts on the House Appropriations Committee were based on his belief in "peace through strength," and I think it is fair to say that his foresight in leading efforts to restore American military strength played a role in the 1989 revolution of democracy, where the Communist bloc, knowing it could never defeat the United States militarily, finally focused inwardly and collapsed upon the realization that their economic policies had failed to serve their own people.

Like other great Americans remembered in the long history of great Virginians, Ken Robinson believed that America is, in the words of his most famous constituent Thomas Jefferson, the "last best hope for man." He was a patriot whose loyalty was based on his insight into the character, inherent decency and fighting spirit of the people he grew up with and represented so ably in the Congress. It was a deeply rooted faith in the average American that inspired Ken Robinson to fight for those causes necessary to strengthen freedom and give birth to democracy around the world.

All of us hope that as a result of our life we can leave some tracks: that it makes a difference in some even small way that we passed by this way even for such a brief period; that in some positive way we contributed to the benefit of our family and friends and colleagues; that we contributed to understanding between peoples and nations and that we repaid the world in some perhaps small but significant way for our gift of life. I am sure Ken Robinson did all of that.

When Henry David Thoreau was dying, a friend asked him if he had made his peace with God. Thoreau replied, "We have never quarreled."

With Ken's life of honesty, vigilance and courage, I am sure that as he met his creator, he indeed was welcome. I, along with all of my colleagues will miss J. Kenneth Robinson and the wisdom and knowledge he shared with us.

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentlewoman for Maryland [Mrs. BYRON].

Mrs. BYRON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman very much for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, let me thank the gentleman for taking this special order. I think any time those of us who come before this body on a special order sort of go back to our memory bank and recall one occasion or another.

I have to start with an evening in April 1970 in Annapolis, MD, which was the last night of the Maryland General Assembly, and up in the gallery was a young couple who had just finished up a 60-day session in Richmond. I was sitting there waiting for my husband to finish at that time, and I got into a conversation.

It seems that this young man had made the decision and the commitment no longer to go back to Richmond, but to throw his hat into the ring and to go off to Washington. We had a delightful evening and ended up talking to them at dinner.

Little did I realize at that time, or any of the four of us realize at that time, that when January 3, 1971, came, and the 92d Congress convened, Kit and Ken Robinson would be standing in this body, and BEVERLY and Goodloe BYRON would be standing in that same body.

Kit and Ken lived as close as one possibly could get to Capitol Hill, out the back garage door of the Longworth Building. Ken walked back and forth on a regular basis, and Kit held forth with that Virginia charm and that Virginia ambience.

We now have nine Members left of that class that came those 20 years ago, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER], the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL], the gentleman from New York [Mr. LENT], the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPENCE], and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. YOUNG] on Ken's side of the aisle; the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. ASPIN], the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS], the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAZZOLI], and the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL] over on our side. BILL FRENZEL has decided this year, after 20 years, that is enough, and he is going to go back to Minnesota. Those who are left will carry on the tradition that started 20 years ago, and that is serving their country in this body.

Ken made the decision in 1984 to go back to his beloved Virginia, and he and Kit sat on their mountain and watched their orchards in Winchester grow as they have done. But I think those of us who had an opportunity to know both of them and those of us who had an opportunity to serve with Ken, as I did for 4 years, will always cherish those memories as, in my case, started on an April evening in Annapolis in 1970.

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL].

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman from Virginia for taking this special order and permitting those of us an opportunity who have known Kenny Robinson for so many years to say some appropriate remarks.

I cannot help but recall the outstanding work that he did while we were both members of the Committee on Appropriations and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and, of course, on that latter committee, he served as our ranking Republican member for the time allocated under the rules. These, I guess, are two of the most prestigious committees that this institution has to offer our Members for committee assignments.

The fact that Ken filled them with distinction is a sign of the high esteem with which he was held by his colleagues.

Last week, I had the pleasure of being visited by our former colleague and former Republican leader, John Rhodes.

□ 1820

I was reminded today that John once referred to Ken Robinson as a Rock of Gibraltar, a colleague upon whom he could count to stand for principle, in any case and all cases.

With that phrase in mind, I would like to remind our colleagues of the importance of having had someone like Ken as a leader in the fight for strong national security. These days we just take it for granted that it was inevitable that the United States would win the cold war. But when Ken Robinson came to us in 1971, our country was beginning a near disastrous slide in national security prepardness. It took some tought fights during the late 1970's and then the early 1980's to bring our Nation back to a point where we could exert pressure for peace and freedom because we had a credible deterrent, and Kenny Robinson was right there leading that fight, as you all know.

I know our colleagues on both sides of the aisle will have words of praise for Ken's many other accomplishments, but I think it is only fitting we remember if it were not for leaders like Kenny Robinson, we would not have a peace dividend to be talking about today. He did his best to keep our nation strong when it was not all that popular to do so.

We have not won that battle for democracy, but because of leaders like Ken Robinson, we are at a point where democracy has a good chance of triumping in many parts of the world, where it had been kept in chains. And for that and for so much else, we do salute the memory of our former colleague whose devotion to duty did so much for this great institution and for our country. To Kit and the family, Corinne joins me in offering our sympathy and condolences to them. We will always have those fond, fond memories of Kenny's stewardship in this body. He was certainly one of the best, again I would have to say one of those persons with whom the gentleman from Illinois might never have met, had it not been for our community of interest in this institution and having the privilege of serving together.

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF].

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, it was with deep sadness that I learned of the death on April 8, of our retired colleague from Virginia, J. Kenneth Robinson, and I join and my wife Caroline joins today with my colleagues as we remember Kenneth and pay tribute to his many years of dedicated public service.

In fact, before I ran for Congress, one of the first people that I went to talk to about the possibility of running was Kenneth Robinson. I had not been very active in the party, and just having the opportunity to come and sit with him to ask him, and I was even impressed that he allowed me to come and meet with him. But he was one of the people that encouraged me at the time to run.

I had the honor of serving with Kenneth in the Virginia delegation in the 97th and the 98th Congress, prior to his retirement from the House in 1984.

I very humbly will say I was very proud to have succeeded him as Virginia's Representative in the Committee on Appropriations. But while I may have taken the slot that Kenneth vacated on that committee when he retired, there is no way that I could ever fill the large shoes that Kenneth left.

In his 14 years of service in the House and especially his membership on the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee and the Select Intelligence Committee, he left a legacy of leadership on national security issues which has made the difference today in the security that our Nation enjoys.

I can remember a couple of times here late at night when we were debating, and I do not want to get into any controversy with this, but debating the support for aid to the Contras. Kenneth was on the Intelligence Committee and also on the Defense Appropriations Committee and was very active, and I could almost see Kenneth and Bill Whitehurst together working on that issue. Really I guess one would almost say the victory that Violeta Chamorro had down in Nicaragua was partly responsible and partly due to the support that Kenneth gave to the Contras and to that effort down there in Nicaragua.

I remember those nights in 1983 and 1984, it seemed like the bad guys were winning and the good guys were losing. Because of the steadfastness of Kenneth and people like him, I think the outcome came that we saw democracy and freedom win in Nicaragua, and I think that much of what Kenneth's work did, as our Republican leader pointed out in Eastern Europe, really helped bring that about.

When Kenneth retired from the House I recall the same comment that our leader BOB MICHEL said and that former minority leader John Rhodes said, where he once called Kenneth the Rock of Gibraltar.

I saw Gibraltar. It is the biggest rock and the most steadfast, solid thing that you will ever, ever see. What a fitting description that was of Kenneth. Always steady, always there, always available to lend a wise and helping hand.

I recall, too, another tribute of Kenneth's that only a few Members ever achieve, and that is universal respect. Every colleague from both sides of the aisle, both sides, Republicans and Democrats, conservatives and liberals, held him in the highest regard. He was a Virginia gentleman in the finest tradition of service to his fellow man.

He was a man of honesty, a man who if he gave you his word, it was so dependable and so reliable. He was a man of integrity, a man of the highest ethical standards. He worked with skill and energy and enthusiasm in a bipartisan and I would say an unselfish devotion to public service, and was without a doubt one of our Nation's most able legislators.

Kenneth was also a devoted family man to his wife Kit and to their six children. I and my wife Caroline would want to offer her deepest condolences and to say to them that J. Kenneth Robinson was among the finest gentleman to have ever served in this House, and this Nation is better, the State of Virginia is better, and this House is a better place because he graced our presence.

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SISISKY].

Mr. SISISKY. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise today to pay tribute to a distinguished former Member of this body, J. Kenneth Robinson.

Kenneth was truly a statesman in the tradition of our former President and Father of our Constitution, James Madison, who, incidently, resided in what has become Virginia's Seventh Congressional District, which Kenneth served.

In fact, one can draw many parallels between James Madison and J. Kenneth Robinson. They were both farmers. They were both highly respected Members of this great body. He, like Madison, was considered by many in this body to be a man of keen judgment, one who would be sought out for his extensive knowledge of the issues under his jurisdiction. He, like Madison, believed in a strong national defense.

Prior to his retirement in 1985, I had the privilege to serve with Kenneth during my first term in Congress. During this period, I recall a conversation we had in this Chamber that, for me, demonstrates the kind of public servant he truly was.

After a vote on a intelligence related bill, Kennteh came over to me to personally thank me for my vote. His deep concern over this legislation was not due to it's potential effect on his district. He thanked me for my vote because, he said, he loved his country, and his beliefs convinced him that it was best for the citizens of this country as a whole.

I believe it was this love of country and strength of conviction that inspired his unselfish service. In this sense, Kenneth exemplified a degree of leadership that has been matched by few.

In a small way, I share the sense of pride that must overwhelm Kit and her family to have had the opportunity to know this great man and to have spent a part of their lives with him. J. Kenneth Robinson will long be remembered, along with Madison and Jefferson, as a great statesmen from Virginia.

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BATEMAN].

□ 1830

Mr. BATEMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague for having taken out this special order and for affording us an opportunity to pay our respects to our former and now departed colleague, J. Kenneth Robinson.

Nearly 6 years ago, I rose in this Chamber to pay tribute to J. Kenneth Robinson on the occasion of his then-impending retirement from the House of Representatives, and I have missed him as a colleague all the days since. That was a sad occasion for all of us who took part, but this special order is a more sad occasion.

The death of J. Kenneth Robinson was a loss to Virginia and the Nation, and a personal loss for all of us who served with him and came to rely on his knowledge, integrity, and sound judgment.

Kenneth served for 6 years in the Virginia State Senate, and during the last 2 years of that period, I was his colleague. And in 1983, when I began my service in this body, Kenneth was already a senior Member with 12 years of service. It was during that period that I most fully came to appreciate his wisdom and steadfastness. No Member of the House was more helpful to me as I worked to learn the ways of the Congress. Other Members, too, have told me what a fine mentor he was to them when they began their service.

Here in the House, Kenneth made his mark as a distinguished member of the Appropriations Committee, with special expertise in the areas of defense and agriculture. He also willingly undertook the significant but usually thankless task of serving on the Select Committee on Intelligence, where he was the ranking minority member when he retired. In all of his assignments, he gave a full measure of effort and became an authoritative source of knowledge.

In a quarter century of service to his community, State, and Nation, Kenneth left a proud legacy for all of us. We are all the richer for having known him.

To Kenneth's lovely wife, Kit, and all the Robinson family, I join my colleagues in extending heartfelt sympathy.

Goodbye, Kenneth, and thank you for everything.

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL].

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time and for bringing us together so that we can honor the memory of our departed colleague, Ken Robinson.

Ken and I came into the Congress together so long ago that I do not even like to remember it at this time. We were close from the very beginning. We stumbled around together, made mistakes together. He was fresh from his experience in the Virginia Assembly as I was from my local legislature.

Kit Robinson and Ken and Ruthie and I saw a fair amount of each other, and we will certainly always be grateful for the kindliness and friendliness that they showed to us, he and their entire family.

As I listen to this tribute to Ken Robinson I am struck by the fact that we are all using the same kinds of words to express our feelings about Ken and about the kind of virtues we believe he represents. I had written a note here that I should refer to him as a solid son of the Old Dominion, because he was one who clung to the traditional values of patriotism, family, home, and church, and they were good enough for him all through his life, and he never wavered in them. For those of us who came to him for counsel, he served as a great example, because whatever he told us, and he was not a preachy type, one had to ask him to be told, was the way he acted and the way he conducted his own affairs.

Mr. Speaker, there are not enough Ken Robinsons in this Congress, and there will never be enough. Would that all of us could have conducted ourselves the way that he did. There was no fancy footwork, no clever rhetoric, no flaming oratory, no dazzle or sizzle, just the same virtues that every Member who has risen today has described, solid, straight-ahead work, every day, based on those virtues and values that he followed all of his life.

Knowing Ken Robinson helped me to be a better Congressman. I think he has enriched the lives of all of the people here that come to pay him tribute.

Ruthie and I offer our deepest sympathies to Kit and the family. I can only say in conclusion that we were proud to know Ken Robinson and delighted that there are Americans who are willing to serve in this body of the stature and abilities of Ken Robinson.

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. OLIN].

Mr. OLIN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding and particularly for organizing this special order in honor of J. Kenneth Robinson. I appreciate the opportunity to say a few words about him tonight.

Mr. Speaker, I had the unusual experience of succeeding Ken Robinson in representing Rockingham County in the western part of Virginia, because in the 1980 census that county was shifted from the Seventh District into the Sixth. Ken had represented that county I think for as long as most people who live there could remember, and as I came in to run for that office 8 years ago, they all wondered why I was there, because they knew that Ken was their Congressman.

I can say that I got to know Ken quite well through that experience. He was the type of Congressman that they wanted. He had all of the qualities that others have been describing here tonight. As I think back, as I learned about him, he was down to Earth, he was the type of man that was a friend to his constituents. Obviously they trusted him and respected him. He truly represented what they believed.

After I got elected to Congress and came and joined him in the 98th Congress, I got to know him better personally. The people in Rockingham County still called on him even after I was elected in his place for that county, and he always let me know that he was coming into the county. He came and they wanted him, and I welcomed him and I learned from him. It was a humbling experience, but also an extremely valuable experience.

I found, as everyone has found, that Ken Robinson had those solid values in his life that we all aspire to have. There are very few of us who attain those values in the way that Ken did. We are talking about integrity and steadfastness, determination, solidness, everything of this nature, love of family and care for others. He had all of these qualities, and he was a very, very fine man. Those who knew him grieve at his passing.

But I can say this, and I say this to Kit and his family, and I know they know it, that it is a sad time, but at the same time Ken Robinson's life is certainly one that everyone who knows him can celebrate, because he had a fine, fine life. He was a great man.

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. DICKINSON].

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I, too, would like to add my voice to those who have spoken before in thanking the gentleman in the well for making this moment possible to give us the opportunity to pay our respects to a good friend and a great American.

I might say parenthetically that though he cannot be here today because he is no longer in the Congress, I am sure that everything I say would be echoed and added to by Jack Edwards if he were still in the Congress, because he was one of Ken's closest friends, and they worked side by side on the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee.

Mr. Speaker, on April 8, Palm Sunday, of this year, I lost a friend. J. Kenneth Robinson, who for 14 years served his State and his country and the Republican Party in this House of Representatives, died of cancer in his Winchester, VA, home.

My wife, Barbara, and I have spent many hours and traveled many miles with Ken and Kit. There were never two better companions.

To Kit, and to Ken's six surviving children, I offer my condolences. The passing of a good man is hardest on family.

Ken always knew the real importance of family, even rejecting an offer to run for Lieutenant Governor of Virginia in order to be with his son who was fatally ill with leukemia.

Of all Ken's qualities, one stands out in mind. He was solid and dependable. You knew where he stood and if he gave you his word you could take it to the bank.

I know Ken earned the respect and confidence of the men and women, Republican and Democrat, with whom he served in Congress on both the Committee on Appropriations, and the Select Intelligence Committee. Listen to their words about ken and you can get some measure of the man:

"Uncompromising integrity, unsurpassed industry."

"Quiet, thoughtful, religious."

"Brought stability and tough thinking in a time of ambiguity and the quick fix."

"Only spoke when * * * there was something of value to be said."

"Brings reason to issues * * * buried in controversy and ill feelings."

"Came here to serve and served his people well."

"A man of strength and uncommon skill as a legislator."

"True to his conservative beliefs."

"An outstanding leader and valued friend."

Ken Robinson made his mark because he focused on vitally important national issues. He believed in a balanced budget, strong national defense, and in an effective national intelligence gathering capability. Ken spent immeasurable energy achieving results in those areas and our country was better off because of that commitment.

I know that Ken left Congress with some frustration, but no regrets. He was never a man to look back.

As you might have expected, he continued to make a difference in his political party, his State and community.

He was selfless and without a crippling ego. He thought of others before he thought of himself. He put the good of others and this Nation before his own.

Ken Robinson was a special man. I am a better person for knowing him. This country is a better place for his having lived.

I've searched for words to sum up what I feel for Ken, and the best I've found are those written by Alexander Pope:

Statesman, yet friend to truth! of soul sincere,
In action faithful, and in honor clear;
Who broke no promise, served no private end,
Who gained no title, and who lost no friend.
—Moral Essays, 1720.

Ken, we will miss you.

I think Ken demonstrated a typical farmer's pride in his daily life, and in every appearance he was rightfully proud of his small part in providing all of America the most abundant food supply, the best quality, the safest at the cheapest price of any other country in the world. I think he was rightfully proud of that.

Kenneth's district, the Seventh District of Virginia, and my 17th District of Texas are similar in that the people are fiscally conservative and they expect their Representatives to be also.

Ken served his constituency extremely well in his 14 years.

With my colleagues here today, my wife, Cindy, and I extend our sincere condolences to the Robinson family on the passing of Kenneth. We hope that they will take great pride in knowing that Kenneth served his State and his country exceptionally well.

□ 1840

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM].

Mr. STENHOLM. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today also to pay tribute to J. Kenneth Robinson. Kenneth served in this body for 14 years. I had the privilege of serving with him for 6 of those years. During his time in Congress, Ken compiled a conservative, commonsense voting record and was especially supportive of an assertive foreign policy in Central America.

Ken was also known for being a southern gentleman in every sense of the word.

Kenneth and I had many things in common, including a deep and personal interest in agriculture. Ken, an orchardist and fruit packer from northern Virginia, I a cotton farmer from west Texas.

We pray God's comfort and blessings on his widow, Kit, and the entire family.

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. REGULA].

Mr. REGULA. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, Ken Robinson was a shining example of what service in the House of Representatives should be.

As a fellow colleague on Appropriations I had the special privilege of serving with Ken and watching the strong leadership he brought to his service on the committee. He was a role model for many of us.

Ken was always first a true patriot, always a steadying influence, always dedicated to what was best for the country he loved, always effective in his quiet way and always the epitome of what our Founding Fathers envisioned in a representative of the people.

The life of each of us has been enriched by serving with Ken and by the joy of our friendship with Ken and Kit.

Mary and I can only express our gratitude to Kit and to Ken's family for sharing the burdens that allowed Ken to serve our Nation so well with both his heart and his head.

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. PAYNE].

Mr. PAYNE of Virginia. I thank the gentleman very much for taking out this special order and for giving us an opportunity to remember Kenneth Robinson.

Mr. Speaker, my recollections of Kenneth Robinson are different from those of others who join in remembering him today. Ken was not my colleague in this body, for I have only been here 2 years, but he was my Congressman.

From the time I moved to Nelson County in 1973, until it was redistricted into the Fifth District in 1982, it was a matter of real pride for me that Kenneth Robinson represented me in this body. Let there be no question in anybody's mind, he represented all of us very, very well.

Then I knew Ken in another role, again not one traditionally known in this body. I knew him as the father of one of my employees, for his daughter, Keveney worked with us at Wintergreen. Through Keveney's eyes I saw a loving father and mother in Ken and Kit.

At the primary level of public service that is constituent-to-Congressman, there was never any question in anybody's mind but that we mattered to Ken.

Our concerns were his concerns and our interests were his interests.

But Ken's service went beyond just his district. He was, as you have heard here today, highly respected within this body and outside as well, for his interest and work in national security. Through his committee work and the work on the floor of the House, he worked tirelessly and successfully for the national interest.

Kenneth Robinson was a product of Thomas Jefferson's country. By his beliefs and quality of life, he is a worthy successor to Thomas Jefferson's legacy and his commitment to public service.

So I thank the gentleman very much, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SLAUGHTER], for providing all of us with an opportunity to pay homage to one of the best this body has ever known, J. Kenneth Robinson.

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. DICKS].

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, I too want to commend my friend and colleague from Virginia [Mr. SLAUGHTER] for taking this special order. I, too, had the great privilege of serving in the House of Representatives with Kenneth Robinson. He was a member of the Subcommittee on Defense Appropriations, and we served together for three terms. I found Ken to be one of the really hard-working and effective members of this particular subcommittee. He was knowledgeable, he did his homework, he cared deeply about the issues of defense and national security.

He was also respected by all of us because of his work on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence as well, and brought that expertise back to our subcommittee.

I can tell you that there were many issues during those 6 years where Ken Robinson and I were shoulder to shoulder trying to make certain that this country had a strong and adequate defense policy and the equipment and materials necessary to have that kind of effective policy.

□ 1850

We are all saddened by the loss of Ken. All Members who had a chance to know he and Kit had a great deal of fondness and affection for them. We can certainly understand the serious loss this is to his family.

However, I think his example for all Members who serve in Congress will remain there as a shining and bright one. Rarely have I seen any Member who cared more about the kind of public service than Ken Robinson. He was a friend. He gave me lots of good advice, and I think he served his district and his State well. But most importantly, he served our country.

It is people like Ken Robinson who for 40 years kept a bipartisan defense policy in this country which last year, I think, finally bore the victory that we all wanted to see. That is, that the values and the belief we all have in democracy and our way of government, of seeing the decline of the Warsaw Pact, seeing the changes even within the Soviet Union as people opted for democracy and our economic system. Ken Robinson was part of that long, bipartisan tradition of a strong defense, a credible defense, and a strong commitment to our American values.

I am pleased to be here this evening to be a part of this special order. Ken Robinson was a friend and a valued colleague. We all will miss him. However, we will honor him tonight for his great service in this institution and his great service for this country.

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. MINETA].

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, the fact that ours is such a rapidly changing world underscores the need we have as Americans to know what these changes will mean to the United States.

Our former colleague, Ken Robinson, knew this truth well.

As a member of the Select Committee on Intelligence, Ken was diligent, insightful and, above all, determined that the United States should have the best intelligence capability.

It was a pleasure for me to serve with Ken on the Intelligence Committee. He achieved the kind of respect and admiration reserved for very few Members from both sides of the aisle. I know he was no less esteemed by his fellow members of the Appropriations Committee, and the Virginia constituents he served so well from 1970 to 1984.

Mr. Speaker, when Ken Robinson died on April 8, 1990, he left his family, his State, and our Nation with the legacy of a fine Representative. His absence will be deeply felt, and I extend my most sincere sympathies to Ken's wife, Kit, and the other members of the Robinson family.

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the remarks of the gentleman from California.

Now, I would like to read into the RECORD remarks prepared by the distinguished senior Senator from Virginia, Senator WARNER. It is a tribute to the Honorable J. Kenneth Robinson, and reads as follows:

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to my long-time friend, the Former Congressman from Virginia's Seventh District J. Kenneth Robinson who died on April 8. Today Kenneth's wife and other members of his family are visiting the House Chamber so I am very pleased to join my House colleagues in a special order to honor this great Virginian.

Many others will join today in citing the lengthy and distinguished accomplisments which this Virginian achieved in his lifetime. My participation goes to three areas Robinson's life which were very meaningful to me.

First, Ken was born into an apple-growing family in Winchester, the heart of Virgina's apple and peach country. He graduated from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University with a degree in horticulture and returned home to run the family orchard business. He truly loved the land, what it provides, and the people who work so hard in agribusiness.

After a distinguished career in the General Assembly of Virginia, as a Senator, Kenneth was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1971 where he served until 1985. During this time, he was my Congressman as I lived in the seventh disrict. He was my close friend; he was a big brother as I started my legislative duties.

He was a member of the House Appropriations Committee where he served on the Subcommittee on Agriculture, Rural Development and Related Agencies. Following my election to the United States Senate in 1978, I consulted with Ken Robinson on all issues of importance to Virginia's agricultural community, for he and I were two of the few in the Virginia delegation who lived on working farms.

Together we secured Federal assistance to start a veterinary school at his alma mater of VPI. This was of great significance to the equine interests of Virginia.

When a California wine-grape grower's association asked that their growing area be designated as the "Shenandoah Valley Viticultural Area" Ken Robinson led the opposition. The Virginia delegation prevailed and the Federal Government gave Virginia interests the paramount right to use the name "Shenandoah Valley" in the context of our wine-producing industry.

Ken served in the United States Army with distinction during World War II and attained the rank of Major. He was deeply committed to a strong national defense and served on the Defense Appropriations Committee and the House Intelligence Committee. As a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee and the Armed Services Committee, I worked closely with him in these areas. As we witness the transformation of communist regimes around the world today, we should thank President Reagan, President Bush and members of Congress such as Ken Robinson who dedicated their careers to the defense of this country and the nurturing of democracy and freedom abroad.

Lastly, in the finest Virginia tradition Kenneth Robinson was a strong patriot of the highest integrity. He dedicated his life to the service of the Commonweath and the nation which he loved so dearly. He was a family man who cherished his wife of 43 years. Kathryn Rankin Robinson, and their six children and seven grandchildren.

He was a Virginia statesman in the tradition of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, and Patrick Henry. As the Richmond Times Dispatch stated in an editorial when he died, "Rep. Robinson gained his popularity the old-fashioned way through indefatigable constituent service . . . and through strict adherence to principle."

"God grant that men of principle shall always be our principal men." This quote attributed to Thomas Jefferson is so appropriate for Kenneth Robinson.

Today in the Senate I introduced, along with Senator Robb, legislation identical to that introduced in the House of Representatives by Representative Slaughter, to name the Federal building in Winchester, Virginia the "J. Kenneth Robinson Postal Building".

I extend my deepest sympathies today to Kit Robinson and to the other members of the Robinson family as well as my gratitude to them for sharing Kenneth's talents and time so generously with our great Commonwealth and nation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAZZOLI].

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I am very pleased and gratified that my friend took this special order for our late colleague and late friend, Ken Robinson.

Earlier tonight I was watching in my office, and I could not help but be struck by what the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. BYRON] said in which she numbered or named the individuals who came to Congress with Ken. It happens that I was in that class 20 years ago. It seems like a very long time, and yet in some respects it seems like only yesterday. However, I do recall in that very speech, 20 years ago, I stood with our then little daughter, who is now 26 years old, but stood with our little daughter to take the oath of office from Carl Albert.

On the other side of the aisle was my friend, Ken Robinson. We did not serve together on the Committee on Appropriations, but it was my pleasure to serve with Ken on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence.

For many years, Ken and I served together as colleagues, and eventually as the gentleman from Virginia has said, he became the ranking Republican member of that important committee, working closely with our colleague, Ed Boland, who has retired and left the Congress. I was always struck by Ken's devotion to this Nation. It permeated his very being. He loved America. He loved his Commonwealth of Virginia, but he loved the idea of public service.

While we might have had some disagreements on some of the issues, and we might have perhaps a different voting record, it was a great privilege and honor for me to serve with Ken. When the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SLAUGHTER] shared with Members the bad news and sad news of Ken's death, all Members in the class of the 92d Congress, and all Members who have ever served with Ken, certainly were deeply grieved by that news.

□ 1900

Mr. Speaker, I again want to thank the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SLAUGHTER] for having taken this special order. I salute Ken and his memory. I extend condolences to the family members who have joined us in the Chamber tonight and express to them the view that they certainly have a wonderful legacy in what Ken did in the halls at Richmond and in the Halls here in Washington.

Again, Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SLAUGHTER] and I appreciate his taking this special order.

Mr. Speaker, I submit for printing in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD my extension of remarks on this subject which appeared in the RECORD on April 30, 1990, as follows:

REMEMBERING A FORMER COLLEAGUE: J. KENNETH ROBINSON

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor former Virginia Congressman, J. Kenneth Robinson, who passed away on April 8.

I entered the House with Ken in 1971, and I always considered him a friend as well as a colleague, I had the fortune to serve with Ken on the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence for several years.

After a distinguished career in the Army during World War II, Ken served in the Virginia State Senate until he was elected to Congress in 1970. Ken also served with distinction on the House Appropriations Committee, becoming the fifth ranking Republican before his retirement in 1985.

He was raised in Frederick County, VA, and his district included the northern suburbs of Richmond, to the Shenandoah Mountains and Winchester.

Ken also distinguished himself in the field of agriculture. He graduated from Virginia Polytechnic Institute with a degree in horticulture. He helped run his family orchard business and also was past president of the Virginia Horticulture Society and the Frederick County Fruit Growers. While on the Appropriations Committee, Ken worked hard on agricultural issues to best serve his district's needs.

I extend my sympathies to his wife, Kathryn and his children and family. He will be deeply missed by all of us here in the House.

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his remarks.

Mr. Speaker, as we all know, J. Kenneth Robinson left a legacy of service and accomplishment to this Nation that few men in longer lifetimes have been able to approach. His 4 years as an infantry man in World War II, his 6 years as a senator in the Virginia General Assembly, in addition to his 14 years as a U.S. Representative serving the Seventh Congressional District of Virginia, amount to nearly 25 years of service to Virginia and to our country.

Kenneth Robinson touched many lives. Newspapers throughout the Seventh Congressional District, and beyond, carried lengthy reports about Kenneth's death. They did precisely because so many people, all over Virginia, were touched by the news. Roughly 15 different publications carried stories that more closely resembled eulogies. Many of those papers carried more than one article about Kenneth and some honored him by dedicating valuable space and commentary on their editorial pages.

Another indication of Kenneth's enduring memory is Virginia Senate Resolution 37. Last Friday, I received a letter from State Senator Bill Truban. Senator Truban informed me that the Virginia Senate has honored Kenneth in Resolution 37 which passed during the special session on April 18, 1990. I think it is a true tribute to Kenneth that 20 years after his service in the Virginia Senate he is still fondly remembered and was accordingly honored with this legislation. At this juncture I would like to quote a small section from the resolution:

Resolved by the Senate, That this body mourns the passing of a former esteemed colleague, J. Kenneth Robinson, whose selfless public service and lifetime community involvement will long be remembered in the Commonwealth.

Also, Mr. Speaker, I enter in the RECORD Virginia Senate Resolution 37, as follows:

SENATE RESOLUTION NO. 37

Whereas, J. Kenneth Robinson, who represented Virginia's 7th District in the House of Representatives from 1971 to 1985, died April 8, 1990, at his home in Winchester; and

Whereas, Kenneth Robinson, a Winchester native born into an apple-growing family, graduated from the Virginia Polytechnic Institute with a degree in horticulture in 1937 and shortly thereafter joined the family orchard business; and

Whereas, during World War II, Kenneth Robinson served his country honorably, attaining the rank of major in the United States Army; and

Whereas, in 1965 Kenneth Robinson began his political career, winning election to the Virginia Senate seat vacated by Harry F. Byrd, Jr.; and

Whereas, after resigning his Senate seat in 1970, Kenneth Robinson won election to the House of Representatives, where he served Virginia's rural interests as the ranking Republican on the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and on its subcommittees on agriculture, rural development and related agencies and defense; and

Whereas, Kenneth Robinson, whose name became synonymous with fiscal responsibility and a strong defense, served on the House Defense Appropriations Committee's budget authorization subcommittee and became the fifth-ranking Republican and the only Virginia member on the House Appropriations Committee; and

Whereas, during his fourteen years of service in Congress, Kenneth Robinson was held in high bipartisan esteem and was most remembered by his colleagues for his commitment to a balanced budget, a smaller federal bureaucracy, and a stronger national defense; and

Whereas, in 1983 Kenneth Robinson, a supporter of covert aid to anti-communist guerrillas, played a key role in the defeat of a proposed cutoff of covert aid to Nicaraguan guerrillas fighting the Sandinista government; and

Whereas, throughout his political career, Kenneth Robinson enjoyed popular support from his constituents who elected him the seven times he ran for national office, six of those times by sixty percent or more of the total vote; and

Whereas, Kenneth Robinson, a leader deeply concerned with the welfare of others, was the instrumental force in obtaining federal financing for the state's first housing project for the deaf in Charlottesville; and

Whereas, in addition, Kenneth Robinson fought hard to give Virginia interests the paramount right to use the name Shenandoah Valley in the context of a wine-producing region after a California wine-grape growers' association asked the federal government to designate their growing area as the Shenandoah Valley Viticultural Area; and

Whereas, after leaving politics in 1985 because of health problems, Kenneth Robinson devoted the rest of his life to family business interests in the Winchester area; and

Whereas, Kenneth Robinson, an active member of his community, served as president of the Virginia Horticultural Society, the Eastern Fruit Growers Cooperative, the Winchester Apple Blossom Festival, and the Winchester Rotary Club; vice-chairman of the Potomac River Basin Committee; a member of the Society of Friends in Winchester as well as a member of the Dulles International Airport Development Commission in the 1960's and early 1970's: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate, That this body mourns the passing of a former esteemed colleague, J. Kenneth Robinson, whose selfless public service and lifetime community involvement will long be remembered in the Commonwealth; and, be it

Resolved further, That the Clerk of the Senate prepare a copy of this resolution for presentation to Mrs. Kathryn Rankin Robinson as a token of the Senate's admiration and appreciation of the legacy of service and accomplishments left by J. Kenneth Robinson to this nation.

Mr. Speaker, I thought it would be appropriate here, this afternoon, to continue my remarks with reference to what Members of the House of Representatives had to say on the occasion of Ken's retirement back in 1984. I have always thought that some of the most valuable and honest reflections are those rendered by one's peers. Your peers know you and your work far better than most observers or critics. They know your weaknesses and your strengths. The overwhelming tribute paid to Kenneth Robinson by men he served with in this House of Representatives for 14 years is testament to what kind of man Kenneth was.

I want to take a minute here to reflect on what a few of these men and women said. On the occasion of his retirement, nearly 40 Members of the House, representing States from Florida to California, from New York to Nevada, from Illinois to Louisiana, rose to speak about Kenneth and what his presence meant to the House.

Kenneth Robinson was known as "the rock" or "the Rock of Gibraltar." A former, distinguished House minority leader, Representative John Rhodes, gave Kenneth this nickname because "his deep seated beliefs in the traditions and values of this great Nation were always at the forefront of his service to the House. Thus, he was dependable 'like the Rock of Gibraltar'." These were words Congressman LIVINGSTON delivered on the floor of the House as recorded in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on October 9, 1984. Congressman LIVINGSTON went on to say:

[Kenneth] never hesitated to back programs or policies which put the interest of his country first—before any other priorities; and he likewise supported the policy of standing by our friends—no matter what the odds.

Kenneth Robinson was a man of immense character who never stuck his finger to the wind. He followed his heart and his head. His values and principles were as much a part of him as his vast intellect. Former Congressman Bill Whitehurst, who at the time of Kenneth's retirement was the dean of the Virginia congressional delegation said:

Although I never served in the Virginia General Assembly, I knew of Ken Robinson's reputation when he was a member of that body. He was known then as a person of uncompromising integrity and unsurpassed industry. These virtues he brought with him to this body, and it was because of them that he was recognized early on as a particularly unique and valuable colleague.

Congressman Whitehurst went on to say:

It is [Ken's] counsel that is sought when there is uncertainty with respect to an amendment or vote. * * * I cannot recall in the past (16 years) any colleagues of mine whose opinion in my delegation was so highly valued.

Kenneth Robinson, however, enjoyed the respect of Republicans and Democrats alike. The Richmond News Leader wrote that "few congressmen ever have enjoyed such bipartisan esteem."

Kenneth was respected because he was no grandstander. Defending our Nation and keeping the economy strong were his only legislative priorities and the intensity of that commitment combined with his unmatched endurance and capacity for work left people respecting rather than questioning him. Kenneth Robinson was above partisan political gamesmanship.

The respect Kenneth commanded was also evidenced by the critically important committee assignments he held. Kenneth was the only member of the Virginia congressional delegation to have a seat on the Appropriations Committee where he also served as the second ranking member of the Defense Subcommittee and as an influential member of the Agriculture, Rural Development and Related Agencies Subcommittee. Ken was also ranking minority member of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence.

Perhaps the most remarkable words of respect ever delivered about Kenneth were delivered by a man who, on a number of issues, could not have been more philosophically opposed to many things Kenneth stood for. The chairman of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, Massachusetts Democrat Edward Boland, stated the following:

Too few appreciate what Ken Robinson has done for the security of this country through his service on the committee. Too few appreciate the improvements that he has helped to ensure in our intelligence capabilities. Too few will ever realize the enormous and debilitating workload that Ken has assumed in his service on the Intelligence Committee. Mr. Speaker, there is no member of the committee who has worked harder. There is no member—including the chairman—who can claim as thorough a knowledge and as a sound a judgment in reviewing and overseeing intelligence matters. I have said so often but to too few that Ken Robinson is the rock on which the intelligence committee has endured. * * * His dedication to fiscally sound, fair, bipartisan solutions has made the task of reaching agreement on many complex issues so much more achievable than it other wise would have been. * * * I know of no other Member of this body whom I could extend these accolades. * * * First and last, he is and will always be a gentleman of the highest order.

Clearly, Kenneth Robinson enjoyed great respect and admiration. But like everything else in his life he earned the respect, the admiration, the love, and the devotion so many people felt for him. He earned it by giving so much of himself in every aspect of his life. Kenneth lived life to the fullest because he lived it with honest intensity.

Before I begin to close, I want to bring to everyone's attention a piece of legislation that I introduced earlier today in concert with the entire Virginia delegation. This morning we introduced as a final, and appropriately lasting, tribute the designation of the Winchester Post Office as the "J. Kenneth Robinson Postal Building." Senators WARNER and ROBB have introduced identical legislation on the Senate side.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to acknowledge the fact that former Congressmen John O. Marsh, Jr., and Al Cederberg are with us. Also, both of the distinguished Senators from Virginia are here: Senator JOHN WARNER and Senator CHARLES ROBB. It is good to see you both.

Mr. Speaker, I have a number of letters and communications that I believe all who have participated in this ceremony will value greatly, and I want to point out several, including a number of newspaper articles, with their comments.

Mr. Speaker, I include here editorials from the Richmond Times-Dispatch and the Winchester Star as follows:

[From the Richmond Times-Dispatch, Apr. 12, 1990]

J. KENNETH ROBINSON

He was one of the best.

J. Kenneth Robinson, a native of Winchester who grew up working in his family's apple-growing business, was elected to Congress in 1970 on a promise to work for fiscal restraint, limited government and strong national defense. In representing the people of the rural-oriented 7th District, he never strayed from those bedrock principles before retiring in 1985.

With good reason, many critics of Congress lament how it has become next to impossible to oust an entrenched incumbent, given the elaborate system of protective benefits congressmen have constructed for themselves. But Ken Robinson was one who earned his return ticket to office. He did so seven times, and only once—in 1974—did his share of the vote fall below 60 percent. And that was at the height of the Watergate scandal when the sins of the Nixon administration were being visited upon some Republicans like Mr. Robinson, even though in his case there was never the faintest whiff of impropriety.

Representative Robinson gained his popularity the old-fashioned way: through indefatigable constituent service to a district that sprawls from Fredericksburg to the east and Hanover County to the south and that covers much of the Shenandoah Valley in the north and west. And through strict adherence to principle.

As the ranking Republican on the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, he became one of the leading advocates in the House of covert aid for the anti-communist rebels fighting the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua. The recent triumph of democracy in that country is due in no small part to the steadfastness of people like J. Kenneth Robinson. As a member of the House Appropriations Committee, he was also a voice, albeit often a lonely one, for fiscal sanity.

Former Second District Representative G. William Whitehurst once said of Mr. Robinson: "It is his counsel that is sought when there is uncertainty with respect to an amendment or vote on a particular piece of legislation. I cannot recall in the past any colleague of mine whose opinion was so highly valued."

Mr. Robinson, who died this week at his Frederick County home at the age of 73, leaves a legacy of public service that will be remembered and that should be emulated.

[From the Winchester Star, Apr. 10, 1990]

J. KENNETH ROBINSON: A GREAT LOSS

While putting together successful careers in two fields—as politician and as an orchardist—J. Kenneth Robinson earned a reputation as that rarest of politicians, a man able to work with members of the opposition party as well as his own. He also earned a reputation as a man deserving respect.

Mr. Robinson, who died this past weekend at the age of 73, was a native of Frederick County and a graduate of Handley High School who represented this area in the Virginia Senate and the U.S. House of Representatives. He retired from politics in 1985 after serving seven terms in the House.

Mr. Robinson, who held a bachelor's degree in horticulture from Virginia Polytechnic Institute, also served in the U.S. Army during World War II, rising to the rank of major.

John O. Marsh Jr., former Congressman from the Seventh District and former Secretary of the Army, called Mr. Robinson's death "a great loss, not only to the community, but to the State and the Nation.

Harry F. Byrd Jr., whose appointment to the U.S. Senate in 1965 led to Mr. Robinson's appointment to the Virginia Senate, called Mr. Robinson "an outstanding public official . . . He gave dedicated and unselfish service to his constituency . . . "

Representative D. French Slaughter Jr., who won election to Congress after Mr. Robinson's retirement, said his predecessor "served our country with uncommon distinction."

Mr. Robinson's death is, indeed, a great loss. Rare is the politician who can overcome partisanship in order to do his duty. Rarer still is the politician who follows the path envisioned by the Founding Fathers—a man who serves his constituents well and then leaves the political arena of his own volition, a true citizen-legislator. In fact, former Representative William Wampler once called Mr. Robinson "the kind of person our forefathers had in mind" to run the Nation's Government.

That's high praise, but praise J. Kenneth Robinson richly deserved.

Mr. Speaker, I also have a tribute and letter from Mr. Edward Boland, a former Member of Congress who served as the chairman of the Intelligence Committee with Kenneth. Their association and service together on that committee lasted several years.

That material is as follows:

STATEMENT OF FORMER CONGRESSMAN EDWARD P. BOLAND, AS SUBMITTED BY CONGRESSMAN RICHARD E. NEAL OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Mr. Speaker, it is my honor, as a former Member of this House, to take part today in this tribute for our late colleague, J. Kenneth Robinson of Virginia. For 14 years the people of the Winchester area were fortunate to be represented in this great body by J. Kenneth Robinson.

I was fortunate to work closely with Ken on a number of occasions over the years we served together. We served together, first on the Appropriations Committee and then on the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. For a time we had offices across the hall from each other in the Rayburn Building. Running into Ken in the hall as we went to vote on the Floor gave me a great opportunity to get to know him and appreciate his personality. Ken was a very friendly person, easy to know and a joy to be around. Although we sometimes disagreed on policy, there was never a moment when that disagreement affected our personal relationship. I'm sure that any member who served with Ken would agree. He had wit, intelligence, and know-how to be a success on Capitol Hill. I always felt that Ken was one of the finest spokesmen the Republicans had on complex appropriations matters and sensitive national security issues.

On the Appropriations Committee, Ken Robinson could be counted on to study each funding request closely and make an informed decision on how to best spend our federal dollars. Ken kept an eye on the fiscal bottom line, but had a real feel for our country's needs. I believe he was one of the finest members that vital committee has ever had. I noticed the loss of his expertise immediately in the 99th Congress after he had retired.

I cannot say enough about Ken Robinson's work on the House Intelligence Committee. The sensitive mission of this important committee was clear to him from the moment of its creation. Service on the House Intelligence Committee is a responsibility that cannot be taken lightly. Ken had a keen understanding of the complex issues that came before this committee in the difficult days of this country's involvement in several unsettled regions of the world. As the ranking Republican, his counsel and cooperation were invaluable to me. Ken Robinson never lost sight of the long-range foreign policy goals of America, nor of the necessity for effective intelligence collection and analysis as essential means of furthering those goals. He was acutely aware as well of the need for the discretion and secrecy that is necessarily a part of service on the Intelligence Committee.

Mr. Speaker, it was with great sadness that I learned that J. Kenneth Robinson had passed away. It is regrettable that he did not get the opportunity to enjoy a longer retirement. I am sorry that I cannot be on Capitol Hill personally to take part in this tribute organized by Ken's able successor, D. French Slaughter, Jr. I wish to express to Ken's widow Kit and his children present, Jim, Sally, and Patrick the great affection and respect I had for Ken. He was a good and decent man, who made many significant contributions to his Nation, and he will be greatly missed.

Mr. Speaker, there is a statement here from the Secretary of the Interior, Manuel Lujan, Jr., that I wish to include. Mr. Lujan has left a message here that is very valuable and very much in the same vein of those that we have submitted before.

Mr. Speaker, that message of tribute reads as follows:

MESSAGE OF TRIBUTE IN HONOR OF HON. J. KENNETH ROBINSON FROM SECRETARY MANUEL LUJAN, JR.

Although we are all saddened by the passing of Ken Robinson, we are greateful for the memories that remain of a true friend and loyal colleague.

I had the privilege of serving with Congressman Robinson during his 14-year tenure in the U.S. House of Representatives, from 1971, until his retirement in 1985. He was a true leader in the Congress—not because he rose to speak on every matter before the House, but because when he did speak his words were seriously considered. Agriculture and national defense issues were certainly among his top concerns, but Congressman Robinson also had an ability to make the problem of each of his Virginia constituents of vital import.

Congressman Robinson was a devoted Republican, who was loyal to the Presidents of his party whenever he could agree with their position in good conscience. But, he was first and foremost a quiet patriot, who put the best interests of his beloved Country above all else.

I also remember Ken Robinson as a friend. He enjoyed gathering with others in the Capitol Hill Club grill, to grab a bite, have a drink, and converse about a wide range of topics. Ken Robinson was indeed a true Virginia gentleman.

Although it has been a number of years since Ken Robinson walked off the floor of the House for his last time, his memory will always be an inspiration for those who serve our Country.

[From the Richmond News Leader, Apr. 10, 1990]

J. KENNETH ROBINSON

Republican and Democrat alike agreed that J. Kenneth Robinson was a rock of courage and integrity. When Robinson, a Republican, retired as Seventh District Congressman in 1984, former GOP minority leader John Rhodes called him the Rock of Gibraltar. Massachusetts Democrat Edward Boland joined in the tribute, identifying him as "the rock on which the Intelligence Committee has endured." On Sunday, death claimed Robinson at age 73.

Robinson epitomized moderation. He won election to the House in 1970 on a platform dedicated to fiscal restraint and military preparedness. During his seven terms, he never voted to spend the taxpayers' money unwisely, never voted to make the nation less secure, never voted to weaken its front line of defense.

He worked quietly and without regard for personal glory, shunning vain theatrics—the mindless posturing that wins headlines and 15 seconds on the nightly news—for solid accomplishment. In a Washington world where a friendly slap on the shoulder often precedes a stab in the back, Robinson's word was his bond. His was the example to which all politicians ought to aspire.

When he left Congress, Robinson returned to Winchester, to the apple orchards at Stony Acres that he loved to tend. Virginia has lost a mighty defender and a cherished friend. Although his passing brings sorrow, it also inspires comfort—joy for the good life he led, and gratitude for his rock-like commitment to the Nation and state he served so well.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say that it is really to our benefit that we were able to have this ceremony. It has been a wonderful and inspiring tribute.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank everyone who has made the time to be here this evening. I also want to thank those who have generously contributed written remarks to remember and honor J. Kenneth Robinson. He was a distinguished statesman and a great man. We will all miss him. To the family and close friends, I am very happy that you could all be here this evening.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SLAUGHTER] for requesting this time today to honor our former colleague, J. Kenneth Robinson of Virginia.

Ken's district in central Virginia was not too far from my own district in east Tennessee, and on a number of occasions we worked together to find solutions to regional problems.

I was fortunate to serve with Ken during the entire 14 years of his tenure in this House. He was always a gentleman, soft-spoken, yet firm in his convictions. He was trusted and respected by his colleagues. This trust was demonstrated when Ken was designated to serve for his last 6 years in the House as the ranking Republican member of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. In this position he was entrusted with the Nation's most sensitive secrets, and had the responsibility to oversee our Nation's intelligence gathering agencies. He did the job and he did it well.

He also played a key role as a member of the Committee on Appropriations. As a member of the Subcommittee on Defense he worked to ensure that this Nation's defenses remained strong. As a member of the Subcommittee on Agriculture, he was able to do much to improve the lives of family farmers in his district and across the Nation.

His quiet strength was a great asset to the Nation when he was a Member of this body.

On a more personal level, I valued his friendship highly, and I will miss him.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor a former colleague, J. Kenneth Robinson, who passed away on April 8, 1990.

As a fellow member of the Appropriations Committee, I always respected Kenneth's views and judged him to be a caring and qualified legislator. He was certainly the kind of congressman every constituent would be proud to have represent him. J. Kenneth Robinson will be missed by all those Members of Congress who were privileged to serve their Nation with him. At this difficult time, I should like to give Kenneth's family my warmest regards.

Mr. HUTTO. Mr. Speaker. I greatly appreciate our colleague Congressman FRENCH SLAUGHTER for making the arrangements for this special order to honor our former colleague Ken Robinson who passed away on April 8. Although I did not know Ken Robinson as well as some of my other colleagues, I did have the greatest respect and admiration for him. In my limited contact with Congressman Robinson I got the distinct impression that he was an individual of high integrity who was serving his district in a dedicated manner.

As a member of the House Armed Services Committee I had the opportunity from time to time to interface with Ken on matters relating to our national defense. I always found him to be very courteous, attentive, and helpful in our discussions. He was much admired by members of both parties and did indeed have many friends in this Body.

Ken Robinson's work in this Body will long be remembered. He is missed by not only his wife of 43 years, Kit, and other members of this family, but by his many friends.

I wish to extend my deepest sympathy to Ken Robinson's family. It is most fitting that we honor this former colleague by recognizing his outstanding contributions to our Nation.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a former House colleague and good friend, J. Kenneth Robinson. In looking back over my long career in this body, Kenneth stands out as a leader who served his Virginia district with great distinction.

In 1965, J. Kenneth Robinson assumed the Virginia State Senate seat held by Harry Floyd Byrd, Jr. He was subsequently reelected to this same seat in 1967. After serving in the Virginia State Legislature from 1965 to 1970, Kenneth was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives from the Seventh Congressional District of Virginia.

J. Kenneth Robinson was appointed as a charter member of the House Select Committee on Intelligence and rose in seniority to become the ranking Republican of this important committee.

Kenneth's contribution to the debate on national security issues was invaluable during sometimes difficult episodes in American history.

Kenneth also played a significant role in his position as a member of the House Appropriations Committee. Before he stepped down in January 1985, Kenneth had become the fifth ranking Republican on Appropriations after 14 years of dedicated service.

Finally, I would like to commend my colleague from Virginia—Representative FRENCH SLAUGHTER—for holding this special order to honor J. Kenneth Robinson. My wife, Nancy, and I would like to send our heartfelt condolences to Kenneth's wife, Kathryn, and his entire family.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, may I first of all thank the gentleman from Virginia for calling this special order in honor of our late colleague, J. Kenneth Robinson. I know I speak for every Member who served with Ken when I say that we learned of his death with great sadness.

When I came to the House in 1979 as a freshman Member, Ken Robinson was one of the first senior Members whom I came to know and admire. Ken had an unpretentious dignity about him, and he was a man who always thought before he spoke. For new Members of Congress, he was an outstanding role model.

But the most important thing I remember about Ken is that he always put the national interest first—I mean first and I mean always. He was a true patriot. Ken represented the Seventh District in Virginia, a district which gave the Nation three of our greatest Presidents—Jefferson, Madison, and Monroe. Ken was proud to represent a district so rich in history. And the responsibility of being true to such a legacy was reflected in Ken's unswerving commitment to the national interest.

Our former minority leader, John Rhodes, used to call Ken the "Rock of Gibraltar." I cannot think of a more appropriate metaphor to describe Ken's principled conservatism, his loyalty, his dignity, and his patriotism. He was, indeed, a tower of strength.

But I have to be candid, Mr. Speaker, and say that there was one important subject on which Ken and I had a sharp difference of opinion: namely, apples. You see, Ken was involved in his family's orchard business before he began devoting full time to public service. And it just so happens that I represent the apple-growing region in upstate New York.

Ken and I had a friendly argument for years about which State grows better apples. I know we have Members who will argue on behalf of Washington and Michigan, but Ken and I knew it all comes down to a choice between New York and Virginia. We never settled the argument, needless to say.

But I have greatly missed Ken since his retirement from Congress 5 years ago. Whatever suffering his last illness may have imposed, he must surely have had the consolation of knowing that his life was a life well spent.

And so again I thank the gentleman from Virginia for giving us this opportunity to pay tribute to Ken Robinson, our friend and colleague. To Ken's family, who is with us today, may I wish Godspeed. Your great loss is ours as well.

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, his colleagues here in the House of Representatives, and the Nation, lost a friend last month when Ken Robinson passed away.

He was a pleasant person who always seemed to wear a smile when greeting a friend. Ken was a hard worker and as a Member of the House of Representatives he performed an outstanding job for 14 years for his constituents in the Seventh District of Virginia and for the citizens of his country. He had served his country before he entered Congress. During World War II he was an infantryman for 4 years, rising to the rank of major.

He bagan his legislative career in the Virginia State Senate, where he served from 1965 until he resigned following his election to Congress in 1970.

Ken left an indelible mark before he stepped down, forced to retire by poor health and not run for what would have been certain reelection in 1984.

When he moved into retirement in January 1985, Ken was fifth-ranking Republican on the House Appropriations Committee. Over the years he had concentrated on the House Appropriations Committee. Over the years he had concentrated on budgetary matters in the fields of agriculture, defense, and intelligence. He was known as a fiscal conservative who fought for a strong defense. He was an authority on the Nation's intelligence matters and when he left the House he was ranking Republican on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence.

May all of us serve our country as well in this House of Representatives as our friend and colleague J. Kenneth Robinson so ably did.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, along with fellow colleagues I was saddened to learn of the recent death of our dear friend and former colleague J. Kenneth Robinson, and it is with sadness that I rise to speak.

It is not easy to condense 14 years of service into a few brief moments, and I know that all of us will remember Kenneth Robinson in different ways, but I want to take this moment to say that the man I met several years after my first coming to these esteemed halls was someone who worked hard for his district and for the State of Virginia. He is also a man who because of his committee responsibilities cut a broader figure with national international responsibility.

Kenneth Robinson is a man who earned our respect and friendship, and I am honored to have known him. I will always remember him as a friend and I will miss him.

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank Congressman SLAUGHTER for his efforts to organize this tribute to a very special American—J. Kenneth Robinson. I was proud to serve with Ken during his seven terms in the U.S. House of Representatives and to work with him on the Appropriations Committee and Defense Subcommittee.

J. Kenneth Robinson represented the very best of this institution. He was a rock of integrity, a man who truly took this job to heart and a Virginia gentleman in the finest sense of the term. I am honored to have been able to count him as my friend. My deepest sympathies go to his wife, Kit, and their children.

The Nation lost a great American and outstanding public servant with Ken's passing. As a member of the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee and the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, Ken wrestled with some of the most difficult problems the country faced. He put the best interests of this country first, and played a large role in the strengthening of our national security and U.S. intelligence activities.

Ken was also tireless in his efforts on behalf of the best interests of his constituents. He represented a congressional district that was the home of Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, and James Monroe. He had a strong sense of history and a dedication to public service in the best tradition of his region of the country.

Whether he was arguing an issue on the House floor, pursuing Virginia interests in a committee room, meeting with rebels in Afghanistan, or going to bat for his own constituents, Ken always carried out his duties with conviction, dedication, and effectiveness. His voice was one that was always influential and respected.

I have missed having him in the Congress for the past 5 years, and I join with my colleagues today in mourning his death and celebrating his life.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, I want to join my colleagues today in remembering a fine public servant, J. Kenneth Robinson. My sympathies go out to his wife Kit and his children on their loss. We will all miss him as a friend.

I had the good fortune to serve 6 years with Ken Robinson on the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee. On that panel, Ken epitomized the bipartisan, cooperative approach that has long been its trademark. While we on occasion disagreed on specific issues, we both shared the desire to provide America with the defense forces needed to meet the challenges of the world. And as much as any Member Ken also recognized his responsibilities to the taxpayers to make certain that we provided those capabilities in a cost-effective manner. There was no greater champion at ferreting out waste and inefficiencies in the Pentagon than Ken Robinson.

I am sure that Ken shared the satisfaction that we all have in seeing world developments confirm the fundamental soundness of free societies, and he can rest in the satisfaction that he played no small role in making this possible. But I also expect that he would share my concern that we not assume that the world is suddenly free from danger.

The legacy of Ken Robinson lives on with all of us who knew him not just as a legislator, but as a honest and decent man who always did his best to represent the interests of his Virginia constituents and the Nation as a whole.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Speaker, the shadow of Congressman Ken Robinson of Virginia, the "Rock of Gibraltar" of this House for so many years, lies long over this Congress and this Nation, as we remember his years of service and mourn his death.

Many Members of Congress will stand today and speak the praises of Ken Robinson, and I am honored to be among them. We will speak of how he held his convictions steadfast. His gentlemanly ways. His distinguished service on the Appropriations Committee, and on the Select Committee on Intelligence.

I wonder today, though, what, or who, we would hear on this floor if the speakers were not limited only to the Members of the House of Representatives.

I believe we would hear the voices of a great many people. His colleagues in the orchard business. His friends from the Virginia State Senate. His constituents. Members of the American intelligence community, all over the world. Perhaps even from among the newly free people all over the world, from Central America to Eastern Europe, we might hear people giving thanks for Ken Robinson, who was their "Rock of Gibraltar" for the cause of their freedom.

I wish most, however, that we could hear the words of Ken's adoring and lovely wife Kit, his bride of 43 years.

We, her beloved husband's colleagues in Congress, might hear from her a tale from the campaign trail. From all those long days and nights, driving mile after mile on the rolling Virginia highways, in that old VW bus she called "Kit's Caboodle."

Then again, Kit might not talk about her husband the Congressman at all. She might prefer a story about what a loving father Ken was to their seven children—Patrick, James, and John; Keveney, Helen, and Sallie; and Kenneth, junior, who passed from this Earth before his father.

I had the honor of serving in the House Appropriations Committee with Ken. His tenure on the committee was drawing to a close, while mine was beginning.

He will always be remembered as one of the finest men ever to serve on the committee, and in this House. He loved his country, and he loved the people of the Blue Ridge and Shenandoah Valley. Every conviction he ever held, every decision he ever made, every vote he ever cast, was based on what was right for this Nation, and the people who were privileged to have him in their service.

Congressman J. Kenneth Robinson, the gentleman from Virginia, was an outstanding Member of this House of Representatives.

My sympathies go out to Kit today, to the Robinson children and grandchildren, and to the extended Robinson family all across the Nation. While we, the Members of this House, mourn the passing of a colleague—you mourn for a fine husband, father, grandfather, and brother.

May the fruits of his life continue to bear seed, and yield a bountiful harvest for the generations to come.

Mr. SCHULZE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join my colleagues in tribute to the late J. Kenneth Robinson, a distinguished public servant and friend who served this House from 1970 to 1984. He died April 8, at the age of 73.

Ken was born in 1916 in Frederick County, VA, and graduated from Handley High School. He received a bachelor of science degree in horticulture form Virginia Tech in 1937, and entered the family orchard business. Called to serve his country in World War II, he was a major during the war.

In 1965, he became a State senator, until he resigned this position after being elected the U.S. Representative for the Seventh District of Virginia. He earned a reputation as a fiscal conservative and staunch supporter of a strong national defense. When he retired, Ken was ranking Republican on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence.

After retiring from Congress, he devoted himself to family business interests.

However, to merely list the events of Kenneth's life is not enough. What made him special was not that he was a Congressman; he was special because of the type of Congressman that he was. His standard of public service approximates an ideal to which we all should aspire.

Giving testimony to the integrity of his service is what has been said about him: "I can attest that he was one of the ablest and one of the most popular Members of the entire Congress," former Senator Harry Byrd, Jr., said. Said another, "He faithfully reflected the views of his constituents." Still another, "I never heard anyone say that he was voting for Robinson because he was the lesser of two evils." He was called "a modest person—someone who enjoyed an almost unparalled breadth and depth of support—an opinion that was so highly valued." Unlike many, Ken was "not motivated by ego."

Ken was rare, he was admirable, and in the House of Representatives we have missed his leadership and friendship. The Commonwealth of Virginia and Kenneth Robinson's family will miss him, much, much more.

Mr. MILLER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I want to join with my fellow Members of the House of Representatives in this remembrance of J. Kenneth Robinson. Ken passed away on Palm Sunday, April 8, and we are all saddened to learn of his death.

Ken Robinson very ably represented the good poeple of his congressional district in Virginia for 14 years—from 1970 to 1984. He was clearly devoted to their interests, problems, and concerns. He reflected Virginia's proud heritage and was an able legislator.

When he retired from the House, he was the ranking member of the Select Committee on Intelligence and a senior member of the House Appropriations Committee. I was honored to serve with him on Appropriations. I had the firsthand opportunity to witness his skills as a lawmaker. He carefully studied the important measures before the committee and offered comments about vital issues that were obviously the result of having done his homework. He earned the respect of his colleagues by his deeds both on and off the floor.

I consider it a privilege to join with my colleagues in this tribute to Ken Robinson. He will be greatly missed by those who were fortunate enough to serve in this House—a place he cherished deeply. We've lost a dear friend, a true American patriot. I extend my sincerest sympathy to his lovely wife and his family.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman for taking this special order to honor the memory of our late colleague, Ken Robinson. While this is a sad day for all of us who were privileged to call him friend and colleague, it is also a day to celebrate the life of a remarkable man.

I came to this body with Ken Robinson. We were freshmen Members of the 92d Congress, and from day one, after taking the oath of office, we became good friends. You couldn't help but be a friend of Ken Robinson. I truly believe that he was a man without guile. He loved people, and his abiding sense of charity and love of others was a hallmark of his entire career.

It has often been pointed out that the State of Virginia and my State of South Carolina are the two most culturally indigenous States in the Union. In fact, the history and development of both States is remarkably similar. Ken Robinson loved history. He was justifiably proud of his native State of Virginia and was often referred to as the "Rock of Gibraltar" for his unswerving devotion to the principles of freedom advanced by such Virginians as George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, and Patrick Henry. In my opinion, had he lived during the colonial era there is no question in my mind that he would have stood alongside these famous patriots in their quest to found and build the United States of America.

You know, it is often said that Ken Robinson was a low-key person who rarely regaled his colleagues with speeches on every subject known to man. This is absolutely correct. He was no demagogue, and he made no attempt to impress people with his expertise on every subject. What he was, was one of the most studious and reflective Members ever to serve in this Chamber. Like the John Wayne character in the film "The Quiet Man", Ken Robinson didn't need hyperbole and vociferous phrases to get his point across. He commanded respect by his knowledge, devotion, and courage; courage, by the way, which manifested itself with four years of distinguished service in World War II.

Those of us who spent time with Ken Robinson remember him as a superb storyteller and raconteur. He was a keen observer of life around him, and he had a zest for living unmatched. His life was not without trial and tribulation. The son who took his name, Kenneth Robinson, Jr., died at a young age of leukemia. But, Ken and his dear wife of 43 years, Kit, faced this adversity and tragedy with a kind of quiet courage that served as an inspiration to many others.

Mr. Speaker, I am so very pleased that Kit and other family members are here with us today right up in the gallery. I recall reading somewhere that in one of Ken's campaigns for public office there was a group of supporters, organized by Kit, called "Kit's Kaboodle." I believe the kaboodle was a Volkswagen bus that carried supporters all over his congressional district.

Mr. Speaker, there are so many things to say in praise of Ken Robinson. For instance, long before it became fashionable to talk about campaign finance reform or what to do about excess campaign funds when leaving office, Ken Robinson took the bull by the horns when he left this House and gave the money to charity, civic groups, and institutions of higher learning.

A man like J. Kenneth Robinson doesn't come along every day. He was the epitome of a gentleman—a gentleman of Virginia. All of us can be proud that he served in this body, and those who come after us will do well to emulate his example. To Kit, the children, and grandchildren, I can only say that he enriched my life, and I thank you for sharing him with us.

Mr. PICKETT. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my distinguished colleague FRENCH SLAUGHTER for requesting this special order so that members would have the opportunity to pay tribute to J. Kenneth Robinson, our widely respected former Member of the House of Representatives, who died on Palm Sunday, April 8, 1990, at the age of 73.

Ken Robinson, represented the Seventh District of Virginia with distinction in this body for 14 years. He will be remembered by all who knew or worked with him as an individual of strong convictions and even temperament. His commitment to fiscal responsibility and individual liberty and initiative was well known, and became a hallmark of his service in this body.

As a member of both the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and the Appropriations Committee, Ken used his skills and resources to help mold a lasting framework of security to protect the vital interests of our Nation.

It is gratifying to see that Members from both sides of the aisle and from several States have made a special effort to be present today to participate in this tribute.

My colleague FRENCH SLAUGHTER is to be strongly commended for introducing legislation today to recognize Ken Robinson by designating the postal building in Winchester, VA, as the "J. Kenneth Robinson Postal Building." It will be a tangible reminder of the good work and dedicated service of our friend J. Kenneth Robinson.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to the contributions made by Ken Robinson to this body and to our Nation. In committee rooms and on the House floor, he showed a dedication to the principles of freedom and democracy. He knew what his constituents needed and he worked hard to get it.

Few people can boast of the accomplishments that he achieved during his lifetime. His service on the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence testifies to his integrity and love of country. America is a free and great country because men like Ken enlist their energies in Government service, and his legacy serves as an example to us all in the ongoing struggle to curtail big government, intrusive government, and excessive regulation.

He was solidly devoted to being a husband of one and a father of six. Perhaps this is the best measure of the man. His personal life, like his public service was rooted in strong principles and values. He always found the time to reach out and to be a mentor.

I know I speak for the American people in expressing my appreciation for Ken Robinson's exceptional contribution and commitment to this great Nation. He will be known as one of our country's finest legislators. He will be greatly missed.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague from Virginia.

I rise to remember a friend and one of our finest former Members—the Honorable J. Kenneth "Ken" Robinson.

Let me first pay special tribute to his lovely wife Katherine—"Kit"—who came all the way from Winchester to be with us today. And to Ken's six children—Patrick, Ray, Keevney (Keeve-nee), Jim, John, and Sally—as well as his brother, Ray Robinson, Jr.

I first met Ken in 1977, when I was first elected to Congress. For the next 7½ years I served with him, I grew to admire his dedication and envy his expertise. Ken was an able and conscientous legislator whose concern for the well-being of his constituents was exceeded only by his dedication to his family and his country.

Ken will be remembered as an honorable man who carried himself with a quiet dignity. Though he wrestled with problems great and small, as befits a true leader, he always kept his sense of purpose. He led by example, and especially in his final years, Ken's actions spoke volumes about his dedication to freedom and democracy, and the ideals on which this country was founded. He was a pillar of strength on the Intelligence Committee, and I was deeply honored when he gave me his support to succeed him on that committee.

I'm particularly glad Ken saw the world's sudden surge toward democracy in Europe last fall. Like many of us here today, Ken's heart and mind always kept faith with the spirit of those suffering under oppression. The victories of those peoples who threw off the yoke of Communist oppression last year are our victories—and our victories are certainly Ken's victories as well.

Ken Robinson was not flashy, nor was he given to hyperbole. Yet he understood a fundamental principle of leadership—that in the words of England's Lloyd George—no one ever crossed a chasm with two short jumps. And Ken Robinson led his life accordingly.

Ken devoted many of his best years to helping others—be they needy constituents or a freshman Congressman in need of guidance. For many years, he was an important Member here on the Hill—yet he was quiet and unassuming; and only forced his will on those who frustrated his desire to make this a freer world.

Ken's spirit will always be with us, as will his legacies as patriot, leader, devoted husband and caring father.

I know I speak for thousands when I say that I will miss Ken very much.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, it is with a great deal of sadness that I join with our colleagues to pay tribute to a truly outstanding gentleman and a legislator without peer, J. Kenneth Robinson of Virginia's Seventh District.

Ken had already been here for one term when I first came to Congress. But his advice and counsel during my early years in this Chamber were as valuable as was the advice of many Members who were Ken's senior. He had the ability to grasp the issues and to be able to explain them in clear, concise terms.

Ken was a native of the land he loved so much, the rural areas of Frederick County, VA. After graduating from Virginia Technical University with a degree in horticulture in 1937, Ken entered the family orchard business. He proved to be an adept businessperson and a successful apple grower.

Ken's first foray into politics came in 1962, when he lost a close race for Congress against an entrenched incumbent. Three years later, Ken was elected to the Virginia State Senate, filling the seat vacated by Harry F. Byrd, Jr., who was appointed to the U.S. Senate. Ken Robinson was subsequently elected to a full 4-year term in the State senate, but resigned when he was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1970.

During his 14 years of service in this chamber, Ken Robinson distinguished himself as an expert on defense issues and as a leader in budgetary matters affecting agriculture. At the time he left our body, he was ranking minority member on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence.

When Ken retired in 1984, we knew we were losing a valued colleague who was a paragon of integrity and expertise. It must please Ken's widow, Kathryn, his three sons, and three daughters, to know that Kenneth Robinson lived long enough to witness the revolutionary changes in Eastern Europe—changes which came about in great part due to the strong defense posture which Ken always championed in this Chamber.

Mr. Speaker, we have lost a true friend in the passing of J. Kenneth Robinson, the gentleman from Virginia. I join with my colleagues in expressing our sense of shared loss and condolences to his widow, Kathryn, his children, and to the many residents of the Seventh District who knew and loved him.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank my friend and colleague, FRENCH SLAUGHTER, for calling this Special Order today. I join him and everyone here in praising the great life of our departed friend, J. Kenneth Robinson.

We have lost a good friend. In his 14 years of service here on Capitol Hill, Ken Robinson proved himself to be a tremendously capable legislator.

As ranking member of the Select Intelligence Committee, a post he assumed in 1979, Ken became, as its Chairman EDDIE BOLAND said, the most thoroughly knowledgeable Member of this House on intelligence matters.

As a fellow member of the Appropriations Committee, I say firsthand depth of his devotion and commitment to hard work. He was a strong advocate on that committee and in this House for improving our Nation's defense.

As those of us here know, however, Ken was more than a good legislator, he was a good man. Our business while serving on the Appropriations Committee often brought us together in travel. Once he was a companion of mine on a trip to Africa. Of such times with Ken, what lives in my memory of him was his great gentle nature. Ken Robinson was a nose-to-the-grindstone Member and big battles of the budget wars digesting a library full of intelligence data, and yet, through it all, Ken was a gentleman's gentleman.

Ken distinguished himself in so many ways. He was a proud graduate of Virginia Tech University. He was a veteran of World War II, who left that conflict with the rank of major. He was a Member of this House, after serving 6 years in the Virginia State Senate and serving as that State's Republican delegation chairman. He was a successful businessman. But more than this, he was a devoted husband to his wonderful wife of 43 years, Kathryn, and a proud parent and grandparent.

There is a great sense of history in this Chamber and in this building. Though we often take our workplace for granted, there are times when we feel the overwhelming presence of those who came before us to serve in this place. The commitment of countless past members to serve this country enriches us every day. I have served in this Chamber for over 31 years. In that time, no greater gentleman has served in this body than J. Kenneth Robinson. Virginia honored itself by sending such a man to this body. This Nation is honored that it can produce such a man. We are all fortunate to have known him and we shall all miss him.

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to my good friend, the late Kenneth Robinson of Virginia, who passed away April 8. Although I had not seen Kenneth for awhile, I thought of him often.

I enjoyed serving with Kenneth from 1970 to 1984. He was an outstanding member of the House Appropriations Committee who worked diligently on the Defense and Agriculture Subcommittees. He was very dedicated to serving his constituents, his State and our Nation.

My wife Lou and I certainly enjoyed our friendship with Kenneth and his lovely wife, Kit. Our hearts and prayers go out to her and the family during this time.

Many people come and go in the Congress and a few leave a lasting mark. Kenneth was certainly one of those who will long be remembered for his many achievements. He was respected and admired by all who knew him.

We will miss him, but we will never forget him.

Mr. SHUMWAY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the gentleman from Virginia for arranging this special order so that we might all pay tribute and bid farewell to our friend and former colleague, J. Kenneth Robinson.

When Ken retired from the House in 1984, I commended his leadership, his statesmanship and his reason. I commented that he had served his district, his State and the Nation diligently and well. Most of all, I pointed out that Ken truly qualified to be called the gentleman from Virginia. However, I refrained from describing an incident of friendly rivalry between us which vividly illustrated all those qualities, and which also resulted in some humorous political cartoons in rural Virginia papers.

Virginia has long been known and praised for its beautiful Shenandoah Valley. My own California district shares the name, via the well-known Shenandoah Vineyard. The problem arose over viticulutral labeling: a then-relatively-fledgling winery in the Shenandoah Valley wanted to use the appellation on its wines. The California Shenandoah protested; the Virginia Shenandoah rebutted. The end result: two Members of this House from the same side of the aisle with just about everything in common confronted each other at a public forum in Harrisonburg, VA, with a full complement of press and public present. In an effort to emulate Ken's gentlemanliness, I will not reveal the outcome of that confrontation.

During that episode, I gained renewed respect for Ken's many attributes. He never forgot that his primary obligation was to serve his constituents, and he did so with caring and diligence. And, while the situation forced him to treat me as at least a temporary adversary, he did so with friendship and respect.

When a man such as J. Kenneth Robinson seeks and holds public office, the entire nation benefits. He left bold marks through his service, particularly with his Appropriations Committee assignment. However, to me, the fond memories of that personal exchange are more precious. I missed Ken when he retired; now, with his passing, those memories will be all the more important. My thoughts and prayers are with his wife and family.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, Representative Kenneth Robinson and I were classmates together in the 92d Congress. We had been elected on the same day in 1970. During our years together in the House, I came to know, respect, and admire Kenneth as an able legislator, dedicated public servant, and friend. Like many of my colleagues who worked alongside Kenneth, I am deeply saddened by his death, but I'm proud to join in this deserved tribute to an outstanding American citizen.

I have often heard Kenneth Robinson described as the "quintessential citizen statesman, the kind of man our forefathers envisioned to lead the country." An apt description, but I'm sure Kenneth, modest and unpretentious, would politely refuse such glowing praise.

Yet his distinguished record of service in the House supports this enthusiastic acclaim. He served as ranking minority member on the House Select Intelligence Committee and as a longstanding, influential member of the powerful Appropriations Committee. A true Virginia gentleman, Kenneth's word was his bond. His credibility and honesty earned him the trust and respect from members on the other side of the aisle, even when their positions on an issue were 180 degrees apart.

Throughout his career, Kenneth never forgot those he served. As Representative for Virginia's Seventh District for 14 years until his retirement in 1985, he was an effective advocate in Congress for his loyal constituents. Prior to his election to the House, he served for many years in the Virginia State Senate. His legacy of nearly 30 years of dedicated service to his community, to Virginia and our country will be our most enduring memory of J. Kenneth Robinson, a lasting tribute to this great American statesman and public servant.

To his wife, Kit, and their children, my wife Barbara and I offer our heartfelt sympathy. He will be sorely missed, and long remembered.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleague, the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SLAUGHTER] for reserving this time for us to pay tribute to our former colleague and friend, J. Kenneth Robinson who passed away on April 8, 1990.

Those of us who served in the Congress with Kenneth Robinson will always remember him for his hard work, dedication and commitment to his constituency. Kenneth was elected to the House of Representatives in 1970, having served in the Virginia State Senate. During his 14-year tenure in Congress, he earned a reputation as a fiscal conservative and was outspoken on budget issues relating to the agricultural, defense, and intelligence fields.

When he retired in 1985, Kenneth was the ranking minority member of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and a ranking member of the House Appropriations Committee. I had the honor of serving on both the Intelligence and Appropriations Committee with Kenneth. I respected him for his insight, leadership, and legislative skills. He was a hard worker who never forgot those whose interests he represented in Washington.

Mr. Speaker, J. Kenneth Robinson left a legacy of service and accomplishment to this Congress and our Nation. He will always be remembered. We take this opportunity to extend our deepest sympathy to his wife, Kit, and his family.

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I want to join my colleagues in expressing the condolences of the House to the family of J. Kenneth Robinson. My predecessor, Congressman Edward P. Boland enjoyed a long and productive personal and working relationship with Congressman Robinson. That relationship was highly valued by Mr. Boland, and he asked me to make sure that his tribute to Mr. Robinson was made a part of this special order. I am happy to do so, and want to associate myself with the sentiments Mr. Boland expresses in the remarks which follow:

Mr. Speaker, it is my honor, as a former member of this House, to take part today in this tribute for our late colleague, J. Kenneth Robinson of Virginia. For fourteen years the people of the Winchester area were fortunate to be represented in this great body by J. Kenneth Robinson.

I was fortunate to work closely with Ken on a number of occasions over the years we served together. We served together, first on the Appropriations Committee and then on the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. For a time we had offices across the hall from each other in the Rayburn Building. Running into Ken in the hall as we went to vote on the Floor gave me a great opportunity to get to know him and appreciate his personality. Ken was a very friendly person, easy to know and a joy to be around. Although we sometimes disagreed on policy, there was never a moment when that disagreement affected our personal relationship. I'm sure that any member who served with Ken would agree. He had the wit, intelligence and know-how to be a success on Capitol Hill. I always felt that Ken was one of the finest spokesmen the Republicans had on complex appropriations matters and sensitive national security issues.

On the Appropriations Committee, Ken Robinson could be counted on to study each funding request closely and make an informed decision on how to best spend our federal dollars. Ken kept an eye on the fiscal bottom line, but had a real feel for our country's needs. I believe he was one of the finest members that vital committee has ever had. I noticed the loss of his expertise immediately in the 99th Congress after he had retired.

I cannot say enough about Ken Robinson's work on the House Intelligence Committee. The sensitive mission of this important committee was clear to him from the moment of its creation. Service on the House Intelligence Committee is a responsibility that cannot be taken lightly. Ken had a keen understanding of the complex issues that came before this committee in the difficult days of this country's involvement in several unsettled regions of the world. As the ranking Republican, his counsel and cooperation were invaluable to me. Ken Robinson never lost sight of the long-range foreign policy goals of America, nor of the necessity for effective intelligence collection and analysis as essential means of furthering those goals. He was acutely aware as well of the need for the discretion and secrecy that is necessarily a part of service on the Intelligence Committee.

Mr. Speaker, it was with great sadness that I learned that J. Kenneth Robinson has passed away. It is regrettable that he did not get the opportunity to enjoy a longer retirement. I am sorry that I cannot be on Capitol Hill personally to take part in this tribute organized by Ken's able successor, D. French Slaughter, Jr. I wish to express to Ken's widow Kit and his children present, Jim, Sally and Patrick the great affection and respect I had for Ken. He was a good and decent man, who made many significant contributions to his nation, and he will be greatly missed.

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Speaker, on April 8, 1990, our country lost one of its finest Congressmen and distinguished public servants. J. Kenneth Robinson's consistency, vision, and sense of purpose left a larger-than-life legacy. I was fortunate to have counted Ken as a friend and a respected colleague.

Ken's work in the House advanced a program of prosperity and economic expansion which continues today. When Ken retired from Congress in 1984, he was the ranking Republican on the House Select Committee on Intelligence and a senior Republican on the Appropriations Committee. His committee assignments enabled Ken to shape critical legislation and insure the administration's policies moved ahead on the legislative agenda.

Ken and I shared similar roots in the State legislature before coming to Congress. As leader of the Virginia Republican delegation in the State assembly, Ken built consensus among his Republican colleagues and fashioned compromise with Democratic legislators. This experience permitted Ken to effectively grasp the role of Federal legislators and win the confidence and admiration of his colleagues. I remember the glowing, personal tributes 6 years ago when Ken left the House. The words of praise were genuine and showed the depth of respect he had earned from Members on both sides of the aisle.

Ken was a Congressman committed to his district which returned him six times to the House. The traditional American values; reverence for hard work, family, and above all a sense of fairness were apparent in his words and the legislation he promoted.

He was a man who contributed great things to his country and the institution he served. I valued his friendship and trusted his council.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, I was very sorry to learn that Ken Robinson had died. He was a good friend and colleague. We served together on the Appropriations Committee for many a year and for several years we were next door neighbors in the Rayburn Building. While we held very different political views, I admired him greatly.

Ken was a Virginia gentleman in the very best sense of the word. He worked very effectively for the people of his district and this country, and he did it with grace and true dedication that won him many friends in this body and in all parts of the country. I am proud to say that he was my friend.

A good man has left us and I mourn him. I extend my most sincere sympathy to Kathryn, his wife, and to all the Robinson family.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, it is an honor for me to join my colleagues in paying special tribute to J. Kenneth Robinson, a dedicated public servant who should serve as an example for all of us.

I had the special privilege of serving with Ken on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, where he was ranking member. As in all of his endeavors, his service in this capacity was exemplary, and his Nation is very much the better for it. Ken's hard work and dedication, his command of the issues, and his abilities as a debater made him a valuable asset to the committee, as did his recognition of the importance of nonpartisanship.

I was saddened to learn of Ken's death, yet at the same time pleased to know that his contributions as a public servant made a difference and will not be forgotten. I would like to express my sympathy to Ken's wife, Kit, and his family, who are with us today, and to share with them the Nation's gratitude for Ken's service to his community, his State, and the Nation.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, on Palm Sunday, April 8, 1990, our friend and former colleague J. Kenneth Robinson passed away at the age of 73. Ken spent 14 years of his distinguished career serving in this body, steadfastly representing the Seventh District of Virginia, where he was born and had lived his entire life. Virginia has a long tradition of service and leadership to this country. Now added to a long list of celebrated Virginians who have served their country proudly, including eight of our Nation's Presidents, will be the name of J. Kenneth Robinson.

It is impossible for me to stand up here and to convey to you just how much Ken's friendship and guidance through the years have meant to me. When I first came to Capitol Hill in 1980, a freshman Congressman straight from Richmond city politics, Ken adopted me as his little brother and showed me the legislative ropes. He was a mentor without peer. His counsel on defense and intelligence issues was invaluable and provided an education and insight that few of us have the opportunity to receive.

I owe much to Ken. It was his boost that readied me for the chairmanship of the Republican Study Committee. Due to Ken's duties with the Intelligence Committee, he stepped down from the executive committee and made sure that I filled his seat. I consider my friendship with Ken Robinson to be one of the highlights of my congressional career. During the 4 years that our tenure in Congress overlapped, whenever I needed help or advice, Ken's door was always open, and let me assure you, I knocked upon it often.

Republicans and Democrats alike have only praise to lavish on the Virginia gentleman who appropriately earned the nickname Rock of Gibraltar. Never one to be a limelight hound, Ken went about his work quietly and diligently. He was dedicated to public service solely because he enjoyed serving his constituency. He didn't seek any of the personal glory that far too often politicians come to Washington in search of. In fact, during his 14 years in the House, he often worked on legislation that he later had his Democratic colleagues introduce, knowing that as members of the majority party, they had a better chance of having them passed. Ken brought balance in a time of ambiguity and the quick fix. America and the U.S. Congress have been better for his selfless contribution

Ken left no enemies in his path when he retired from Congress. In fact, shortly before Ken's death, I ran into Edward Boland, the former Member from Massachusetts, who have been the chairman of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence when Ken was the ranking Republican on that committee. Boland first inquired into Ken's health and subsequently launched into lavish praise about his former colleague who had been as far removed as possible from his own political philosophy. Ken's politics were on the right and Boland's were on the left, yet Boland still had tremendous respect for his colleague's positions and his hard work.

That chance meeting in the Halls of the Capitol epitomized Kenneth Robinson's tenure in Congress—he was well known as a man able to work with Members of the opposition party as well as his own. Never brazen and known for doing a superb job, everyone respected Ken for his unwavering devotion to those things he found important and cherished: the Nation, the Commonwealth of Virginia, and his family. Kit Robinson, Ken's wonderful wife of 43 years has joined us today for this special tribute to a great Virginian leader who will be greatly missed.

THE CONSTRUCTION SAFETY, HEALTH, AND EDUCATION IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1990

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GAYDOS] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. GAYDOS. Mr. Speaker, last Saturday was American Workers' Memorial Day, and many of us participated in ceremonies memorializing those American men and women who have suffered and died on the job because of unsafe and unhealthy working conditions.

Because of my longstanding concern for the health, safety, and welfare of all American workers, but especially the several million in the construction industry, in honor of those who died on the job and, more importantly, to prevent additional unnecessary deaths and disabilities, last week I introduced the Construction Safety, Health, and Education Improvement Act of 1990.

It is no secret to most of us that construction work is inherently dangerous. I am sure that many of us know someone or of someone who has been killed or injured in a construction accident.

Just over a year ago, Parade Magazine published its listing of the high hazard occupations. Among the 35 blue-collar categories included in the list, construction workers and carpenters' helpers ranked near the middle, No. 14, reporting 33.5 worker deaths per 100,000 workers in the field.

There are those among us who would say that being in the middle of the list, given the expected risks of construction, isn't too bad. But the listing for construction workers and carpenters' helpers isn't the whole story. Even within the construction industry, there are those jobs that carry even higher risk.

Structural metal workers, the guys we see crawling around on the steel girders and beams, rank third among blue-collar workers with 72 deaths per 100,000 workers.

Bulldozer operators, earth drillers, and craft apprentices, all of whom are involved in different phases of construction rank 8th, 9th, and 10th, respectively, and all have death rates per 100,000 workers, well above the 33.5 level for general construction workers.

The public, however, doesn't really become aware of the dangers until a great tragedy occurs, such as the collapse of the building in Bridgeport, CT, in 1987, which claimed 28 workers' lives, or the collapse of the cooling tower in Willow Spring, WV, in 1978, which killed 51 workers.

And these cases are only the tip of the iceberg. You can pick up a newspaper nearly every day and read about a fatality or an injury to a construction worker, and, unfortunately far too often, many accidents and injuries don't even make the news.

I'd like to tell you about just one tragedy which illustrates the need for an office within OSHA exclusively concerned with construction safety and health issues, including the need for more effective enforcement of OSHA standards.

Last February 9, 27-year-old Rickey Dale Johnson was on top of the world. He had been married 2 months earlier, and that day he moved into a new home with his bride.

On February 10, Rickey went to his construction job in Tallahassee, FL where he was learning how to lay sewer pipes. To do his job, Rickey had to get into the ditch where the sewer pipe was.

Tragically, while Rickey was in the ditch, the dirt wall surrounding him caved in. By the time his fellow construction workers and firefighters uncovered his face, Rickey Johnson was dead.

Existing OSHA regulations require that any ditch 5 feet deep or more, as this ditch was, must be braced, shored, or sloped. This ditch wasn't. Not only that, there wasn't even a ladder in the ditch—another violation of existing regulations. Perhaps if some kind of safety specialist had been present on the site, this tragedy could have been avoided.

Rickey Johnson's wife, who was experiencing great happiness a day earlier, now faced life as a widow.

Stories such as these happen all over the United States each day. Just 2 weeks ago, for example, the third worker in 3 months died during the construction of a Ford auto plant.

We can't wait to act. We need to do whatever we can as soon as we can to stop many of these unnecessary deaths.

Until 1970, the issue of protecting the safety of people at their place of employment was largely ignored. Then, Congress created the Occupational Safety and Health Administration [OSHA] to make worksites safer.

I am proud to say, as we approach OSHA's 20th anniversary, that I was an active participant in the floor action on that bill.

But our work is not done. Many industries remain dangerous to employees and foremost among these is the construction industry.

A 1988 study by the Bureau of Labor Statistics found that almost 15 percent of the 5 million full-time construction workers—some 750,000 men and women—can expect to be injured on the job each year. The injury rate for all other workers is less than 9 percent.

And, despite the best efforts of many employers and employees, deaths and serious injuries continue to occur on the construction worksite. According to recent statistics by the National Safety Council, an average of six construction workers die every day on job sites. That is nearly 2,500 workers every year.

In contrast, mining, another occupation on the list of the most hazardous, suffers about 130 deaths each year.

Even more alarming is the number of workers who suffer serious injuries on the worksite. Each year, almost 200,000 workers sustain some type of disabling injury in construction accidents.

What bothers me even more is that the number of construction deaths has remained constant since OSHA was formed in 1970.

Some might say that this statistic is misleading because there are more construction workers now than in 1970. That may well be true, but the truth is that the percentage of construction workers in the total workforce has remained fairly constant.

In 1969, the year before OSHA was enacted, construction workers comprised 4 percent of the work force, and accounted for 15 percent of the fatalities.

Today, construction workers constitute 5 percent of the work force, but account for more than a quarter—26 percent—of all workplace fatalities, nearly double the figure of 20 years ago.

The Building and Construction Trades Department of the AFL-CIO estimates that the bill I have introduced could save as many as 1,500 to 2,000 workers' lives each year, significantly decrease the number of disabling injuries, and conservatively, save between $3 billion and $7.5 billion a year in lost work day costs and other medical expenses.

When I look at these numbers, it's not hard to realize why Lane Kirkland, the president of the AFL-CIO, and others who truly care about the health and safety of workers support the creation of an Office of Construction Safety, Health, and Education in OSHA.

The present OSHA administration is to be commended for its preliminary steps. The Agency's recently announced plans for the Office of Construction and Engineering is just one small step.

Much more is necessary if we are truly going to concentrate on worker safety and health and my legislation provides for that focus.

First, my bill would require that a Deputy Assistant Secretary, who would report directly to the Administrator of OSHA, would head the Office of Construction Safety, Health, and Education.

This would provide the Office with significant standing and visibility in OSHA itself, thereby giving notice that construction safety and health is more than just of passing concern.

Further, under my bill, every construction worksite would be required to operate under a construction safety and health program which would be monitored by a construction safety specialist. This specialist would be responsible for ensuring that the site is safe and that all workers on that site are adequately and properly trained to perform construction work.

The construction safety specialist can be either an employee of the contractor or an outside individual hired by the contractor, but a specialist would first have to become certified by taking a 40-hour training class in a wide variety of safety issues so that he or she would be able to recognize job-site hazards as well as training or supervising the training of workers to recognize and avoid unsafe working conditions.

The specialist will also be trained to recognize violations of OSHA regulations in order to take preventative actions to correct hazards before an accident results.

We know that personal liability in the event of an accident might make it difficult for contractors to hire these safety specialists. To address that issue, we say that even though the specialist will monitor overall safety at the site, the contractor still will have full responsibility for safety, and thus, would be liable for any accidents or OSHA violations.

An important factor in this legislation concerns the ability of the specialist to order the contractor to halt work in an affected area until a recognized danger is corrected.

Before the specialist stops work in the area, however, he or she must inform the contractor of the problem and give the contractor an opportunity to correct it.

The specialist, therefore, will serve as the first line of defense. He or she will attempt to identify and correct any hazards as soon as possible to prevent injuries and fatalities.

In a recent article, the Dallas Times reported that in three out of four fatal construction accidents in Texas in the 1980's, a violation of OSHA regulations was determined to be a contributing factor. Therefore, we need to correct and eliminate hazards before an accident can happen.

The safety specialists will be trained at a special construction training academy established under this act to ensure that they receive proper and adequate training necessary to be aware of OSHA regulations and to understand the constant change that occurs at a construction site.

The specialist, however, is not the only one who can stop work at a site. This bill, like the Mine Safety and Health Amendments of 1977, which I managed on the floor of the House, permits a worker who believes an imminent danger exists to stop working in that area of the site until a competent individual determines whether or not there is a danger.

If the danger exists, the worker does not have to start work again in that area until the dangerous condition is corrected. If, on the other hand, there is no danger, then the worker must immediately return to work at the site.

This procedure ensures fairness both to the employer and the employee because while employees can stop working if they have a reasonable fear of impending injury, it does not allow for idle claims of impending danger.

Under current regulations, a contractor must report a fatality or an injury involving the hospitalization of five workers to OSHA within 24 hours after the incident. Unfortunately, this can lead to the destruction or loss of valuable evidence for determining the cause of the accident. My legislation would eliminate that delay by placing the safety specialist in control of the site immediately after an accident occurs.

The bill also requires each construction worksite to have a construction safety and health program which covers the general contractor as well as any subcontractors and requires that all employees on the worksite receive general training in health and safety on an annual basis.

This yearly training is important. I often receive information from OSHA about construction deaths and the circumstances surrounding them and usually the accidents have been found to have been preventable, occurring as a result of either violations of OSHA regulations or employee error.

Routine safety training on an annual basis, as well as special training geared toward the type of work the employees are performing, will provide extra opportunities to save lives and prevent disabling injuries.

In addition to the training, safety, and health meetings will have to be held with employees at least once a month to review and update this training.

These meetings, to be held during working hours to ensure attendance, will not only remind workers of existing safety requirements, but inform them of any new safety regulations and of any new and hazardous techniques to be used on the job.

The sessions will also help workers recognize those unsafe conditions where there is the potential for an accident so that they can be corrected before injuries and fatalities occur.

This act also will establish a new and better system for OSHA inspections of construction worksites. We all know that OSHA does not have sufficient funds to inspect every one of the millions of construction worksites that exist right now.

OSHA, therefore, will have to focus its efforts, inspecting those sites which pose the greatest danger to workers—either because of the engineering techniques being used or because of the safety record of the contractor.

A report issued by the National Bureau of Economic Research suggested that OSHA inspections can have an enormous impact in reducing injuries.

The report, written by economists Wayne Gray and John Scholz, noted that a 10-percent increase in the number of OSHA inspections each year would reduce annual injuries by 1.6 percent.

More importantly, the effect of that OSHA inspection would be felt for as much as another 2 or 3 years in terms of on-the-job injuries.

It is no secret that those inspections would and should be applicable to construction worksites.

Just think—for each 10 percent increase in OSHA inspections at construction sites, we could perhaps prevent up to 3,200 disabling injuries and 40 deaths each year for 2 to 4 years.

And if OSHA, as required by this legislation, was focusing on the bad actors in the construction industry, we might be able to prevent more fatalities and disabling injuries.

Let me stress that no worksite will or should ever be exempted from inspection, and, in fact, many worksites not specifically targeted for inspection will be randomly inspected.

But by focusing inspections on high risk construction activities and on contractors with poor safety records, we may be able to get more value for the dollars directed toward construction safety and health activities.

How will OSHA be able to compile a list of construction worksites? My bill provides that before any work is started at a site, the safety specialist, rather than the contractor, must file a short report with OSHA which would include the location of the job and its projected length of time, a description of the work and the number of employees involved.

I want to emphasize that the majority of contractors do follow OSHA regulations and are greatly concerned about the welfare of their workers. Still, as I said, too many construction workers are being killed, maimed, and injured on the job.

One reason that it is so difficult to prevent those deaths and injuries is the failure of OSHA to impose significant penalties on violators.

At present, the maximum fine which can be imposed is $1,000 for each serious violation and $10,000 for a willful or repeated violation, and often the fines are considerably lower or are reduced during the settlement process.

The travesty of this activity is demonstrated by the Dallas Times' article which I cited earlier. As I said, in three out of every four construction deaths in Texas in the 1980's, the contractor was cited by OSHA for a violation. Incredibly, the average fine was a mere $350.

We need higher maximum fines so that we don't have the situation where employers can ignore OSHA regulations knowing that any fines will be negligible. This act strengthens these fines.

Under my bill when an employer recklessly or willfully violates an OSHA rule which causes serious injury, a fine of up to $25,000 per violation can be imposed.

The fine can be up to $50,000 per violation if the violator is a repeat offender. When a violation leads to a death, a fine of up to $50,000 per violation is allowable, and up to $100,000 per violation for repeat violators.

These new penalties do not mean that every OSHA violator will be given the maximum penalty. In fact, most violators will probably get a substantially lower fine.

But in cases where there has been a gross indifference to the law, we need a strong monetary disincentive so that those employers who don't care about worker safety will find it cheaper to follow OSHA regulations than to ignore them.

The bill also contains a provision which will not allow the actual fine to be lower than half of a proposed OSHA fine when a settlement is reached.

Contractors, therefore, will not be able to sidestep their responsibility simply by settling with OSHA.

I don't deny that there may be some additional costs associated with having a safety specialist on each worksite, reporting to OSHA about the site before work is begun, and training employees.

But these extra costs will be more than offset by the benefits obtained from the bill in terms of workers' lives and money saved in lost workdays.

To those who say that OSHA can make these changes administratively, I respectfully disagree. While the present OSHA leadership appears to be dedicated to construction safety, this does not mean that future administrations will be as sympathetic to this issue.

What if the next head of OSHA decides that a specialist is not needed on each worksite? What if it's decided that records no longer need to be kept by contractors?

The only way to permanently ensure that we have these necessary protections for construction workers is through legislation. Legislation will prevent these vital safeguards from ever being taken away from construction workers.

Mr. Speaker, we all know these are times of budget constraints. But can we afford to tell America's workers that their lives aren't important?

As we consider last Saturday, the American Workers' Memorial Day, let us commit ourselves to acting to prevent as many of those deaths as we can.

This legislation is a place to start. It is a logical extension of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970. That act is general and applies to all workplaces.

Given the expected and known hazards of construction work, the bill that I introduced last week will fill an important gap in the effort to make our workplaces safer and healthier so that American workers, both men and women, can enjoy fruitful lives today and tomorrow.

FRANKING REFORM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, today I introduced a resolution which attempts to bring our franking use under control.

For the Members' convenience, I have prepared a section-by-section analysis and am also providing the resolution:

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

Section 1. Official mail allowance.

Establishes individual Member accounts for franked mail (House administration will establish criteria and allocation for accounts). Excess money in this account may not be transferred to any other account, but if the official mail account is exhausted, funds from official expense allowance may be used to buy postage in lieu of the frank.

No amount may be transferred from the Official Mail Allowance to any other allowance of a Member of the House.

Prohibits use of official mail allowances to pay for "express mail" (the premium paid for delivery of postal patrons and meeting notices). This provision will forbid Members to send mass mailings by express mail.

Section 2. Limited use of official expenses for postage.

Members are allowed to use funds from Official Expense Allowance to purchase postage (in lieu of the frank) once the mail account has been exhausted.

Section 3. Session limitation on use of public document envelopes by Members of the House.

Franked public document envelopes that are currently made available to Members may be used by the Member only in that session of Congress in which allocated.

Section 4. Limitation on use of gummed and adhesive franked labels.

Gummed and adhesive franked labels may be used only as permitted by regulations prescribed by the Committee on House Administration.

Section 5. Printing of the frank to be performed only through the Government Printing Office.

Section 6. Definitions.

Section 7. Amendments to rule XLVI of the Rules of the House of Representatives.

After December 31, 1990 the respective amount of meeting notices and postal patron mailings permitted to be mailed in a year will be cut to two. This provision is a strict limit on each, therefore, Members could not mail 3 postal patrons and 1 meeting notice.

A Member, before making any mass mailing, must submit a sample or description of the mail matter involved to the House Commission on Congressional Mailing Standards for an advisory opinion as to whether the proposed mailing is in compliance with applicable provisions of law, rule, or regulation. Advisory opinions for direct response mailings of more than 500 pieces will now be required.

The Clerk of the House will be required, semi-annually, to prepare and make available for public inspection the total number of mass mailings made by each Member during the said year and the total number of pieces of mail in each such mailing.

Postal patrons and meeting notices shall contain the following notice: "Prepared, published, and mailed at taxpayer expense".

H. RES. —

Resolved,

SECTION 1. OFFICIAL MAIL ALLOWANCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There is established an Official Mail Allowance for mailing under the frank by Members of the House of Representatives. The allowance shall be available to Members—

(1) in such amounts as may be provided in appropriation Acts; and

(2) in accordance with such regulations as may be prescribed by the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives, taking into consideration the population of each congressional district, the number of addresses and households in each congressional district, and any other pertinent factor.

(b) LIMITATIONS.—

(1) No amount may be transferred from the Official Mail Allowance to any other allowance of a Member of the House of Representatives.

(2) The Official Mail Allowance shall not be available for payment of any express mail drop shipment fee or postage with respect to a mass mailing.

SEC. 2. LIMITED USE OF OFFICIAL EXPENSES ALLOWANCE FOR POSTAGE.

The Official Expenses Allowance shall be available to a Member of the House of Representatives for the purchase of postage for official business if—

(1) by reason of law or other authority, the frank may not be used for the postage; or

(2) the balance available to the Member under the Official Mail Allowance is insufficient to cover the postage.

SEC. 3. SESSION LIMITATION ON USE OF PUBLIC DOCUMENT ENVELOPES BY MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Franked public document envelopes that, by law or other authority, are made available to a Member of the House of Representatives on a monthly basis may be used by the Member only in the session of Congress in which the month involved occurs.

SEC. 4. LIMITATION ON USE OF GUMMED AND ADHESIVE FRANK LABELS.

Gummed and adhesive frank labels may be used for mailing by Members, officers, and employees of the House of Representatives only as permitted by regulations prescribed by the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 5. PRINTING OF THE FRANK TO BE PERFORMED ONLY THROUGH THE GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE.

Printing of the frank of any Member, officer, or employee of the House of Representatives, on envelopes or otherwise, may be performed only through the Government Printing Office.

SEC. 6. DEFINITION.

As used in this resolution—

(1) the term "mass mailing" has the meaning given that term in section 3210(a)(6)(E) of title 39, United States Code; and

(2) the term "Member of the House of Representatives" means a Representative in, or a Delegate or Resident Commissioner, to, the Congress.

SEC. 7. AMENDMENT TO RULE XLVI OF THE RULES OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

(a) POSTAL PATRON MAILINGS.—Clause 2 of rule XLVI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended—

(1) by striking "After December 31, 1977," and inserting "(a) After December 31, 1990,";

(2) by striking "six multiplied by" and inserting "two multiplied by";

(3) by striking the second sentence; and

(4) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(b) Any mail matter which relates solely to a notice of appearance or a scheduled itinerary of a Member in the area from which such Member was elected shall not count against the limitation set forth in paragraph (a). However, the total number of pieces of mail (relating solely to any such notice or scheduled itinerary) which may be mailed by a Member during any calendar year as franked mail under section 3210(d) of title 39, United States Code, may not exceed the total number allowable under paragraph (a) (with respect to mail matter subject to such paragraph) during such calendar year.".

(b) MASS MAILINGS.—

(1) Clause 3 of rule XLVI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended—

(A) by striking "Any" and inserting "(a) Any"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(b) A Member shall, before making any mass mailing (including mailings in direct response to communications from persons to whom the matter is mailed, but excluding mailings subject to paragraph (a)), submit a sample or description of the mail matter involved to the House Commission on Congressional Mailing Standards for an advisory opinion as to whether such proposed mailing is in compliance with applicable provisions of law, rule, or regulation.".

((2) Rule XLVI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended—

(A) by redesignating clause 7 as clause 9; and

(B) by inserting after clause 6 the following new clauses:

"7. The Clerk of the House of Representatives shall prepare to make available for public inspection, on a semiannual basis, and based solely on data which shall be provided for that purpose by the Committee on House Administration, a report on the number of mass mailings made by each Member during the period covered by each report, and the number of pieces of mail in each of those mass mailings.

"8. A mass mailing by a Member shall contain the following notice in a prominent place on the cover page of the document: 'PREPARED, PUBLISHED, AND MAILED AT TAXPAYER EXPENSE'.".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall be effective as of the beginning of the 102nd Congress.

PROPOSED CUT IN COSTS OF FRANKED MAIL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, today I have introduced House Resolution 386 to curb the costs of franked mail in the House.

As estimated by the U.S. Postal Service, the franking deficit for the House will exceed some $38 million in fiscal year 1990. Based on historical trends for House franked mail, USPS estimated that the House will mail some 532 million pieces of mail. Others have even more alarming estimates of a $42 million franking deficit.

It is particularly interesting to compare this year's franking volume with that of fiscal year 1988's volume of 548 million pieces. In fiscal year 1988, Members were permitted to mail up to six postal patron mailings, while in fiscal year 1990 Members could only mail up to three. Last year's measures were helpful, but obviously, Members' mailing creativity has further diminished our baby-step efforts. Clearly, franking overdrafts are out of control.

On the other hand, the Senate adopted a number of reforms last year which has since resulted in a $6 million surplus in the Senate's appropriation. Many of those same reforms, in addition to others, are included in my resolution. The Senate deserves high praise for its courage in reducing mail costs. I hope the House will have the same courage.

A section-by-section summary follows:

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

Section 1. Official Mail Allowance.

Establish an Official Mail Allowance Account: (1) In amounts as may be provided in Appropriation Acts; (2) in accordance with regulations prescribed by Committee on House Administration taking in account—

Population of each Congressional District;

Number of addresses and households in each district;

Any other pertinent factor;

Prohibition on transferring funds from Official Mail to any other allowance; and Prohibition on use of Official Mail for payment of any drop shipment fee or postage with respect to a mass mailing.

(Sets up a 3rd internal House Account—Clerk Hire, Official Allowance and 3rd—Official Mail.)

Section 2. Limited use of official expenses for postage.

Official Expense Allowance shall be available to House Members for postage for official business if: (1) By reason of law or other authority the frank may not be used for postage; or (2) the balance in Official Mail Allowance is insufficient to cover the postage.

(Permits Members to continue responding to their constituents by purchasing postage stamps for official mail out of official allowance for use in lieu of the frank.)

Section 3. Session limitation on use of public document envelopes by Members of the House of Representatives.

Franked public document envelopes that are currently made available to Members of 40,000 envelopes per month may be used by the Member only in the session of Congress in which the month involved occurs.

(Changes envelope accumulation from a Congress to a session.)

Section 4. Limitation on use of gummed and adhesive frank labels.

Gummed and adhesive frank labels may be used only as permitted by regulations prescribed by the Committee on House Administration.

(Permits House Administration Committee to regulate gummed, franked labels if necessary. Labels are not currently limited.)

Section 5. Printing of the frank to be performed only through the Government Printing Office.

Limits the printing of the franks used by the House of Representatives to the Government Printing Office in an effort to control their reproduction.

Section 6. Definitions.

Mass mailing as defined in section 3210(a)(6) of title 39 U.S.C.

Section 7. Postal Patron mailings.

Newsletters: Total newsletter/Postal Patron mailings cannot exceed (1) one times the number of addresses to which Member was elected as determined by the most recent statistics from USPS available prior to such legislative year.

Town meeting notices: Total notices of appearance or town meeting notices cannot exceed (1) one times the number of addresses to which Member was elected as determined by the most recent statistics from USPS available prior to such legislative year for a total of two mailings annually; one newsletter and one town meeting notice.

Prior review required: The definition of "mass mailing" for this section is amended to include mail in direct response to constituents under the requirement of mail over 500 pieces for which a written advisory is required.

Reporting requirement: Requires disclosure in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on a semi-annual basis; first reporting through June and the second report through the end of the legislative year. Disclosure showing total mass mailings and total pieces of mail.

Notice of taxpayer financing of mailings: All mass mailings shall contain the following notice in a prominent place on the cover page of the document: Prepared, Published, and Mailed at Taxpayer Expense.

Effective date: Beginning of the 102d Congress.

SENATE ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

[Inadvertently omitted from the Congressional Record on May 1, 1990.]

The SPEAKER announced his signature to an enrolled joint resolution of the Senate of the following title:

S.J. Res. 153. Joint resolution designating the third week in May 1990 as "National Tourism Week."

ENROLLED BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED

[Inadvertently omitted from the Congressional Record on May 1, 1990.]

Mr. ANNUNZIO, from the Committee on House Administration, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled a bill and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H.R. 756. An act for the relief of Shelton Anthony Smith;

H.J. Res. 553. Joint resolution to make technical changes in the Ethics Reform Act of 1989; and

H.J. Res. 546. Joint resolution designating May 13, 1990, as "Infant Mortality Awareness Day."

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to:

Mr. KYL (at the request of Mr. MICHEL), from 3:30 p.m. today and tomorrow, May 3, on account of attending a funeral.

Mr. LIGHTFOOT (at the request of Mr. MICHEL), for today, on account of personal reasons.

Mr. SMITH of Florida (at the request of Mr. GEPHARDT), on May 2 and May 3, on account of illness in family.

SPECIAL ORDERS GRANTED

By unanimous consent, permission to address the House, following the legislative program and any special orders herefore entered, was granted to:

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. WOLF) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. IRELAND, for 60 minutes, on May 8.

Mr. MICHEL, for 20 minutes, today.

Mr. MCEWEN, for 5 minutes, today.

Mrs. BENTLEY, for 5 minutes, today.

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. MCNULTY) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. ALEXANDER, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. AUCOIN, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. TAUZIN, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. MONTGOMERY, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. ANNUNZIO, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. MFUME, for 60 minutes, on May 3.

Mr. MONTGOMERY, for 60 minutes, on May 10.

(The following Member (at the request of Mr. MCEWEN) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. FRENZEL, for 60 minutes, today.

(The following Member (at the request of Mr. ALEXANDER) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. ESPY, for 60 minutes, on May 16.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

By unanimous consent, permission to revise and extend remarks was granted to:

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. WOLF) and to include extraneous matter:)

Mr. FIELDS.

Mr. CAMPBELL of California in two instances.

Mr. CRANE.

Mr. GEKAS.

Mr. BROOMFIELD in two instances.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN in three instances.

Mr. SOLOMON.

Mr. GILMAN.

Mr. BROOMFIELD in two instances.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana.

Mr. GALLO.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana.

Mrs. MORELLA.

Mr. STUMP.

Mr. SCHULZE.

Mr. WALKER.

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. MCNULTY) and to include extraneous matter:)

Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN.

Mr. SMITH of Florida.

Mr. HAMILTON.

Mr. TORRICELLI.

Mr. DYMALLY.

Mr. NELSON of Florida.

Mr. YATRON in two instances.

Mr. ORTIZ.

Mr. LEVINE of California.

Mr. KILDEE.

Mr. CLAY.

Mr. FEIGHAN.

Mr. MOODY.

Mr. LANTOS.

Mr. SCHUMER.

Mr. ACKERMAN.

Mr. WEISS.

Mr. TRAFICANT in three instances.

Mr. PANETTA.

Mr. SANGMEISTER.

Mr. KENNEDY.

Mr. ROYBAL.

Mr. LIPINSKI.

Mr. FORD of Michigan.

Ms. PELOSI.

Mr. PALLONE in two instances.

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts.

Mr. GAYDOS.

Mrs. LOWEY of New York in two instances.

Mr. ENGEL in two instances.

Mr. WOLPE.

Mr. TORRES in two instances.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

A joint resolution of the Senate of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S.J. Res. 294. Joint resolution to designate May 4, 1990, as "Department of Education Day;" to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

SENATE ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills and joint resolutions of the Senate of the following title:

S. 1485. An act to grant the consent of Congress to the Quad Cities Interstate Metropolitan Authority Compact entered into between the States of Illinois and Iowa;

S. 2533. An act to amend the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, to extend the civil penalty assessment demonstration program, and for other purposes;

S.J. Res. 224. Joint resolution to designate the month of May 1990, as "National Trauma Awareness Month;"

S.J. Res. 230. Joint resolution to designate the period commencing on May 6, 1990, and ending on May 12, 1990, as "National Drinking Water Week;"

S.J. Res. 236. Joint resolution designating May 6 through 12, 1990, as "Be Kind to Aminals and National Pet Week;" and

S.J. Res. 241. Joint resolution to designate the week of May 6, 1990 through May 13, 1990, as "Jewish Heritage Week."

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 7 o'clock and 5 minutes p.m.), the House adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, May 3, 1990, at 11 a.m.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

3108. A letter from the President, Oversight Board; Executive Director, Resolution Trust Corporation, transmitting a joint report on the activities of the Board and the Corporation covering the period October 1, 1989, through March 31, 1990; to the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs.

3109. A letter from the Executive Director, District of Columbia Retirement Board, transmitting financial disclosure statements of Board members for calendar year 1989, pursuant to D.C. Code Section 1-732, 1-734(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

3110. A letter from the Secretary of Education, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to revise and extend the authority to award endowment grants to Howard University, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

3111. A letter from the Director, Bureau of Land Management, transmitting a copy of a report entitled, "Draft Environmental Assessment, Proposed North Las Vegas Land Transfer," pursuant to 43 U.S.C. 1713(c); to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

3112. A letter from the Department of the Interior, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to amend the High Plains States Groundwater Demonstration Program Act of 1983 (98 Stat. 1675) to authorize additional appropriations, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

3113. A letter from the Secretary, the Foundation of the Federal Bar Association, transmitting a copy of the association's audit report for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989, pursuant to 36 U.S.C. 1101(22), 1103; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3114. A letter from the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury (Tax Policy), transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to amend the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987, Public Law 100-203, to extend the existing user fees on each request for a letter ruling, determination letter, opinion letter, or other similar ruling or determination from the Internal Revenue Service; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. DINGELL: Committee of conference. Conference report on H.R. 2364 (Rept. 101-471). Ordered to be printed.

REPORTED BILLS SEQUENTIALLY REFERRED

Under clause 5 of rule X, bills and reports were delivered to the Clerk for printing, and bills referred as follows:

Mr. FASCELL: Committee on Foreign Affairs. H.R. 4610. A bill to authorize assistance for fiscal year 1991 for emerging democracies in Eastern Europe and Central America, to enact foreign assistance authorization legislation, to authorize appropriations for the Peace Corps, the Department of State, and the U.S. Information Agency, and for other purposes; referred to the Committees on Agriculture and Merchant Marine and Fisheries for a period ending not later than May 7, 1990, for consideration of such provisions of the bill as fall within the jurisdiction of those committees pursuant to clause 1 (a) and (n), rule X, respectively (Rept. No. 101-472, Pt. 1). Ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 5 of rule X and clause 4 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. TAUZIN (for himself, Mr. LIVINGSTON, Mr. BAKER, Mr. MCCRERY, Mr. HUCKABY, Mr. HAYES of Louisiana, and Mr. HOLLOWAY):

H.R. 4703. A bill to restore and conserve wetlands of the United States; jointly, to the Committees on Public Works and Transportation and Ways and Means.

By Mr. BROWN of Colorado:

H.R. 4704. A bill to direct the Secretary of the Army to transfer the Pinon Canyon Maneuver Site remnant lands to the Secretary of Agriculture for the purpose of protecting the paleontological, archeological, and natural resources on those lands; jointly, to the Committees on Armed Services and Agriculture.

By Mr. CAMPBELL of California:

H.R. 4705. A bill to amend title 32, United States Code, to require States to allow space at National Guard facilities to be used to provide overnight shelter for homeless individuals when that space is not actively being used for National Guard purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

H.R. 4706. A bill to prohibit Federal assistance for housing program administrative costs to States and local governments that do not limit liability relating to food donations for homeless individuals; to the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs.

By Mr. CAMPBELL of California (for himself, Mr. RITTER, Mr. HYDE, Mr. BOEHLERT, Mr. BUECHNER, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. PURSELL, and Mr. HILER):

H.R. 4707. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to discourage highly leveraged corporate takeovers by allowing a deduction for dividends paid by domestic corporations; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CAMPBELL of California (for himself, Mr. RITTER, Mr. PURSELL, Mr. HYDE, Mr. BOEHLERT, Mr. BUECHNER, Mr. INHOFE, and Mr. HILER):

H.R. 4708. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow a charitable deduction for corporate contributions of employee services to educational organizations; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

H.R. 4709. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide a 50-percent capital gains exclusion for certain business stock held for more than 2 years; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CAMPBELL of California (for himself, Mr. ECKART, Mr. BRUCE, Mr. PURSELL, Mr. HYDE, Mr. BOEHLERT, Mr. BUECHNER, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. HILER, Mr. RITTER, Mr. CHAPMAN, and Mr. HUCKABY):

H.R. 4710. A bill to exclude during the course of any unfair import trade practice investigation involving an infringement of a patent, copyright, trademark, or mask work the entry into the United States of the articles concerned upon a prima facie of such infringement; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CONTE (for himself, Mr. UDALL, and Mr. MCMILLEN of Maryland):

H.R. 4711. A bill to provide for youth sport programs at public housing projects that have substantial drug problems; to the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs.

By Mr. DANNEMEYER:

H.R. 4712. A bill to amend title 28, United States Code, to establish a new judicial district in California to be comprised of Orange, Riverside, and San Bernardino Counties; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DE LA GARZA:

H.R. 4713. A bill entitled, "Agricultural Resources Conservation Act of 1990"; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. KOSTMAYER:

H.R. 4714. A bill to provide for the establishment of farmland resource conservation programs, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. LEVINE of California (for himself, Mr. RITTER, Mr. VALENTINE, Mr. BROWN of California, Mr. MINETA, Ms. SCHNEIDER, Mr. FAZIO, Mr. BRUCE, Mr. NAGLE, Mr. SCHEUER, Mr. WOLF, Mr. JOHNSTON of Florida, and Mrs. BENTLEY):

H.R. 4715. A bill to provide for the formation of an industry-run, Government-chartered, nonprofit corporation for research, development, and manufacturing activities in the strategic high-technology sector, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology.

By Mr. MYERS of Indiana (by request):

H.R. 4716. A bill to reform the Federal pay system, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

By Mr. OLIN:

H.R. 4717. A bill to suspend temporarily the duty on textile winding or reeling machines; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SAXTON (for himself, Ms. SCHNEIDER, Mr. HUGHES, Mr. PALLONE, Mr. ROE, Mr. GALLO, Mr. COURTER, Mr. DWYER of New Jersey, and Mr. CARPER):

H.R. 4718. A bill to place a moratorium on the fishing of Atlantic striped bass within waters under the jurisdiction of the United States; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. SCHULZE:

H.R. 4719. A bill to temporarily waive certain tax provisions which, because of their uncertain applicability, discourage tax-exempt organizations from providing assistance to emerging democratic groups in Eastern Europe; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SCHUMER (for himself and Mr. MOODY):

H.R. 4720. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to encourage savings by allowing an advance deduction for amounts to be contributed to individual retirement plans, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia (for himself, Mr. BATEMAN, Mr. BLILEY, Mr. BOUCHER, Mr. OLIN, Mr. PARRIS, Mr. PAYNE of Virginia, Mr. PICKETT, Mr. SISISKY, and Mr. WOLF):

H.R. 4721. A bill to designate the Federal building located at 340 North Pleasant Valley Road in Winchester, VA, as the "J. Kenneth Robinson Postal Building"; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

By Mr. TAUKE (for himself, Mr. GRANDY, Mr. LEACH of Iowa, Mr. LIGHTFOOT, and Mr. SMITH of Iowa):

H.R. 4722. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to exclude from gross income amounts received under any State in-home care program by an individual for care of a member of such individual's family; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. TORRICELLI (for himself and Mr. RINALDO):

H.R. 4723. A bill to amend the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act to define light butter; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. COLEMAN of Missouri:

H.J. Res. 560. Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States to prohibit the Supreme Court or any inferior court of the United States from ordering the laying or increasing of taxes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ROYBAL:

H.J. Res. 561. Joint resolution designating October 1 through October 7, 1990, as "National Federal Bar Association Recognition Week"; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

By Mrs. BENTLEY (for herself, Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN, Mr. PENNY, Mr. GALLEGLY, Mr. KYL, Mr. LENT, Mr. SMITH of Florida, Mr. HORTON, Mr. DORNAN of California, Mr. COX, Mr. SIKORSKI, Mr. TRAFICANT, Mr. RINALDO, Mr. LAGOMARSINO, Mr. DOUGLAS, Mr. TAUKE, Mrs. VUCANOVICH, Mr. BILIRAKIS, Mr. STUMP, Mr. CONDIT, Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois, Mr. LIPINSKI, Mr. HEFLEY, and Mr. CRAIG):

H. Con. Res. 319. Concurrent resolution to condemn the role of Cuba in international drug trafficking; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. FRENZEL (for himself and Mr. THOMAS of California):

H. Res. 386. Resolution establishing an allowance for official mail, reducing from 3 to 1 the factor used in limiting the amount of postal patron mail allowable in any year, and otherwise providing for controls on the cost of mailing by Members of the House of Representatives; jointly, to the Committees on House Administration and Rules.

By Mr. MICHEL (for himself and Mr. FRENZEL):

H. Res. 387. Resolution establishing an allowance for official mail, reducing from 3 to 2 the factor used in limiting the amount of postal patron mail allowable in any year, and otherwise providing for controls on the cost of mailing by Members of the House of Representatives; jointly, to the Committees on House Administration and Rules.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 4 of rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

379. By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Assembly of the State of California, relative to Lithuania; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

380. Also, memorial of the State Senate of Minnesota, relative to the Civilian Conservation Corps; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

381. Also, memorial of the Assembly of the State of California relative to oilspills; jointly, to the Committees on Merchant Marine and Fisheries and Public Works and Transportation.

ADDITIONAL SPONSORS

Under clause 4 of rule XXII, sponsors were added to public bills and resolutions as follows:

H.R. 29: Mr. EDWARDS of California.

H.R. 41: Mr. JACOBS and Mr. ENGEL.

H.R. 60: Mr. LEWIS of California, Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN, Mr. VOLKMER, Mr. HARRIS, Mr. WOLF, Mr. NAGLE, and Mr. ROSE.

H.R. 200: Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois.

H.R. 446: Mr. SMITH of Vermont, Mr. GALLO, Mr. HALL of Ohio, and Mr. RINALDO.

H.R. 655: Mr. SERRANO.

H.R. 844: Mr. HANCOCK.

H.R. 1068: Mr. IRELAND, Mr. LAFALCE, Mr. MOAKLEY, Mr. RAVENEL, Mr. HAMILTON, Mr. HOCHBRUECKNER, Mr. CARR, and Mr. STAGGERS.

H.R. 1141: Mr. INHOFE.

H.R. 2316: Mr. GINGRICH.

H.R. 2353: Mr. OLIN.

H.R. 2373: Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN, Mr. ATKINS, Mr. ESPY, and Mr. ENGEL.

H.R. 2380: Mr. ROYBAL, Mr. ANNUNZIO, Mr. SAVAGE, Mr. DICKINSON, Mr. DANNEMEYER, Mr. KLECZKA, Mr. PORTER, and Mr. COX.

H.R. 2437: Mr. CRAIG and Mr. LAUGHLIN.

H.R. 2460: Mr. FLIPPO and Mr. COOPER.

H.R. 2881: Mr. OWENS of New York.

H.R. 2951: Mr. BATES and Mr. DYSON.

H.R. 2952: Mr. BATES and Mr. DYSON.

H.R. 3119: Mr. GINGRICH and Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire.

H.R. 3158: Mr. FLIPPO, Mr. TRAFICANT, Mr. HASTERT, Mr. STANGELAND, Mr. LEACH of Iowa, Mr. GEJDENSON, and Mr. GOODLING.

H.R. 3251: Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois.

H.R. 3321: Mr. BONIOR.

H.R. 3423: Mr. ENGEL.

H.R. 3489: Mr. EMERSON, Mr. FROST, Mr. LEWIS of Florida, Mr. MACHTLEY, Mr. MCEWEN, Mr. PAXON, Mr. POSHARD, and Mr. SKEEN.

H.R. 3500: Mr. FEIGHAN.

H.R. 3603: Mr. MCDERMOTT, Mr. BROWN of Colorado, Mr. MANTON, Mr. BRUCE, Mr. HALL of Texas, Mr. PERKINS, Mr. TAUZIN, Mr. SCHEUER, Mr. ROBINSON, Mr. SHAW, Mr. DERRICK, Mr. HAYES of Louisiana, Mr. SCHIFF, Mr. STEARNS, Mr. DOUGLAS, Mr. MCCRERY, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. RITTER, Mr. FLAKE, Mr. WEISS, Mr. HOLLOWAY, Mr. CONTE, Mr. SAXTON, Mr. ROE, Mr. RINALDO, Mr. MARLENEE, Mr. CAMPBELL of Colorado, Mr. NELSON of Florida, and Mr. JACOBS.

H.R. 3717: Mr. WASHINGTON, Mr. RAHALL, Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey, Mr. AUCOIN, Mrs. LOWEY of New York, Mr. OWENS of New York, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. VISCLOSKY, Mr. WYDEN, Mrs. UNSOELD, Mr. MILLER of California, Mr. POSHARD, Mr. DEFAZIO, Mr. HAYES of Illinois, and Mr. KILDEE.

H.R. 3745: Mr. HAWKINS, Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, and Mr. JACOBS.

H.R. 3768: Mr. MOLLOHAN.

H.R. 3800: Mr. CHANDLER, Mr. FISH, Mr. DERRICK, Mr. BURTON of Indiana, Mr. COSTELLO, Mr. HANCOCK, Mr. HILER, Mr. JAMES, Mr. KOLBE, Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia, Mr. SLATTERY, Mr. LAGOMARSINO, Mr. HALL of Texas, Mr. JENKINS, Mr. GRANDY, and Mrs. SAIKI.

H.R. 3802: Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. KILDEE, Mr. HOCHBRUECKNER, Mr. TORRICELLI, Mr. MANTON, Mr. ASPIN, Mr. QUILLEN, Mr. LEWIS of California, Mr. CRANE, Mr. LIPINSKI, Mr. SAXTON, Mr. CROCKETT, Mr. YATES, Mr. SHAW, Mr. SAVAGE, Mr. BEVILL, Mr. TRAFICANT, Mr. MOORHEAD, Mr. HAWKINS, Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois, Mr. ANDERSON, Mr. SWIFT, Mr. OBERSTAR, Mr. MRAZEK, Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT, Mr. PICKLE, Mr. GONZALEZ, Mr. GUARINI, Mr. GUNDERSON, Mr. KASICH, Mr. PARRIS, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. VANDER JAGT, Mr. SAWYER, Mr. BARNARD, Mr. BATEMAN, Mr. BEILENSON, Mr. BILBRAY, Mr. BLILEY, Mr. BROWN of Colorado, Mr. CARR, Mr. CLINGER, Mr. CONDIT, Mr. CONTE, Mr. COUGHLIN, Mr. DELAY, Mr. ESPY, Mr. GAYDOS, Mr. GEKAS, Mr. HANSEN, Mrs. LLOYD, Mrs. LOWEY of New York, Mr. MADIGAN, Mr. MORRISON of Washington, Mr. SERRANO, Mr. STANGELAND, Mr. STARK, Mr. VALENTINE, Mr. WELDON, Mr. HOYER, Mr. DORNAN of California, Mr. LEACH of Iowa, Mr. THOMAS of California, Mr. SHUMWAY, Mr. SISISKY, Mr. FRENZEL, Mr. ALEXANDER, Mr. BOUCHER, Mr. CARDIN, Mr. CHAPMAN, Mr. HEFNER, Mr. COURTER, Mr. JACOBS, Mr. RINALDO, Mr. WOLPE, Mr. YOUNG of Alaska, Mr. WASHINGTON, Mrs. VUCANOVICH, Mr. STUDDS, Mr. SARPALIUS, Mr. RICHARDSON, Mr. PARKER, Mr. PALLONE, Mr. ORTIZ, Mr. MFUME, Mr. JONTZ, Mr. HUBBARD, Mr. GEJDENSON, Mr. FORD of Michigan, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. COSTELLO, Mr. CLEMENT, Mr. CHANDLER, Mr. BRYANT, Mr. MICHEL, Mr. APPLEGATE, Mr. BRUCE, Mrs. BOGGS, Mr. COX, Mr. DREIER of California, Mr. PACKARD, Mr. ROBINSON, Mr. STEARNS, Mr. BARTLETT, Mr. ROBERT F. SMITH, Mr. PICKETT, and Mr. TORRES.

H.R. 3864: Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois.

H.R. 3903: Mr. ROE.

H.R. 3914: Mr. LAGOMARSINO.

H.R. 3934: Mr. RAHALL and Mr. SHAYS.

H.R. 3958: Ms. KAPTUR, Mr. LENT, Mr. JACOBS, Mr. CLEMENT, Mr. VANDER JAGT, Mr. SUNDQUIST, Mr. BLAZ, Mr. DOUGLAS, Mr. WISE, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. MAVROULES, Mr. ROHRABACHER, Mr. RHODES, Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. RICHARDSON, Mr. RAY, Mr. OXLEY, and Mr. WALSH.

H.R. 3980: Mr. SUNDQUIST.

H.R. 4120: Mr. ESPY, Mr. DELLUMS, and Mr. LIPINSKI.

H.R. 4205: Mr. MANTON.

H.R. 4231: Mr. FAUNTROY, Mr. FORD of Tennessee, Mrs. COLLINS, Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas, Mr. SCHIFF, Mr. ESPY, Mr. POSHARD, and Mr. DELLUMS.

H.R. 4239: Mr. VENTO and Mr. TORRES.

H.R. 4254: Mr. ROWLAND of Georgia.

H.R. 4274: Mr. OWENS of Utah.

H.R. 4334: Mr. POSHARD.

H.R. 4336: Mr. LANCASTER, Mr. FIELDS, Mr. BARTON of Texas, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mr. HORTON, and Mr. BARTLETT.

H.R. 4421: Mr. WALGREN and Mr. RANGEL.

H.R. 4460: Mr. SHARP, Mr. COYNE, and Mr. SIKORSKI.

H.R. 4479: Mr. HAWKINS.

H.R. 4492: Mr. BERMAN and Mr. HAYES of Illinois.

H.R. 4495: Mr. CLARKE, Mr. GALLEGLY, Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota, and Mr. SHUMWAY.

H.R. 4498: Mr. HOCHBRUECKNER, Mr. GILMAN, Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota, Mr. MRAZEK, Mr. ROSE, Mr. LANTOS, Mr. GRANT, Mr. ANDREWS, Mr. SMITH of Florida, Mr. OLIN, Mr. LEVINE of California, Mr. MOODY, Mr. POSHARD, Mr. KANJORSKI, Ms. OAKAR, Mr. CADIN, Mr. SHAYS, and Mr. ROYBAL.

H.R. 4499: Mr. SMITH of Texas and Mr. HUNTER.

H.R. 4574: Ms. PELOSI and Mr. GRAY.

H.R. 4597: Mr. SCHEUER.

H.R. 4650: Mr. AUCOIN, Mr. FASCELL, Mr. GILLMOR, Mr. GILMAN, Mr. KOLTER, Mr. LAGOMARSINO, Mr. MATSUI, Ms. PELOSI, Mr. ROYBAL, Mr. SABO, and Mr. YOUNG of Florida.

H.J. Res. 226: Mr. DEFAZIO, Mr. SHAW, Mr. GILMOR, and Mr. WYDEN.

H.J. Res. 459: Mr. ESPY, Mr. DICKS, and Mr. TAUKE.

H.J. Res. 486: Mr. DEWINE, Mr. HAWKINS, Mr. SPENCE, Mr. FIELDS, MR. SAWYER, Mr. ROBERTS, Mr. FUSTER, Mr. LENT, Mr. MAVROULES, Mr. SAXTON, Mr. LAFALCE, Mr. DOUGLAS, Mr. ROYBAL, Mr. CALLAHAN, Mr. LOWERY of California, Mr. DOWNEY, Mr. MAZZOLI, Mr. STUMP, Mr. MOLLOHAN, Mr. MONTGOMERY, Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, and Mr. ROBINSON.

H.J. Res. 488: Mr. EVANS, Mr. QUILLEN, Mr. SAVAGE, Mr. SPENCE, Mr. FORD of Tennessee, Mr. SUNDQUIST, Mr. HAWKINS, Mr. PANETTA, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mr. GINGRICH, Mr. HARRIS, Mr. HAYES of Louisiana, Mr. HUBBARD, Mr. LIPINSKI, Mr. HYDE, Mr. GORDON, Mr. SPRATT, Mr. KOLTER, Mr. KASICH, Mr. LEHMAN of Florida, Mr. DARDEN, Mr. DUNCAN, and Mr. OLIN.

H.J. Res. 502: Mr. OWENS of Utah, Mr. FAUNTROY, Mr. BLAZ, Mr. MONTGOMERY, Mr. SCHUETTE, Mr. CLARKE, Mr. BILIRAKIS, Mr. WOLF, Mr. SCHEUER, Mr. SKEEN, Mr. FUSTER, Mr. MCCLOSKEY, Mr. RAHALL, Mr. ROE, Mr. MCGRATH, Mr. HARRIS, Mr. DORNAN of California, Mr. PALLONE, Mr. RANGEL, Mr. WALSH, Mr. LAGOMARSINO, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. BLILEY, Mr. ROBINSON, Mr. DWYER of New Jersey, Mr. PURSELL, Ms. KAPTUR, Mr. ATKINS, Mr. MILLER of Washington, Mr. HORTON, Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas, Mr. HUGHES, Mr. JONTZ, Mr. EVANS, Mr. NIELSON of Utah, Mr. TORRICELLI, Mrs. COLLINS, Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota, Mr. BEVILL, and Mr. FAZIO.

H.J. Res. 514: Mr. RANGEL, Mr. FAZIO, Mr. WISE, Mr. SUNDQUIST, Mr. SAXTON, Mr. HORTON, Mr. GUNDERSON, Mr. MARTIN of New York, Mr. HERTEL, Mr. TOWNS, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. CALLAHAN, Mr. MACHTLEY, Mr. CARDIN, Mr. WALSH, Mr. WALGREN, Mr. DENNY SMITH, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. MCDERMOTT, Mr. HUGHES, Mr. YATRON, Mr. COSTELLO, Mr. CLAY, Mr. SCHEUER, Mr. SCHUETTE, Mr. BORSKI, Mr. CARPER, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. WOLPE, Mr. ANDERSON, Mrs. VUCANOVICH, Mr. CONTE, Mr. CONYERS, Mr. JONES of North Carolina, Mr. KASICH, Mr. JONTZ, Mr. KOSTMAYER, Mr. LAGOMARSINO, Mr. LANCASTER, Mr. LENT, Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, Mr. KANJORSKI, Mr. LIPINSKI, Mr. LIVINGSTON, Mr. FORD of Michigan, Ms. OAKAR, Mr. MCCLOSKEY, Mr. DE LUGO, Mr. DINGELL, Mr. DICKS, Mr. ESPY, Mr. FAWELL, Mr. HAYES of Illinois, Mr. HUBBARD, Mr. PASHAYAN, Mr. PERKINS, Mr. QUILLEN, Mr. RHODES, Mr. RAY, Mr. ROBERTS, Mr. ROBINSON, Mr. SABO, Mr. MCNULTY, Mr. ROBERT F. SMITH, and Mr. TAUZIN.

H.J. Res. 519: Mr. BOSCO, Mr. CLARKE, Mr. COBLE, and Mr. COURTER,

H.J. Res. 522: Mr. TOWNS, Mr. SCHIFF, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. MINETA, Mr. SPENCE, and Mr. STUDDS.

H.J. Res. 523: Mr. SMITH of Florida.

H.J. Res. 531: Mr. FORD of Michigan and Mr. STOKES.

H.J. Res. 534: Mr. DELLUMS.

H.J. Res. 540: Mrs. BOXER, Mr. MORRISON of Washington, Mr. LANCASTER, Mr. GUARINI, Mr. BENNETT, and Mr. BARNARD.

H. Con. Res. 69: Mr. GOSS.

H. Con. Res. 151: Mr. BERMAN.

H. Con. Res. 172: Mr. BATES and Mr. DYSON.

H. Con. Res. 259: Mrs. PATTERSON, Mr. FRANK, Mr. POSHARD, Mr. AUCOIN, Mr. BEILENSON, Mr. PEASE, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. BOSCO, Mr. LEVIN of Michigan, Mr. BATES, Mr. OWENS of New York, Mr. SHAYS, Mr. KOSTMAYER, Mr. MCCLOSKEY, Mr. RUSSO, Mr. TALLON, Mr. BOUCHER, Mr. RICHARDSON, Mr. CROCKETT, Mr. FORD of Michigan, Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, Mr. BONIOR, Mr. OWENS of Utah, Mr. CHANDLER, Mrs. KENNELLY, and Mrs. SAIKI.

H. Con. Res. 316: Mr. WOLPE, Mr. TORRICELLI, Ms. LONG, Mrs. BYRON, Mr. TAUKE, Mr. BONIOR, Mr. UDALL, Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut, Mr. COLEMAN of Texas, Ms. SLAUGTHER of New York, Mr. CLEMENT, Mr. DONNELLY, Mr. LAUGHLIN, Mr. BROOKS, Ms. KAPTUR, Mr. SCHIFF, Mr. CONDIT, Mr. CONTE, Ms. PELOSI, Mr. COYNE, Mr. STUDDS, Mr. CARR, Mr. WHEAT, Mr. CHAPMAN, Mrs. UNSOELD, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. LIPINSKI, Mr. BORSKI, Mr. ROE, and Mr. FAUNTROY.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

WITH PEACE BREAKING OUT ALL OVER, TURKEY DOESN'T NEED MORE U.S. MILITARY EQUIPMENT

HON. WM. S. BROOMFIELD

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Speaker, a political sea change in moving throughout Eastern Europe that is bringing democracy, and a lessening of tensions in that region. In response to these dramatic changes, NATO is trying to redefine its role in a new Europe that will surely be less threatening to Western interests than in previous years. Our European allies are planning force reductions and America also envisions troop and equipment cuts in Europe in response to the improving political climate on that continent.

These dramatic changes have prompted me to question why Turkey needs yet more military equipment during this period of improving relations between the former members of the Warsaw Pact and NATO. I also ask this question in light of Turkey's instransigence on the Cyprus problem. Given these concerns, Congressman YATRON and I recently introduced a resolution of disapproval concerning the proposed sale of sophisticated attack helicopters to Turkey. Given Turkey's poor track record in using U.S.-supplied military hardware on Cyprus, there is concern that those helicopters might be transferred to that island in clear contravention of the will of the U.S. Congress. Although we did not call for further committee consideration of the resolution, both of us are deeply concerned about Turkey's failure to lend a hand in solving the Cyprus dispute.

It is my understanding that the administration may propose further sales and transfers of modern equipment to Turkey during this period of reduced tensions. Should more equipment transfers be envisoned by the administration, Congressman YATRON and I will vigorously oppose them and will call for complete committee consideration and, possibly, a House vote on these necessary and ill-timed requests. Turkey must understand that there are Members of Congress who question why that nation should be rewarded with more U.S.-made military equipment while Ankara drags its feet on the Cyprus issue.

The story of that small nation is a tragic one. For 16 years, 30,000 well-equipped Turkish troops have illegally occupied the northern side of the island. Ankara has consistently refused to reduce its forces there. Many Greek Cypriots were killed in the 1974 invasion and thousands are missing and remain unaccounted for. Among the Americans who are missing is Andrew Kassapis, a young Michigan resident who was taken from his family's home on that island and never seen again. Over 200,000 refugees fled to the south during the invasion and lost their homes and possessions. As if this were not enough, Turkey later sent 60,000 settlers to northern Cyprus to live in the abandoned properties. Ancient Greek Cypriot churches in northern Cyrus have been looted and defaced and priceless mosaics have been stolen and sold to art dealers in Europe. Although Turkey had a major role in creating the tragedy of Cyprus, it has played only a minor part in the search for a solution.

Ankara claims that it wants a negotiated settlement on Cyprus. But the Turkish Government has done little to move the peace process forward. Not only have the Turkish authorities refused to reduce military force levels on the island, they have used modern U.S.-supplied military equipment on Cyprus. Originally intended for NATO defensive purposes, use of this material in this manner is in violation of U.S. law. Turkish troops remain on Cyprus in clear defiance of the requests of the United Nations, the European Community, and the U.S. Congress. Is there any wonder that our allies call Turkey the only European nation that is an occupying power and deny Turkey membership in the European Community?

Turkey, the political and financial supporter of the Turkish-Cypriot community on that island, is the only country in the world that recognizes the so-called Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus. Turkey has failed to exercise sufficient influence on Mr. Rauf Denktash, the leader of the Turkish-Cypriot community on Cyprus, to encourage him to seriously pursue a peaceful solution to the problems that divide the island.

Last summer, Mr. Denktash rejected a U.N.-prepared draft outline which provided general guidance as to how intercommunal talks should proceed. He also derailed the Secretary General's most recent talks on Cyprus and has yet to agree to resume the negotiations. U.N. Secretary General Perez de Cuellar deserves our admiration for his good offices and for his energetic commitment to the peace process for Cyprus. President Vassiliou of Cyprus has also displayed remarkable statemanship and flexibility in trying to resolve the Cyprus problem peacefully and has indicated that he remains ready to work for peace.

As an ally of the United States that has received millions of dollars in U.S. economic and military assistance over the years, Turkey must play a more positive role in the peace process. It should begin by withdrawing its troops from Cyprus and by encouraging Mr. Denktash to return to the intercommunal talks and seriously negotiate for peace. Until I see a change of heart on the part of Turkey and the leader of the Cypriot community, I will oppose a "business as usual" approach to our relations with Ankara.

In particular, I and my colleagues will continue to maintain the 7:10 ratio in the levels of U.S. foreign military financing for Greece and Turkey. That ratio will also be applied to levels of excess U.S. defense articles made available to both countries. The ratio enables our government to meet its military and security commitments in that region while insisting that progress be made in the peace process on Cyprus. The concept of a ratio began in 1978 when Turkey sought and won a resumption of U.S. military assistance to Ankara. In spite of the promises and expectations at that time, thousands of Turkish troops remain on Cyprus. My expectations about troop levels on Cyprus have not yet been met and there is no reason to abandon our insistence that Turkey comply with the terms of the agreement.

With peace breaking out all over the world, it is time for men of good will to focus their energies and attention on Cyprus and settle this oft-neglected dispute. It is certainly not the time to further fatten Turkey's already formidable military arsenal.

OPPOSED TO MILITARY EQUIPMENT TO TURKEY

HON. GUS YATRON

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. YATRON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to call attention to the Pentagon's proposal to sell five AH-1W attack helicopters to the Government of Turkey. I have joined my good friend and colleague, the ranking minority member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Congressman WILLIAM S. BROOMFIELD in opposing this sale. Although the implementation of the sale of these defense articles is inevitable, Turkey's unjust occupation of over a third of the sovereign state of Cyprus makes it necessary that we in Congress continue to speak out against the administration's efforts to strengthen military ties with Ankara.

Mr. Speaker, we should be consistent in promoting a policy toward Cyprus based on the same principles we have supported for the rest of the world—human rights, representative government, and nonaggression. Unfortunately, this has not been the case.

The dispute on Cyprus is not one which fits into the traditional East-West regional conflict which we are now seeing resolved. Executive branch officials have tended to view Cyprus as a symptom of a larger problem between Greece and Turkey. The notion of the U.S. pressing for a settlement to a dispute which may antagonize one of our friends has never been well-received at the State Department or the Pentagon. Even when it is clear that one country—Turkey—is the aggressor, the policy of benign neglect remains the preferred option.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that by calling attention to this helicopter sale, Ankara will be reminded that its occupation of Cyprus will continue to place improving United States-Turkish relations on a holding pattern.

● This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor.
Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.

TRIBUTE TO ISRAEL'S 42D BIRTHDAY

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, a tribute to the State of Israel's 42d anniversary of independence was formally observed in Israel and cities all over the world on April 30.

For a nation young in age and for all the problems that beset her, externally and internally, Israel is doing extraordinarily well.

The atmosphere of global change reaffirms Israel's central role for the Jewish people. Day to day, Israel struggles and accomplishes on issues such as the influx of Soviet Jewish immigrants to Israel, the fight against worldwide anti-Semitism, the civil war within the Palestinian population, and issues of economic and electoral change.

It is easy to lose sight of the fact that, even if Israel were not the fulfillment of a 2,000-year-old dream, it would still be one of the world's great success stories. Perhaps that is because most nations have had to invest and define themselves over time, whereas Israel was already a nation that simply, finally, came home.

In my congressional district, there are a great number of organizations that are celebrating Israel's 42d milestone. In honor of Israel's birthday, the South Florida Council of Na'amat USA held their annual donor luncheon. The luncheon included both musical and nonmusical salutes to Israel's founding in 1948. Lillian Hoffman, of Sunny Isles, offered the invocation and Cantor Daniel Kaizler, of Temple Bet Shmuel, headlined the entertainment program.

Also involved were members of the South Florida Council of Na'amat, including vice president Shirley Partner, who was the arrangement chairman, and Bebee Pullman who acted as the reservation chairman. Felice Schwartz of Miami Beach was the public relations chairman.

Chaim Chesler, the national director of the Aliyah Center for both the World Zionist Organization and the Jewish Agency for Israel, was the principal speaker. Mr. Chesler spoke on the developments in Israel and on the exodus of Soviet Jewry.

Harriet Green, the national president of the Woman's Labor Organization of America took part in the program. Gert Aaron, council copresident, chaired the luncheon with Margot Bergthal.

Na'amat supports hundreds of health, educational, vocational, and cultural facilities throughout Israel. I commend all their efforts in celebrating Israel's 42d birthday.

HELP FOR THE HOMELESS

HON. TOM CAMPBELL

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. CAMPBELL of California. Mr. Speaker, during the bitter cold of the winter months much attention is focused on people sleeping on the streets, but even on this warm spring day there are men, women, and children who have no place to go each night; they are homeless.

HUD estimates that there are approximately 500,000 homeless individuals currently in the United States today. Some advocacy groups concerned with homelessness place that figure closer to 3 million homeless. If this figure is even half of what it is estimated to be, there are thousands upon thousands of people sleeping on the streets, without a roof over their heads, throughout the year. I think it is about time that something be done to help these people year round, not just when the weather is below freezing. We need to act now to ensure that these displaced people have somewhere to go during the summer, winter, spring, and fall.

The bill I introduce today would require that National Guard Armories be made available for use as homeless shelters year round unless military necessity intervenes. Such a change could increase dramatically the amount of temporary shelters across the country. Governors and the Secretary of Defense would be given responsibility for designating, after examination, to what extent a National Guard facility could be so utilized. Governors would be required to make that space available for use by a State or local governmental agency, or a qualified charitable organization. We should not mistake this approach for a permanent solution to the homeless crisis. We should recognize it for what it is—a necessary first step toward achieving a humane, comprehensive safety net for these suffering individuals.

TRIBUTE TO PIA GIURA

HON. JAMES A. TRAFICANT, JR.

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Pia Giura of my 17th Congressional District of Ohio. Mrs. Giura will be celebrating her 100th birthday on May 15, 1990.

Mrs. Giura has been a resident in the United States since 1920, and received her American citizenship more than two decades ago. Mrs. Giura's husband, Thomasso Giura, fought in the Italian Army in World War I, but instead of returning to Italy, he brought Mrs. Giura and their 6-year-old daughter to the United States. Since coming to the United States, Mrs. Giura has been a resident of Youngstown, OH.

Mrs. Giura has been an outstanding citizen since coming to the United States. Last year she was named the Italian Citizen of the Year by the Youngstown Italian Fest.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to wish Pia Giura a very happy 100th birthday. She is an amazing woman who has accomplished a great deal in her life and I hope she has a great many more birthdays ahead of her.

HUMAN RIGHTS OF THE HUNGARIANS IN TRANSYLVANIA

HON. EDWARD F. FEIGHAN

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. FEIGHAN. Mr. Speaker, my friend, Dr. Michael Szaz, has worked with the American Hungarian Federation on behalf of human rights for ethnic Hungarians in Romania for the past 25 years. He is the executive vice president of the American Foreign Policy Institute and a former professor of international relations and law. He was in Transylvania just 6 weeks before the ethnic rioting occurred there in March. The following is a translation of an essay he had published in the journal, American-Canadian Hungarian Life, and describes his impression of the violence in Tirgu Mures.

THE SITUATION OF THE HUNGARIANS OF TRANSYLVANIA AFTER THE BLOODBATH AT TIRGU MURES (MAROSVASARHELY)

(By Dr. Michael Szaz)

The world press and U.S. television alike covered in detail the anti-Hungarian pogroms at Tirgu Mures (Marosvasarhely). This was initiated by chauvinist Rumanian forces that wanted to intimidate the Hungarian ethnic group in Transylvania. I do not believe that the present Rumanian government would have desired such action, for the same chauvinist forces would like to overthrow the Iliescu government as well. However, the government certainly profits from an intimidation of the Hungarian ethnic group.

All analysis must start with the finding that the Transylvanian Hungarians could rightfully expect the implementation of its minimum requests by the revolutionary government. For at Timisoara (Temesvar), Cluj (Kolozsvar), and even at Tirgu Mures (Marosvasarhely), Hungarians and Rumanians were demonstrating together and falling dead together from the gunfire of the Securitate. They both wanted to overthrow the cursed Ceausescu regime. The Rumanian government had promised initially to restore the schools and equal rights of Hungarians. The nomination of Attila Palfalvi as Deputy Minister of Culture seemed to guarantee the implementation of these promises.

It became obvious as early as the end of January that the restoration of Hungarian schools was meeting sharp resistance on the local level, however. While the Samuel Brassay High School was returned to the Hungarians at Cluj, the Bolyai University and the old Piarist High School have not been restored to this day. Professor Cornea was not the only one who opposed their return to the Hungarians.

At Tirgu Mures (Marosvasarhely), the situation was tense as early as February because the Hungarian demand for the return of the Bolyai High School (the old Hungarian Reformed academic high school) and in the request that the Hungarians should be proportionally represented in public administration. These Hungarian initiatives were implemented only more or less in the city council, not in the county council or the city and county administrations. The situation was worsening because the Rumanian intellectuals were split; some of them had joined the Vatra Romesca which opposed Hungarian "separatism," i.e., the demand for separate schools and bilingualism. The chauvinist slogans of the Vatra found response especially in the region of Mures (Maros). Many of its members were former Securitate agents or officials fearful of being fired if Hungarians were proportionally represented in public offices.

During my visit of February 7, I witnessed the first Rumanian demonstration at the Square of the Roses. Although this demonstration was peaceful, the local Hungarian leaders already feared that the Rumanian peasants of the mountain villages would be called by Rumanian nationalists to attack the Hungarians.

The crisis came to a head on March 15. The central government gave the Hungarian Democratic Federation in Rumania permission to celebrate Hungarian Independence Day. This was too much for the Vatra Romanesca, the ex-Securitate agents and those Rumanian chauvinists who still sympathized with the ideas of the former Iron Guard. Although the attacks began on March 15, the Rumanian army separated the fighting crowds only on March 22, after Andras Suto had lost the sight in one eye, six people lay dead, and 300 others, mostly Hungarian, were wounded. The details of this local civil war do not belong here as they have been sufficiently covered by the world press.

What are the consequences of the events at Tirgu Mures (Marosvasarhely)?

The first consequence was that Hungarian-Rumanian governmental relations deteriorated, rendering the participation of the Hungarian government in the maintenance of cultural relations between the two countries more difficult. The Rumanian Ministry of Culture decreed at the end of February that books may be imported from Hungary into Rumania only through them. Though there is no real search yet by the border guards as in the days of Ceausescu, the importation of Hungarian book materials is steadily declining. The Hungarian Consulate had not been opened yet, despite earlier promises, because the Rumanians dragged their feet.

The second consequence is the despair of the Transylvanian Hungarians. Last week, the Washington Post published an article which reported that when a haystack was burning in a Hungarian village near Tirgu Mures (Marosvasarhely), the men in the next village grabbed pitchforks, spades, and clubs, and marched to the border of the village to fight the Rumanian arsonists who, they thought, must have set fire to the first village. On the Rumanian side, I was appalled to read the reply of the Rumanian soldier who stated that he would shoot if the Hungarians were to attack (in Tirgu Mures), for the Hungarians have no respect for the Rumanian language. He admitted that he would face a difficult question if the Rumanians were to attack. Such are the "peacekeeping" Rumanian armed forces.

Thirdly, the riots weakened the authority of the central government in Bucharest over both Rumanians and Hungarians. The indecision the Iliescu government has shown will only increase the appetite of the ultranationalist forces to employ their violent tactics in the coming election campaign.

Finally, however, the riots created an international problem over the rights and autonomy of the Hungarians of Transylvania which is not in the interest of Rumania. If Transylvania were to remain an internationally recognized problem, the riots of Tirgu Mures (Marosvasarhely) initiated a historical process, the final outcome of which may cause serious political, and perhaps even territorial, damage to Rumania. Unless the two peoples reconcile, the nationality question in Rumania cannot be solved.

THE AFRICAN NATIONAL CONGRESS: DOES IT PRACTICE WHAT IT PREACHES ON HUMAN RIGHTS?

HON. PHILIP M. CRANE

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, the African National Congress [ANC] has developed a reputation of opposing apartheid and supporting human rights. Questions are again being raised about the ANC's support of human rights.

Reports are coming from Africa that the ANC has imprisoned and tortured its members who have disagreed with the ANC. This past Friday the Christian Science Monitor in a front page article reported that some of the ANC dissidents claim they were beaten, interrogated, shocked with live electric wires; some were locked into oven-hot metal containers.

The dissidents also maintain that the ANC leaders responsible for the torture continue to hold important positions in the ANC.

Some of us will remember that in 1982, then Senator Denton held a series of hearings on the ANC. In those hearings former ANC members testified that the ANC engaged in human rights abuses. Witnesses testified how disillusioned ANC members are killed secretly or thrown into jail. Gruesome testimony was given about dissident ANC members being stabbed in the kidneys and immediately being thrown in the hole and buried.

One of the witnesses at the hearing, Bartholomew Hlapane, was murdered after he returned home to South Africa. He told Senator Denton that he would be killed for testifying but that he wanted the world to know what the ANC was doing.

Such evidence of human rights abuses cannot be lightly tossed aside. The ANC's record on human rights must be investigated. The protection of basic liberties for all the people of South Africa should be a goal of United States foreign policy. ANC human rights abuses cannot be ignored.

At this point I include the full text of April 20 Christian Science Monitor article "Alleged Rights Abuses Hurt the ANC's Standing."

[From the Christian Science Monitor, Apr. 20, 1990]

ALLEGED RIGHTS ABUSES HURT THE ANC'S STANDING

(By Sharon Behn)

Seven former African National Congress guerrillas, embittered after many years of imprisonment and torture in ANC camps, are accusing South Africa's black nationalist organization of torture, murder by beating, and the suppression of democracy within the ANC.

ANC Deputy President Nelson Mandela quickly acknowledged the claims. "Unfortunately, it is true that some of these people who have complained were in fact tortured," he said in a statement on Sunday. Mr. Mandela added that those responsible for the torture have been dismissed.

Five of the seven dissidents disputed Mandela's claim in an interview in Nairobi. "No steps were taken. People like [executive committee member] Mzwandile Piliso and [head of Umkhonto we Sizwe] Chris Hani are still in power, and even today these monstrosities are continuing," dissident Amos Maxongo says.

In 1980, Ronnie Masango, like many of his friends, left his Pretoria home for Swaziland to join the ANC to fight apartheid. "We left South Africa because we wanted guns. We felt the best way to fight the racist regime was with guns," he says.

Now, 10 years later, he and six of the others who were expelled from the congress for disloyalty and defiance, are accusing the ANC of human rights abuses.

Before Mandela's remarks, the ANC in Lusaka had denied the dissidents' claims, stressing that it had adopted a "code of conduct" in 1985 which forbade torture.

But ANC national executive member Steve Tshwete said Monday that "no army can play with mutineers. We had to suppress the mutiny with all the force at our disposal." He admitted that there had been "excesses" during the interrogations, but "those responsible for this have been properly dealt with."

On Wednesday, ANC deputy representative for Britain, Billy Masetlha, also admitted that the punishments were out of line: "Some people got carried away."

The seven dissidents crossed the border illegally into Kenya and are being cared for by church groups here in Nairobi.

They met South Africa's Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu when he visited here two weeks ago. Archbishop Tutu has asked the All Africa Council of Churches—of which he is president—to investigate the claims and to help the men return home to South Africa.

Delegates of the International Committee of the Red Cross in Nairobi say that South Africa has been contacted, and that it now depends on those authorities. "This is quite a long procedure," ICRC regional delegate Hans Leuenberger said.

Mr. Maxongo, who joined the ANC's Umkhonto we Sizwe military wing in 1978, explains that discontent within the movement had started as early as 1981.

Based in Angola, where an estimated 2,000 to 5,000 fighters lived in eight camps, Maxongo spent years being trained in guerrilla warfare by Cubans, South Africans, and Soviets.

Fighters were isolated in the Angolan bush, with no outside news and little or no military activity, he says. Frustration in the camps grew. "People were not satisfied with the pace of the armed struggle. They had been in the camps five to six years, there were no schools, no supplies. There were a lot of suicides," Maxongo says. Like many others, he was never sent to South Africa.

Discontent among the rank and file coincided with the discovery of a spy ring in the ANC in 1981. A political crackdown followed.

At Pango Camp in eastern Angola, where Maxongo was based, this meant people were tied by their hands to trees so they had to stand on tiptoe. They were then beaten with Soviet Army belts. "They asked us what we were discussing about the leadership, Maxongo says. Two were taken to Quatro, an ANC prison set up in eastern Angola in 1979." The dissidents say that people's arms and legs were tied, then up to 13 people at a time were shoved into a tiny cell, or locked into oven-hot metal containers.

By 1982, continued military inaction and abuse by security personnel led to demands for elections for a new ANC executive committee. Rebuffed, some ANC guerrillas mutinied in 1984.

Angolan troops subdued the mutiny, sending prisoners to Luthanda's maximum security prison. "I was in that prison 14 months, until April 1985. We were never charged. We were beaten, interrogated, shocked with live electric wires," Mr. Molefe says.

In April, he was sent to Quantro. "Conditions there were horrific. . . . Every day there were beatings, cries, screams. We were told our release depended on whether we were ready to cooperate. No one was ever released."

While Molefe was in prison, another revolt broke out in Pango camp in May 1984.

Luvo Mbengo and 15 others fled into the bush. They were picked up and returned to the ANC by Angolan and Soviet authorities. "We were taken and tortured. They wanted us to back down from our call for a national conference because we were threatening the leadership," Mr. Mbengo says.

A military tribunal finally sentenced them to death. But with the intercession of ANC representative Gertrude Shope, eight men were sent to Quantro and the others were released.

In 1988, Maxongo, Molefe, Mbengo, and others were released and taken to the an ANC camp at Dakawa, in Tanzania. One year later, banned from all political activities, they and another 14 guerrilla veterans resigned.

"We left the ANC . . . because the crimes have not been corrected and the elements responsible . . . have not been gotten rid of," Molefe says.

The dissidents say their call for an investigation into ANC human rights' violations "will not weaken the ANC, but will demonstrate to our people and the world the ANC's uncompromising commitment to justice and democracy."

And while they disagree with Mandela's statement that those responsible for torture have already been dismissed, they feel he is the only leader capable of resolving their grievances.

"It's difficult to say whether Mandela can change things in the ANC, but we are banking our hopes on him," Mr. Masango says.

HUMAN RIGHTS STANDARDS IN INDIA

HON. DAN BURTON

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, while many in America are cheering the exciting and positive events in Eastern Europe, brutality and oppression continue in other parts of the world seemingly unnoticed.

Amnesty International, still banned from working inside India, reports that thousands of critics of the government of India, including many prisoners of conscience, are being held without charge or trial under the Terrorist and Disruptive Activities Act [TADA]. According to Amnesty, there are reports of widespread torture, along with allegations that some prisoners have died in custody as a result of torture.

It's easy to understand why India continues its ban on Amnesty International. In March, when the Hon. Max Madden, a British Member of Parliament, went to the Punjab and Kashmir along with a team of parliamentarians, he reported to the Parliament that unprecedented and barbaric atrocities were being committed against the Sikh and Kashmiri communities by the Indian regime.

"I shall not forget the young Sikh who was shot as a terrorist after he stood with his arms above his head in a field for 5 minutes," Madden reported. The police later admitted that they made a mistake. "I shall not forget the relatives of the young man who was shot while marching in Sikh religious festival," Madden said. The police again admitted that they had made a mistake.

Meanwhile the human rigths situation continues to deteriorate in Kashmir. Jagmohan, India's colonial governor in Kashmir, has ordered Kashmiri newspaper editors to stop publishing because of the prevailing conditions in the valley. In fact, India shut down its own state television and radio stations when Kashmiri employees demanded the freedom to report the tragedies in Kashmir. Not even the Red Cross has been allowed access to Kashmir.

Once again, India's decision to exclude the press from Kashmir is perfectly understandable. The Indian Peoples Union for Civil Liberties [PUCL] recently issued a report which pointed toward scores of barbaric acts committed by the Indian security forces in Kashmir. The PUCL observed, ". . . that basic human rights of civil liberties, legal norms and civilized values have been grossly violated by the Indian security forces. . . ." On March 14, these forces killed scores of Kashmiri women when they fired live bullets in an attempt to break up a protest march.

While I hope that Prime Minister V.P. Singh's government can bring peace of India, there can be little progress until all groups inside India regain the basic freedoms that people all over the world are striving for.

It's time to knock down the wall, which hides the so-called world's largest "democracy," from the scrutiny of the international human rights community. It's time to hold India to the same human rights standards to which we hold every other democracy in the world. To achieve these goals, I have introduced legislation (H.R. 4641) which will terminate United States development assistance programs for India, unless their government permits representatives of Amnesty International and other human rights organizations to visit India in order to monitor human rights.

I call on all of my colleagues to cosponsor this life or death legislation.

DOBROSLAV PARAGA: A LEADER IN THE STRUGGLE FOR HUMAN RIGHTS IN YUGOSLAVIA

HON. WM. S. BROOMFIELD

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I recently had the honor of introducing Mr. Dobroslav Paraga, a well-known advocate for human rights in Yugoslavia, to the Congressional Human Rights Caucus. I want to commend Congressmen LANTOS and PORTER, the co-chairmen of the Caucus, for giving Mr. Paraga and other concerned Yugoslavs the opportunity to tell Congress about the ongoing human rights tragedy in that country.

Last summer, I learned of the sad story of Mr. Paraga, a young Croatian crusader for human liberties, who was jailed and tortured by Yugoslav authorities for exercising the rights that all of us take for granted. He was charged with a crime for having collected signatures calling for the release of all political prisoners in that country. His friend, a young Croatian Jew, was jailed at the same time and died a few days later under suspicious circumstances.

Last August, Senator RIEGLE introduced a thoughtful resolution concerning Mr. Paraga and the Senate passed it unanimously. I introduced an identical resolution, H. Res. 240, in the House.

Mr. Paraga is to be commended for speaking out not only about human rights violations against Croatians, but against all Yugoslavs. He is internationally respected and was recognized as a prisoner of conscience by Amnesty International and other responsible human rights organizations. A country that abuses good men like Mr. Paraga also mistreats its other citizens.

Mr. Paraga, his fellow Croatians and thousands of ethnic Albanians are asking for the freedoms that millions of other Eastern Europeans demanded in 1989, the year of the people. With historic changes occurring in Eastern Europe, why is Yugoslavia lagging behind?

It is time to let the winds of change bring justice to the people of that country. It is also time for the United States to take a tough stand on the ongoing abuses in Yugoslavia. We must not conduct business as usual with Belgrade as long as the authorities there violate the human rights of Yugoslav citizens during a period of great hope and promise in Eastern Europe.

I commend Mr. Paraga's insightful statement before the Human Rights Caucus to my colleagues in the Congress.

STATEMENT OF DOBROSLAV PARAGA

Dear Members of the Congressional Human Rights Caucus and Members of the Senate, I, Croatian activist for Human Rights, along with my friends and associates, struggle for a small piece of the freedom and democracy that your citizens in the United States of American enjoy every day.

In many parts of the Yugoslavian Federal country the state of human rights is akin to being in the middle ages. Ethnic Albanians in the sourth are even more oppressed than Croatians are in the north. Albanians constitute 10 percent of the total population of Yugoslavia, yet they bear as much as 80 percent of the total number of political prisoners.

On the eve of this hearing the Yugoslavian administration fearing this gathering in the U.S. Congress has put a halt to its incredible actions in the Kosovo region, but countless victims and political prisoners remain. One of these Juraj Pilko has just written on his treatment from his jail cell in Stara Gradiska where he is enduring 6 years of incarceration for sending 6 letters to foreign destinations.

Following S. Res. 169, dated August 4th 1989, and sponsored by Michigan Senator Donald Riegle, the first ever resolution related to Yugoslavia and condemning the trampling of human rights in Yugoslavia, their administration promised to implement a multi-party system which has still not been carried out in 4 out of a total of 6 republics.

Upon Rep. William Broomfield's announcement in Congress of H. Res. 240 for protection of human rights in my country and during which time he simultaneously sent home visiting Yugoslavian Prime Minister Markovic, who was looking for a handout, empty-handed, the Yugoslavian Secretary of State requested in the Croatian Assembly complete amnesty for political prisoners, a request which not only has been set aside but in direct contradiction to it the number of political prisoners rose significantly.

Last week just prior to the very beginning of this hearing, the Yugoslavian administration reached a decision to pardon 108 political prisoners. Amongst those pardoned is the well-known Albanian writer Adem Demaqi who has spent a total of 29 years incarcerated for the sole reason of having founded one of that regime's impermissible opposition parties. Demaqi was in fact released from prison two days ago into what amounts to be house arrest as evidenced by the presence of the special forces of the police and the dispersal of the throngs of well-wishers welcoming him home by threat of open fire upon them if they didn't disperse within 20 minutes.

In the meantime thousands of others not as well-known as Demaqi remain incarcerated. Likewise in 1977 prior to the conference on European Security and Collaboration in Belgrade, the authorities announced the pardon of 763 political prisoners, of which in reality 26 were released. Amongst those released was the well-known dissident Mihajlo Mihajlov who is present here amongst us today.

In Yugoslavia, moreover, the political police responsible for persecuting millions of the population, for physically liquidating its political opponents, and who perpetuate this reign of terror, have never been disbanded. The secret police is to this day the instrument of repression because of its protection of the Communist party and its monopoly on power.

The pinnacle of this kind of manipulative reign is represented by their choice for the President of the Electoral Commission for the first multi-party elections in Croatia in 51 years which were held 2 days ago. Mr. Milko Gajski, President of the Electoral Commission and now also president of the Supreme Court of Croatia, is directly responsible for my maltreatment in the investigative jail in Zagreb. He is responsible for the torture and death of my friend Ernest Brajder in the same jail, for the hundreds and hundreds of rigged political processes as well as electric schock treatment tortures. He had been the president of the District Court for 20 years in which this jail and torture chamber are located. Just because of this unacceptable fact the conducted multiparty elections in Croatia could not have been orderly nor legitimate.

Recently in Zagreb I was personally elected by secret ballot, and coincidentally without my presence, into the innermost leadership of one of the newly created political parties in Croatia. Meanwhile according to the regulations governing the organization of parties I am prohibited from assuming my duties because I presently am under a political sentence, exiled form Croatia to neighboring Slovenia.

Even though the presidents of the Human Rights Caucus, Rep. Tom Lantos and Rep. John Porter on October 26, 1989 wrote the president of the Federal Yugoslavian government, A. Markovic, to ensure respect for human rights and to allow for the investigation of the mysterious death of Ernest Brajder who died in custody in 1980. Markovic to this day has not done this and furthermore against myself he has not set aside the court sentence of jail and prohibition of public appearances. But then Markovic during his visit to Washington when addressing members of the Foreign Affairs Committee declined any kind of guarantees for my undisturbed return to my homeland.

This past month I sent to the address of everyone of the approximately 190 members of this respected caucus photographs and names of the innocent Yugoslavian citizens killed in February of this year whose only crime was to be on the streets demanding the establishment of a multi-party system and free elections.

Yugoslavia has not at all resolved its problem of respecting basic human rights nor its problem of respecting the equality and national sovereignty of the smaller nations which, whether they wanted to or didn't want to, reside within her. By this behavior Yugoslavia without pause continues to trample fundamental human rights and freedoms as they are drawn in the Helsinki Accords and universal declarations of the rights of man.

While in my country I am forbidden to speak, sentenced to silence, here in the American Human Rights Caucus and your Senate you have made it possible for me to speak openly and publicly welcoming me and all people who dream of freedom and justice in the jails of Yugoslavia. The Human Rights Caucus and the Senate of the United States of America are magnificent examples of how the American nation defends the freedom of the small nameless man as well as the freedom of enslaved nations.

H. Res. 240, introduced by Rep. William Broomfield, is necessary and indispensable because the governing body of Yugoslavia only comprehends this kind of language and also because Yugoslavia, as opposed to the Soviet Union, is completely dependent for its survival upon the economic aid of the United States and the West.

Some members of Congress and some of the administration of the State Department oppose this resolution and unintentionally prolong the continuation of dictatorship in Yugoslavia. From this spot I invite them to a higher understanding to help H. Res. 240 through the election because the path to freedom and justice cannot be stopped by anyone.

Therefore, I am hopeful in the name of all those oppressed and thirsty for respect and human rights that H. Res. 240 will be adopted by you on the floor and that the opposition against it will cease in the subcommittee for Europe and the Middle East.

I would also like to express my deepest respect and gratitude to the Human Rights Caucus, particularly to Tom Lantos, William Broomfield, John Porter and William Lipinski and to the Senate of the United States of America, particularly Donald Riegle, Carl Levine and Edward Kennedy for this day today and for all that you have done and are doing for freedom and the defense of the persecuted and humiliated in my homeland and the whole world. Thank you. God Bless America.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OF THE CUBAN SERTOMA CLUB OF MIAMI

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure for me to rise today to congratulate the Cuban Sertoma Club of Miami on the occasion of its silver anniversary this year.

The club is part of an international network. There are other clubs in Mexico, Canada, and Puerto Rico, as well as all over the United States. In Miami, it was born on August 7, 1980. Its first president was Dr. Manuel J. Reyes, and founding members were: Dr. Antonio Maceo, Dr. Fernando C. Mendigutia, Dr. Manuel de J. Rodríguez, Daniel Moore, Sr., Dr. Luis Péres Espinos, Mario A. Varona, Dr. Guillermo de Blanck, Pedro H. Lazo, Ernesto Castro, and Mario Galeote. Although some of the founding members have passed away, their legacy of citizenship and patriotism continues through the club's work.

Sertoma stands for "Service to Humanity" and during these 25 years they have worked with different charitable organizations: Vuelos de la Libertad [Liberty Flights] in 1965, serving the refugees arriving from Cuba by providing shoes, clothes, coats, and personal hygiene articles as they arrived at the airport in Miami; the YMCA José Martí Centro Mater; the Red Cross; Goodwill; United Way; the Sertoma International Center for Hearing and Speech; the Hearing and Speech Center of Miami; Christian Communiti Center; St. Lucas Child Care Center; community lunchrooms; nursing homes; Children's Hospital; Misionero de Camino in Guatemala; Dajabón Mission in the Dominican Republic; Unión de Cubanos en el Exiolio; League Against Cancer; and, the Máximo Gómez Park in Little Havana.

Their humanitarian aid has been spread to countries such as Nicaragua and Mexico during the aftermath of the earthquakes which these two countries suffered. They have also assisted Haiti, the Dominican Republic, and Peru, among other nations.

On Thanksgiving and Christmas Days, the club donates presents to needy children and meals to families who visit the community lunchrooms around Miami.

The Cuban Sertoma Club of Miami is an example for all of us to follow because of their outstanding sense of community and love for their fellow man. Their selflessness and dedication have given them a place of honor in our city.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to especially congratulate the current leaders of the club: president, Fulgencio O. Castro; vice presidents, Jorge H. Núñez and Octavio González Olazabal; secretary, Aurelio Torrente Iglesias; vice secretary, José A. González; treasurer, Luis Arrizurieta; vice treasurer, Jorge M. Briñas; and, chairman, Modesto A. Alvarez. It is an honor to congratulate them and wish them many more years of success.

LET'S HELP OUR FIRMS PROTECT THEIR INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY RIGHTS

HON. TOM CAMPBELL

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. CAMPBELL of California. Mr. Speaker, the development of new technologies, such as semiconductor chips and computers, helps drive the engine of economic expansion. As the health of our economy depends more and more on technical breakthroughs, the importance of protecting intellectual property rights from foreign piracy increases. The International Trade Commission [ITC] estimated in 1988 that our firms lose between $43 and $61 billion annually from foreign piracy. This has a chilling effect on the development of new technology as the economic benefits of innovation become less and less certain. If foreign piracy is allowed to continue unchecked, the long-term effect on our economy will be grave, particularly when one remembers that American scientists produce a majority of the world's technical breakthroughs.

Section 337 is the primary section of our trade law that protects intellectual property rights. It provides for the exclusion of imported articles that the International Trade Commission finds to infringe on American patents, copyrights, trademarks, or semiconductor mask works. In addition, this provision requires the ITC to make a decision within 1 year. During the pendency of a ruling, section 337 allows the ITC to exclude an infringing good, or may require an importer to post a bond if it finds a "reason to believe" that the provisions of section 337 are being violated. In cases in which temporary relief is sought the ITC is required to make a decision within 90 days, unless it believes that the case cannot be evaluated properly within that time frame, in which case, it may take another 60 days to make a final ruling. Most firms prefer seeking relief from 337 over filing a case in Federal Court; it offers a relatively quick procedure for a final ruling and allows the ITC to exclude an offending good during the consideration of a case.

While the authors of section 337 were certainly well intentioned, I am nonetheless concerned that they did not go far enough in ensuring temporary relief. In the first 215 cases initiated since the 1974 amendment, only 15 firms even tried to seek temporary relief, despite the fact that they are suffering damage from the imports. Although some of the deficiencies of section 337 were corrected during the last session of Congress, current law still says that the ITC may give relief, but does nothing to require it unitl the proceedings are finished after a year. However, in industries such as biotechnology and medical technology that depend on rapid technical innovation, a year long wait, or 18 months in complicated cases, is just too long. By the time permanent relief is forthcoming, imports have too often flooded the market and damaged or even destroyed American firms.

The violation of intellectual property rights has already cost American firms millions of dollars in lost revenues. In the most recent ITC survey, 14 firms in the electronics industry estimated they lost almost $300 million in sales in 1986 alone from imports of infringing goods. In the industrial and farm equipment industry the losses were even greater, almost $325 million. The overall results show that the responding American firms lost almost $1.8 billion in 1986. These numbers, as great as they are, don't begin to tell the whole story of the damage to our economy as they are only the losses to respondents to the survey. And, in addition to simple sales losses, there is often substantial damage to consumer confidence due to the inferior quality of the imports, and thousands of lost American jobs. One example of an individual firm's losses is Apple Computer which has lost hundreds of millions of dollars over several years from imported clones of its popular computers which infringe upon its patents. To a smaller firm such losses could be devastating, possibly driving it out of business.

My bill would improve 337 by requiring the ITC to exclude an infringing article, on a temporary basis, as soon as it makes a determination that there is a "reason to believe" that a violation is occurring. This would eliminate the uncertainty that American firms now face when they plead for protection from the ITC. If their patent, copyright, trademark, or semiconductor mask is being infringed, they will receive meaningful relief as quickly as possible. Our firms will know that its government is doing everything it can to protect technical innovations, the very core of our national ability to compete in the international marketplace.

While merely changing one word in current law from "may" to "shall" may seem of little consequence, I believe that this simple amendment will help insure that our intellectual property rights are completely protected. Other countries including Japan and the European Community have already recognized the need for stringent protection of intellectual property rights. The European Community has enacted a regulation, Commercial Protection Regulation 2641/84, that serves a very similar purpose as section 337. The procedures under this regulation are also very similar, it authorizes the European Community Commission to investigate member complaints and respond to illicit commercial practices remedies including exclusion of the offending import. Our companies deserve such full prompt protection too.

Some critics have argued that passage of my amendment would limit the ability of the ITC to negotiate with our trading partners in a flexible manner. I disagree. Under the provisions of my measure, the ITC may, after considering the effect of such exclusion upon the "public health and welfare, competitive conditions in the U.S. economy, the production of like or directly competitive articles in the United States, and the United States consumers" decide not to exclude the infringing article. In addition, the President may disapprove the action taken by the ITC for policy reasons and allow the importation of the article if he or she wishes.

As a professor of International Trade Law, I would like to respond to those who fear that my amendment would violate GATT. The way that I distinguish article III section 4 is that GATT has a grandfather provision for restrictions in force at the date of the agreement, and there was a provision for keeping out copyright infringing goods as of 1947. Moreover, my bill can fairly be viewed as a change only in the procedures of 337, not in its substantive scope and thus would not violate GATT any more than the present 337.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, we are suffering from a huge trade deficit in part because while we are leaders in technical innovation, all too often we fail to bring our products to market because our best ideas have been stolen by thieves. We must do everything we can to help our firms compete in a free and FAIR world marketplace, where technical innovations are protected and firms are allowed to reap the benefits of their toil. Only then will we begin to take the first few steps, that are so desperately needed, toward making our country competitive once again.

TRIBUTE TO DONNA I. KAY

HON. JAMES A. TRAFICANT, JR.

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Donna I. Kay of my 17th Congressional District of Ohio who passed away on March 17, 1990. Mrs. Kay had a long and distinguished career in the newspaper and publishing profession.

Mrs. Kay graduated from Newton Falls High School in 1937 and attended Youngstown College. She was married in 1946 to the late Wendell E. Kay, with whom she had three sons, David, Richard, and Timothy.

Donna Kay began her career in the newspaper business in 1956 when she worked as a bookkeeper for Milton Wick and Mahoning Valley Newspapers. In 1970 she was named assistant to the publisher of the Niles Daily Times and oversaw its conversion to a morning paper in 1981. Mrs. Kay was the publisher of Phoenix Publications from 1981 until her retirement in 1986.

Mrs. Kay received a variety of awards during her career in newspapers. In 1984 the Niles Daily Times received best in its circulation category by United Press International and in 1985 the Times received second in its category by the Associated Press. In 1985 Mrs. Kay received the Niles Chamber of Commerce's Distinguished Service Award.

Mrs. Kay also served on a variety of community service organizations. She was a past president of the Warren Altrusa Club as well as director of Trumbull County Private Industry Council. She was also involved in the Trumbull County Chapter of the American Red Cross, Easter Seals Society, the American Lung Association and Junior Achievement of Trumbull County.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to recognize Donna I. Kay for her outstanding achievements in the newspaper industry and also for her involvement in organizations that make our community a better place to live. Mrs. Kay was a true model citizen and she will be greatly missed by all.

THE FEDERAL PAY REFORM ACT OF 1990

HON. JOHN T. MYERS

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, today at the administration's request I am introducing a bill to reform the way we set pay for the Federal Government's white collar work force. I believe it is a good solution to the many problems we currently face in setting executive branch pay under the General Schedule.

THE NEED FOR FEDERAL PAY REFORM

It is no secret that the current General Schedule pay setting process is inadequate. From law enforcement to engineering to health care to clerical workers, agencies are reporting significant problems in recruitment and retention of employees. Over the last 10 years several reports by private sector firms such as Hay Associates have concluded that the Government's pay system needs to be more responsive to labor market conditions.

The National Commission on the Public Service, chaired by the Honorable Paul Volcker, concluded in its 1989 report that "* * * it is no longer appropriate or workable to use a national average to establish an appropriate level of pay." Most recently, studies conducted by the Wyatt Co. and the U.S. Office of Personnel Management evaluated both the need for and the types of changes which might be effective in reforming the General Schedule. The sum of these studies is that the General Schedule is a costly, inflexible, and inadequate way of setting pay for Federal employees.

MAJOR PROVISIONS

This comprehensive legislation is designed to accomplish five major goals:

First, key flexibilities to adjust to geographic and occupational variations in pay are created by splitting the General Schedule into two separate pay systems. The first, the Federal locality pay system, will be used to set pay for employees in occupations where pay is determined primarily on a local basis. The second system, the Federal national pay system, will be used to set pay for employees who are typically recruited on a nationwide basis. The distinctions between setting pay on a local basis for employees recruited locally and on a national basis for employees recruited nationwide are commonly made by large private sector organizations, and allow them to remain competitive in varying labor markets. This is precisely the flexibility in pay setting that the Federal Government needs in order to be competitive as we head into the 21st century.

Second, recognizing that agencies are in the best position to determine their own personnel needs and priorities, this bill authorizes several new recruitment and retention tools. They include expanded authority to hire above minimum rates, authority to pay travel expenses for job candidates and new employees, and authority to offer recruitment, retention and relocation bonuses.

Third, the bill forges a stronger link between employee performance and pay. Under the national system, individuals will be advanced through the pay range for their grade based upon performance. Under the locality system, individuals will progress through the first half of their pay range automatically as long as they are rated fully successful. Beyond the midpoint of their pay range, increases will be based upon performance. Employees under both the locality system and national system will be eligible for performance-based cash awards of up to 20 percent of basic pay.

Fourth, this bill provides for credible annual pay adjustment processes for the national system and locality system that I believe will stand the tests of time and the budget process. Then new system provides a more reliable measure of private and non-Federal public salaries, an enhanced role for employee representatives, and a schedule that is more timely to the annual budget process.

Fifth, this pay bill provides immediate relief for those areas where recruitment and retention difficulties are now most critical. The entirety of the bill provisions will be phased in over 5 years. However, listed below are several of the provisions which will take place immediately upon enactment:

A differential of up to 8 percent of base pay may be paid by agencies in three high labor cost areas: The Los Angeles, New York, and San Francisco metropolitan statistical areas.

Starting salaries for entry level positions for which the typical new hire is a college graduate may be raised by 5 percent. Agencies now face a critical inability to attract recruits to these entry level positions.

Authority for recruitment, retention, and relocation bonuses will be implemented immediately.

THE ALTERNATIVE

Mr. Speaker, I would like to mention two points about this bill which I hope will be of interest to my colleagues.

This bill creates a fair pay system for employees everywhere in our country. The Federal Pay Reform Act provides that no employee shall suffer a decrease in pay due to provisions of the act. In addition, regional flexibility in pay setting via the locality system and via regional differentials under the national system are tremendously preferable to the impending alternative in pay setting.

IN CONCLUSION

Mr. Speaker, I believe this bill is necessary. The old system is broken and another system is needed to replace it. This bill has been drafted with a phased implementation in mind, so that the total costs of implementation will not fall in any 1 fiscal year. The great strength of this system is that it provides flexibility, allowing the Government to respond as it is able to diverse and changing labor market conditions between occupations and across the country.

A CHANGING POPULATION

HON. LEE H. HAMILTON

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to insert my Washington Report for Wednesday, May 2, 1990, into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD:

A CHANGING POPULATION

The United States is a country in transition. Those who study broad changes in the population of a society predict that in fifty years this country will be vastly different from the one we live in today. These changes are not easy for those of us who live in Indiana to see. But, by the middle of the next century, the U.S. population will be more diverse than ever before. As in the past, changes in our population will pose new challenges for us.

ETHNIC AND RACIAL DIVERSIFICATION

One population trend involves the ethnic and racial makeup of this country. Roughly 1 in 4 Americans is now Hispanic or nonwhite (i.e. not of white European descent). By the year 2010, a majority of Californians is projected to be Hispanic or non-white. The same could be true for the entire country by the year 2056. If current trends in immigration and birth rates continue over the next ten years, the Hispanic population will increase by 21 percent, Asian-Americans by 22 percent, Afro-Americans by 12 percent, and whites by 2 percent. By the year 2020, U.S. residents who are Hispanic or nonwhite are expected to more than double to 115 million, while the white population remains virtually unchanged.

Our society is already adapting to a more diverse population. School systems, especially in New York and California, are educating more students whose first language is not English. Many states and local communities are working to absorb immigrant groups into their economies and address their social and cultural needs. The court system is litigating more cases involving affirmative action and voting rights laws. Legislatures are struggling to build consensus for a much larger and more diverse population. Minority populations are seeking greater representation within all levels of government and within political party structures.

The changing ethnicity of this country also raises profound questions about who we are as a nation. Some will say that this country is melting pot of diverse cultures, built on a tradition of commonly shared values and principles, and that every new immigrant group must conform to that creed if the society is to grow and prosper. Others will counter that so-called traditional ideas about American culture are based on Western values and traditions which have little relevance for Hispanic or nonwhite Americans, and may even be associated with past discrimination. Rather, they will say, America is a multicultural society in which different traditions should be allowed and encouraged to flourish.

POPLULATION AGING

A second trend involves the rapid aging of our population. Americans are living longer than ever before and older persons will become far more numerous. Today, 31.6 million Americans are 65 or older, comprising 12.6 percent of the population. By the year 2025, when most of the baby-boom generation reaches retirement, the elderly population is projected to number 59.7 million, roughly equal to 20 percent of the Nation's population. Furthermore, older persons will live longer as medical advances raise life expectancy. Persons aged 85 or older are now the fastest growing population group in the country.

These changes could place immense strains on the economic resources of this country. Presently, the federal government spends more of its total outlays on Medicare, Social Security and other programs of older Americans, than it spends on anything else, including national defense. Medical expenditures on the elderly are expected to soar, especially for those in their eighties. The Medicare program presently spends 30% of its budget on the 5% of enrollees in their last year of life. These trends in federal spending raise the potential for intergenerational conflict, as younger generations demand that more attention be given to their needs, including education, health and child care, and housing.

CHANGES IN THE WORKFORCE

A third population trend involves the size and composition of the U.S. workforce. As baby boomers reach retirement age in future years, there will be fewer workers to replace them. Labor shortages may engender more competition for qualified workers among employers, the military, and other institutions, and drive up wages in tight labor markets—a phenomenon that is already occurring in some regions of the country.

These changes could also impose costs on the workers themselves. If the pool of workers does not grow in coming years—through increased immigration or higher birth rates—future workers will have to pay more for entitlement programs for the elderly. At the moment there are 3.4 people in the labor force for every Social Security beneficiary. By 2030 there will be fewer than two. It is possible that a smaller workforce will resent paying more payroll taxes for relatively better-off retirees. This problem could be compounded by the fact that most of the workers will be Hispanic or nonwhite, while most of the retirees will be white.

Also, women will continue to become a growing presence in the U.S. workforce. It is anticipated that women will represent 62% of the net increase in the labor force over the next decade. An increasing number of women will be working mothers. If current trends continue through the end of the century, more than two of every three preschoolers will have a mother who is employed outside the home. These changes are already prompting demands for better representation in management positions, better salaries, and better day-care and job-sharing arrangements.

CHALLENGES AHEAD

Predictions well into the future always carry a large degree of uncertainty. But if current trends continue, changes in our population will be a significant test of the strength and resiliency of our society. The 1990s will clearly be a decade of transition for this country, as we grope to find solutions to these emerging challenges. In the past, we have been successful at managing major population shifts—such as the large-scale immigration of this century, or the ongoing migration to urban areas. We will have to be as successful in coming years if this country is to continue to grow and prosper, and meet the needs and expectations of its citizens.

HUMAN RIGHTS FOR ALBANIANS IN SOUTHERN YUGOSLAVIA

HON. TOM LANTOS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, over the past year throughout Central and Eastern Europe we have witnessed a transformation that I expected to see—but I did not expect to see it in my lifetime. From Poland to East Germany to Czechoslovakia to Hungary, Romania, and Bulgaria we have witnessed the most dramatic developments in the last half of this century as these former Soviet-dominated Communist States have cast off their totalitarian regimes and moved toward pluralistic democratic governments, market economies, and recognition of human and civil rights. This trend has been cheered by tens of millions in Central and Eastern Europe and by hundreds of millions more throughout the democratic countries.

In only one country in this region—Yugoslavia—has this general trend been ambiguous. In the northern and western regions of Yugoslavia—in the Republics of Slovenia and Croatia—the democratic trend is clear and decisive. In those areas inhabited by ethnic Albanians in southern Yugoslavia in the Republic of Serbia and Macedonia, the trend is also clear and decisive, but unfortunately it is in the exact opposite direction, toward denial of human and civi rights, toward totalitarianism and away from the democratic development that all of us have cheered this past year.

Mr. Speaker, let me just cite a few examples from the annual "Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1989" prepared by the U.S. Department of State. Yugoslav Government data indicates that 336 of 436 persons—well over three quarters—officially acknowledged to have been sentenced for political offenses in Yugoslavia, were ethnic Albanians from the Province of Kosovo. In 1988, of 517 political charges filed throughout the country, 43 percent were against ethnic Albanians from Kosovo, although Albanians make up only 8 percent of the population of Yugoslavia.

Just 1 year ago, major demonstrations were held by ethnic Albanians to protest the effort of the Government of the Republic of Serbia to establish greater centralized control over the Province of Kosovo and to reduce local Albanian influence over their own affairs. Serbian and Yugoslav security forces used excessive force in dispersing the demonstrators, including beating them, indiscriminately firing on them, sometimes from helicopters, and using ammunition designed to increase deaths and injuries. The result of this was an official death toll of 25 people and unofficial reports that the number of demonstrators killed was substantially larger. Following those demonstrations, Yugoslav authorities held 237 Albanians from Kosovo in isolation for as long as 3 months, denying them access to attorneys or to their families, subjecting them to beatings, cold, inadequate food, and harsh interrogations, but only 41 were eventually charged with criminal offenses and another 18 with misdemeanors.

Albanians have been denied freedom of speech. As the Department of State reports, "Albanians in Kosovo may well be jailed for calling for their Province to be given republic status within Yugoslavia, while in other parts of the country journalists or public figures may openly advocate this step." At least 30 ethnic Albanian instructors at the University of Pristina in the Province of Kosovo, and large numbers of teachers at other educational levels were disciplined or fired "under suspicion of influencing students toward Albanian separatist views." Those who espouse views not favored by the Serbian Government are not only subject to expulsion from the Kosovo Communist Party, but party officials have demanded that they "be fired from 'leading positions,' including those in managerial level of business enterprises."

Yugoslav authorities have discriminated against ethnic Albanians by denying them the right to assemble peacefully. Albanian demonstrations in Kosovo were prohibited by the Yugoslav and Serbian Republic governments but planned demonstrations by ethnic Albanians in Kosovo were forcibly suppressed by police forces of the Serbian Republic. In the Republic of Macedonia one ethnic Albanian was sentenced to 10 years imprisonment and four others to terms of 6 to 8 years imprisonment for organizing a demonstration of ethnic Albanians, and eight other ethnic Albanians in the Republic of Macedonia were sentenced to prison terms of 5 to 11 years for participating in a public demonstration calling for observance of their right to use their own language.

Mr. Speaker, we in the Congress cannot sit by and watch this egregious violation of human rights of ethnic Albanians continue in southern Yugoslavia. These actions run directly counter to the winds of democracy and freedom that are sweeping that region of the world; they run directly counter to the positive democratic changes that are taking place in the northwestern republics of Yugoslavia. It is essential that we in the Congress make known our strong disapproval of these vicious actions; it is important that we speak up now on this violation of human rights.

Mr. Speaker, with my distinguished colleagues, the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER], I have introduced House Concurrent Resolution 314. The identical legislation was introduced in the Senate by the distinguished chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Senator PELL of Rhode Island, and by the distinguished minority leader of the Senate, Mr. DOLE of Kansas.

I urge my colleagues in the Congress to join us in cosponsoring this important legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that the text of this resolution be placed in the RECORD so my colleagues may be aware of its provisions.

H. CON. RES. 314

Whereas recent events in Eastern Europe underscore the need for a strong United States role in the promotion of human rights and democracy throughout that region;

Whereas the human rights situation in certain areas of Yugoslavia, particuarly in the Socialist Autonomous Province of Kosova, has deteriorated while other countries in Eastern Europe are embracing democratic freedoms and fundamental rights;

Whereas the Department of State's Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1989 cites many human rights practices in Yugoslavia that violate internationally accepted human rights standards, including infringement upon and abrogation of the rights of assembly and fair trial, freedom of speech, and freedom of the press;

Whereas the Country Reports also document that these human rights violations are targeted against certain ethnic groups and regions, particularly against the ethnic Albanian population of the Province of Kosova and to a lesser extent the ethnic Albanian population of the Republic of Macedonia;

Whereas the Government of the Yugoslav Republic of Serbia abrogated the autonomous status of the Socialist Autonomous Province of Kosova in March 1989 against the clear wishes of the ethnic Albanian population of that Province, which comprise the overwhelming majority of the population of that Province;

Whereas these serious and continung human rights violations, in addition to the continued denial of autonomous status to the Province of Kosova, have precipitated a severe and continuing ethnic crisis in southern Yugoslavia;

Whereas the Albanian majority of Kosova have been denied the right to free trial and other civil rights;

Whereas the democratic movements in Kosova have attracted large numbers of Albanian supporters despite the severe restrictions on human rights and the democratic process;

Whereas the Government of Yugoslavia and the Government of the Republic of Serbia have responded through the use of force to suppress Albanian dissent which has arisen in opposition to these intolerable conditions;

Whereas the use of force by the Government of Yugoslavia and the Government of the Republic of Serbia has led to indiscriminate killing and brutal treatment of peaceful Albanian demonstrators by the police, mass arbitrary arrest and detention of Albanians, summary trial and imprisonment of Albanian peasants and workers, the banning of Albanian demonstrations and strikes, and the silencing of Albanian journalists and broadcasters; and

Whereas these human rights abuses and the abridgement of the civil rights of ethnic Albanians violate the principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the political obligations undertaken by the Government of Yugoslavia as a signatory to the Helsinki Final Act: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Congress—

(1) expresses grave concern about the human rights abuses by the Government of Yugoslavia and the Government of the Republic of Serbia;

(2) urges the Government of Yugoslavia and the Government of the Republic of Serbia to cease the use of force in the Province of Kosova and to protect basic human rights and fundamental freedoms;

(3) urges the Government of Yugoslavia to investigate the indiscriminate killing of civilian by police forces;

(4) welcomes the decision of the Presidency of Yugoslavia to lift the state of emergency in the province of Kosova and the decision of the Yugoslav courts to acquit Azam Vlasi and 13 other ethnic Albanian defendants of all charges against them;

(5) urges the Government of Yugoslavia and the Government of the Republic of Serbia to ensure that the lifting of the state or emergency results in the full restoration of freedoms curtailed under the state of emergency;

(6) urges the Government of Yugoslavia and the Government of the Republic of Serbia to restore full autonomous status to the Socialist province of Kosova;

(7) urges the Government of the Republic of Serbia to begin a genuine dialogue with the recently formed Democratic Alliance Movement and other democratic forces in the Province of Kosova in the interest of resolving the political and economic crisis in that Province;

(8) urges the Government of Yugoslavia to observe fully its obligations under the Helsinki Final Act to assure full protection of the human and civil rights of the Albanian nationality and all other national groups in Yugoslavia;

(9) urges the Department of State to continue to monitor more closely and on-site the human rights conditions in Yugoslavia;

(10) urges the President to express the concerns of the Congress about the situation in the Province of Kosova and the increase in human rights violations in other areas of Yugoslavia at the highest levels of the Government of Yugoslavia; and

(11) urges the President to prohibit Export-Import Bank loans or credit guarantees to the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, where these are intended to finance projects within the Republic of Serbia, until there is a substantial improvement in the human rights situation and until all citizens of Yugoslavia are afforded equal rights.

INTRODUCTION OF THE NATIONAL SAVINGS ENHANCEMENT ACT OF 1990

HON. CHARLES E. SCHUMER

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, today I, along with Congressman MOODY, introduce the National Savings Enhancement Act of 1990, legislation that will provide new incentives for Americans to save through individual retirement accounts.

Saving is the lifeblood of a healthy and vibrant economy. An adequate savings pool can mean the difference between automated factories and idle assembly lines; financial independence and addiction to foreign capital; a high standard of living and just getting by. Yet, in the last few years, the U.S. savings rate has plunged dangerously downward, choking off investment and eating away at our standard of living.

In 1970, Americans saved over 9 cents out of every dollar earned. Americans now save only 5 cents on the dollar. The decline has meant we have less money for investment in our industry and in our children's education; investments we need to make to remain competitive in the world economy.

We can reverse this trend and take charge of our economic future again if we learn the fundamental economies of saving again.

The National Savings Enhancement Act promotes saving through individual retirement accounts. The key feature of the bill is that it would allow eligible IRA participants to take a tax deduction for IRA contributions in advance of any actual contribution, in exchange for a commitment to save the amount deducted over the next tax year.

Moreover, the bill gives more Americans an incentive to save by expanding eligibility for tax deductible contributions to families earning up to $85,000 and individuals earning up to $50,000 a year.

In addition, the bill would allow IRA participants to have their designated contributions deposited directly from their paycheck each pay period.

Finally, the bill would allow penalty free withdrawals for first home purchases and education expenses.

Together, these features will make saving easier than saving with traditional IRA's. For example, under the traditional IRA, the tax incentive comes after the saving is already done. This means that many taxpayers, who might otherwise have the capacity to save, but not the foresight, lack sufficient incentive to save with the traditional IRA.

The special advance deduction offers a real incentive for saving by allowing eligible taxpayers to take a tax deduction in one tax year and then make their IRA contributions over the next tax year.

Similarly, the direct deposit feature takes the hassle out of saving by providing a mechanism for automatic contributions.

Additionally, unlike the current IRA, the early withdrawal provisions allow participants to save both for their retirement and for other major expenses by allowing penalty free withdrawals for first home purchases and education expenses.

This new and improved IRA can teach Americans to save again. And by saving more we can ensure a better future for ourselves and for our children.

HOMELESS CHILDREN GO TO BED HUNGRY

HON. TOM CAMPBELL

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. CAMPBELL of California. Mr. Speaker, every day in this country, thousands of homeless children go to bed hungry. HUD estimates that there are approximately 500,000 homeless individuals currently in the United States today. Some advocacy groups concerned with homelessness estimate that figure at closer to 3 million. And at least one-third of the homeless population is comprised of families with children.

The Department of Agriculture runs several excellent food assistance programs; however these programs do not always directly benefit the homeless. Homeless people have no refrigeration facilities to keep "surplus" food or food purchased with food stamps. They are entirely dependent on food service programs which provide entire meals at one sitting. It is these programs which are the intended beneficiary of this legislation.

In the past, charitable food programs have encountered a problem related to legal liability. Food businesses hesitate to donate food to the programs, and programs are often unwilling to accept such food because of the potential threat of a lawsuit, warranted or not.

My bill would create an incentive for States to enact legislation which would release food donors and food programs from liability unless negligence or malfeasance exists. Strict liability would no longer apply.

Statutes similar to the one suggested in this bill have been enacted in States such as California with tremendous results. Food donors and service providers no longer need to fear the imposition of unwarranted litigation costs. As a result, donations have increased dramatically and food programs have flourished. Volunteers and food businesses should not be penalized for their generosity. Instead they should be encouraged for helping to alleviate a very serious problem.

TRIBUTE TO LAWRENCE J. HESELOV

HON. JAMES A. TRAFICANT, JR.

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Larry J. Heselov of my 17th Congressional District of Ohio. Mr. Heselov will be receiving the "Guardian of the Menorah" from the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation of Youngstown, OH, on May 20, 1990, at the "Guardian of the Menorah Tribute Dinner".

The Guardian of the Menorah is given every year to a member of the Youngstown community who has exemplified dedication and service to our community. Mr. Heselov is truly concerned for his fellow citizens and has devoted many hours to enriching those around him.

Mr. Heselov has served in a leadership capacity in a variety of groups and organizations geared toward helping others. He is on the board of trustees for the Youngstown Area Jewish Federation, first vice president Congregation Rodef Sholom, St. Elizabeth Hospital Medical Center, Metropolitan Savings Bank, Boys Club of Youngstown, and is a member of the leadership club committee of United Way of Youngstown.

Besides being a community leader, Mr. Heselov is also a leader in the business community. He was the president of the National Commercial Refrigeration Sales Association in 1982, of Institutional & Supermarket Equipment, Inc. 1983–1986, of the Century Fournier Co. 1966–1985, and presently he is the president of the Store Engineering Co.

Joe lives in Youngstown with his wife of 39 years, Sunny. Joe and Sunny have four children, Lonny Heselov Black, an attorney, of Rochester, NY; Cindy Heselov, a drug dependency counselor, of Columbus, OH; Kim Heselov, a registered nurse, of Atlanta, GA; and Marty Heselov, a film editor, of Los Angeles, CA.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to commend Lawrence J. Heselov on his many years of unselfish service to our community and State. He is a leader and outstanding example of a true humanitarian. Our community owes a great deal to Mr. Heselov and I congratulate him on receiving the "Guardian of the Menorah." I am honored to represent this exceptional individual.

SOME OBSERVATIONS ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS FROM FORMER PRESIDENT RICHARD NIXON

HON. WM. S. BROOMFIELD

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Speaker, in March, former President Richard Nixon spoke to a number of Congressmen in the Ways and Means Committee room. As usual, he had some original and insightful things to say about his favorite subject, foreign policy.

While his remarks to us were off the cuff, what he said was very much like a speech he had prepared for delivery to the Boston World Affairs Council.

Among his observations in that speech:

On the newly democratizing countries: "What we need today is an International Freedom Corps sponsored by the United States, Western Europe, and Japan which would have the responsibility to provide expert economic advice to those nations who chose freedom on how to develop and implement free market policies."

On Gorbachev: His decision not to use force in Eastern Europe was "brilliant" because it "removed the fear—the glue that holds the NATO alliance together."

Also on Gorbachev: This is the time to make deals with Gorbachev while he stills needs our help. "We should link our decisions on items he wants, like trade, credits, and technology, to his actions on items we want, like eliminating his support of our potential enemies in the Third World."

On China: Whether it "will play a peaceful or destructive role in the world, whether it will repress or respect human rights, depends on whether the United States is able to again develop a constructive relationship with China."

On the Third World: "The people of these countries have enormous problems. In the past, the Communists at least have talked about the problems. Too often, we only talk about the Communists. Now with the Communist threat receding, we should address those problems honestly and creatively."

For the benefit of all of my fellow Members, I would like to insert the complete text of President Nixon's prepared remarks:

THE REAL GORBACHEV

(Address by former President Nixon before the Boston World Affairs Council)

In addressing this distinguished audience of foreign policy observers, I want to tell you up front what my approach will be.

Virtually all of the foreign policy experts these days are singing the same tune. Editorial writers, columnists, think tanks, and television commentators tell us:

The Cold War is over.

The West has won.

The Soviet Union no longer poses a significant threat to our interests.

A State Department expert observes that we are witnessing what he calls the end of history. We no longer need to devote our attention to the great issues that have divided us during the Cold War, but can now devote our efforts to issues which unite us like global warming.

I believe profound changes have taken place, but I see the world from a different perspective from those who reside in the Washington Beltway, the modern version of Plato's cave.

I believe the Soviets have lost the Cold War, but that the West has not yet won it.

I believe that we are witnessing the defeat of communism, but that this alone does not assure the victory of freedom.

I believe that while the Soviet threat has receded, we face challenges all over the world which will test us to the limit of our capabilities and our will.

Finally, I also profoundly believe that if we meet our leadership responsibilities, the twentieth century, which was the bloodiest in world history, will be succeeded in the year 2000 by a century of peace.

Nineteen-eighty-nine was the year of the century for the forces of freedom in the world. We saw the Berlin Wall come down and communist leaders in Poland, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, and East Germany driven from power by the people in those countries. The year was capped by the stunning defeat in a free election of another communist leader, Daniel Ortega in Nicaragua.

We now face a new challenge. Winning an election or a revolution is difficult. But far more difficult is running a government after you win. Now that the people of these countries have ridded themselves of the evils of communism, we must help them find a way to enjoy the blessings of freedom.

Democracy alone is not the answer. Democracy means government by elected leaders and elected leaders can provide bad economic policies as well as good ones.

Democratic socialism is not the answer. For seventy years we have opposed totalitarian communism because it is evil. Today we must oppose democratic socialism because it won't work. The trouble with the socialists is that they promise the golden egg and then kill the goose that lays it.

As Czechoslovakia's brilliant finance minister recently observed, partial economic reforms won't work. There is no halfway house between communism and freedom.

There is only one way to progress for these nations which have rejected communism. They should adopt the free market policies which have produced economic miracles in the United States, Western Europe, and Japan. Those like Poland who go through the agony to move that way deserve our full support.

The newly free nations of Eastern Europe and Nicaragua rejected communism because it didn't work. Our challenge is to assist them in ways that will make certain that freedom does not suffer the same fate. Rather than sending them political experts on how to run a campaign, we should send them economic and technological experts on how to run a free economy.

In his inaugural address on January 20, 1949, President Harry Truman announced what he called a "bold new program for making the benefits of our scientific and industrial progress available for the improvement and growth of undeveloped areas." Unfortunately, while this visionary Point Four program, as it was called, was never fully implemented in the 1950s, it provides a useful example in the 1990s of how we should approach the problems of the new democracies in Eastern Europe and Nicaragua and the less developed countries of the Third World. What we need today is an International Freedom Corps sponsored by the United States, Western Europe, and Japan which would have the responsibility to provide expert economic advice to those nations who chose freedom on how to develop and implement free market policies. For example, in the United States, retired chief executive officers of major corporations who are still in the prime of life could be of invaluable assistance in such a program.

The bottom line is that we should not blithely assume that if we can just "export democracy" these countries will find an answer to their desperate need for economic progress. Far more than our money to subsidize half-baked policies that are bound to fail, these countries need the benefit of our experience in dealing with the infinite complexities of free market economic systems.

Let us now take a close look at the most remarkable statesman of our time—Mikhail Gorbachev.

Gorbachev is a troika, a three dimensional personality. The fact that he does not have a single-minded vision, as was the case with his predecessors, should not be considered a liability. Unfortunately, history tells us that leaders with vision, more often than not, produce nightmares.

Despite what you may hear that he could be a closet democrat or even a closet Christian because he treats the Pope respectfully, Gorbachev is in fact a true believing communist. His goal is not to abandon communism, but to save it.

He is a patriotic Russian nationalist. His goal is not to dismantle the Soviet empire, but to preserve it, as demonstrated by the hard-line he is taking on Lithuanian independence.

But the most dominent facet of his complex personality is that he is a consummate pragmatic politician who likes power, knows how to use it, and will do what is necessary to keep it. It is this characteristic which has primarily influenced his decisions to adopt his revolutionary political, economic, and foreign policy reforms.

Rather than trying to psychoanalyze him, let us see what he has done.

His political reforms do not meet our standards. But compared with what the Russian people had before, they are breathtaking. Where there was no freedom of the press, there is now some. Where there was no freedom to criticize party leaders, there is now some. Where there were no free elections, there are now some. After having had their voices stilled for over seventy years, the great silent majority of the Russian people are finally being heard.

On the other hand, his economic reforms have been a dismal failure. For example, in the ten years of Deng Xiaoping's reforms in China between 1979 and 1989, the per capita income of the Chinese people doubled. In the five years Gorbachev has been in power, the per capita income of the Russian people has gone down.

His foreign policy reforms, however, have exceeded all expectations. He has withdrawn the Red Army from Afghanistan. He has announced reductions in his Warsaw Pact forces and in his defense budget. Most important, he has not used the Red Army to keep his East European clients in power, as did Khrushchev in Budapest in 1956 and Brezhnev in Prague in 1968.

We must keep this last point in context, however. The conventional Beltway wisdom is that it was Gorbachev who inspired and encouraged the anti-communist revolts in Eastern Europe. The truth is that it was Western values contrasted with the failure of communist policies, which brought millions into the streets of the great cities of Eastern Europe. Gorbachev deserves credit for not sending in the Red Army. But the revolutions in Eastern Europe were not pro-Gorbachev. There were pro-freedom and anti-communist.

The most significant question to address is why Gorbachev changed previous Soviet policies. Here we see the pragmatic politician taking over from the ideological communist and the Russian nationalist. Look at what he confronted when he came to power five years ago. Everywhere he looked, communism was suffering from terminal illness.

All of the Soviet Union's Third World conquests were losers, costing the Soviet Union $15 billion a year in subsidies.

Dissent and outright rebellion were boiling beneath the surface in the captive nations of Eastern Europe.

Most ominous, the Soviet economy was a basket case plagued by shortages, crime, and corruption.

Abroad he saw that his major potential adversary, the United States, had recovered from the malaise of the late 1970s and the recession of the early 1980s, had a booming economy, a stronger military, and a new initiative, SDI, which would cost him billions of dollars he did not have to be competitive.

In 1985, shortly after Gorbachev came to power, I asked China's General Secretary Hu Yaobang if he thought Gorbachev would adopt economic reforms as Deng Xiaoping had. He replied, "If he doesn't, the Soviet Union will disappear as a great power in the twenty-first century." He was right and Gorbachev knows it. He had no choice but to reform at home and to retrench abroad.

There is no question that Gorbachev has changed since the time he totally supported Brezhnev's policies. But it is a change of the head, not the heart. At a time he is using his head, we should not lose ours.

Let us see what he has not changed.

In implementing his political reforms, some communist officials have lost their positions. But Gorbachev has strengthened his. He is the most powerful Soviet leader since Stalin.

Despite cuts in his defense budget, he still spends twenty percent of his GNP on defense, compared with six percent in the United States. He has modernized all three legs of his nuclear triad, as well as his conventional land, sea, and air forces. The Soviet military is leaner, but stronger than when he came to power five years ago.

He has withdrawn the Red Army from Afghanistan, but spends $4 billion a year to keep the same communist government in power. Except for Nicaragua, all of the Soviet Union's Third World clients are still in power, subsidized to the tune of $15 billion a year in arms and economic aid from the Kremlin. The Cold War may be ended in Eastern Europe, but it is still being waged in the Third World.

Why did Gorbachev act as he did in Eastern Europe? He did what he did not to help us but to help himself. If he had used the Red Army to keep his unpopular clients in power in Eastern Europe, he would have aborted his brilliant diplomatic blitzkrieg to psychologically disarm Western Europe. He had to choose between Eastern Europe and Western Europe. He made the right choice. He chose Western Europe.

He faces a similar choice today. He must choose between Lithuania and the United States. If he uses force or threats of force to deny independence to Lithuania, there is no way that the Senate of the United States would approve any arms control, trade, or other agreement at the upcoming Bush-Gorbachev summit. Those who cynically say that having a Bush-Gorbachev summit must take priority over our concern for the independence of Lithuania are profoundly wrong morally. They are also wrong politically. The tough-minded, pragmatic politician who did nothing to keep his subservient client in power in strategically important East Germany will not risk his relationship with Western Europe and the United States to keep tiny Lithuania under Soviet control. The Ukraine, maybe; Lithuania, never.

To say that we must choose between independence for Lithuania and a Bush-Gorbachev summit misses the mark. It is possible to have both. Gorbachev will go to the brink, but he will stop short of action which would irreparably damage his new relationship with Western Europe and the United States, who in the final analysis he knows are going to have to bankroll perestroika.

Gorbachev's decision not to use force in Eastern Europe has been a brilliant success from his point of view. He has removed the fear—the glue that holds the NATO alliance together. Even more important, his benign image as a man of peace has increased his chances to get the credits and technology he needs for his sick economy.

Should we help Gorbachev? The answer is yes if it serves our interests as well as his.

It does not serve his interests or ours unless his reforms go far enough to work. His current reforms do not meet that test. As Andrei Sakharov observed shortly before his death, "In the absence of radical reforms, credits and technological aid would only prop up an ailing economy and delay the advent of democracy."

Even if his economic reforms go far enough to work, it does not serve our interests to help Gorbachev if as a result we will be facing an economically stronger Soviet Union with the same aggressive foreign policy.

As we applaud Gorbachev's new thinking in Eastern Europe, we should take a hard look at some of his old thinking in the Third World. In nation after nation he is supporting anti-American regimes in Asia, Africa, and Latin America.

He provides $6 billion a year in arms and other aid to Castro, $2.5 to Vietnam, $4 billion to Afghanistan, $1 billion to North Korea, $1.5 billion to Syria, $1 billion to Angola, $1 billion to Libya.

We hear reports that he is trying to influence his Third World clients to adopt less agressive policies. There is one sure way he can influence them. He can quit subsidizing them.

Now that the people of Eastern Europe have ended the Cold War in Eastern Europe, the time has come for Gorbachev to end the Cold War in the Third World.

But isn't this asking him to give up too much? Let us examine this question in historical perspective. In 1945, Winston Churchill sent a message to the new President of the United States, Harry Truman: "It is vital that we reach an understanding with Russia now before we mortally reduce our armed forces and withdraw to our zones of occupation." In effect, Churchill was saying, "Make a deal now when Stalin needs one because of our strength rather than waiting until later when he will not need one because of our weakness." His advice was rejected, and as a result a hundred million people in Eastern Europe were forced to endure 40 years of Soviet domination and repression.

We are at another great watershed of history. Gorbachev needs our help for his terminally sick economy. We should make a deal now which serves our interests rather than waiting until later when as a result of our help, he may no longer need one. We should link our decisions to items he wants like trade, credits, and technology to his actions on items we want like eliminating his support of our potential enemies in the Third World.

We should totally reject the fatuous advice of those who suggest that we should help finance perestroika. It is in our interest and in Gorbachev's as well for him to finance perestroika by cutting back on his Third World foreign aid programs and his huge defense budget.

Let us assume the best—that we will be entering a new era in which the Cold War is over, not just in Eastern Europe, but in the Third World as well. What are the challenge we will face?

First, there is the Soviet Union. Even without Eastern Europe, the Baltics, and its Third World outposts, the Soviet Union will not be an international pussycat. It will still have 30,000 nuclear warheads, the world's largest coventional army, and a modern, blue-water navy. And it will have a long history of pervasive Russian expansionism which began centuries before the Bolshevik Revolution. Those who fear a united Democratic Federal Republic of Germany because of Germany's history should take a hard look at the totalitarian Soviet Union in light of Russian history.

There is China—a nuclear power with one and one-tenth billion potentially capable people which in spite of not because of communism will be a military and economic superpower in the next century. Whether China will play a peaceful or destructive role in the world, whether it will repress or respect human rights, depends on whether the United States is able to again develop a constructive relationship with China. No other Pacific power can play that role. Does anyone seriously believe that the Japanese, let alone the Russians, would export democracy to China?

There is Japan, an economic superpower. It is fashionable and politically profitable to bash Japan these days. And as last week's issue of Newsweek indicated, it has now become fashionable in Japan to bash the United States. We must insist that we have fair trade as well as free trade with Japan. But we must recognize that as the two most advanced free world economies we are destined to be vigorous and at times even fierce competitors. But we must keep that competition in perspective. Those who contend that Japan has now replaced the Soviet Union as our major adversary in the world are grossly exaggerating the problem. The Dutch own more of America than do the Japanese. Even if all trade barriers between the United States and Japan were removed. Our trade deficit with Japan of $45 billion a year would be reduced by only $5 to $7 billion. As we consider the causes of our econcomic problems, rather than always looking out the window toward Japan, we should look in the mirror. Above all, we must never lose sight of the fact that without a constructive, strategic relationship between the United States and Japan, peace will not survive in the Pacific.

There is Western Europe, which after 1992 will challenge the United States as the world's major economic superpower. Before blithely dismantling NATO, we must remember that we need it for two reasons: As insurance against a renewed Soviet threat, and as reassurance for those who rightly or wrongly fear the power of a united Germany. Let's look at Europe without NATO. For forty years, the goal of Soviet foreign policy has been to denuclearize Europe, get the United States out of Europe, neutralize Germany, and dismantle NATO. Such a Europe would leave the Soviet Union as the only nuclear superpower and as the dominent conventional power in Europe. How long could the German economic powerhouse tolerate that situation?

There is the Third World. By the end of the century, four billion people will be living in the less developed nations of Latin America, Africa, and Asia. They will have a per capita income of $800 a year, as compared with $18,000 a year in the United States, Western Europe, and Japan. That disparity is a recipe for revolution in a part of the world in which there have been over 100 wars since World War II in which more people have been killed than in World War I.

The people of these countries have enormous problems. In the past, the communists at least have talked about the problems. Too often, we only talk about the communists. Now with the communist threat receding, we should address those problems honestly and creatively.

I could go on, but as you can see, apart from the Soviet threat which has monopolized our attention for over forty years, we face awesome challenges. But they are also inspiring because they are the challenges of peace, not of war. Can America meet those challenges? It is ironic that at the very moment we are at the brink of victory in the Cold War, a wave of isolationism is sweeping across the country. From the left we hear that the United States is a declining power and that we are no longer able or even worthy to carry the burden of free world leadership. From the right, we hear that the United States has carried that burden long enough and that the time has come for those we helped after World War II, particularly the Japanese and the Germans, to assume that responsibility.

There is no question that the Germans and Japanese should do far more. But that does not mean that the United States should do nothing.

We are not as powerful as we were after World War II, relative to the rest of the world. But the United States is still the world's only true superpower. The Japanese and Germans are economic superpowers. Only the United States is a military, economic, and geo-political superpower.

As Herb Stein recently pointed out, the United States is a very rich country. We are not rich enough to do anything, but we are rich enough to do everything important.

In speaking of the power of the United States in his Iron Curtain speech, Churchill said, "This is a solemn moment for the American Democracy. For with primacy in power is joined an awe-inspiring accountability for the future." That statement is as true today as it was when he spoke those words forty-four years ago. Leadership that only the United States can provide in both Europe and Asia is indispensable if peace and freedom are to survive in the world.

We should provide that leadership not just for others but for ourselves. America cannot be at peace in a world of wars. When freedom is lost anyplace, it is lost in America. We cannot have a healthy American economy in a sick world economy. For example, while there was significant progress politically in many Latin American countries in the 1980s, economically, the eighties were a lost decade. Only Colombia showed growth—and that for very unhealthy reasons. As the poor of Latin America escape from poverty, we in North America will find our lives enriched.

Let me put the challenge we face in historical perspective. In 1947, two freshman congressmen, Jack Kennedy and I, had offices near each other on the fifth floor of the old House Office Building. I vividly recall our first major foreign policy vote, exactly forty-three years ago. In a dramatic joint session of Congress, President Truman asked for military and economic aid for Greece and Turkey to meet the communist threat to those countries. It was a tough vote for both of us. It was tough for him because the liberal Democrats in his Massachusetts district opposed any military foreign aid. It was tough for me because the conservative Republicans in my California district opposed all foreign aid.

We both voted for it and helped to launch the great bipartisan initiative which deterred Soviet aggression in Western Europe for the past forty years.

We were young then. And with the enthusiasm of youth, we were highly motivated by the belief that we were serving a great cause—the defeat of communism.

You, the present and future leaders of America, have a greater cause—the victory of freedom. If you meet your challenge as we met ours, your legacy will be not just that you saved the world from communism, but that you helped make the world safe for freedom.

HONORING THE MIDDLETOWN PLAZA SENIOR CITIZEN CENTER

HON. ELIOT L. ENGEL

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, in my district on May 4, the Middletown Plaza Senior Citizen Center is holding a party to celebrate its 16th anniversary of service to the Bronx community. On this special occasion, I wish to recognize the hard work performed by the people who run the center, as well as salute the spirit of the senior citizens who are determined to make every day a celebration of life.

Over the past 16 years, the Middletown Center has offered a growing list of services that are vital to the more than 1,000 senior citizens registered for its programs. Examples include the meals that are served 5 days a week, the home delivered meals that are brought to 60 home-bound seniors, transportation to hospitals and shopping areas, and the case assistance available to help seniors with their medical and personal problems. The center's recreational activities include a weekly social dance, trips to exciting places, and a host of education programs.

Not only are all services provided by the Middletown Center's staff, but they are administered with care and understanding. The relationship between staff and senior citizens at the Middletown Center is to be commended. May their good work and good health continue on for many more years to come.

LESTER M. CRYSTAL: 20 YEARS OF JOURNALISM EXCELLENCE

HON. NITA M. LOWEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Ms. LOWEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw the attention of my colleagues to the distinguished honor which will be bestowed upon Lester M. Crystal by the Westchester Civil Liberties Union.

Mr. Crystal will be awarded the John Peter Zenger Journalism Award for his commitment to excellence in journalism. This award was created several years ago to honor exemplary commitment and dedication in the field of journalism. He is only the third recipient of this prestigious award. His career has been filled with positions of leadership in the journalistic profession, and in those positions, he has upheld the highest standards of journalism and has protected the freedom of expression which is fundamental to that profession and essential to our democracy.

He is the executive producer of public television's award winning MacNeil/Lehrer News Hour. He joined Robert MacNeil and Jim Lehrer in preparations for the launch of MacNeil/Lehrer in April 1983. Before this, his career encompassed over two decades with NBC News in various production and management positions.

Several of the prominent positions he has held in the media field include the presidency of NBC News, executive producer of NBC Nightly News, European producer for NBC News, executive vice president, documentary programing vice president, and affiliate news vice president. He also produced coverage of both the 1976 and 1980 Presidential elections.

Mr. Crystal was born in Duluth, MN. He earned his bachelors and masters degrees in journalism from Northwestern University's Medill School of Journalism. He is married to Toby Wilson, a fellow graduate of Northwestern. He has three children: Brad, Alan, and Liz.

I believe that this award is a fitting tribute to an American who has been unswerving in his pursuit of excellence in the field of journalism.

THE HONORABLE CLARKSON S. FISCHER TO BE HONORED

HON. FRANK PALLONE, JR.

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, the Honorable Clarkson S. Fischer, chief judge of the U.S. District Court for the District of New Jersey, will be honored later this week for nearly 20 years of service on the Federal bench. I would consider it a privilege to pay tribute to an American public servant who has compiled a career as illustrious and impressive as that of Judge Fischer. But this tribute has a special meaning for me. Years before I entered politics, I had the unique honor of interning with Judge Fischer. The insights that I gained working alongside this distinguished individual have significantly shaped my views on the rule of law and the responsibilities of public service ever since.

During his lengthy career on the Federal bench, Judge Fischer has heard and rendered decisions on a wide variety of Federal cases, both civil and criminal. During his career, he has won the praise of attorneys who have argued before him, as well as legal scholars who have followed his work.

Judge Fischer was born and raised in Long Branch, NJ, the same community that I have called home my entire life. After his graduation from Long Branch High School and St. Benedict's Preparatory School in Newark, NJ, Judge Fischer attended Notre Dame University; his studies were interrupted by his service in World War II. He graduated from Notre Dame School of Law in 1950, was admitted to the New Jersey State Bar in 1951, and practiced law with the firm of Juska & Fischer until his appointment to the bench. During the time prior to his appointment to the bench, he also served as an elected official at the municipal and State level, and was active in community affairs. In 1964 he was appointed to the bench by Gov. Richard J. Hughes, and was appointed to the Superior Court of New Jersey in 1966.

In October 1970, President Richard M. Nixon appointed Judge Fischer to the U.S. District court for the District of New Jersey. In 1979, Judge Fischer became chief judge of the U.S. District Court for the District of New Jersey. Judge Fischer's tenure over that period of time is the longest in the recent history of the court. Because of amendment to the Judicial Code in 1982, no future judge will serve as chief judge for as long as Judge Fischer has.

A Seton Hall Law Review article published in 1987, shortly after Judge Fischer took senior status, cited some of the judge's major decisions. His decision in a case involving a financing agreement, First National State Bank of New Jersey versus Commonwealth Federal Savings and Loan Association of Norristown, Pennsylvania, was cited by the author of the Law Review article as a widely respected and scholarly treatment of the law of specific performance. His decison in Daggett versus Kimmelman, is a leading case in the field of legislative and congressional reapportionment, affirmed by the Supreme Court. His decision in B.F. Hirsch, Inc. versus Enright Refining Co. is an early decision under civil RICO.

Judge Fischer's personal life has been every bit as commendable as his career in public life: devoted family man, devout patriot, and long-time trustee of his church. On May 4, 1990, his law clerks will honor Judge Fischer at a testimonial in Sea Girt, NJ.

Mr. Speaker, Judge Clarkson S. Fischer has earned the respect of his colleagues on the bench, in the bar, and throughout the State of New Jersey for his integrity and his devotion to the law that he has sworn his oath to uphold. It is my pleasure to share just some of his accomplishments with the Members of this body.

THE IMPORTANCE OF COMMERCIAL SPACE ACTIVITIES

HON. ROBERT S. WALKER

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I want to highlight the importance of commercial space activities for the United States. The Nation's future leadership in several technological areas probably depends on maintaining a leading position in commercial space.

The United States has made the largest investment in the world in space technology and we have dominated this field. That position is now under serious attack around the world. The Europeans have an established program. The Russians are working with the Australians to launch commercial satellites from Australia on Russian rockets. China is making inroads and the Japanese are targeting space, as well.

The United States should benefit the most from the enormous financial investment we have in space technology. We should not let our foreign competitors beat us in the space marketplace.

The Deputy Secretary of Commerce, Thomas Murrin, gave a talk to the Sixth National Space Symposium in Colorado Springs on April 10 where he discussed these issues in some detail. Mr. Murrin said, "We know that an energetic and expanding commercial space sector could strengthen both the U.S. civilian and military space programs, while also helping the United States to enhance its global economic competitiveness."

Mr. Speaker, I insert the full text of Mr. Murrin's remarks and I urge my colleagues to read them and to consider his points.

REMARKS BY COMMERCE DEPUTY SECRETARY THOMAS J. MURRIN

Thank you, Dr. David Webb—and good morning, ladies and gentlemen.

It is a pleasure and a privilege to speak with you and to join such a distinguished panel—including "Abe" Abrahamson and Bob Anderson, with whom I was closely associated during my earlier industrial career.

It is a "hard act" to follow the Vice President on this platform. Happily, my prepared comments are compatible with his space-related statements. I'm delighted with his comments regarding the use of space to help assure our economic well being, and his statement that, on occasion, our government must take positive action to support private sector efforts—such as the one leading to the successful launch of Pegasus.

This morning, I want to address a subject that presents some of our most difficult challenges and our most outstanding opportunities in space: How do we move beyond the very early stages of space commercialization into a new, mature era—an era when more of our companies can take advantage of space to serve both our industrial and national interests?

A top-flight group of industry officials advising the Secretary of Commerce on commercial space put this challenge into perspective a little more than a year ago. Here's a quote from their excellent report:

"Commercial development in space poses one of the most difficult challenges U.S. industry has faced. The inherent technical and market risks, the magnitude of investments required and the longer payback periods characteristic of space ventures are daunting enough. In space business, however, these risk factors combine with an unparalleled level of government involvement here and abroad."

Noting that we have made an enormous investment in our space capabilities, first for political and prestige reasons and increasingly for national security applications, the report goes on to conclude:

"Now, at the very point that the U.S. should be getting a return on its national investment in space technology, it appears to be faltering. Other nations have made significant strides in developing their own capabilities, in many areas developing near parity. They have directed much of their efforts at—and the erosion of U.S. position has been most apparent in—commercial applications. Given the considerably higher level of U.S. space expenditures, the rate of increase in foreign capabilities is cause for national concern."

There, in a nutshell, is the challenge that awaits us. So how do we better commercialize space?

First, I want to review briefly our Commerce perspective on the state of this emerging industry. Space commerce is not just a futuristic concept. In 1990, the U.S. commercial space sector expects to see revenues of $3.5 billion. We expect new satellite services to grow considerably—for business networks, data transmission, mobile service, and radio location services. Renewed interest in direct broadcast satellites for television, combined with the advent of new technologies such as high definition television, promise fresh markets.

The U.S. commercial space sector is dominated by satellite communications goods and services. But there are other components that are just beginning to help redefine space commerce in the United States. Space commerce also has a new commercial launch sector that is made up of three major U.S. competitors and additional smaller firms. In 1990, just the second year of operations for commercial launch services, we project revenues to exceed $600 million. With NASA conducting its last expendable launch last year, we expect future civil expendable launches will use commercial services. The successful launch last week of Orbital Sciences Corporation's Pegasus symbolizes the start of a new space transportation segment which should allow smaller scientific and commercial payloads to be launched more frequently. Coupled with smaller satellites now being developed, these launch systems might permit the entry of small- and medium-sized firms which otherwise could not conduct commercial activities in space.

Taking advantage of space as a unique environment for materials research—and perhaps materials processing—has long been a dream for space enthusiasts, and it still may develop into space commerce down the road. Another prospective market exists for privately-supplied design and components for space-based facilities.

Commercial space activities hold the potential for tremendous growth in the coming decades. We know that an energetic and expanding commercial space sector could strengthen both the U.S. civilian and military space programs, while also helping the United States to enhance its global economic competitiveness. And we know that space activities may be a technology driver for the entire economy, providing valuable jobs and exports—along with technologies and capabilities that benefit a wide range of space and non-space industries.

What we don't know is exactly what it will take to turn this vast potential into commercial reality. And, as one famous English playwright put it, "There's the rub."

Our earlier experiences with space may be of limited value, because we now have international competition in space the likes of which we have never seen. We talked about the "Space Race" in the 1960s and 1970s. In the 1990s, we are in a new space race, this time for commercial superiority in space. We are joined by tough competitors—the Soviets, Europeans, Japanese, Chinese, and, prospectively, the Australians, and perhaps others. The capabilities that we built up through decades of experience in space have given us something of a head start on the rest of the field, but that can get us only just so far in this new and intensified race.

Should we take the competition seriously? That's a question that we shouldn't even be pausing to consider. For we have seen one U.S. industry after another targeted by capable and ambitious competitors which act in every possible way in their own national self interests. Our trade deficit reflects the difficulty our industries have experienced in dealing with these aggressive competitors—and commercial space and aerospace are near the top of the planning list for Japan and Europe.

Just a look at the news headlines tells the story from Japan: "Japanese Buy Soviet Space Station," "Japan Accused of Blocking Open Satellite Competition," "Japanese Private Launch Firm Under Discussion," "Japan Sends Satellite Toward the Moon in Symbolic Mission: Project Signifies an Attempt by Tokyo to Catch Up in Space to Superpowers," "Japan Nurtures Space Science," and "Japan Readies First Moon Mission Launch As Companies Seek Lunar Base Role."

Why are the Japanese so interested in space? Apparently, they see space as a key to winning the high-tech competition with the United States and Europe. That's why Japan's Ministry of International Trade and Industry has made space-related research and development one of its top priorities, and why their country will spend more than a billion dollars on space development this year. That's not a huge sum—it pales in comparison to our own investment. But time and time again the Japanese have proven themselves extraordinarily proficient at gathering and putting to practical use the results of R&D conducted in the United States and elsewhere, and in acquiring the innovatively applying capabilities developed outside their island nation. Like several of our other competitors with programs smaller than ours, they have another factor working in their favor: that is, their space-related program is narrowly focused on key commercial opportunities. In short, they get maximum leverage out of their investments in space.

I was particularly intrigued to learn recently about the Japanese young astronaut clubs—modeled on our American program and aimed at attracting Japanese students to pursue careers in space-based industries. Considering the excellent mathematics and science preparation Japanese students receive, a future generation of Japanese competitors trained in the basics of space should provide us with additional challenges.

I don't want to dwell on Japan, because we have several formidable competitors out there. The reality of such space commerce globalization hit home for me recently when I welcomed a Soviet delegation visiting our Commerce Department to discuss a potential joint venture in medical equipment. It turned out that the gentleman heading the delegation also is leading the Soviets' project to apply their impressive rocket systems—built up during a chillier defense climate—to the commercial launch business. They have in mind competing directly with our young commercial launch sector by offering to launch communications satellites and other payloads. That's the kind of peace dividend I don't believe we anticipated—and one that dramatically demonstrates the international nature of technology and space commerce today. A model of the Soviets' rocket now sits on my Commerce bookshelf as a daily reminder of the global competition we face.

The Soviets' commercial ambitions raise the question of how we do business with non-market economies when the price they can offer for a product may bear little relation to what we consider to be "cost." We face the difficult challenge of developing rules of international space commerce that encourage fair competition—rules that take into account national interests, including the special interests of non-market economies and those just now moving to market economies—without setting up barriers to trade.

This issue was spotlighted last Saturday night when we learned that, "China successfully launched an American made telecommunications satellite into orbit, heralding that country's entry into the international space market"—and that "China is reported to have charged $30 million to carry out the launch; reputedly much less than European or U.S. concerns would have charged." We have been holding informal discussions with the European Space Agency on this subject off and on for several years. Pending results of the National Space Council's review, a more formal process now may be appropriate to help decide this issue.

Whether it is market or non-market economies that our commercial space industry is competing against, the United States must develop and advocate a coherent and vigorous trade policy that provides the maximum opportunity for U.S. private sector growth. Our recent negotiations with the Japanese over their policies and practices for procuring satellites and telecommunications equipment and services—and last week's broad trade agreement with Japan—demonstrate this Administration's commitment to vigorously pursue trade policies that are free and fair—and that foster sales on the basis of price and quality. We are pursuing this same policy in Europe. There we are actively monitoring actions as EC 92 approaches to ensure that American products and services, including those that fall into the category of space commerce, are not discriminated against.

The alliances being forged by our major aerospace competitors challenge America as we seek to explore and develop the "highest frontier." We all know of the European Space Agency's success with Arianespace. More recently, we have seen the merger of German aerospace companies under the Daimler-Benz banner, followed by the possible teaming of Mitsubishi of Japan with Daimler-Benz of Germany on a variety of technologies, including aerospace. The Japanese always make cooperation among their companies a way of doing business, and space is no exception.

Here at home, we are learning better the advantages of cooperation among companies and between the public and private sectors. These include promising developments such as the NASA-organized Centers for the Commercial Development of Space, the exciting National Aerospace Plane consortium, and the impressive "Key Technologies" effort mounted by the Aerospace Industries Association. This latter group has put together an impressive, detailed roadmap for developing the technologies America needs in order to maintain its world leadership role in aerospace. Now the hard part comes: following up the planning with effective, coordinated action.

Cooperation in R&D is already more attractive with 1984 antitrust law changes. Further changes, this time to encourage joint production ventures, were endorsed by the President last month, and should offer additional incentives for cooperative commercial space activities among U.S. firms. As America's emerging space industry looks at the formidable competition, and at new alliances being formed overseas, more formal cooperative ventures—for commercial launches, for instance—may merit careful consideration by the private sector.

Cooperation is one path to improved U.S. competitiveness in space commerce. But no matter how we get there, we must make U.S. competitiveness in this important sector an intrinsic part of our plans and operations in space—not an afterthought. The billions of dollars expected to be invested in the major space programs we now are planning can and should help U.S. industry remain the world leader in aerospace. This sector accounts for the largest balance of trade for this country, but it is targeted by competition around the world.

Will these major space programs be carried out in a way that supports U.S. commercial interests? Such programs can be conducted either to maximize or minimize private sector capabilities. For instance, if not well planned, international involvement in large U.S. space programs can work to the detriment of U.S. firms, because those same countries we may cooperate with also are home to our commercial competition. Another example: Placing maximum reliance on off-the-shelf and market-driven technologies—rather than on unique program specifications—would stimulate and take advantage of our private sector's creative capabilities.

A particular concern is that our major space efforts will affect—and in turn, be affected by—our human resource capabilities. All of these space projects will demand a large pool of scientific and technical talent precisely at a time when scientists and engineers are projected to be in short supply in this country. We must ensure that our manpower needs for the space program are compatible with the needs of other sectors of our technology-based economy and with our supply. Otherwise, we could end up successfully completing technology-intensive space projects—yet lack the technical talent to turn these ventures to our broader economic and national advantage.

Last November, President Bush issued a new National Space Policy which recognizes the importance of space commerce. This policy declares:

"* * * Expanding private sector investment in space by the market-driven commercial sector generates economic benefits for the Nation and supports governmental space sectors with an increasing range of space goods and services. Government space sectors shall purchase commercially available space goods and services to the fullest extent feasible and shall not conduct activities with potential commercial applications that preclude or deter commercial sector space activities."

The National Space Council, headed up by Vice President Quayle, now is reviewing how that policy can be, and is being, put into practice. That is an important development that we at Commerce supported. The council also is examining commercial space transportation policies—including increased activities by nations with non-market economies, the need for developing advanced space transportation systems, and the prospect for balancing the requirements of the satellite communications and space launch sectors of our economy.

These reviews, and analyses being conducted at Commerce, will focus attention on commercial space issues, and hopefully will provide the information needed to help formulate national policies and to make corporate decisions. We consider that an important Commerce Department function, since effective competition in domestic and global markets requires an in-depth understanding of market dynamics and governmental policies.

Along these lines, we recently included space as a new sector covered by our 1990 Industrial Outlook for U.S. industries. This spring, we expect to release the first of what will be a regular series of "Space Business Indicators" which provide raw data and some analysis of the domestic space industry and its prospects.

We also soon will release a report on commercial space ventures from a financial perspective. Prepared by our Office of Space Commerce, this study analyzes the problems of obtaining financing for commercial space ventures and the role of government in this process. The report examines the financial histories of five ventures, and illustrates the unique problems faced by this industry. It concludes that well-informed investors are essential if advances in science and technology are to be translated into innovative products and services. Unfortunately, our study also demonstrates that the exchange of information among the financial community, entrepreneurs, and the federal government has not always been adequate—and that investors have had difficulty obtaining the information they need to understand the technical, political, and market risks associated with space technology investment.

The Commerce Department has several clear roles in fostering space commerce. We can: serve as an advocate for making the most of private sector space-related capabilities; help assure that our space industry is not hindered by foreign trade practices; and provide critical information needed by the industry. But our Department also can help the space industry in other ways.

Increasingly, this includes our space-related research, such as our involvement with the Mission to Planet Earth, the space station's telerobot, and the Hubble Space Telescope. It also includes standards activities. Government and industry standards affect all areas of space commerce—spacecraft reliability, communications, and the construction of launch sites and facilities. Space standards are a logical area for Commerce Department involvement, and we are discussing with NASA and industry several approaches to the development of much-needed standards for commercial space operations. Important goals here include common international standards affecting commercial space, and assuring that government and commercial standards converge to allow for greater economies of scale.

There's another area of "standards" that needs the attention of companies involved in commercial space: total quality management. Here, the Commerce Department's Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award program provides a wonderful example of how the public and private sectors can work together to help improve the quality of U.S. products and services. This award and the related education program offer a process of self-examination for TQM. Now in its third year, the program is helping companies and other organizations to achieve real quality improvement results by setting out seven major criteria for quality improvement and providing a system for measuring how well companies meet the goal of TQM. Nowhere is quality more important than in the space sector, so if you are not familiar with this program and the application guidelines, I urge you to do so. The April 23 issue of Fortune provides a thorough up-beat cover story review of the program, along with a technology feature article I commend to you, titled, "We're losing the Space Race."

All of us at this conference probably have a vision of space commerce in the 1990's and beyond, and we can imagine some of the possibilities if this sector fulfills even a fraction of its promise. But we don't yet have an American agenda for space commerce, and working closely with the industry, that is where I hope our Commerce Department can play its most important role.

Space commerce is still a young industry. Like any youthful enterprise, it has had its growing pains, its successes and its setbacks. Space, by its very nature, is a risky environment, making space commerce a risky business. But the bottom line is that it is business.

Like the winner of the first race to space, the winner of the new race—for commercial superiority in space—will receive international prestige. But it also stands to win potential lucrative commercial markets and improved international economic competitiveness. Those are goals worthy of the best efforts America can muster, and reason enough for making commercial interests a top national priority for our space program in the 1990s.

Thank you!
Good luck!
God bless!

PRIDE IN AMERICA

HON. BOB STUMP

OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, ask any U.S. citizen what they think of America, and they'll tell you. Our right to freedom of speech, guaranteed in the Constitution, allows us to speak freely, and without fear. America means different things to different people, but one sentiment rings through loud and clear: a sense of pride.

It gives me great pleasure to bring to the attention of my colleagues, an outstanding young individual from the Third District of Arizona, Margaret May Middlemore, of Prescott. Margaret was recently honored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States as the third place national winner in the 1990 Voice of Democracy Scholarship Program for her broadcast script, "Why I am Proud of America." In her script, Margaret captured that feeling of pride in our great Nation, which I would like to share with you today.

WHY I AM PROUD OF AMERICA

Why I am proud of America?

You ask why I am proud of America? Because it makes my heart swell with pride when I speak of her. It is the land of my birth, a priceless legacy that entitles me the freedoms and constitutional rights that were established long ago.

America, say it slow and clear, America. The very word conjures up magic. From the far corners of the world, men give their lives to reach our golden doors, to live in a democracy that allows them to vote and speak freely, to worship God freely, and where there is a form of government that allows free enterprise.

And America is the home of the free. From Gettysburg, to Valley Forge, from the Little Horn to Anzio, men fighting to keep America free. They fought so that five marines could push Old Glory into position on the sands of Iwo Jima. They fought because of the devastating blow to Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941. They fought to avenge the deaths of the brave men entombed in the rusting hull of the sunken Arizona. The father of one of my classmates, was awarded the silver star for gallantry in action during the Tet Offensive in Vietnam. This is but one example of the courageous men and women who fought and will continue to fight to keep America's shores free from tyranny. Yes, I am proud of America and its people.

America is her people. Her people came together with a desire to be free, to form a country that would have no walls as boundaries to its people. At this very moment, bondage people are risking their lives to escape such walls. But America is peopled with those whose freedom loving hearts are at home in God's wide open spaces. They have proved that together in equality, they can live in peace.

America is—is people coming together with a desire to sing the National Anthem on the Fourth of July, to bring a lump in their throats when Old Glory is raised at the Olympics while tears course down the cheek of an athlete. America is Lou Gehrig, hitting a home-run for a dying boy. It is Kate Smith singing, "God Bless America." It is Jesse Owens carrying America to victory in Germany, in the 1936 Olympic Games. It is seeing our President weep after a space tragedy, while overhead jets soar across the sky in the missing man formation. It is the courage of her people shining forth even in her darkest hours. These are the reasons why I am proud to be one of her people.

My country is the land of opportunity, where we are allowed to work for our dreams. It's the Lincoln Memorial, the Declaration of Independence, the blue and grey of West Point. It is our capitol outlined against a crimson sky, with our flag flying above its dome.

It is Arlington National Cemetery, with its row upon row of white crosses illuminated by the eternal flame of freedom which burns for the unknown soldier as well as an assassinated president of our country.

God fashioned our country in love, and I love our country.

THE NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF PUERTO RICAN WOMEN—MIAMI CHAPTER

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise tody to recognize the wonderful National Conference of Puerto Rican Women's Miami chapter. On Saturday, May 5, the Miami chapter will be holding its annual luncheon in which scholarships are awarded. This is one among the many activities which the Miami chapter is involved in.

The Miami chapter of the National Conference of Puerto Rican Women was founded in 1977 by Alicia Boró. Alicia is a past president of the chapter, as well as a past president of the National Conference. Currently, Alicia is a delegate to the National Conference. The purpose of the organization is to foster and develop leadership in Puerto Rican and Hispanic Women. The conference's main priority is education. During the past few years the Miami chapter has organized different forums on subjects such as: AIDS; general health issues; personal self-defense and safety; and, leadership training seminars. They have also organized cultural events, such as the recent celebration of Women's History Month, during which Marta Casals Istomin, artistic director of the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, was honored.

Saturday's luncheon will honor several young Hispanic women for their academic excellence during their high school studies. Scholarships will be given to graduating seniors who have achieved a grade point average of 3.5 or more and who also demonstrate economic need. By doing this, the organization is encouraging and helping these young women to continue their education and to fulfill their potential as members of our community.

This year, the Miami chapter of the National Conference of Puerto Rican Women is expertly led by the following members: president, Dr. Lydia Medrano; first vice president, Ivette Vallejo; second vice president, Norah Venegas; corresponding secretary, Sonia Flores; treasurer, Sylvia Girona; and vice treasurer, Laura Rosas. The chapter's delegates to the National Conference are Alicia Baró, Esther Bou, and Judy Freyre.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to thank the members of the Miami chapter for their wonderful contributions to our community in Miami. As a Florida certified teacher, I know the importance of education and the excellent job being done by the chapter through their forums, seminars, and scholarship awards is encouraging excellence and pride in those who participate in them.

HONORING LALO AND ROSIE ROJAS, CITY OF NORWALK

HON. ESTEBAN EDWARD TORRES

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. TORRES. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure today to recognize a fine individual and my special friend, Lalo Rojas. Lalo and his wife, Rosie are being honored, on Saturday, May 5, 1990.

Lalo was born in Casper, WY on July 4, 1921. His parents moved the family to California when Lalo was still a child. They lived in the San Fernando Valley and in San Bernardino before moving to the city of Norwalk in 1932 where he attended local schools. He served his country in World War II as a Marine. In 1941, he married his childhood sweetheart, the former Rosie Prieto who was born in Norwalk. Together they have 10 children: Michael, Lalo Jr., Patrick, Amelia, Danny, Peter, Cindy, Mary Lou, Bobby and Benji and 23 grandchildren.

For over 40 years Lalo has dedicated his life to making Norwalk a better community in which to live. He has been unselfish with his time, and his friendship to all. Lalo has been involved with numerous civic and community organizations such as LULAC #2043; LULAC #2859, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, [VFW], Glenn Wood Post #7138. He served the city as Commissioner on the Community Promotions Commission from 1978 to 1982. In this position he promoted and improved the image and overall level of service needed to provide a safe and comfortable standard of living to the citizens of the city of Norwalk.

Mr. Speaker, on May 5, 1990, the citizens of Norwalk will honor Lalo Rojas for his outstanding contributions to the residents of this community. I ask my colleagues to join me in saluting my friend and advisor, Lalo Rojas, for his outstanding record of service to the community of Norwalk, CA.

HONORING THE MANHATTAN COLLEGE SMALL BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT CENTER

HON. ELIOT L. ENGEL

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, it is well known that the spirit of the entrepreneur helped build America into an economic power, and that small businesses continue to be the proving ground for big ideas. Today, I would like to recognize the work being done throughout the country by small business development centers to help the small business owner survive and prosper.

The SBDC's, which are located in 48 States, combine public and private resources to assist and counsel the small business community. Last year, the 19 SBDC programs in New York State helped small businesses secure more than $53 million in funding and investment. More than 2,200 jobs were created or saved by SBDC programs in New York alone.

Today, I specifically honor the SBDC at Manhattan College in the Bronx, which is conducting its second annual Small Business Information Exposition on May 8. The expo is an example of a creative SBDC program; representatives from government agencies, lending institutions, accounting firms, and legal offices all make their expertise available to established and potential small business owners. Under the direction of Dr. Frederick Greene, last year's expo was a resounding success, and this year's program has been enhanced and expanded.

Since the SBDC programs receive funding from a variety of sources, they are in a constant battle to maintain that assistance. I believe it is important that elected officials at all levels of government recognize the important work being done at the SBDC's and assure that the programs have the resources to continue their mission. As a member of the Small Business Committee, I know that small businesses are the fastest growing sector of our economy. In large part, it is because places such as the Manhattan College SBDC are keeping the spirit of the entrepreneur alive.

HY ROTTMAN: HONORED FOR A LIFETIME OF SERVICE

HON. NITA M. LOWEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mrs. LOWEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw the attention of my colleagues to the distinguished honor which will be bestowed upon Hy Rottman by the Tom Paine New Rochelle Lodge of B'nai B'rith this Sunday.

Mr. Rottman will receive the lodge's distinguished Man of the Year Award for his leadership in both the business community and his commitment and dedication to the Jewish community.

He came to the United States in 1949, as a 16-year-old immigrant from Poland. From the moment that he set foot on American soil, he ambitiously pursued the American dream. Within a year, he graduated from Taft High School in the Bronx. Six years later, after combining many long hours of study with part-time jobs, he earned a bachelor of science degree in accounting. In just 2 more years, he had passed the CPA examination.

In 1960, he met his future wife, Dana Glockenberg, who had also been a Polish immigrant and a surviror of the Holocaust. They were married and started a family in the Bronx where their two children, Stephen and Karen, were born. They later moved to New Rochelle.

For over 20 years, Hy Rottman has been a partner in the accounting firm of Rottman, Haber Associates, CPA's. Both he and Dana are active in Jewish causes that involve religious, community, and cultural affairs. He is a past president of the Tom Paine New Rochelle Lodge of B'nai B'rith.

Hy Rottman is a shining example of the notion that hard work and dedication can lead to the satisfaction of ones dreams. I highly commend the Tom Paine Lodge for bestowing such a great honor on such an outstanding and deserving American. This is an honor which is richly deserved.

TRIBUTE TO MR. TEX WEIDER

HON. FRANK PALLONE, JR.

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, one of my most illustrious and best known constituents, Mr. Tex Weiner of Interlaken, NJ, will be honored by the Deal, NJ, Hadassah as its Man of the Year at a ceremony on Sunday, May 6, in West Long Branch, NJ.

Mr. Weiner is a gentleman who has excelled in many areas and has prospered as a result of his hard work as a homebuilder in New Jersey and other States. But while he has earned many rewards for his efforts, he has also given back to the community. Most notably, Mr. Weiner has dedicated a great deal of effort and his own personal resources to the building of a strong and secure State of Israel.

The involvement of Mr. Weiner and his wife, Peggy, in behalf of Israel began even prior to Israeli independence. In 1947, the Weiners opened their home to Jerusalem's Mayor Teddy Kolleck when he was in this country on a special mission. In the years since, the Weiners' projects have included the Peggy and Tex Weiner Park in Jerusalem and the Peggy and Tex Weiner Computerized Library at the Hadassah Mount Scopus Hospital. Mr. Weiner now serves as national vice president of Israel Bonds and received the Israel President's Club Award at the Elie Weisel Holocaust Remembrance dinner and the Israel Peace Award presented at the Israel Bonds dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Weiner have also received the Jerusalem Gold Medal.

The Weiners' two sons, Joshua and David, have continued their parents' work on behalf of Israel. Last December, when I made my first trip to Israel, I was accompanied by David Weiner. The hard work and strong advocacy of the Weiner family has played a major role in shaping my dedication to work in Congress on behalf of continued United States support for Israel, our democratic ally in the Middle East.

CAPPELLA RUSSIAN MALE CHORUS

HON. ROBERT G. TORRICELLI

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, it is with great respect and admiration that I address my colleagues in the House today, for I rise to extend my heartiest congratulations and warmest best wishes to the Cappella Russian Male Chorus. The Cappella Russian Male Chorus will be celebrating its 50th anniversary on May 6, 1990.

The Cappella Russian Male Chorus was founded in 1940 to keep alive the great heritage of Russian choral music. The group was formerly known as the Metropolitan Russian Male Chorus, but changed its name to Cappella as a tribute to the original Kappella, the famous Russian choir which toured the world at the beginning of the century.

The Cappella has sung concerts in many cities and has broadcast programs for the Voice of America, Radio Free Europe and Church of the Air, allowing Russian Orthodox Church and Russian folk music to be heard throughout the world.

The members of the Cappella are of Russian heritage and the Russian Orthodox faith. The chorus has been led by such well-known choral conductors as Fred Skibitsky, Yasha Resnikoff, Peter J. Wilhousky, Nicholas Borodulia, Dimitry Orlov, Nicholas P. Afonsky, Michael Milosheff, Boris M. Ledkovsky, Alexander B. Ledkovsky, Walter Shymansky, Marina Krasikova-Dorogoff, and Vladimir Marchuk.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to join in paying tribute to this exceptional group and extend my appreciation of their efforts to keep their heritage alive and share it with us all. I offer my best wishes to them on this special occasion.

EAGLE SCOUT HONORED

HON. WILLIAM O. LIPINSKI

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to bring to the attention of my colleagues, an outstanding young individual from the Fifth Congressional District of Illinois who has completed a major goal in his Scouting career. On Tuesday, May 29,1990 at the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 6869 located in North Riverside, IL, Mark Thurbush will be honored at an Eagle Scout Court of Honor.

It is important to note that less than 2 percent of all young men in America attain the rank of Eagle Scout. This high honor can only be earned by those scouts demonstrating extraordinary leadership abilities. This young individual has clearly demonstrated such abilities through his dedicated community service and deserves special recognition.

In light of the commendable leadership and courageous activities performed by such a fine young man, I ask you, my fellow colleagues, to join me in honoring Mark Thurbush for attaining the highest honor in Scouting—the Eagle Scout. With God's blessings, let us wish him the very best in all of his endeavors.

TRIBUTE TO THE MEMBERS OF THE POCKET PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH ON THEIR CENTENNIAL

HON. H. MARTIN LANCASTER

OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. LANCASTER. Mr. Speaker, today I would like to pay a special tribute to a community of faith in my district that for generations has been an inspiration to its members and its neighbors. The Pocket Presbyterian Church in rural Lee County, just west of Sanford, NC has for 100 years been building a fellowship committed to service, trust, and growth.

Founded May 2, 1890, Rev. Dugald McLauchlin was the first pastor of the Pocket Presbyterian Church. The church's 15 founding families totaled 57 charter members. At its first meeting in a local school, the congregation erected a church in 1898 and later founded the Pocket Academy. A center of education in the rural community, the Pocket Academy provided dormitories for the children who lived too far away to make the daily trip to school. The original school building and dormitory still stand.

Through the years the church continued to grow. Sunday school rooms were added in 1950, a fellowship building in 1953, an educational wing in 1958, and the manse in 1964. Last year an addition to the fellowship hall was completed.

In 1965 the Reverend Frederick Leroy Bremer became the church's first full-time pastor, serving until 1968. Now under the leadership of Rev. Burwell Shore, the Pocket Presbyterian Church has 200 members. Today is the 100th anniversary of the creation of the Pocket Presbyterian Church. For the church's centennial I would like to honor its members and their spirit of community, devotion to faith, and commitment to growth.

INNOVATION IN THE DAIRY INDUSTRY

HON. ROBERT G. TORRICELLI

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, today I introduced H.R. 4723, a bill to allow light natural butter products to be marketed in the United States. Fat and calorie content of the foods that we eat are an important consideration in the health of all Americans. This legislation that I introduce today will give American consumers a choice in helping them reduce their fat and calorie intake contained in butter while still using a 100-percent natural, pure dairy product.

Pure dairy products have long been considerd the perfect food. But in recent years consumers have been retreating from traditional products which they consider to be high in fat, in favor of lower fat products. Consumers have been educated by strong scientific evidence that excessive intake of dietary fat contributes to a variety of serious health conditions, such as coronary heart disease. The Surgeon General's recent "Report on Nutrition and Health" (1988) and the National Academy of Science's report titled "Diet and Health: Implications for Reducing Chronic Disease Risk" (1989) have comprehensively reviewed the available scientific evidence on the relationship between diet and health and recommended that most Americans reduce their dietary fat intake. To accomplish that goal, the reports further suggest that efforts be made to increase the availability of low fat alternatives to traditional food products.

The statutory definition of butter, long established in law, describes a product with 80 percent milk fat. Light butter is butter which contains not more than half the traditional amount of butter fat (35 percent to 40 percent milk fat). Light butter is now available to consumers in Canada and Europe, but for it to be made and sold by United States dairies it is time to amend the law. The proposed amendment recognizes the current advanced state of dairy technology which makes a pure light butter possible.

Light butter can be produced without additives such as emulsifiers and stabilizers. Light butter would provide a pure dairy alternative to full-fat butter for consumers who prefer a product which tastes and spreads just like butter, with all the qualities they expect in their table butter but with just half the fat.

The use of the word "light" is common in the food industry to indicate to consumers that a product contains a significant reduction in fat. Light butter would be consistent with an overall strategy to communicate a 50-percent reduction in fat in dairy products.

I strongly urge my colleagues to support H.R. 4723 as an important effort in reducing the fat and calorie content in the diet of all Americans. I stand ready, willing, and able to work with my colleagues to help enact this legislation.

CONGRESS PAYS TRIBUTE TO JOSEPH S. LIROSI

HON. GERALD B.H. SOLOMON

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, as you know, I often boast about the abundance and variety of talent in my district. In fact, the 24th New York District has more than its share of extraordinary people. We recently lost one of them, a devoted family man who in his lifetime pursued not one but several successful careers.

Joseph S. Lirosi was born on February 1, 1923, in Schenectady, just outside the district. But his food manufacturing/brokerage business, his real estate activities, and his involvement in horse racing made him an integral part of the social and commercial life of our district, too. We will all miss him.

Mr. Lirosi was a star tennis player in high school and served in the Army during World War II. Shortly after the war, he convinced his father to join him in leaving their grocery store and importing business to form a new wholesale operation to serve supermarkets and smaller grocery stores. By 1952, there were 12 Chain Supers stores in the area. That year, as a measure of his success, Life magazine named him one of America's 25 most outstanding young businessmen.

His career as a food broker began in 1954, when Boscul Coffee Co. asked him to be their upstate New York representative. He left Lirosi Sales Co. to found Associated Food Brokers, which later incorporated and by 1960, was the first area representatives for the then-unknown Hefty Bag line of products. Under his leadership, Associated Food Brokers was named by Hefty's fourth top producer out of 70 U.S. marketing areas.

Over the years, Mr. Lirosi also represented other food manufacturers, and in 1975, he and his sons, Joseph and Anthony, formed Metafoods Corp., a cheese manufacturing and marketing concern. It should be noted, however, that at the same time he was actively involved in various real estate interests and horse racing.

As many Members know, Saratoga Springs, where I have my major district office, is known for its horse racing. In 1964, Mr. Lirosi developed an interest in racing and breeding. With his usual skill and drive, by the 1970's he was maintaining about 30 standardbreeds. He also developed a 225-acre training and breeding facility, Winsong Acres, in West Glenville. Many of the best known standardbreeds wore the red, blue, and yellow Lirosi Stable and Winsong colors during their racing careers.

Mr. Lirosi was named in Who's Who in the East and Who's Who in Commerce and Trade. He was also a member of many food and racing organizations.

But mere biographical information cannot do Mr. Lirosi justice. He was a man who brought enormous energy and integrity to everything he did. In April, he passed away.

Mr. Speaker, I ask you and other Members to join me in expressing condolences to the Lirosi family, and in a posthumous salute to the late Joseph S. Lirosi, an outstanding businessman and great American.

THE TECHNOLOGY CORPORATION OF AMERICA

HON. MEL LEVINE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. LEVINE of California. Mr. Speaker, today, I am pleased to introduce the Technology Corporation of America Act of 1990.

Over 70 years ago, FDR founded the famous Radio Corporation of America. The time has come to create the nineties version: the Technology Corporation of America.

In 1919 at Versailles, President Wilson faced an entirely new world economic order. To cope, he instructed his young naval secretary, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, to create a radio broadcasting company, an innovative private-public venture. In FDR's eyes, RCA would—and did—help ensure electronic prowess for U.S. industry.

As RCA helped America meet the radio broadcasting gap of the twenties, TCA will help us meet the high-technology challenge of the nineties.

The TCA is a federally chartered, nonprofit corporation run by industry that would help America ensure competitive domestic participation in strategically important commercial technologies and industries.

TCA will act as a permanent advisory and funding source run primarily by the private sector with Federal Government cooperation and assistance.

Currently, the United States is at a serious disadvantage both in obtaining low-cost patient capital and in strategically coordinating resources to match the targeting efforts of our international competitors. TCA can play a vital role in filling that strategic vacuum.

My bill is the result of extensive consultation with industry, administration, and academic high-technology experts. These experts share my concern that the world seems to be turning at 45 rpm's while America's economic institutions are running at 33.

The consensus was clear: We need a uniquely America version of Japan's MITI and Europe's Eureka. It was also clear that our Nation's economic security interests are at stake.

We developed TCA as that response, and established two main purposes for the corporation:

First. Spark the formation of strategic ventures, as both an adviser and a funding source; and,

Second. Act as a wise man's council to help the United States manage the transition to an increasingly commercially based economy.

We have envisioned that TCA will not only provide funds to industries—never more than 50 percent of any project, but that TCA would also help bring key players from all size companies to the table to catalyze efforts in a range of strategic industries.

TCA, unlike Sematech, would not itself be a consortia. Instead, it would help to spark the creation of all kinds of technology ventures.

TCA will allow us to leverage both private and public sector resources, bringing the wisdom of industry leaders to bear on major national economic challenges.

The key features of TCA include:

First, 9 member board of directors—7 industry leaders—appointed by the President and the National Research Council for 4-year terms;

Second, $50 million a year in Government grants matching industry funding;

Third, the establishment of two private sector advisory committees, one financial and one technical; and,

Fourth, GAO oversight of TCA activities including an annual audit.

One other feature I would like to highlight from the bill is the GAO and OTA report on alternative funding sources. America today faces a $60 million investment gap with the Japanese. If we're going to get serious about filling that gap, we have to further develop both innovative and traditional funding sources. In light of the S&L crisis, how best can we use loan guarantees, equity issues, and tax exemptions? America must answer these questions if we want to unburden ourselves from the twin deficits.

The time has come to create a Technology Corporation of America to meet our economic challenges of the nineties and beyond. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this vital high-technology proposal in the 101st Congress.

THE FEDERAL BAR ASSOCIATION WEEK

HON. EDWARD R. ROYBAL

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. ROYBAL. Mr. Speaker, the Federal Bar Association is a national organization based in Washington, DC, where it was founded in 1920. The membership includes judges who administer the Federal judicial system—encompassing such specialty areas as the bankruptcy, claims, immigration, military and tax courts—and both Government and private attorneys who practice before Federal agencies and courts.

Currently, the Federal Bar Association has chapters across the country in all 11 judicial circuits. In addition, it has a Young Lawyers Division.

Education and enlightenment are the hallmarks of the Federal Bar Association, Its outstanding monthly publication, "Federal Bar News & Journal," keeps its members informed about legal issues, educational programs and the people who lead the best Federal system of justice in the world.

This October, the FBA convention will be held in Los Angeles for the first time in my district. Furthermore, for the first time, a westerner, U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Barry Russel of Los Angeles, will be chosen as its national president.

In honor of its outstanding service to the country and the legal profession, and in honor of its commitment the designation of National Federal Bar Association Week would be a fitting honor for this longstanding and esteemed organization. I urge my colleagues to join me in cosponsoring this legislation.

THE NATIONAL SAVINGS ENHANCEMENT ACT

HON. JIM MOODY

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. MOODY. Mr. Speaker, today I join with Representatives CHARLES SCHUMER in introducing the National Savings Enhancement Act.

Our bill will create legislation to encourage Americans to save more of their income through individual retirement accounts [IRA's]. This bill expands the income eligibility requirements to allow more middle income taxpayers to make tax-deductible contributions to IRA's.

Our bill differs from current law by expanding the income eligibility requirements. Under current law, deductible IRA contributions are limited to families with adjusted gross incomes of less than $40,000 and other filers with adjusted gross income of less than $25,000. This bill will expand the family income eligibility limit to an AGI of less than $85,000 for joint filers and less than $50,000 for others.

In my State of Wisconsin, my proposal would give an additional 297,500 taxpayers an opportunity to make tax-favored contributions to their own retirement savings—based on 1987 Wisconsin Department of Revenue statistics.

The most significant feature of this legislation is the flexibility it gives eligible taxpayers. Unlike current law which requires a taxpayer to fund an IRA contribution no later than April 15 of the next tax year, my bill will allow a taxpayer who contributes to his IRA to make a tax deduction in the current tax year and fund the contribution by the end of the following tax year. The small window of opportunity for taxpayers to actually make their IRA contribution afforded by current law is arbitrary and serves no useful policy purpose.

Our proposal also includes two provisions for penalty-free withdrawals. First-time homebuyers will be able to withdraw funds from their own IRA's to make a down payment for their principal residence. This is particularly important to younger taxpayers who can afford mortgage payments but cannot save cash for a downpayment.

This bill would also allow a penalty-free withdrawal to pay for the IRA-holder's own higher education expenses as well as those of his spouse or child. These provisions taken together address very real worries of middle-income Americans who are unable to purchase a home or finance their child's education.

This proposal is also a response to the low savings rate in America. This is primarily attributable to two main motives: the dramatic drop in personal savings and the continued high Federal budget deficits. In a very real sense savings, like life insurance, is sold—not bought. Public policies to stimulate savings must be directed at changing public attitudes. If we can change Americans' attitudes about savings, we will be able to add a very potent weapon to the arsenal that can be brought to bear on the U.S. trade deficit, budget deficit and declining international competitiveness.

Those issues affect all Americans. All Americans want to solve those overwhelming problems and get on to the business of working on domestic and international priorities which have been deferred for far too long.

SUSPEND AID TO EL SALVADOR—ENCOURAGE REFORM NOW

HON. LEON E. PANETTA

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Speaker, I am grateful for the chance today to voice my grave concerns about the situation in El Salvador. Chairman Moakley's task force report on the investigation into the assassinations of six respected priests in San Salvador is very troubling. Once again, 10 years after Archbishop Romero's assassins laid bare the gross injustice of El Salvador's judicial system, the assassins of six men carrying on his work remain seemingly untouchable. The official investigation of the massacre is notable for its seeming inability to conduct a fair, diligent and comprehensive inquiry into the matter. Those who have offered information are being punished, revealing the perverse nature of the Salvadoran military's notion of justice. The military's grip on the political structure of the nation is unshakable. Accordingly, the judicial system languishes in the shadow of the true possessors of power: senior military officers.

Yet the United States continues to support the Salvadoran military and government with excessive military and economic aid. Frankly, Mr. Speaker, it is unconscionable in my mind to continue to provide any aid to El Salvador, whether for development or military training. I therefore remain a cosponsor of Representative DELLUMS' bill, H.R. 3733, which would terminate all aid to El Salvador until the President certifies that El Salvador has enacted certain democratic reforms.

Now is the time to let the leaders of El Salvador know that the United States will no longer provide millions to a government incapable of controlling rogue elements of its defense forces. Now is also the time to encourage the government to cooperate with United Nations Secretary General Perez de Cuellar's efforts to mediate the conflict with the FMLN. I would strongly urge my colleagues to support the honest effort now to send a constructive message to the leadership of El Salvador. The Foreign Affairs Committee has approved a 50-percent reduction in military aid to El Salvador for fiscal year 1990. I support the committee's recommendation as an initial step in the process of encouraging reform and negotiation in El Salvador, and I would strongly urge my colleagues to join that effort.

TRIBUTE TO ALAN H. ANTHONY

HON. CONSTANCE A. MORELLA

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I would like to offer my congratulations to Alan H. Anthony [CLU], a constituent of mine who will be retiring June 1 after 41 years with the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co. Mr. Anthony has worked with Mass Mutual as an agent, home office director of agencies, second vice president, and, for the past 18 years, general agent of the company's highly successful Washington Agency.

During the years that Mr. Anthony has been serving the needs of the greater Washington area, his agency's in-force life insurance business has grown from $242 million to $1.2 billion, a record unsurpassed by many other companies. In 1982, he received Massachusetts Mutual's Silver President's Trophy, in recognition of his agency as one of the top five in the Nation.

A well-known and highly regarded individual within his profession, Mr. Anthony has been an active participant in the General Agents' and Managers' Association, the D.C. Life Underwriters Association, the Estate Planning Council, and the Metropolitan Washington Chapter of the Chartered Life Underwriters Association.

Mr. Anthony is a native Marylander. He and his wife, Anne, have continued their allegiance to Maryland over the years and now raise and train thoroughbred horses, an interest to which Mr. Anthony looks forward to devoting more time in his retirement years.

Under his leadership, Mr. Anthony's agency has flourished, and he has opened the door of opportunity to some of our community's most successful life insurance professionals. Among his staff and colleagues, he is known for his warmth and humor, his considerate ways, and his quiet diplomacy.

Alan Anthony will be greatly missed by his many associates, with whom I join in extending sincere wishes for good health and contentment in his retirement years.

TEEN SUICIDE HITS TWO MORE COMMUNITIES

HON. GARY L. ACKERMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, Plano and Clear Water, TX; Scarsdale, NY; Bergenfield, NJ; and Beverly Hills, CA, have all been included as footnotes in recent scholarly papers dealing with the subject of teen suicide. And, once again, needless tragedy has visited two communities in our Nation. Over the past few days, four teenagers have tragically ended their own lives and have cast a pall over Sheridan, AR, and Fairfax, VA.

Sheridan is a small community of about 3,000 which is located approximately 25 miles south of Little Rock. Over the past 2 days, three Sheridan High School students shot themselves to death: one pulled out a gun during his history class and shot himself in the head in front of his classmates; that night, one of his friends was killed by a single shot to the head with a .45-caliber weapon; and, the following day, the body of another classmate was found at his home by his father.

Yesterday, right across the river in Fairfax, a Hayfield High School senior took his motorcycle to the high school's running track, removed his helmet and drove full-speed into the outside wall of the boy's locker room. He was killed instantly.

Over the past few years, I have learned that suicide can be contagious unless educators and mental health professionals work fast to reach troubled youngsters and convince them that suicide is not a viable option. I commend the communities of Sheridan and Fairfax for acting quickly in response to these suicides. However, we as a Nation, have failed in our responsibility to reach out to teenagers at risk and offer our help, support and love.

In spite our best efforts, over 5,000 children continue to take their own lives each year and over 500,000 attempt suicide. How many of us realize that the number of deaths exceeds the casualty rate of the Vietnam war?

Suicide appears to us as completely irrational and knows no bounds. It hits families which seem happy and stable, wealthy or poor, in cities and suburbs all across the country. Three years ago, at my urging, Congress authorized that funds be provided under Public Law 100–297 for school-based teenage suicide prevention programs, and authorized that funds be made available through the National Institute on Mental Health to create model suicide prevention programs under Public Law 99–570.

I am currently working with the Gallup organization and the Blue Cross Blue Shield Association on a project to assess youth and parental attitudes toward self-destructive behavior. Top experts in the field of suicide prevention are participating in this project, and our goal is to make available the most comprehensive and current data to educators and mental health professionals. In addition, later this year, I intend to sponsor a professional seminar based on our findings.

Mr. Speaker, I encourage my colleagues to offer their support to programs which help youngsters realize that suicide is not an answer to their distress. In this way, tragedies like those that occurred in Sheridan and Fairfax will never happen again.

UKRAINIAN AMERICAN VETERANS' CONVENTION

HON. DEAN A. GALLO

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. GALLO. Mr. Speaker, as the Member of Congress from the 11th District of New Jersey, I am pleased that the Ukrainian American Veterans of the United States of America and the National Ladies Auxiliary have chosen East Hanover, NJ, as the site of the 43d annual convention, and the 16th annual meeting of the National Ladies Auxiliary during the week of June 15–17.

The convention is dedicated to the memory and honor of all Ukrainian Americans who have served with dignity and distinction in the U.S. Armed Forces in every conflict from the Revolutionary War through Vietnam, and to perpetuate the memory and deeds of those brave individuals who gave their lives to safeguard our cherished freedoms.

The Ukrainian American Veterans' commitment to the principles of justice, liberty, and democracy has been defended with honor from the founding of this great Nation down to the present day.

Throughout its distinguished history, the Ukrainian American Veterans and its members have demonstrated an uncommon measure of public-spirited service to their communities, embodying the unique culture and values of their native Ukraine.

The rolls of membership in the U.S. Armed Forces are replete with the names of Ukrainian Americans who have served their country with honor and valor since colonial times and include Ivan Bohdan who arrived at Jamestown in the New World with Capt. John Smith;

Brig. Gen. John Turchan who led Union forces to victory at the Civil War Battle of Chickamauga; Col. Theodore Kalakuka, the first Ukrainian American graduate of West Point Military Academy, was awarded the Silver Star and two Oak Leaf Clusters posthumously for actions against the Japanese and Pvt. Nicholas Minue of Carterei, NJ, who was posthumously awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor. The most distinguished Ukrainian Americans of recent times to serve the U.S. Armed Forces are retired four-star Gen. Samuel Jasklika, former Assistant Commandant of the U.S. Marine Corps, and Maj. Gen. Nick Krawclw, U.S. Army, commanding 3d Mechanized Infantry Division, presently stationed in Wuerzbrug, Germany.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that my colleagues in the House join with me in recognition of the members and the leaders of the Ukrainian American Veterans and in honor of their meritorious history of service in behalf of the United States of America.

CONGRESSMAN DAN ROSTENKOWSKI HONORED

HON. MARCY KAPTUR

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I place on the RECORD the formal statement accompanying the Diamond Anniversary Award recently presented by the University College at Loyola University, Chicago to the Honorable DAN ROSTENKOWSKI, a Loyola alumnus. In recognizing his lifetime of achievement, the University highlighted one of its most distinguished graduates in order to illustrate the tradition of Jesuit education to those who choose to attend college in a nontraditional manner. Studying nights and working days were the rule for the student ROSTENKOWSKI. That difficult road was excellent preparation for the challenge that faced him in later years in politics and as a key and influential leader in the Congress. In presenting its Diamond Anniversary Award, a representative of Loyola University stated:

Few among us who have lived or studied in Chicago could fail to recognize the name of one of our most distinguished alumni—the Honorable Dan Rostenkowski, Representative from the 8th District of Illinois. Dan Rostenkowski has always tackled life and education with vigor: schooled early in politics at the meetings of the 32d ward which took place in his home, he also lettered in three sports in high school. As a member of the infantry in Korea, he continued to play baseball and considered a career in professional sports. However, under the urging of his father, he enrolled in the University College of Loyola University to pursue his studies. In 1952, Dan Rostenkowski became the youngest person to be elected to a seat in the Illinois House and, in 1954, repeated the feat in the Illinois Senate. Dan Rostenkowski's education continued in what might be described as one of the best extension campuses anywhere—in Mayor Daley's Democratic party.

In November 1958, he won 75 percent of the vote to become, at the age of 31, the youngest Member of the 86th Congress. Since that auspicious beginning, the Congressman has risen to the position of chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, one of the most powerful chairmanships in the Congress. However, even in this position, Dan Rostenkowski has kept his close ties to his neighborhood, to his ward, to his city, and to his university. The same energy and dedication that he has committed to his constituents in the 8th district has also been committed to Loyola University.

For his extraordinary achievements in government, for his role as a model for other students, and for his loyalty to the university, University College honors Congressman Dan Rostenkowski with its Diamond Anniversary Award.

HONORING THE VETERANS THAT FOUGHT IN THE BATTLE OF THE BULGE

HON. WILLIAM D. FORD

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I rise today at the request of 2d Lt. Linda Huffaker, C.A.P., in observation of the many American and Allied soldiers who bravely fought in the Battle of the Bulge. A ceremony will be held on June 14, 1990 at the Romulus V.F.W. Hall in Romulus, MI, to honor the veterans who fought in this important battle.

THE BATTLE OF THE BULGE

On December 16, 1944, Adolf Hitler waged his final counteroffensive in the wooded hills of southern Belgium. He considered Belgium's Ardennes Forest a weakened juncture in the British and American troop lines. German troops had used the gateway at Ardennes in 1870, 1914, and again in 1940 to seize the bridgeheads over the Meuse River and move onward to Antwerp, the main port of the Allies.

Twenty-five German divisions, led by Field Marshall Gerd von Rundstedt, struck six American divisions at 5 a.m. on December 16, effectively surprising the troops and quickly penetrating the Allied lines. Though the American troops, under the command of Gen. Omar Bradley, tried to hold back the assault, bad weather and English-speaking German troops in American uniforms added to their surprise and confusion. Within 48 hours the Germans had moved 15 miles into Allied territory and by December 24, they had progressed 65 miles deep on a front ranging from 10 to 25 miles.

American and British troops were able to hold the town of Bastogne, and two shoulders, one shoulder in the North held by the U.S. V Corps and one in the south held by the U.S. 4th Division. This narrowed the German front and slowed their progress toward the Meuse, allowing Allied troops time to regroup and send in reinforcements.

Relief came in the form of the 101st Airborne Division, under Brig. Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe, to stop the Fifth Panzer's Army at Bastogne, and the 82d Airborne Division, under Maj. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgeway, to hold the northern front. In addition, Lt. Gen. George Patton and the U.S. 3rd Army tanks were able to push the Germans back from the Bulge.

Finally, as the weather cleared, the Allies were able to launch an air offensive which cut German supply and fuel lines, and stopped their offensive before they could reach Allied fuel depots and replenish their fuel. Hitler desperately threw troops at the front, but they were ill-trained, and a new Russian assault in the East eventually caused a massive withdrawal.

Over 76,000 Americans were killed, wounded or missing in the Battle of the Bulge. Germany lost 120,000 men, as well as 500 tanks and 1,600 planes. The battle did little to alter, other than prolong, the outcome of the war, but the bravery of American soldiers against overwhelming numbers caused Winston Churchill to call it, "the greatest American battle of the war."

THE 75TH ANNIVERSARY OF ST. JOAN OF ARC SCHOOL, CHICOPEE, MA

HON. RICHARD E. NEAL

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, it is with a great sense of pride that I today recognize the St. Joan of Arc School of Chicopee, MA. Founded in 1914, the school opened its doors 1 year later as part of the St. Rose de Lima Parish, and it is currently celebrating its 75th anniversary.

The main entrance of the St. Joan of Arc School bears the Latin inscription: Verite, Science, Vertue. For years, these qualities of truth, knowledge and virtue have been taught with great success to many elementary grade students. Indeed, St. Joan of Arc School, under the careful supervision of its principal, Sister Florence Falardeau, has a reputation for educational excellence well known throughout the entire diocese.

Beginning in 1915 with 178 students, enrollment steadily grew at St. Joan of Arc. To accommodate the need for more space, then Pastor Lamothe initiated an appeal to build a bigger grammar school. In October 1927, the new St. Joan of Arc School opened with a faculty of 19 Sisters of the Presentation of Mary, and a student body of over 700.

A commitment to a quality education in an active Christian environment has been the enduring legacy of the St. Joan of Arc School. That tradition continues today under the capable leadership of Pastor Leo Leclerc and his associate Father David Raymond. They have successfully managed to uphold the school's high standards, and along with the entire St. Rose de Lima Parish, are beginning to plan for the future.

Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to proudly acknowledge the faculty, students and staff of the St. Joan of Arc School on this most auspicious occasion. I am proud to represent this fine institution of learning in the U.S. House of Representatives, and I ask my colleagues to join with me in congratulating the entire St. Rose de Lima Parish on their school's 75th anniversary.

MEETING THE CHALLENGE IN EASTERN EUROPE

HON. LES AuCOIN

OF OREGON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. AuCOIN. Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday of last week, the House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on International Trade and Economic Policy set about the task of amending the Export Administration Act to conform with the new political, economic, and national security issues confronting our export control system.

I believe the subcommittee did a fine job in facing these issues. In particular, I applaud the subcommittee's recognition that we should not be wasting scarce time and resources in controlling items to our closest and most reliable allies and that the United States should take bold and concrete steps to acknowledge the dramatic changes in Eastern Europe. These two elements were included in a bill that I introduced with Congressman FRENZEL earlier this year. I am delighted that the subcommittee has acted on these issues in a responsible and timely fashion.

A high level meeting of Cocom is scheduled for early June. That time is fast approaching. The subcommittee actions taken last week send a powerful message to the administration that the proposal the administration brings to the Cocom table should meet the challenges of Eastern Europe while continuing to protect our national security. Without such a proposal, our Cocom allies will move ahead without the United States—endangering Cocom itself and putting United States exporters at a further competitive disadvantage in Eastern Europe.

All of us in this body have devoted energy to the cause of human rights for the oppressed people of Eastern Europe. The freedom of movement and communication in Eastern Europe are now politically possible. Without the necessary infrastructure in place however, these freedoms will not be practically possible. Only through significant export control reform will the products be made available to build that infrastructure.

Toward that end, I believe that bolder steps are called for to further unbind America's competitive muscles so that we may take full advantage of the new opportunities emerging in the world market.

Specifically, we must decisively end the turf wars between the State Department and the Department of Commerce that have snarled the export control system for so long. We must also take that extra step in decontrolling trade with the emerging democracies of Eastern Europe, and eliminate the redundant review role of the Department of Defense without impairing national security.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support efforts to achieve export control reforms that step up to the challenges of the world we live in.

SOVIET BREACH OF 1972 ABM TREATY

HON. CURT WELDON

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. WELDON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today with a word of caution. As the Bush administration nears the final stages of START treaty negotiations with the Soviet Union, we find that the Soviets have done nothing about the Krasnoyarsk radar station in Siberia.

You will recall last October, when Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze admitted to the world what many of us in this chamber had known for years—that Krasnoyarsk represented a material breach of the 1972 ABM Treaty. This body voted overwhelmingly to approve amendments which I introduced in 1987 and 1989 naming Krasnoyarsk as a material ABM breach. Taking its cue from the Congress, the Bush administration has told the Soviets that the U.S. will not sign a START treaty until Krasnoyarsk is torn down.

Edward Rowney, who recently resigned as President Bush's chief arms control advisor, reported that the Soviets have done nothing to satisfy American concerns about Krasnoyarsk. The Soviet representatives at the Standing Consultative Commission have not begun to address the Krasnoyarsk violations.

President Bush is scheduled to meet with Mikhail Gorbachev in June, at which time they will initial a draft of the START agreement. We realize that initialing a draft is not signing a treaty, but I for one am concerned. When the President meets with Gorbachev, he would do well to raise the Krasnoyarsk issue and gain a personal assurance that this problem will be quickly corrected.

We must have this issue resolved before we sign a START treaty. After all, it is only wise to see that previous Soviet arms control violations are remedied before we enter into far-reaching and long-range arms reduction treaties.

TRIBUTE TO GLADYS SANDLIN

HON. NANCY PELOSI

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend Gladys Sandlin, a leader in San Francisco's Hispanic community, who has selflessly dedicated her time and energy to the improvement of health and social services for San Francisco's Spanish-speaking community.

Gladys Sandlin immigrated to the United States from Chile approximately 30 years ago. Upon settling in San Francisco, she was instrumental in implementing culturally and linguistically appropriate cancer education in the mission district as program coordinator of the American Cancer Society's education unit from 1974 to 1977. Gladys later coordinated the UCSF/SFGH Perinatal Health Project's Clinic management, eligibility, and social service components; while also serving as patient advocate and community liaison/consultant.

During nearly a decade of participation on the Commission on the Status of Women for the city and county of San Francisco, Ms. Sandlin was a tireless and dynamic advocate for information and service programs for Spanish-speaking women. In 1980, as associate director of the Commission, she developed an innovative outreach program for the Hispanic community. Gladys Sandlin has served as the executive director of the Mission Neighborhood Center since 1983. She has actively sought and secured increased funding for the health center's programs to meet the need for accessible, affordable services for the Latino community.

Dr. Francisco Castillon, the director of the California Health Federation once proudly said, "Gladys' dedication to serving the medically underserved is admirable and never-ending."

Gladys Sandlin has also promoted and facilitated cooperative efforts among health care providers serving Latinos, most notably by organizing the Latino Council of Health and Human Service Providers, which applied for and received Federal funding for an important collaborative community HIV prevention education project. Through her involvement in local, State and national health organizations, Ms. Sandlin has been instrumental in the development of legislation to increase funding for and improve health and social services in California and nationwide.

Today, in celebration of Cinco de Mayo, I commend Gladys Sandlin for her many contributions to the Latino community. She has touched many people through her dedication, her vision, and her many sacrifices in the struggle to provide equal access to quality health care.

LEGISLATION TO PERMIT NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS TO PROMOTE DEMOCRACY IN EASTERN EUROPE

HON. RICHARD T. SCHULZE

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. SCHULZE. Mr. Speaker, under current tax law, nonprofit organizations are prohibited from engaging in political campaigns for elective public office. This is a prudent restriction. Nonprofit organizations should devote their resources primarily to charitable goals, rather than becoming involved in partisan politics.

The participation of nonprofit organizations in foreign political campaigns is an activity which Congress did not consider in detail years ago when it was drafting the current section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code. However, the same general principle applies. We should not allow nonprofit organizations to participate in most foreign political campaigns.

However, there are some compelling situations where nonprofit organizations should be allowed to participate in the political process of foreign countries.

In particular, I have in mind the countries of Eastern Europe which are struggling to cast off 50 years of Communist tyranny and establish a true democracy. While the severe repression of Human rights and free enterprise may be changing, the political process in these countries is still at a fragile stage of development. We need to make sure that democracy really takes root in Eastern Europe and is not snuffed out by hardcore Socialist or Communist elements.

There are nonprofit organizations which could play a valuable role in helping these countries develop the strong, democratic political process necessary for success. However, if nonprofit organizations tried to "export" democracy to Eastern Europe, they probably would lose their tax-exempt status because the IRS would assert that they had participated in a political campaign.

I have introduced legislation which would allow nonprofit organizations to help promote the democratic political process in Eastern Europe without jeopardizing their tax-exempt status under the Internal Revenue Code. The legislative change would expire sometime after 1991. This would allow Congress to review this area of the tax law in more detail in 1992 and perhaps reshape these provisions of the law. But until a more detailed review can take place, the legislation which I support is a temporary solution to a pressing need for help in Eastern Europe.

While the administration may not have the budgetary resources to give generous financial aid to Eastern Europe, it should not stand in the way of nonprofit groups who want to use private funds to promote democracy in Eastern Europe.

EL SALVADOR

HON. JOSEPH P. KENNEDY II

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to register my support for cutting 50 percent of all military aid to the government of El Salvador in order to achieve a negotiated settlement of the country's civil war. I believe now is the moment to send the strongest message that we can to both sides in this war—that we will no longer finance it—and that we wil condition our financial resources on their willingness to agree to dialog and a negotiated settlement to this war.

This proposal is a reflection of how the entire region is moving toward peace through the use of dialog, negotiations, elections, and other democratic instruments to promote resolution to conflicts. We should finally and firmly be on record as supporting a peaceful resolution to this tragic civil war.

Mr. Speaker, I say we have had enough bloodshed, enough murder, enough coverup, and enough U.S. Government bankrolling of someone else's war. I say give peace a chance. We have given the Salvadoran Government and the FMLN every opportunity to prove themselves, and show their true colors and their ability to govern if they can.

But after 10 years we still have a government incapable of correcting its judicial system, and incapable of disciplining its military. This measure would send a clear message not only to the current government but also to the Salvadoran guerrillas, the FMLN: Let them have their chance at elections and let the world judge their popular support, their ability to peacefully govern the nation, if that is their true goal.

Mr. Speaker, this is a chance for the United States to play a positive role by promoting a cease-fire, and by conditioning further aid on both sides coming to the negotiating table, both the guerrillas and the army, so that we may once and for all bring an end to this horrible civil war.

HUGHES HIGH SCHOOL CLASS OF 1945

HON. THOMAS A. LUKEN

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commemorate Cincinnati, Ohio's Hughes High School Class of 1945 as they prepared to celebrate their 45th high school reunion in June this year.

This is indeed a very special reunion. Members of the Hughes High School Class of 1945 experienced some of the most important and cataclysmic events of the 20th century during their high school years. As freshmen in 1941, these students, along with the rest of the Nation, experienced the shock of Japan's surprise attack at Pearl Harbor. Like many schools throughout the Nation at that time, the students of Hughes High School participated in activities to help the war effort. Students participated in such activities as war bond drives, war stamp sales, and war material collection drives. As seniors, many members of the class of 1945 were in uniform on commencement day.

Members of the Hughes High School Class of 1945 went on to become successful and important members of the Cincinnati community. Graduates of this class distinguished themselves in the medical and legal professions among other things.

Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to be able to recognize and pay tribute to the members of the Hughes High School Class of 1945 as they gather to relive their high school years together.

HONORING NORMAN HECHT

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, the Anti-Defamation Leagues' Americanism Award Tribute for 1990 is being awarded to Mr. Norman Hecht of Orange County, NY. I am pleased to call to the attention of my colleagues the remarkable career of this unselfish man, and the reasons why this recognition is so justly deserved.

Norman Hecht is a long-time resident and businessperson in Orange County's Town of Montgomery. He became active in civic affairs soon after his graduation from Cornell University, working with regional service associations including the Rotary Club and the Newburgh YMCA, for which he served on the board of directors for many years.

Norman is past president of the Walden Jewish Community Center, of Congregation Beth Hillel, of the Wallkill Valley Lodge of the Hudson Valley Council of B'nai B'rith, and the Jewish Federation of Greater Orange County.

Norman also chaired the Israel Bond Campaign in Newburgh, cochaired the Walden Jewish Charities and the United Jewish Appeal in Walden, and is currently a member of the board of trustees of the Hebrew Day School of Orange County and of the Jewish Federation of Greater Orange County.

It is hard to believe that a gentleman who has devoted so much time to charitable and communtiy works could also be a good businessman, but Norman has been successful in all he has attempted. He founded Hecht's Hatchery, one of the largest poultry businesses in the East. His success in that business is reflected by his leadership positions as director of the State poultry industry and secretary for the American Egg Board. Norman sold his poultry business in 1978, but is fondly remembered statewide as an outstanding leader in that industry.

On May 17, Norman Hecht's friends from far and wide are gathering to honor him as he is presented with the 1990 Americanism Award by the Anti-Defamation League. This long-delayed award is a suitable, deserving honor for a man who has personified the best that our Nation has to offer.

REGISTERED NURSES AT STATEVILLE CORRECTIONAL CENTER

HON. GEORGE E. SANGMEISTER

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. SANGMEISTER. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pride that I rise today to salute the work of the registered nurses at the Stateville Correctional Center in Joliet, IL. These individuals provide high quality nursing care to about 3,000 inmates and staff at the maximum security adult penitentiary. I am impressed by the professionalism which these nurses demonstrate in working under circumstances and conditions which at times may be extremely unfavorable.

I would like to submit to the RECORD a list of the names of the nursing staff at the Stateville Correctional Center.

Deng Baronia, Mary Beth Engel, Armella Frankowski, Sue Gurley, Laura Healy, Mary Ann Korwin, Jan Leibold, Michelle McGann, Barbara Miller, Mary Patterson, Karen Stanford, and Nancy Zlogar.

I know my colleagues will want to join me in congratulating this outstanding group of professionals for their compassion and dedication to the care of others.

SMALL BUSINESS SET-ASIDES

HON. ANDY IRELAND

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. IRELAND. Mr. Speaker, every now and then the subject of small business set-asides is debated in this Chamber. As you know, I have long been a supporter of such programs when they are developed reasonably and based upon a clear record of small business exclusion. Recently I received a study from a well-known small business spokesman—Walter Larke Sorg. In a letter accompanying the study he discusses the results of a 3-year survey of our Nation's dredging industry. I would like to share some of his findings with my fellow Members. He writes:

I recently completed a three-year study of dredging contracts let by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. It was undertaken for the American Association of Small Dredging & Marine Construction Companies. Its purpose was to measure performance over a three-year period, and compare FY 89 results with the goals established for the small dredging industry by Section 722 of P.L. 100-656. The task was carried out by qualifying and quantifying the bid offerings of all contracts let by the Corps from 1986 through 1989. Data was supplied by the Corps from 1986 through 1989. Data was supplied by the Corps pursuant to a request under the appropriate provisions of the Freedom of Information Act.

In FY 89, 6.5% of dredging contracts were awarded to emerging small concerns, exceeding the 5% legislative goal established for this newly created category. However, overall small business participation of 15.8% of total dollar value of contracts awarded was 4.2% below the 20% goal established in Section 722. The Corps' top management is not pleased with this result and is deserving of commendation for aggressively pursuing a course of action at the division and district levels which should result in the attainment of the 25% goal in fiscal year 90, and 30% in 91 and 92.

A number of interesting statistics emerged from the study. They disprove the oft-quoted assertion that the small business set-aside program is a preferential, costly, political boondoggle which favors a selected few companies.

Unrestricted bidding (favored by big business) was 11.85% below government estimates in FY 89. Small business set-aside bidding was 13.07% below government estimates. Although the three-year average percentage of savings derived from the small business set-aside program (14.85%) was greater than that derived from unrestricted bidding (13.07%), it is evident from the study that the dredging industry is highly competitive, and that the utilization of two bidding procedures stimulates an environment which ensures the prudent utilization of the taxpayers' money.

Representatives of large dredging companies claim that the small business set-aside program enables a few larger small dredging companies to gain undue competitive strength as compared with other, smaller concerns, which also operate under the set-aside umbrella. Such concentration, they state, is at variance with our competitive enterprise system, and constitutes cause for legislative/regulatory correction. Their argument is disputed by the facts. For example:

The top four large dredging companies accounted for 74.73% of contracts awarded to big business in FY '89 (78.16% over the three year period). Of contracts awarded to small companies, the top four small companies, the top four small dredging companies accounted for 48.74% (42.26% over the three year period), 25.99% less than their big brother counterparts.

The dredging market is dominated by the top two large contractors. They command 61.83% of unrestricted awards in FY '89, averaged 61.33% over the three-year period, and accounted for more than 50% of the total market in each of the past three years. Both of these companies operate hopper dredges. Should they successfully prevail upon the Congress to exclude the dollar value of hopper dredge work from being counted against the goals established in P.L. 100-656, their dominance of the dredging marked will increase significantly.

Although the study was confined to dredging, I believe it is reflective of other industries, and validates the wisdom of assisting small business to participate in the federal procurement market via the small business set-aside program. Small business is performing a useful and competitive service for the taxpayers.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to publicly thank Mr. Sorg for his tireless efforts on behalf of small business.

THE 225th ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION OF SHOEMAKERSVILLE

HON. GUS YATRON

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. YATRON. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to pay tribute to the borough of Shoemakersville, which is located in the Sixth District of Pennsylvania.

In 1765, Henry and Charles Shoemaker settled in the wilderness beside the Schuylkill River in Pennsylvania. In 1767, Henry married a woman by the name of Barbara Keppner, and Charles married her sister, Maria Keppner. To provide a suitable living for their two young wives, the brothers established a tannery on the banks of the nearby Plum Creek and erected a stone house beside the Schuylkill River.

The two families lived together throughout the Revolutionary War, while both Henry and Charles fought for the freedom of our young Nation. In time, the tiny dwelling became too small for both families, so Henry moved to another piece of land which his family owned in the Muncy Valley. Charles continued to live in the original house until his death. The wilderness beside the Schuylkill River became a village in Perry Township, PA, and in 1921 was made the borough of Shoemakersville, PA.

Today, Shoemakersville is a rural town, comprised of small, family owned industries and small farms. More importantly, Shoemakersville is populated by common, friendly folks, extending their hospitality to anyone who might pass through their beautiful community.

On May 12, 1990, Shoemakersville will celebrate its 225th anniversary with a special ceremony and community parade. The borough plans to further observe this occasion in the months to come with a talent show, an anniversary ball, a homecoming and historical pageant, and a family day.

Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I recognize this historic anniversary before you and the other Members of the House of Representatives, as well as the rest of the Nation. I congratulate the residents, officials, and friends of the borough of Shoemakersville for their rich historical tradition and wish them continued success and good fortune for the future.

THE SOVIET-AMERICAN WOMEN'S SUMMIT

HON. TED WEISS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to call attention to the Soviet-American Women's Summit which will be taking place in several United States cities this month. The board of the National Council of Negro Women's Child Development Center organized this important event, bringing 25 key Soviet women to the United States to meet with leaders of American women's organizations and other American experts.

These women aim to establish long-term working relationships between Soviet and American women. During the summit, they will develop an agenda that will integrate women's needs and aspirations with new global security strategies. This agenda, entitled "From Day-care to Disarmament: A Woman's Vision for the 21st Century," will be presented to both President Bush and President Gorbachev at their June summit.

The Soviet and American women's first meeting will be in New York City. There, Third World women leaders will brief them on the needs of the developing world and the impact of Soviet-American bilateral agreements on those nations. In a public forum at Hunter College, the Soviet women will discuss perestroika and women's role in the Soviet Union. They will visit social service, community, and health centers in the five boroughs, attend meetings with women in politics and study community organizing, all of which have applications to changes now occurring in the Soviet Union.

From May 4 to May 7, the group will be in Washington, DC where it will develop its official agenda. They will focus on issues such as drugs, debt, development, democracy, the environment, equality, human rights, and converting military expenditures to meet human needs. Also in Washington, they will meet with several Members of Congress, other policy leaders, and the press.

Next, teams of Soviet women will travel to eight other States for a 5-day policy exchange with grassroots leaders. These site visits will focus on the use of democratic processes and citizen education.

The importance of this Soviet-American Women's Summit lies in its potential to improve United States-Soviet relations, to solve important social problems, and to work to guarantee an environmentally safe and war-free future for succeeding generations. I commend the National Council of Negro Women for organizing such an important event and wish them success in their endeavors.

AMERICA CAN BENEFIT FROM PRAYER

HON. JACK FIELDS

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Speaker, I want to take just a moment to remind my colleagues that tomorrow—May 3—is the National Day of Prayer.

Tomorrow, millions of Americans will pause briefly to recognize the importance of prayer in their lives and in the well-being of our Nation and its people. I will be joining in the observance of the National Day of Prayer—which Congress, in 1988, officially designated as the first Thursday in May. Indeed, these national days of prayer have been observed since they first were established by the Continental Congress in 1775.

America is a nation founded on prayer. Against overwhelming odds, our colonial forefathers fought for and won their independence from Great Britain—obtaining for themselves and for future generations their God-given rights.

As any student knows, our Declaration of Independence states:

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

And the Declaration of Independence concludes:

[F]or the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor.

That Divine Providence has seen our Nation and our people through 200 years of turmoil and tranquility—two centuries of crisis and calm.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all of my colleagues and all Americans—whatever their religion, whatever their beliefs—to join with me tomorrow in taking a moment to reflect on the importance prayer plays in our individual lives and in the well-being of our Nation; to thank God for the many blessings he has bestowed on our people; and to ask God to continue to bless our Nation, its people, and its leaders.

ALBION MOTHER'S DAY JUBILEE

HON. HOWARD WOLPE

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. WOLPE. Mr. Speaker, I want to draw the attention of my colleagues to a little known but very significant celebration which has been taking place within my congressional district in southwestern Michigan.

I am speaking about the Albion Mother's Day Jubilee. This commemorative event symbolizes the first known observance of Mother's Day in America which occurred in Albion, MI on the second Sunday in May in 1877—37 years before Mother's Day became a national holiday.

It was an Albion pioneer woman, Juliet Calhoun Blakeley, that set Mother's Day in motion. Her actions were a direct result of the growing temperance movement in Albion, MI, the headquarters for the Prohibition Party National Committee in the 1890's. In May 1877, antitemperance leaders captured three local boys, all sons of prominent temperance leaders, and forced them to spend the night in a local saloon where the boys were induced to indulge in liquor. The next day the youths were let loose among shoppers in the crowded streets.

One of the boys was Charles Daughtery, the son of Methodist clergyman Rev. Myron A. Daughtery, who was the presiding elder at the local Methodist Church where Juliet Blakeley was a member. On Sunday, May 13, which was also Juliet's 59th birthday, Reverend Daughtery began services at church, but, according to Juliet's son Charles Blakeley, "the grief which resulted from finding his son intoxicated the day before made it necessary for him to leave the pulpit ere the services had been concluded."

At this point, Juliet Blakeley stepped up to the pulpit of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Albion and called upon other mothers to join her in assisting in the service, and to support the temperance movement. Thus began the first "Mother's Day Service."

Juliet's son, Charles Calhoun Blakeley, vowed always to return to Albion each year on the second Sunday in May to honor his, and all mothers; and, he persuaded the Albion church to set aside the second Sunday in May to pay special recognition to mothers, and especially to Mrs. Blakeley. Charles made it a practice to urge his business associates across the country to honor their mothers accordingly and even printed special Mother's Day postcards which were distributed throughout the United States.

When Juliet Blakeley died in 1920 at the age of 102, she was known by several titles: "The Original Mother of Mother's Day"; "The First Daughter of Michigan"; "The Mother of Albion Methodism"; and "Albion's Grand Old Lady."

Mr. Speaker, the people of Albion take understandable pride in this very special event, reflective of the community's sense of its own history. It has been my privilege to represent the city of Albion, and I know my colleagues will want to join with me in paying tribute both to the mothers of America and the city of Albion on the occasion of its celebration of the Albion Mother's Day Jubilee.

A TRIBUTE TO ISIDRO LOPEZ "EL INDIO"

HON. SOLOMON P. ORTIZ

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. ORTIZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend and pay tribute to Mr. Isidro Lopez, "El Indio," for his contribution to Tejano/Chicano music.

In culmination of the Buccaneer Days of Corpus Christi, TX, we are honored to celebrate "Cinco de Mayo," by paying tribute to Isidro Lopez, one of the founders of what is today Chicano/Tejano music. Mr. Lopez was born in Bishop, TX. He grew up and attended school in Corpus Christi. His childhood was hard, as he had to pick cotton with his family to survive.

El Indio learned to play the saxophone during his school days in Corpus Christi. Along with the famous Narciso Martinez and his accordion, Isidro incorporated the saxophone into Conjunto music. He went on to become the first Mexican American to pioneer a Tejano sounding orchestra in the 1950's, as well as the first Chicano big band to ever record. El Indio started with a six piece band and later a 15-piece orchestra.

Isidro's most famous recordings are, Diganle, El Tejano Enamorado, Amor Perdido, among many others. He has performed all over the United States and Mexico. Presently, his son, Javier, has taken over the band, and they continue to be very popular.

El Indio's work with Chicano music has given him the title, as the renowned Little Joe said, "Isidro Lopez is the Daddy of them all."

Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues in commending Mr. Isidro Lopez for his outstanding contributions to the Mexican-American culture.

A CONGRESSIONAL SALUTE TO MELBA MOORE

HON. WALTER E. FAUNTROY

OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 2, 1990

Mr. FAUNTROY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to take this opportunity to honor a multitalented singer, recording artist, concert performer, and great humanitarian, Ms. Melba Moore.

In recognition and appreciation of her many years in the entertainment industry and for her extensive efforts on behalf of humanitarian causes worldwide, we pay tribute to her special musical talent and celebrate her commitment to and generosity in improving the quality of life for those who suffer.

Rarely do artists pare down to their inner cores, peeling away layers of concepts and ideas gathered along the years. It is always a risk when creators bare their naked souls for the world to see. But with her new LP on Capitol Records, "Soul Exposed," Tony Award winning actress, talent extraordinaire Melba

Moore ripens and proves herself as one of music's most prolific vocalists by introducing on the album a song so dear to African Americans—"Lift Every Voice and Sing," the Negro National Anthem.

The song, originally written by James Weldon Johnson in 1900, was conceived as a celebration of Abraham Lincoln's birthday and sung by a chorus of 500 Negro schoolchildren. This beautiful poem has become known as the Black National Anthem.

Melba Moore has said, "I've been singing this song for a long time because it makes me happy to sing about freedom and victory. But I decided, I didn't want to sing it by myself anymore. So I decided to invite some of my dear friends such as Gerald Albright and Terri Lyne Carrington to help me sing about freedom and cause it to ring."

(Melba Moore) Lift every voice and sing, till earth and heaven ring. Ring with the harmony of liberty. (Dionne Warwick) Let our rejoicing rise, high as the list'ning skies. (Stevie Wonder) Let it resound loud as the rolling sea. Let Freedom Ring! (Melba Moore) Let Freedom Ring, from me to you my sister, let freedom ring. (Dionne Warwick) And from me to you my sister. (Stevie Wonder) And from me to you my brother. (Karen Clark) God of our weary years, God of our silent tears. (Freddie Jackson) Thou who has brought us thus far on our way. (Anita Baker) Thou who has by Thy might, Led us, into the light. (Bobby Brown) Please keep us forever, Lord I pray, Forever in the path, we pray. Let Freedom Ring! Let it ring to the young. (Howard Hewett) Sing, Sing, Sing a song. (Take 6) Full of the faith that the dark past has taught us. (Stephanie Mills) Sing a song. (The Clark Sisters) Full of the hope that the present has brought us. (Bebe and Cece Winans) Facing the rising sun, Another day begun. (Stevie Wonder, Howard Hewett) Let us march on, my joy, my brother, till victory. (Jeffrey Osborne) Let us march on till victory is won. (Karen Clark) Let Freedom Ring! from the mountains of Georgia, Let Freedom ring. (Melba Moore) Freedom! Let Freedom Ring.

Ms. Moore has taken this piece of history and produced it for mainstream America. The world premiere of the Ms. Moore album and Lift Every Voice and Sing video, directed by Debbie Allen, coincides with several dates significant to African-American history. This year marks the 90th anniversary of the "Lift Every Voice and Sing"; the 35th anniversary of the Supreme Court ruling that provided for desegregation; the 50th anniversary of the NAACP/Legal Defense Fund; and the 25h anniversary of the Voting Rights Act.

With a big heart and strong commitment to helping the least of us, Ms. Moore produced "Soul Exposed" and made a commitment to donate funds from the sale of the album to the National Association for Sickle Cell Disease, Inc.; National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; and the United Negro College Fund.

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules Committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Meetings scheduled for Thursday, May 3, 1990, may be found in the Daily Digest of today's RECORD.

MEETINGS SCHEDULED

MAY 4

8:30 a.m.
Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry
Business meeting, to continue consideration of proposed legislation to strengthen and improve U.S. agricultural programs.
SR-332

9:30 a.m.
Armed Services
Defense Industry and Technology Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 2171, authorizing funds for fiscal year 1991 for military functions of the Department of Defense and to prescribe military personnel levels for fiscal year 1991, focusing on defense industrial adjustment, and S. 2097, to promote and encourage alternative nondefense facilities and to provide adjustment assistance to communities adversely affected by the termination or curtailment of defense contracts or the closure or realignment of military installations.
SH-216

Joint Economic
To hold hearings on the employment-unemployment situation for April.
2359 Rayburn Building

10:00 a.m.
Appropriations
VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.
SD-138

Labor and Human Resources
To hold hearings to examine the effects of smoking on world health.
SD-430

MAY 7

9:30 a.m.
Governmental Affairs
To hold oversight hearings on implementation of the U.S.-Canada Free Trade Agreement (P.L. 100-449).
SD-342

10:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Interior Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Minerals Management Service and the Office of Surface Mining, Department of the Interior.
S-128, Capitol

2:00 p.m.
Appropriations
Foreign Operations Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for foreign assistance, focusing refugee programs.
SD-138

Select on Indian Affairs
To hold hearings on S. 2203, to settle certain claims of the Zuni Indian Tribe, S. 2075, to authorize grants to improve the capability of Indian tribal governments to regulate environmental quality, and S. 1934, to revise the United States Housing Act of 1937 to provide for the payment of fees for certain services provided to Indian Housing assisted under such Act.
SR-485

MAY 8

9:30 a.m.
Armed Services
Projection Forces and Regional Defense Subcommittee
To hold hearings to examine possible approaches to naval arms control.
SH-216

Labor and Human Resources
Children, Family, Drugs, and Alcoholism Subcommittee
Labor Subcommittee
To hold joint hearings on S. 2548, to revise the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 to increase penalties for employers who violate the child labor provisions, and to bar repeated violators from receiving Federal grants and loans and from paying the subminimum training wage.
SD-430

10:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Defense Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Department of Defense, focusing on tactical airpower.
SD-192

Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Science, Technology, and Space Subcommittee
To hold hearings on the National Science Foundation and the upcoming scientific manpower crisis.
SR-253

Governmental Affairs
Business meeting, to consider the nominations of Richard G. Austin, of Illinois, to be Administrator of the General Services Administration, and Jessica L. Parks, of Georgia, to be a Member of the Merit Systems Protection Board.
SD-342

Judiciary
To resume hearings on proposed legislation authorizing funds for fiscal year 1991 for the Department of Justice.
SD-226

2:15 p.m.
Energy and Natural Resources
Energy Research and Development Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 1848, to implement and provide financial assistance for a research and demonstration program for natural gas and coal cofiring technologies.
SD-366

2:30 p.m.
Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry
To hold hearings to examine the jurisdiction between the Commodity Futures Trading Commission and the Securities Exchange Commission.
SH-216

MAY 9

9:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Communications Subcommittee
To resume hearings on S. 1981, to permit the Bell Telephone Companies to conduct research on, design, and manufacture telecommunications equipment.
SR-253

10:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Treasury, Postal Service, General Government Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Office of Management and Budget, and the Executive Office of the President.
SD-116

Environment and Public Works
Water Resources, Transportation, and Infrastructure Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed legislation authorizing funds for the highway trust fund and related Federal-aid highway programs and on highway policy issues.
SD-406

2:00 p.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
To hold hearings in conjunction with the National Ocean Policy Study, on S. 1189, to establish the Office of Ocean and Coastal Zone Management and to require coastal States to implement coastal zone water quality improvement plans.
SR-253

MAY 10

9:30 a.m.
Rules and Administration
To hold hearings on proposed legislation authorizing funds for fiscal year 1991 for the Federal Election Commission, and to review Senate policy on official mail.
SR-301

Select on Indian Affairs
To hold oversight hearings on initiatives for Indian programs for the 1990s.
SR-485

10:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Defense Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Department of Defense, focusing on land warfare.
SD-192

Appropriations
VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Veterans' Administration.
S-126, Capitol

Appropriations
Transportation Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the U.S. Coast Guard.
SD-138

10:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Consumer Subcommittee
To resume hearings on S. 1400, to regulate interstate commerce by providing for a uniform product liability law.
SR-253

2:00 p.m.
Armed Services
Strategic Forces and Nuclear Deterrence Subcommittee
To hold closed hearings on S. 2171, to authorize funds for fiscal year 1991 for military functions of the Department of Defense and to prescribe military personnel levels for fiscal year 1991, focusing on the B-2 low observability and counter-Stealth analyses.
S-407, Capitol

Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Aviation Subcommittee
To resume hearings on S. 2268, to revise the Airport and Airway Improvement Act of 1982 (title 5 of P.L. 97-248) to authorize funds for fiscal years 1991 and 1992 for airway improvement.
SR-253

Energy and Natural Resources
Public Lands, National Parks and Forests Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 1767, to reimburse Montana and individuals for expenses incurred to test cattle for brucellosis organisms carried outside Yellowstone National Park by elk and bison, S. 2343, to designate a segment of the Clarks Fork River in the State of Wyoming as a component of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, and H.R. 2809, to provide for the transfer of certain lands to the State of California.
SD-366

Select on Intelligence
To hold closed hearings on intelligence matters.
SH-219

2:30 p.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Science, Technology, and Space Subcommittee
To resume hearings to review the President's proposed budget request for fiscal year 1991 for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), focusing on space science and applications.
SR-385

MAY 11

9:30 a.m.
Armed Services
Projection Forces and Regional Defense Subcommittee
To resume hearings to examine possible approaches to naval arms control.
SD-430

Governmental Affairs
Federal Services, Post Office, and Civil Service Subcommittee
To hold hearings on the Airborne Self-Protection Jammer (ASPJ) weapons system.
SD-342

Veterans' Affairs
To hold hearings on S. 2483, to improve educational assistance programs for veterans, S. 2484, to improve the housing loan program for veterans, and veterans employment programs, including section 401 of S. 2100.
SR-418

10:00 a.m.
Judiciary
Constitution Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 1810, to authorize the Attorney General to conduct a pilot program within the Department of Justice to determine compliance with the Fair Housing Act.
SD-226

MAY 14

10:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Interior Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for activities of the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Energy, and the Secretary of Agriculture.
S-128, Capitol

2:00 p.m.
Appropriations
Interior Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for fossil energy and clean coal technology programs of the Department of Energy.
S-128, Capitol

Select on Indian Affairs
To hold oversight hearings on S. 1021, to provide for the protection of Indian graves and burial grounds, and S. 1980, to provide for the repatriation of Native American group or cultural patrimony.
SR-485

MAY 15

9:30 a.m.
Armed Services
Manpower and Personnel Subcommittee
To resume hearings on S. 2171, to authorize funds for fiscal year 1991 for military functions of the Department of Defense, and to prescribe military personnel levels for fiscal year 1991, focusing on medical programs of the Department of Defense.
SR-232A

10:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Defense Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Department of Defense, focusing on seapower.
SD-192

Appropriations
VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Departments of Veterans Affairs, Housing and Urban Development, and independent agencies.
SD-138

Armed Services
Projection Forces and Regional Defense Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 2171, to authorize funds for fiscal year 1991 for the Department of Defense and to prescribe personnel levels for fiscal year 1991, focusing on the state and capabilities of the U.S. Marine Corps for special operations and low intensity conflict.
SR-222

Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Science, Technology, and Space Subcommittee
To hold hearings to review commercial space programs.
SR-253

Energy and Natural Resources
To hold hearings on S. 2415, to encourage solar and geothermal power production by removing the size limitations contained in the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act of 1978.
SD-366

Environment and Public Works
To hold hearings on proposed legislation to finance environmental protection facilities in small communities, including S. 1296, S. 1331, S. 2184, and S. 1514.
SD-406

2:30 p.m.
Appropriations
Foreign Operations Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for foreign assistance, focusing on population policy and resources.
SD-138

MAY 16

9:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Consumer Subcommittee
To hold hearings to examine environmental labeling of consumer products.
SR-253

10:00 a.m.
Appropriations
VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Subcommittee
To continue hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Departments of Veterans Affairs, Housing and Urban Development, and independent agencies.
SD-138

2:00 p.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Merchant Marine Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 2170, to prescribe the conditions under which contractors receiving operating-differential subsidy of their affiliates may engage in coastwise or intercoastal trade.
SR-253

MAY 17

9:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Defense Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Department of Defense, focusing on space programs.
S-407, Capitol

9:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Science, Technology, and Space Subcommittee
To hold hearings on semi-conductors and the future of the U.S. electronics industry.
SR-253

Veterans' Affairs
To hold hearings on titles I and III of S. 2100, Veterans Compensation Cost-of-Living Adjustment Act, S. 1887, to allow for Kentucky Vietnam veterans to receive a one-time bonus from the Commonwealth, S. 2454, to increase the estate limits for certain incompetent institutionalized veterans, S. 2482, to clarify the eligibility of certain minors for burial in national cemeteries and to authorize use of flat grave markers in a section of Florida National Cemetery, S. 2102, to modify certain congressional reporting requirements imposed upon the Secretary of Veterans Affairs for certain administrative reorganizations within the Department of Veterans Affairs, and proposed legislation to expand radiation presumptions for veterans.
SR-418

10:00 a.m.
Appropriations
VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Subcommittee
To continue hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Departments of Veterans Affairs, Housing and Urban Development, and independent agencies.
SD-138

2:00 p.m.
Armed Services
Strategic Forces and Nuclear Deterrence Subcommittee
To resume hearings on S. 2171, to authorize funds for fiscal year 1991 for military functions of the Department of Defense and to prescribe military personnel levels for fiscal year 1991, focusing on the Strategic Defense Initiative.
SD-628

MAY 22

9:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Defense Subcommittee
To hold closed hearings on proposed budget estimates for the Department of Defense, focusing on classified programs.
S-407, Capitol

9:30 a.m.
Armed Services
Projection Forces and Regional Defense Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 2171, to authorize funds for fiscal year 1991 for the Department of Defense and to prescribe military personnel levels for fiscal year 1991, focusing on the Navy shipbuilding and conversion program.
SR-222

2:30 p.m.
Appropriations
Foreign Operations Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for foreign assistance, focusing on the global environment.
SD-138

MAY 23

9:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
To hold hearings to review the Administration's technology policy and priorities.
SR-253

1:30 p.m.
Appropriations
VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Resolution Trust Corporation, and the Office of Inspector General.
SD-138

2:30 p.m.
Armed Services
Strategic Forces and Nuclear Deterrence Subcommittee
To hold hearings on the Department of Energy national security budget request for fiscal year 1991.
SR-253

MAY 24

9:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Defense Subcommittee
To resume hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for defense programs.
SD-192

9:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Foreign Commerce and Tourism Subcommittee
To hold hearings to examine ways to expand U.S. exports abroad.
SR-253

JUNE 5

9:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Defense Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Department of Defense.
SD-192

2:30 p.m.
Appropriations
Foreign Operations Subcommittee
To resume hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for foreign assistance, focusing on organization and accountability.
SD-138

JUNE 7

9:30 a.m.
Judiciary
To hold hearings to examine the effects on judicial nominees belonging to private clubs that discriminate.
SD-226

Veterans' Affairs
To hold oversight hearings on veterans prosthetics and special-disabilities programs.
SR-418

2:00 p.m.
Select on Indian Affairs
To hold oversight hearings to examine the Indian health service nurse shortage.
SR-485

JUNE 12

9:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
To hold hearings in conjunction with the National Ocean Policy Study on proposed legislation authorizing funds for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's satellite programs.
SR-253

2:30 p.m.
Appropriations
Foreign Operations Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for foreign assistance, focusing on eastern Europe.
SD-138

JUNE 13

9:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Communications Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 2358, providing U.S. consumers the opportunity to enjoy the technological advancement in sound recording by use of digital audio tape recorders.
SR-253

JUNE 14

9:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
To hold hearings in conjunction with the National Ocean Policy Study on proposed legislation authorizing funds for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's ocean and coastal programs.
SR-253

Veterans' Affairs
To hold hearings on title II and section 402 of S. 2100, relating to veterans physician pay and health issues, S. 1860, to require the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to furnish outpatient medical services for any disability of a former prisoner of war, S. 2455, to provide for recovery by the U.S. of the cost of medical care and services furnished for a nonservice-connected disability, S. 2456, to extend expiring laws authorizing the Department of Veterans Affairs to contract for needed care and to revise authority to furnish outpatient dental care, and other proposed legislation.
SR-418

JUNE 19

2:30 p.m.
Appropriations
Foreign Operations Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for foreign assistance, focusing on U.S. military assistance.
SD-138

JUNE 20

9:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Communications Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 1974, to require new televisions to have built in decoder circuitry designed to display closed-captioned television transmissions.
SR-253

JUNE 26

9:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Foreign Operations Subcommittee
To resume hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for foreign assistance programs.
Room to be announced

2:30 p.m.
Appropriations
Foreign Operations Subcommittee
To continue hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for foreign assistance programs.
Room to be announced

JUNE 28

9:30 a.m.
Veterans' Affairs
Business meeting, to consider pending legislation relating to veterans compensation and health-care benefits.
SR-418

JULY 12

9:30 a.m.
Select on Indian Affairs
To hold hearings to examine protective services for Indian children, focusing on alcohol and substance abuse programs.
SR-485

POSTPONEMENTS

MAY 3

10:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Interior Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the National Endowment for the Arts, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the Bureau of Mines, all of the Department of the Interior.
S-128, Capitol

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Thursday, May 3, 1990

The House met at 11 a.m.

The Reverend Dr. Ronald F. Christian, office of the bishop, Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, Washington, DC, offered the following prayer:

Oh God, Creator of all humankind and Father of the whole human race. It is right and proper that we pray to you as a nation and as an individual.

This day, as a nation, we offer our thanks to You for our blessings; we make our petitions to You for protection; we place our trust in You for our eternal benediction.

May we not be so proud of our accomplishments that we forget our dependency on Your divine guidance.

May we not be so self-centered in our own national agenda that we fail in our duty to our fellow human being.

Challenge us to be worthy stewards of our national heritage. Write on our hearts again that the dominion is Yours and that power comes from You.

Keep us steadfast in our responsibilities, resolute in our tasks, and make us always humble in our successes.

Hear our prayer, O God. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

Mr. MACHTLEY. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 1, rule I, I demand a vote on agreeing to the Speaker's approval of the Journal.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the Chair's approval of the Journal.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. MACHTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 283, nays 106, not voting 44, as follows:

[Roll No. 95]

YEAS—283

Anderson	Archer	Bartlett
Andrews	Aspin	Bateman
Annunzio	Atkins	Bates
Anthony	AuCoin	Bellenson
Applegate	Barnard	Bennett
Berman	Hansen	Packard
Bevill	Harris	Pallone
Bilbray	Hatcher	Panetta
Boggs	Hayes (IL)	Parker
Bonior	Hayes (LA)	Patterson
Borski	Hefner	Payne (NJ)
Bosco	Hertel	Payne (VA)
Boucher	Hiler	Pease
Boxer	Hoagland	Pelosi
Brennan	Hochbrueckner	Penny
Broomfield	Horton	Perkins
Brown (CA)	Houghton	Petri
Bruce	Hubbard	Pickett
Bryant	Hughes	Poshard
Bustamante	Hutto	Price
Byron	Jenkins	Quillen
Cardin	Johnson (CT)	Rangel
Carper	Johnson (SD)	Ravenel
Carr	Johnston	Ray
Chapman	Jones (GA)	Richardson
Clarke	Jontz	Rinaldo
Clement	Kanjorski	Robinson
Clinger	Kaptur	Roe
Coleman (TX)	Kasich	Rose
Combest	Kastenmeier	Rostenkowski
Condit	Kennedy	Rowland (CT)
Conte	Kennelly	Rowland (GA)
Conyers	Kildee	Roybal
Cooper	Kleczka	Russo
Costello	Kolter	Sabo
Coyne	Kostmayer	Saiki
Davis	LaFalce	Sangmeister
de la Garza	Lancaster	Sarpalius
DeFazio	Lantos	Sawyer
DeLay	Laughlin	Saxton
Derrick	Lehman (CA)	Scheuer
Dicks	Lehman (FL)	Schneider
Dingell	Lent	Schulze
Dixon	Levin (MI)	Schumer
Donnelly	Levine (CA)	Serrano
Dorgan (ND)	Lewis (GA)	Shaw
Downey	Lipinski	Shumway
Durbin	Livingston	Shuster
Dwyer	Lloyd	Sisisky
Dyson	Long	Skaggs
Early	Lowey (NY)	Skeen
Eckart	Luken, Thomas	Skelton
Edwards (CA)	Manton	Slattery
Edwards (OK)	Martinez	Slaughter (NY)
Emerson	Matsui	Smith (IA)
Engel	Mavroules	Smith (NE)
English	Mazzoli	Smith (NJ)
Erdreich	McCloskey	Smith (VT)
Espy	McCrery	Solarz
Evans	McCurdy	Spence
Fascell	McDade	Spratt
Fawell	McDermott	Staggers
Fazio	McEwen	Stallings
Feighan	McHugh	Stark
Fish	McMillen (MD)	Stenholm
Flake	McNulty	Stokes
Foglietta	Meyers	Studds
Ford (MI)	Miller (CA)	Swift
Frank	Mineta	Synar
Gallo	Moakley	Tallon
Gaydos	Mollohan	Tanner
Gejdenson	Montgomery	Tauzin
Gephardt	Moody	Taylor
Geren	Morrison (CT)	Thomas (GA)
Gibbons	Morrison (WA)	Torres
Gillmor	Mrazek	Torricelli
Gilman	Murtha	Towns
Glickman	Nagle	Traficant
Gonzalez	Natcher	Udall
Gordon	Neal (MA)	Unsoeld
Gradison	Neal (NC)	Valentine
Grant	Nielson	Vander Jagt
Gray	Nowak	Vento
Green	Oakar	Visclosky
Guarini	Oberstar	Volkmer
Gunderson	Obey	Walgren
Hall (OH)	Olin	Walsh
Hall (TX)	Ortiz	Washington
Hamilton	Owens (NY)	Watkins
Hammerschmidt	Owens (UT)	Waxman
Weiss	Wilson	Yates
Weldon	Wise	Yatron
Wheat	Wolpe	Young (FL)
Whitten	Wyden
Williams	Wylie

NAYS—106

Baker	Henry	Ridge
Bentley	Herger	Roberts
Bereuter	Holloway	Rogers
Billirakis	Hopkins	Rohrabacher
Boehlert	Hunter	Ros-Lehtinen
Brown (CO)	Hyde	Roth
Buechner	Inhofe	Roukema
Bunning	Ireland	Schaefer
Burton	Jacobs	Schroeder
Callahan	James	Schuette
Campbell (CA)	Kolbe	Sensenbrenner
Chandler	Lagomarsino	Shays
Coble	Leach (IA)	Sikorski
Coleman (MO)	Lewis (CA)	Slaughter (VA)
Coughlin	Lewis (FL)	Smith (TX)
Courter	Machtley	Smith, Denny (OR)
Cox	Madigan	Smith, Robert (NH)
Crane	Marlenee	Smith, Robert (OR)
Dannemeyer	Martin (IL)	Snowe
DeWine	Martin (NY)	Solomon
Dickinson	McCandless	Stangeland
Dornan (CA)	McGrath	Stearns
Douglas	McMillan (NC)	Sundquist
Dreier	Michel	Tauke
Duncan	Miller (OH)	Thomas (CA)
Fields	Miller (WA)	Thomas (WY)
Frenzel	Molinari	Upton
Gallegly	Moorhead	Vucanovich
Gekas	Morella	Walker
Gingrich	Murphy	Weber
Goodling	Oxley	Whittaker
Goss	Parris	Young (AK)
Grandy	Pashayan
Hancock	Paxon
Hastert	Porter
Hawkins	Regula
Hefley	Rhodes

NOT VOTING—44

Ackerman	Dellums	Mfume
Akaka	Dymally	Myers
Alexander	Flippo	Nelson
Armey	Ford (TN)	Pickle
Ballenger	Frost	Pursell
Barton	Hoyer	Rahall
Bliley	Huckaby	Ritter
Brooks	Jones (NC)	Savage
Browder	Kyl	Schiff
Campbell (CO)	Leath (TX)	Sharp
Clay	Lightfoot	Smith (FL)
Collins	Lowery (CA)	Stump
Craig	Lukens, Donald	Traxler
Crockett	Markey	Wolf
Darden	McCollum

□ 1124

Mr. GEJDENSON and Mr. GILMAN changed their vote from "present" to "yea."

So the Journal was approved.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from New York [Mr. McNULTY] please come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. McNULTY led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 198. An act to amend title 17, United States Code, the Copyright Act to protect certain computer programs;

S. 459. An act to amend title 35, United States Code, with respect to the use of inventions in outer space; and

S. 2300. An act to provide financial assistance to the Simon Wiesenthal Center in Los Angeles, CA, for the education programs of the Museum of Tolerance.

PRESIDENT SHOULD ENCOURAGE INVESTMENT

(Mr. WISE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, for those who are concerned about whether this country is investing enough in its future, I think it is important to look at just a few recent events. For instance, this administration has just announced that it is going to be firing the head of DARPA, which has been conducting much of the research that is important to give us that technological edge in high density TV and other areas.

An OTA report released today shows that once again we are giving away some of that valuable semiconductor research that we ought to be doing.

In infrastructure this administration proposed a budget that actually cut back the amount of money that would be expended for building highways, roads and bridges and airports, resulting in productivity decreases, not increases.

We hear a lot of talk about capital gains, a dubious approach, but the administration opposes real IRA improvements, such as has been offered on the floor.

Whether it is education or the GI bill and in so many areas, we are not increasing like we ought to and fueling the machine of growth and investment. We are cutting back. We know what is best for this country. It was reflected in the budget that was just passed. It is investing.

What is best is to invest, and I urge the administration to move in those directions.

AMERICAN PEOPLE DEMANDING SUPPORT FOR LITHUANIA

(Mr. COBLE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, President Bush is scheduled to meet with the Lithuanian Prime Minister today. Some have criticized the President for not having responded to this matter in more vocal, forcible tones.

In fairness to the President, however, there are limits dictating how far he can go. This situation presents a delicate, fragile balancing act. On the one hand, the Bush-Gorbachev summit continues to develop, while on the other the brave, hardy people of Lithuania struggle for freedom and independence.

We do not want the progress surrounding the summit meeting to collapse as the world watches, but the world watches Lithuania just as anxiously.

Lithuania and Russia must be willing to engage in meaningful dialog, but it is essential that Lithuania not be the recipient of a blind eye, nor a deaf ear from the United States at today's meeting.

□ 1130

HEED THE CALL ON TECHNOLOGY ASSESSMENT REPORT

(Mr. TORRICELLI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, today the Office of Technology Assessment has released its report on superconductivity, the international competitiveness, and it is, Mr. Speaker, a very familiar story.

American leadership in the laboratory is assured. Breakthroughs are taking place by American scientists, and they will redefine international competitiveness in a host of industries.

But the rest of the story also sounds familiar. The Office of Technology Assessment tells us that American corporations are failing to take heed. Their Japanese and German competitors are spending 50 to 100 percent more and threaten to dominate industries that range from shipbuilding to aircraft to electronics to computers to power generation. Mr. Speaker, the contrast is clear.

The message from the administration is to fire the director of DARPA and not to heed the call. Mr. Speaker, the consequences for our industrial leadership are enormous. This is a case where one man in DARPA was right and an entire administration is wrong.

Take heed. The consequences are enormous.

INCREASED ROLE OF CONSTITUENTS IN CAMPAIGN FINANCE

(Mr. WALSH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, Republicans want to restore the primary role of constituents in the financing of congressional campaigns.

We want to limit the flow of campaign cash from PAC's and Washington special interest lobbyists, and return control of the election process to the people of each congressional district.

Not long ago, a bipartisan panel of experts assembled by the Senate made a very interesting suggestion.

They suggested setting limits on out-of-State contributions from PAC's and special interest groups, while party contributions would not be subject to limits. This is based on the fact that party contributions are raised primarily from individuals, and are to a large degree insulated from the influence of special interests.

This would require the candidate to recruit large numbers of donors in a congressional district. If a candidate cannot gain that sort of support from his or her own district they don't deserve election to this high office.

Also, candidates would have to spend more time campaigning for votes rather than being involved in the money chase around the country.

The American people deserve campaign reform this year.

Republicans and Democrats must enter into honest negotiations to reach a truly bipartisan agreement, partisanship will not suffice. The very integrity of the electoral process is at stake.

THE VOTE ON THE BUDGET

(Mr. VOLKMER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, this week the House did not vote on the President's budget. Many Members wanted to do so. They were thwarted by the actions of the opposition party.

The gentleman from Minnesota, who is ranking member of the Budget Committee, had given his word to the Rules Committee and the Budget chairman that he would offer the President's budget. On Tuesday morning, before we took up the budget in the afternoon, he [* * *] said he would not offer the President's budget. This was undoubtedly done with the acquiescence of the Republican leadership. He did not offer the President's budget, and when the gentleman from New York attempted to do so by unanimous consent, again, the opposition party objected.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I demand the gentleman's words be taken down.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MCNULTY). The gentleman will suspend.

□ 1134

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the words objected to.

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Missouri is willing to delete the words, "went back on his word."

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the words are withdrawn.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. VOLKMER] withdrawing those particular words?

Mr. VOLKMER. Those specific words.

Mr. WALKER. Which in fact imputed the motives of the Member. At that point then, Mr. Speaker, I will not object, and withdraw my demand.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the words are withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman may proceed in order.

Mr. VOLKMER. The gentleman from Minnesota did not offer the President's budget, and when the gentleman from New York attempted to offer the budget by unanimous consent, it was objected to by a Member of the opposition party. Therefore, all of us who wanted a vote on this major legislation were thwarted in it by the actions of Members of the opposition party.

Many times my colleagues on the other side of the aisle have complained about not being able to offer a bill or amendment on this floor because of a certain rule. Well, ladies and gentlemen, this time the opposition party and Members thereof have thwarted us who wanted a vote on a major piece of legislation, the President's budget.

JUST DO IT

(Mr. INHOFE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. Speaker, today I want to draw attention to the issue of anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union. I want to discuss the Soviet Union's promise to liberalize its policies. There is no doubt that the number of Soviets allowed to emigrate has increased dramatically. In March alone, 10,501 Jews emigrated from the Soviet Union—and 10,331 went to Israel. I would like to point out, however, that many of the fundamental problems causing Soviet Jews to flee their country are still present and are not being adequately addressed.

While I am pleased at the signs of liberalization, I am aware that they are only signs. The rights of Soviet citizens, religious or otherwise, currently are not guaranteed. We need to encourage that these rights be institutionalized. They need to be legislated and implemented within the framework of Russian law: then most importantly, they must be enforced.

With the new level of openness and partial progress, economic, interethnic, and nationalist tensions have increased dramatically and could threaten the progress that has been made so far. I am very concerned with Mr. Gorbachev's decision to appoint two notoriously xenophobic and anti-Western persons to his innermost Council of advisers. Surely this is not a good indication or Mr. Gorbachev's true feelings.

There has been talk of new laws to be introduced and debated in the Soviet Congress that would reform and democratize basic human rights and freedoms in the Soviet Union. These laws would address freedom of emigration, expression, thought, press, and religious conscience. Freedoms that we have had protected for such a long time that we don't even question them. Soviet citizens should also have these rights, but they don't.

On May 5, it is widely rumored that a program will take place. With the liberalization of glasnost, groups like the nationalistic, anti-Semitic Pamyat, and other hate groups are engaged in an increasingly vicious campaign of anti-Semitism. They blame many of perestroika's shortcomings and inherent difficulties on an already oppressed Jewish minority.

This rumor of an organized persecution of Soviet Jews by such groups as the Pamyat clearly indicates the severity of the situation. How can the Soviet Union expect any commendation for changes taking place in that part of the world, or expect any type of assistance from anyone, when one group of its citizens is allowed—and encouraged by default—to act like common criminals toward another group of its citizens.

We must call upon the Soviet Union to institutionalize and protect policies that will allow basic rights and freedoms. Soviet Jews, and all Soviet citizens, must be given freedoms and rights that will not to be subject to the fears and violence of any individual, or any group. The problem is fundamental, the answer is clear. Mr. Gorbachev, just do it.

MEMBERS WHO DID NOT VOTE ON ANY BUDGET SHOULD RETURN ONE MONTH'S PAY

(Mrs. SCHROEDER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, there is absolutely no more important issue in front of this country than our budget for the next year, and many people have played very lightly. We have seen a lot of Members who have not voted for any budget at all, and then did not even bring up the President's budget because they wanted it both ways, to not really offend him by not having to turn it down, and to also not having to support him by not having it brought up.

I think that the American people in a representative democracy deserve much more than this. As we prepare to go into a summit, how can we represent Members who have not voted for any budget at all? I would think that would be shameful.

I would like to call upon the Members of this House, of which there is a long list, who voted for no budget at all, to at least return their pay for this month, because I think that would maybe help in the debt. But if they do not have any ideas on the budget at all, all I want to know is what are they doing here and how can they draw their pay in good faith?

GIVE AMERICAN AID TO AMERICANS

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, after the war we led Japan to our factories. We gave them blueprints. We gave them our technology. And that was not enough. Ladies and gentlemen, America made loans to Japan and gave grants to Japan. Check it out.

Now Japan has the jobs, Japan has the factories, Japan has the banks, and America, we have got photographs.

If you really want to frost your pumpkin, there is a county in West Virginia that has officially asked Japan for foreign aid. No doubt it is to get the attention of Congress, but guess what? Japan may comply. In fact, Japanese politicians are today and this week considering a Marshall plan for America.

Ladies and gentlemen, we should be ashamed of ourselves. Why not a little bit more foreign aid for El Salvador? How about it? How about Panama? They need some money? Let us make sure we get some for the Philippines. But let us not consider America. Let us let America go to Japan for foreign aid.

I think we should start with that health department in that county in West Virginia, folks.

TRIBUTE TO FRANK V. HALL

(Mr. BILIRAKIS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous materials.)

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, tonight the District of Columbia Downtown Jaycees will be presenting its 42d

Arthur S. Flemming Awards to honor outstanding young men and women in the Federal Government for professional achievement and community involvement.

This morning, Representative MORELLA and I would like to pay tribute to one of this year's winners: Mr. Frank Hall, a constituent of mine and formerly of Mrs. MORELLA's.

Frank is the director of administration in the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Middle District of Florida, and just one of his responsibilities is administration of the President's Organized Crime and Drug Enforcement Task Force for Region 13.

Among his many achievements are the 18 tireless months of administrative and security support he provided during the trial of Carlos Lehder, a kingpin of the Medellin drug cartel. Today, thanks in part to the efforts of Frank Hall, the most significant member of this cartel ever to be brought to trial in the United States is behind bars.

Frank's achievements have not been restricted to his professional life, either. He is a distinguished instructor in the Presidential Classroom Program, an active participant at his church and in a variety of civic causes.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all of my colleagues to join Mrs. MORELLA and myself in congratulating Frank Hall today, and I insert the letter from U.S. Attorney Robert Genzman nominating Frank for this richly deserved honor in the RECORD.

NOMINATION OF FRANK V. HALL FOR THE 42D ANNUAL ARTHUR S. FLEMMING AWARD FOR ACHIEVEMENTS IN ADMINISTRATION

PROFESSIONAL ACHIEVEMENT

Introduction

It is my pleasure to nominate Mr. Frank V. Hall for the 42d Annual Arthur S. Flemming Award for Achievements in Administration. As the Director of Administration for the Office of the United States Attorney, Middle Judicial District of Florida, Mr. Hall is responsible for a wide-range of litigative support functions which allow the Office to concentrate its primary energies on litigation of crimes under Federal jurisdiction. Mr. Hall either directly or through his staff is responsible for managing a multi-million dollar budget, ensuring the security of senior litigators and staff, ensuring sound personnel management practices and resource decisions are made, management of procurement activities, and management of an extensive computer network within the District. While all of these areas are complex within themselves, the complexity is multiplied by the necessity to provide support in all areas to four fully functioning offices within the District. Due to Mr. Hall's management acumen, the District functions very smoothly in all administrative matters, allowing the U.S. Attorney to concentrate on litigative issues.

A few examples of his extraordinary skills are elaborated upon below:

Support of the Carlos Lehder Prosecution.—Carlos Enrique Rivas Lehder, a kingpin of the Medellin Cartel, was extradited to the United States and tried in the Middle District of Florida. It goes without saying that a case of this magnitude, complexity and length required an administrative support contribution of significant proportions. Mr. Hall worked tirelessly over an 18-month period during trial preparations and throughout the trial and sentencing period to provide outstanding support to the trial team and investigative task force. Administrative issues included the early need for an emergency procurement of task force space and the full furnishing of equipment, furniture, and specialized building security requirements. Other issues which required continuing efforts over a one-year period included task force and trial logistics, litigation support, numerous complex witness situations, foreign travel and foreign witnesses, budgetary support, and most importantly, security. There were a variety of security issues surrounding this case, including heightened specialized security in all four offices, trial security, and personal security issues involving former United States Attorney Robert W. Merkle, his family, and Assistant United States Attorney Ernst Mueller. Many of these requirements were unique, requiring creativity and coordination with multiple organizations including the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Marshal's Service, the Customs Service, the Executive Office for United States Attorneys and the Justice Management Division. Mr. Hall successfully dealt with these issues and was required to travel extensively throughout the District and to Washington, to resolve many issues on an emergency basis. He successfully negotiated the myriad of day-to-day administrative details which were critical to the prosecution. That he was able to accomplish all of these specialized prosecution needs with no sacrifice to other Middle District of Florida operations is a credit to his creativity, dedication, and willingness to work long hours to further the mission of this office. The jury returned verdicts of guilty on all counts, and Carlos Lehder was sentenced to a maximum sentence of life imprisonment plus 135 years. To date, Lehder is the most significant member of the Medellin Cartel to have been extradited, tried, and convicted in the United States.

Growth Management.—Mr. Hall has administratively managed this large, rapidly growing District of 35 counties and 6.7 million residents in a highly effective manner. Five of the nation's 10 fastest growing cities are within the Middle District of Florida, and over the past five years personnel has increased by over 100%. In the past fiscal year alone, resources assigned to this District increased by over 25% due to the President's drug initiatives. In addition, Mr. Hall supervised the establishment of a fourth staffed Division in Ft. Myers which in the past two years has expanded and moved three times. Mr. Hall has the capacity to handle the myriad of details necessary to successfully accomplish massive, multiple expansion projects without sacrifice to the normal high quality of administrative management he provides this District. Further proof of his abilities to successfully manage our growth is evident in the high productivity of this District, simultaneous with its growth, as it continues to respond to its law enforcement mission. For example, in fiscal Year 1988 the District produced the following comparative statistics among the 94 United States Attorney's Offices:

(a) Sixth in number of jury trials;

(b) Sixth in number of trial days;

(c) Ninth in number of district court criminal hours;

(d) Sixth in number of magistrate court hours; and

(e) Seventh in terms of significant cases filed.

Delegations of Authority.—This District completed the administrative de-centralization project which began under former Attorney General Meese and has been completed under Attorney General Thornburgh, by accepting and successfully implementing operational plan budget authority and procurement authority. These authorities, coupled with the previously accepted personnel and fiscal payment authorities, resulted in the delivery of administrative services locally that were previously performed in Washington. All of the above authorities were implemented with a net resource allocation increase to our administrative staff of only three positions. Mr. Hall's effectiveness in successfully implementing these authorities are demonstrated by the following:

Internal and external audits which conclude that we have outstanding administrative programs, effectively managed;

Employee satisfaction which is high, above average according to a recent OPM review; and Financial resources which were managed effectively, so that we were able to return approximately $600,000 of appropriated funds to the Department for redistribution during FY89.

Mr. Hall's talents have not gone unrecognized by others in the Department. He has been selected in the past as an administrative reviewer, has assisted the Attorney General's Advisory Committee in resolving issues of national concern, and has provided administrative assistance to other U.S. Attorneys and their administrative staff both formally and informally. During the past five years alone, Mr. Hall has received 52 letters of commendation, thanks and appreciation from individuals including the Attorney General, Deputy Attorney General, numerous United States Attorneys and others

Indeed, during my tenure as United States Attorney in this District, Mr. Hall's administrative skills and expertise have aided me immeasurably. It is without question that this District would not have the impact it does in the international drug arena were it not for the expert administrative staff so ably led by Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall's outstanding achievements in his role as Director of Administration for this District allow the prosecution staff to devote their full attention to combating legal issues of national and international concern. In view of Mr. Hall's achievements in his field, it is a privilege to submit his name to receive the prestigious Arthur S. Flemming Award for "Administrative Excellence".

Community Involvement

Mr. Hall serves his community in a variety of civic, charitable, youth oriented, and other voluntary endeavors. They are briefly listed and described below:

A. Presidential Classroom.—Mr. Hall has been very active in serving as a distinguished instructor with this program on numerous occasions. He has donated his personal time to assist the program for seven different Presidential Classroom programs dating back to 1978. The Presidential Classroom is a senior high school program based in Washington, D.C., which is designed to introduce future leaders of America to the inner workings of the government. The Presidential Classroom has presented Mr.

Hall with several awards in recognition of his volunteer service.

B. Van Dyke United Methodist Church.—Mr. Hall is an active member of his community church and serves on several committees including the Men's Group, Church Growth, and Family Life, where he holds a leadership position.

C. Metropolitan Ministries.—Mr. Hall has served as a volunteer, through his church, to this noteworthy organization which serves the homeless of Tampa Bay.

D. Little League.—Mr. Hall has participated as a volunteer with several Little Leagues and Pony Leagues in his community.

E. Tampa Rotary Club.—Mr. Hall served as Administrative Coordinator to provide Robert Kirk, the Rotary Club's winner of a "Dream Day" contest, an assignment as an honorary member of the United States Attorney's Office. Mr. Hall's efforts to facilitate this program were recognized at a formal luncheon sponsored by the Rotary Club.

F. Basketball Referee.—Mr. Hall is a distinguished member of several basketball referee associations and officiates contests at both the high school and college levels. He has been selected in the past by the NCAA to officiate at their national tournament.

G. Florida AAU.—Mr. Hall has donated his professional services to referee for the Florida AAU.

H. Special Olympics.—Mr. Hall has donated his professional services to referee for the Special Olympics at both local and national levels.

TRIBUTE TO FRANK V. HALL

(Mrs. MORELLA asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure and pride that I rise today to recognize Frank V. Hall who is a recipient of the coveted Arthur S. Flemming Award which will be presented today by the Arthur S. Flemming Awards Commission, Expert Scientific and Administrative Consultants, and the Downtown Jaycees.

The Arthur S. Flemming Award is presented to Federal employees under the age of 40 who have performed outstanding and meritorious work for the Government and have demonstrated community service which has enhanced the community. Previous recipients include Paul Volcker, Elizabeth Dole, Neil Armstrong, and PATRICK MOYNIHAN. Frank Hall of the Department of Justice joins this elite membership.

Though I cannot claim Mr. Hall as a constituent now, he was formerly from the Eighth District of Maryland and received his A.A. degree from Montgomery College in 1972. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hall, still reside in Kensington, MD, and his sister, Joelle, well-known to us on the House floor, resides in Burtonsville, MD. I know they are justifiably proud of Frank, as well I am.

Our country is rich in the caliber of Federal employees; there are so many who are superbly talented and dedicated that I am sure it is a difficult task to choose the most deserving. Yet, when that determination is made, you can be assured that that individual undoubtedly possesses the highest qualification. I would not do justice to Mr. Hall if I tried to list some of his achievements at this time.

Frank V. Hall, who started as a mail clerk in the U.S. Department of Labor while studying in college, now a recipient of the 42d Annual Arthur S. Flemming Award for his work as director of administration at the U.S. Attorney's Office in the Middle District of Florida. Of him, we say, in the words of Shakespere: "The force of his own merit makes his way."

SAVE THE KLAMATH RIVER

(Mr. DEFAZIO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, in the historic 100th Congress we passed landmark legislation to protect 40 of Oregon's fabulous rivers as national wild and scenic treasures. Oregon gained national recognition as the wild and scenic river capital of the United States.

Unfortunately, in the 101st Congress one of our rivers has again been singled out for national attention. The Klamath River in southern Oregon has been singled out as the most endangered river in America. A private-public cabal has a proposal to dam or dewater the river to build a hydroelectric project to produce power that no one wants, needs, or can afford.

So today, along with the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. AUCOIN] and the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WYDEN], I am introducing wild and scenic river legislation to protect this last free-flowing stretch of the Klamath River with its fabulous whitewater and wild trout fishing for future generations of Oregonians and all Americans.

My colleagues, please join us in this effort and support this bill to save this beautiful river, or it will soon run dry for all time.

THE DUAL CONSTITUENCY

(Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, in the upcoming debate on campaign reform, it is crucial that we adopt proposals to make congressional elections local again by encouraging small, local contributions.

Republicans believe that Members should be required to raise a majority of campaign contributions from local sources and that the income tax credit should be restored for small, local contributions to Federal candidates.

This body is called the House of Representatives because we represent our district and its people, the people who elected us.

But when Members accept large amounts of campaign money from outside their district, do they cultivate dual constituencies—one constituency that elects, and another that funds the election?

Unfortunately, individual contributions have declined in recent years, while special interest contributions have increased.

Mr. Speaker, Representatives should serve only one constituency. They should be required to raise a majority of their campaign funds from the people in the district they serve.

□ 1150

EL SALVADOR

(Mr. FOGLIETTA asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FOGLIETTA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to talk about El Salvador.

The three A's of tyranny—abduction, assassination, and abuse—become increasingly commonplace in this war-torn nation.

Over the past decade, the United States has sat back and watched U.S.-trained—and funded—forces commit human rights abuses and atrocities.

Has U.S. money been used to foster democracy? Absolutely not. The Salvadoran armed forces, nurtured with United States dollars, have not hesitated to torture their countrymen or harass United States church workers. Last November, they felt no compunction about brutally murdering six Jesuit priests.

In the next 2 weeks, the House will have the opportunity to vote on legislation that would cut military aid to El Salvador by 50 percent.

Yesterday, news reports indicated that the FMLN attacked San Salvador. Some in this body will try to use this attack to derail the 50-percent cut in aid.

But I say it is time to stop fueling the war.

There is no moral reason for continuing to send one dime to a government that allows coldblooded murder of civilians by its armed forces. We must stop all military aid to El Salvador—and we must stop it now.

WHITBREAD ROUND-THE-WORLD YACHT RACE STOPS IN FT. LAUDERDALE

(Mr. SHAW asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. SHAW. Mr. Speaker, for the first time since the world-famous Whitbread Round-the-World Yacht

Race began 15 years ago, the 1988/1990 series included a stop in the United States, the first stop at a North American port of call. I am proud to say that this stop was in Ft. Lauderdale, FL, my home district.

Crews from 23 nations began arriving in Ft. Lauderdale last month.

In addition to the exciting competition and entertainment that one would expect from an international sailing competition, the Whitbread has provided an unusual chance for the residents of my home district to see international relations up close; indeed, to make international relations.

The sailing competition has been difficult at times, particularly for the Soviet crew who faced financial, material, and human resource problems at sea.

Constituents from my home district graciously assisted the crew by providing them a place to stay, and helping them to raise money to finance the last leg of the race.

It has been exciting to be a part of the international cooperation. It has been exciting for the residents of Broward County, FL to show the true meaning of southern hospitality and American generosity.

STUDENT INCENTIVE ACT

(Mr. McMILLEN of Maryland asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. McMILLEN of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, Today I am introducing the Student Incentive Act, or Studi Act. The bill would encourage school districts to establish a 2.0 grade point average in order for students to participate in extracurricular activities—and reward those schools adopting the standard with a 10-percent bonus in Federal chapter 1 funding.

I have introduced this bill because I believe there is an imbalance in the priorities of young Americans between athletics and academics. For years we have been hearing of abuses in the collegiate athletic system. Athletes becoming All-American linebackers, but who cannot read after 4 years of college. But the problems begin much sooner—in America's high schools and junior high schools.

A recent survey by USA Today reviewed the dismal State requirements of high school students to participate in sports—and showed the average is only a 1.3 to 1.7 grade point average. These D-minus students will not be able to compete in the 21st century international marketplace.

Mr. Speaker, America is sending the wrong signal to our young people—that their athletic skills are more important than their thinking skills. We'll need a better student to compete in an increasingly competitive world—because that's where the real game is played.

CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM

(Mr. HILER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HILER. Mr. Speaker, it is time that we as a body come together to work to enact substantive campaign reform.

I think most of us would agree, foremost the American people, that our current system of campaign finance has fallen out of balance. The latest statistics show that candidates are relying more and more on political action committees as funding sources for their campaigns, rather than seeking our individual contributions from within their home area. In fact, 52 percent of all House candidate expenditures are now coming from PAC's and 77 percent of all PAC money in the 1988 election went to incumbents who enjoyed a 98-percent reelection rate. It is a system out of balance only to the detriment of challenger candidates.

This funding imbalance leads us to ask whether our institution is truly as close to the people as our Founding Fathers intended. If the combination of campaign finance advantages and incumbent advantages contribute to an invulnerable House membership, public policy suffers.

Let us take action to rebalance the system. Campaign finance reform should include provisions to require more campaign funds to come from local sources, particularly individuals residing within a candidate's local area.

Let us work to ensure greater public participation and reduce the influence of special interests in our system of campaign finance, and increase the competitiveness of our elections. Only then will we have the type of responsive and representative democracy our Founding Fathers envisioned.

GRANTING RECOGNITION TO LITHUANIA

(Mr. SARPALIUS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SARPALIUS. Mr. Speaker, this morning in the President's press conference when he was asked a question about Lithuania his response was that they can work out their differences.

Can they work out their differences when Lithuania was taken over by the Soviets 50 years ago and they murdered one-third of the population, killing 350,000 people in one execution?

Can they work out their differences when the Soviets outnumber the Lithuanians 87 to 1?

Can they work out their differences when the Soviets have added more troops in Lithuania?

Can they work out their differences when they cut off their energy supply, and they are now rationing food in Lithuania when all they want is recognition?

They turned to us not to build ships or put ships in the Baltic. They did not turn to us for food or for money. All they want is recognition as a free and independent country, and as a country that represents that dream we should give that dream and that recognition to the people of Lithuania.

VIOLENCE IN EL SALVADOR

(Mr. GOSS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, with today's visit by Lithuania's prime minister, all eyes and attention seem to be focused on the dramatic events to our east.

But we must not ignore the equally dramatic—and volatile—events taking place in our own back yard.

Just as peace talks were about to begin under U.N. supervision, the communist FMLN rebels in El Salvador have once again resorted to terror and violence.

The rebels—whose goal is to destabilize and undermine the democratically elected government in El Salvador—have said their most recent countrywide attacks serve as reminders.

They claim they are willing to negotiate a peaceful settlement—and yet, just as the process of talks reached the brink of progress, the FMLN has renewed its violent assaults, killing innocent civilians and children.

How many more such reminders must the duly elected government and the people of El Salvador endure? Can we really believe that the FMLN is serious about wanting a negotiated settlement to the decade-long conflict—when current evidence shows continued arms smuggling and terrorist aggression?

Mr. Speaker, negotiations require the commitment and good faith of those on both sides. So far, the FMLN had done little to uphold its end of the bargain.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 3498

Mr. PAYNE of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my name be removed as a cosponsor of H.R. 3498.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McNULTY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

GARAGE DOOR OPENER SAFETY ACT

(Mr. SIKORSKI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SIKORSKI. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing legislation that will save the lives of American kids across the Nation, the Garage Door Opener Safety Act.

What is the deal with garage door openers saving the lives of American kids? Since 1973 faulty garage doors have killed 55 American kids and injured thousands others, and this legislation requires safeguards and a reversal mechanism on them.

With 55 dead kids we cannot just shrug our shoulders and say: "Accidents happen." Some of these doors exert 200 or 300 pounds of pressure, which can fatally injure or horribly maim a kid in a few seconds, turning a friendly open garage door of home into a fearsome death trap.

Parents, businesses, and government each have a life and death responsibility here, but parents have not been informed, businesses have been out for the buck, and government has been in Reagan's deregulated la-la land.

Now as we move toward summer vacation and all of those graduation speeches about "our kids are our future," it is time for Democrats and Republicans, buyers and sellers of garage doors to unite behind this simple, cost-effective legislation to prevent the senseless death of our kids.

GAME OF OPEN SECRETS

(Mrs. BENTLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, there is an "open secret" reported in the newspapers in Washington that naming India in the Super 301 is a calculated move to appease Senator BENTSEN, who had the courage to speak out about Japan.

The Texans have a saying that applies to the Senator in this situation that, "he didn't come to town on a load of beets." The Senator will understand the game being played, the rest of us do.

By singling out India, it makes it appear that congressional intent of the Omnibus Trade Act of 1987 is not being ignored. I think it is particularly appropriate that the newspaper accounts reported the United States Trade Representative "rolled over" the old citings on India. All of us were rolled on this. In truth, we do not fully understand what we gave up in the SSI talks to meet the 301 deadline, but we know what Japan supposedly gave up. Now India is the example.

This whole exercise of naming India and not Japan in the Super 301 is a perfect example of the old bureaucratic trick of naming a "program goat" as a signal that you don't intend to do a thing. Citing India is a signal to the Japanese they are safe—and to Congress that we have been "rolled over" as India was, just to fulfill the intent of the law.

□ 1200

A FOURTH BRANCH OF GOVERNMENT, THE SUMMIT BRANCH

(Mr. DURBIN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. Speaker, some say it is time to amend our Constitution and recognize the existence of a fourth branch of government. We have the executive, the legislative and judicial branches springing from the wisdom of our Founding Fathers. But today we have another branch of Federal Government more powerful than the other three. Of course I am referring to the summit branch.

The summit branch has extraordinary powers. The summit branch can write Federal budgets, overrule congressional action, bind future Congresses and Presidents and, most importantly, the summit can, with the stroke of a pen and a 10-second sound bit, render 435 Members of Congress and 100 Senators irrelevant.

The summit branch is a great step forward in consolidating power in America. It eliminates many of the cumbersome, clumsy aspects of democracy and replaces them with the efficiency of an edict.

King George III would have loved it.

FINANCE CAMPAIGNS FROM LOCAL CONTRIBUTIONS

(Mr. SMITH of Vermont asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of Vermont. Mr. Speaker let us face it. Congress is not real popular with the American people today. Many Americans feel that we listen to them less than we listen to the lobbyists who write campaign checks here in Washington.

But there is a simple way to regain their confidence: Finance campaigns from local contributions requiring candidates to raise a majority of their campaign funds within their districts would send people a message that we are serious about reform.

David Broder of the Washington Post was right when he called money raised from constituents "the healthiest possible source of campaign cash." By requiring candidates to raise most of their campaign funds in-district, candidates would be more dependent on their ability to convince voters to contribute, not just lobbyists.

Candidates would spend more time with their constitutents, and less with special interests. Candidates would be encouraged to draw citizens into the political process, rather than turning them off with media-based negative campaigns.

Let's restore the influence of the American people on Congress. Let's get back to true representative government. Let us require candidates to raise the majority of their campaign funds within their own districts.

CLEAN AIR AND A STRONG ECONOMY TOO

(Mr. APPLEGATE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. APPLEGATE. Mr. Speaker, say it ain't so, Mr. President. Say that we are going to wake up from this nightmare and you are going to make the correction. First of all, the savings and loans in your State of Texas and other States have broken the law. Yet you ask all the American taxpayers to pay for it.

The Japanese have broken all the trade agreements and the laws, and yet you are asking the American economy to pay for it.

Yet we in areas who produce the highest Btu, best fossil energy, the cheapest with the most abundance, who broke no laws at all, you are asking us to pay through the nose through an acid rain bill.

You do not want any other part of the country or the economy to share in the cost. Why not, if you want to breathe clean air?

This is going to be a $25 billion to $50 billion monstrosity. Who is going to pay for those 10,000, 100,000 coal miners and steel workers who will be thrown out of work?

Yet we have a 10-year, $600 million study which says the worst fears of acid rain are unfounded.

Let us use some common sense. We want clean air, but we also want a strong economy, and it is tough in my region to have both.

HUMAN RIGHTS ABUSES IN CUBA

(Mr. SMITH of New Jersey asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, this morning the Committee on Foreign Affairs approved my resolution (H.R. 381) which commends the United Nations Human Rights Commission for extending the mandate of the Cuban Working Group with regard to the human rights situation in Cuba. Garnering support in the Commission for continuing the working group is largely and directly attributable to Armando Valladares, U.S.

Ambassador to the Commission, who himself spent 22 years in the Cuban gulag.

The legislation strongly condemns the Government of Cuba for engaging in a consistent pattern of human rights abuses. As noted in the resolution, when the working group visited Cuba in 1988, those hundreds of Cubans who came forward with testimony had been assured by the Cuban Government they would face no reprisals.

Mr. Speaker, we know for a fact that at least 60 Cuban human rights activists who testified and offered information were arrested, detained, and otherwise harassed.

This resolution, Mr. Speaker, will turn up the heat on Fidel Castro's government, and I urge my colleagues to unanimously support it when it comes to the floor.

WHERE ARE THE REST OF THE SOVIET INTERCONTINENTAL BALLISTIC MISSILES?

(Mr. BURTON of Indiana asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, today the Secretary of State James Baker plans to tell foreign ministers at NATO that the United States will soon withdraw some nuclear artillery from Europe and that it favors prompt negotiations with the Soviet Union to eliminate remaining ground-based nuclear weapons there. Mr. Speaker, while we are talking about doing this, we ought to look at what the Soviet Union is doing.

In 1988, the Soviets built 125 SS-25's, which is a long-range intercontinental ballistic missile, a nuclear missile, which can also be retargeted on short- and intermediate-range targets in Eastern Europe. But last year they doubled that production to 220 SS-25's. United States intelligence cannot account for over half of the Soviet-produced weapons. They have been stockpiled covertly in areas where U.S. electornic and photographic intelligence systems have been unable to search.

Because of the proximity of the Soviet Union to Europe, I think we should be very careful and not make the same mistakes we made prior to World War II.

THE WORD IS SIMPLY: SEX

(Mr. DORNAN of California asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DORNAN of California. Mr. Speaker, what creates cowards out of otherwise stalwart Members of Congress? What is the one issue or category of issues that strikes fear into everyone's heart around here?

We know how contentious the abortion issue is, and you mention the word "homosexual" on the House floor and people flee to the Cloakroom. I think the word is simply: sex.

That one word terrifies people in both Chambers here.

So may we talk about sex for a minute, Mr. Speaker, and keep it clean for the benefit of some of the tender ears that I see up in the Gallery?

We have a hero in the State of Alabama. He is district attorney for the 15th judicial circuit, and his name is Jimmy Evans. I am going to ask him to come to Washington next week so that Members can talk to this decent American law enforcement officer who found teenage girls in that State of Alabama trafficking in hard-core quadruple-XXXX material. Where did they get it? They tape recorded it off their parents' television sets. It was coming into homes all over America, 50 States, off the Tuxedo Channel and other channels, corrupting the public marketplace.

But what does the New York Times say and NBC and CBS and ABC and CNN? They challenge us with the rhetorical statement on the news last night: "Does America want the moral standards of Alabama? Is this infringing on first amendment rights?" America does not want hard-core pornography coming off our satellites, Mr. Speaker. Let us get some courage in this Chamber and fight this battle with District Attorney Jimmy Evans.

THREE MONTHS' TAXPAYER AMNESTY

(Mr. DREIER of California asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, in the marvelous budget which passed out by a 10-vote margin here just a couple of days ago there was a call for $13.7 billion in new revenues.

Well, of course, we do not know where that is going to come from exactly, but our colleagues on the Committee on Ways and Means will have the responsibility to make that determination.

Well, in legislation which I am introducing today, Mr. Speaker, I have the answer. It is, along with a 15 percent flat-rate tax, a taxpayer amnesty over a 3-months' period beginning July 1, 1991. What this would do is it would dramatically enhance compliance and it would give us a revenue increase without having to actually increase taxes.

I am introducing the bill today, Mr. Speaker, and I hope very much that my colleagues will look at it, especially those on the Committee on Ways and Means.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON H.R. 4404, DIRE EMERGENCY SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS FOR DISASTER ASSISTANCE, FOOD STAMPS, UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION ADMINISTRATION, AND OTHER URGENT NEEDS, AND TRANSFERS, AND REDUCING FUNDS BUDGETED FOR MILITARY SPENDING ACT OF 1990

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 4404) making dire emergency supplemental appropriations for disaster assistance, food stamps, unemployment compensation administration, and other urgent needs, and transfers, and reducing funds budgeted for military spending for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MCNULTY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

MOTION TO INSTRUCT CONFEREES OFFERED BY MR. CONTE

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to instruct conferees.

The Clerk read as follows:

Motion to instruct conferees offered by Mr. CONTE: That the managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Bill H.R. 4404 be instructed:

(1) to agree to those Senate amendments that respond to budget requests and reestimates of cost submitted by the President subsequent to House action on the bill for Food Stamps (No. 117), the Veterans Loan Guaranty Revolving Fund (No. 119), and the Census (No. 8); and

(2) to insist upon its disagreement to all Senate amendments that provide funding for programs, projects or activities which are not dire emergencies.

□ 1210

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MCNULTY). The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTEN] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE].

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, before I proceed, I want the Members to know that I gave a copy of this motion to the majority to put them on notice prior to this debate. The chairman of the committee and I have worked very closely together on this supplemental and tried to bring out a responsible supplemental. I think we did. We defeated all harmful amendments that were offered here on the floor of the House, and there was good teamwork between myself and Chairman WHITTEN, and also Chairman NATCHER and all the other members of the committee.

Let me explain my motion.

Mr. Speaker, my motion to instruct the conferees on the supplemental appropriations bill is simple. It directs the conferees to agree to Senate amendments on food stamps, veterans, and census, sums that were recently requested by the President, but it directs our conferees to strip from the bill all Senate amendments which are not dire emergencies. It will be like shooting fish in a rain barrel.

Mr. Speaker, the Senate, in its unmatchable wisdom, added 180 amendments to the House-passed bill. They had a ball. They spent the better part of 5 days on the floor, and they added some real beauties.

Listen to these so-called dire emergencies:

One Samoan ferry boat.

Further design of the Franklin Delano Roosevelt Memorial.

Capitol Police protection for 467 Senate parking spaces in the Union Station garage, spaces which cost $135 each per month, for a total cost of $756,000 per year.

Paying Senate consultants at a rate of $95,715 per year. That's Senate consultants, mind you.

A procurement for the Stuttgart, AR Fish Farm Laboratory.

Recycling New Jersey's batteries.

The famous Shipco claim against the Air Force.

The Beechwood housing project in Pittsburgh, PA.

The $185 million for moving the FBI's fingerprint facility to that hotbed of crime, West Virginia. And talk about a smoking gun—$238 million for an ammunition plant in Louisiana.

Mr. Speaker, while we have kept our nose to the grindstone over here, the Senate had theirs in the cookie jar; or in the catnip.

Mr. Speaker, it is time to clean up the Senate's excesses. Vote for my motion to instruct conferees to do just that.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would remind Members to refrain from characterizations of the Senate.

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may require.

Mr. Speaker, we are here today on the fiscal year 1990 Dire Emergency Supplement Appropriations Act to begin the process of going to conference with the Senate.

On April 3, the House overwhelmingly passed this bill, H.R. 4404. At that time the bill contained $1.1 billion in dire emergency discretionary funding.

A month later on May 1 the Senate completed action on this bill. The action of the Senate has resulted in 180 amendments to the House bill. Many of these amendments do not deal with dire appropriations matters. We will need to look into these matters closely. But to do that we need to get to conference with all deliberate speed. The country needs this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I hope the House will let your Appropriations Committee proceed with resolving our differences with the Senate.

I shall vote for the motion offered by my colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE].

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to my good friend, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. GALLO].

Mr. GALLO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the motion to instruct offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE].

This bill is a dire emergency supplemental, introduced for a specific purpose—to respond to two new democracies in our hemisphere who need our help now. This bill is long overdue. We cannot delay anymore. And we should not divert our attention away from the real purpose of the bill by debating other difficult issues that, frankly, we have not been able to resolve in the past.

This bill has clearly lost its direction in the other body and Mr. CONTE's motion will put it back on track.

I urge support of this motion.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the motion to instruct offered by Mr. CONTE.

Mr. Speaker, when the House considered this bill earlier I voted against it. I did so because I believe that we just cannot afford to keep sending millions and billons of dollars, year after year, to help nations around the world.

I wish we could help many of these countries. God knows that Panama and Nicaragua as well as most of the newly born democracies in Eastern Europe need all the support we can muster.

But Mr. Speaker, we have an enormous debt in this country of over $3 trillion.

And now, a bill that began as an $800 million aid request to Panama and Nicaragua has ballooned to more than $3 billion, with an additional $1 billion in other unrelated programs.

I'm sure that many of these add-ons are probably important. For example, the food stamp provision and the Veterans Affairs medical care assistance.

But I just cannot go back to my constituents in east Tennessee and feel good about telling them that their hard-earned tax dollars are going toward a dire emergency of grasshopper eradication, or of so-called peace forums to resolve disputes within an Indian tribe.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support the Conte motion to instruct conferees to eliminate these nonemergency items from the bill.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE].

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 388, nays 8, not voting 37, as follows:

[Roll No. 96]

YEAS—388

Anderson	Darden	Hancock
Andrews	Davis	Hansen
Annunzio	de la Garza	Harris
Anthony	DeFazio	Hastert
Applegate	DeLay	Hatcher
Archer	Dellums	Hawkins
Aspin	Derrick	Hayes (IL)
Atkins	DeWine	Hayes (LA)
AuCoin	Dickinson	Hefley
Baker	Dicks	Hefner
Ballenger	Dixon	Henry
Bartlett	Donnelly	Herger
Bateman	Dorgan (ND)	Hertel
Bates	Dornan (CA)	Hiler
Bellenson	Douglas	Hoagland
Bennett	Downey	Hochbrueckner
Bentley	Dreier	Hopkins
Bereuter	Duncan	Horton
Berman	Durbin	Houghton
Bevill	Dymally	Hoyer
Bilbray	Dyson	Hubbard
Bilirakis	Early	Hughes
Billey	Eckart	Hunter
Boehlert	Edwards (CA)	Hutto
Bonior	Emerson	Hyde
Borski	Engel	Inhofe
Bosco	English	Ireland
Boucher	Erdreich	Jacobs
Boxer	Espy	James
Brennan	Evans	Johnson (CT)
Brooks	Fascell	Johnson (SD)
Broomfield	Fawell	Johnston
Browder	Fazio	Jones (GA)
Brown (CA)	Feighan	Jones (NC)
Brown (CO)	Fields	Jontz
Bruce	Fish	Kanjorski
Bryant	Flake	Kasich
Buechner	Foglietta	Kastenmeier
Bunning	Ford (MI)	Kennedy
Burton	Frank	Kennelly
Bustamante	Frenzel	Kildee
Byron	Gallegly	Kleczka
Callahan	Gallo	Kolbe
Campbell (CA)	Gaydos	Kolter
Campbell (CO)	Gejdenson	Kostmayer
Cardin	Gekas	LaFalce
Carper	Gephardt	Lagomarsino
Carr	Geren	Lancaster
Chandler	Gibbons	Lantos
Chapman	Gillmor	Laughlin
Clarke	Gilman	Leach (IA)
Clay	Gingrich	Lehman (FL)
Clement	Glickman	Lent
Clinger	Gonzalez	Levin (MI)
Coble	Goodling	Levine (CA)
Coleman (MO)	Gordon	Lewis (CA)
Coleman (TX)	Goss	Lewis (FL)
Combest	Gradison	Lewis (GA)
Condit	Grandy	Lipinski
Conte	Grant	Livingston
Conyers	Gray	Lloyd
Costello	Green	Long
Coughlin	Guarini	Lowery (CA)
Courter	Gunderson	Machtley
Cox	Hall (OH)	Madigan
Coyne	Hall (TX)	Manton
Crane	Hamilton	Markey
Dannemeyer	Hammerschmidt	Marlenee

Martin (IL)	Petri	Smith, Robert (NH)
Martin (NY)	Pickett	Smith, Robert (OR)
Martinez	Porter	Snowe
Matsui	Poshard	Solarz
Mavroules	Price	Solomon
Mazzoli	Quillen	Spence
McCandless	Rangel	Spratt
McCloskey	Ravenel	Stallings
McCollum	Ray	Stangeland
McCrery	Regula	Stark
McCurdy	Rhodes	Stearns
McDade	Richardson	Stenholm
McDermott	Ridge	Stokes
McEwen	Rinaldo	Studds
McGrath	Roberts	Sundquist
McHugh	Robinson	Swift
McMillan (NC)	Roe	Synar
McMillen (MD)	Rogers	Tallon
McNulty	Rohrabacher	Tanner
Meyers	Ros-Lehtinen	Tauke
Mfume	Rose	Tauzin
Michel	Rostenkowski	Taylor
Miller (CA)	Roth	Thomas (CA)
Miller (OH)	Roukema	Thomas (GA)
Miller (WA)	Rowland (CT)	Thomas (WY)
Mineta	Rowland (GA)	Torres
Moakley	Roybal	Torricelli
Molinari	Russo	Towns
Montgomery	Sabo	Traficant
Moody	Saiki	Udall
Moorhead	Sangmeister	Unsoeld
Morella	Sarpalius	Upton
Morrison (CT)	Sawyer	Valentine
Morrison (WA)	Saxton	Vander Jagt
Mrazek	Schaefer	Vucanovich
Murphy	Scheuer	Walgren
Murtha	Schiff	Walker
Nagle	Schneider	Walsh
Natcher	Schroeder	Washington
Neal (MA)	Schuette	Watkins
Neal (NC)	Schulze	Waxman
Nielson	Schumer	Weber
Nowak	Sensenbrenner	Weiss
Oakar	Serrano	Weldon
Oberstar	Sharp	Wheat
Obey	Shaw	Whittaker
Olin	Shays	Whitten
Ortiz	Shumway	Williams
Owens (NY)	Shuster	Wise
Owens (UT)	Sisisky	Wolf
Oxley	Skaggs	Wolpe
Packard	Skeen	Wyden
Pallone	Skelton	Wylie
Panetta	Slattery	Yates
Parker	Slaughter (NY)	Yatron
Pashayan	Slaughter (VA)	Young (AK)
Patterson	Smith (IA)	Young (FL)
Paxon	Smith (NE)
Payne (NJ)	Smith (NJ)
Payne (VA)	Smith (TX)
Pease	Smith (VT)
Pelosi	Smith, Denny (OR)
Perkins

NAYS—8

Boggs	Mollohan	Staggers
Dingell	Penny	Vento
Holloway	Sikorski

NOT VOTING—37

Ackerman	Ford (TN)	Nelson
Akaka	Frost	Parris
Alexander	Huckaby	Pickle
Armey	Jenkins	Pursell
Barnard	Kaptur	Rahall
Barton	Kyl	Ritter
Collins	Leath (TX)	Savage
Cooper	Lehman (CA)	Smith (FL)
Craig	Lightfoot	Stump
Crockett	Lowey (NY)	Traxler
Dwyer	Luken, Thomas	Wilson
Edwards (OK)	Lukens, Donald
Flippo	Myers

□ 1235

Mr. HOLLOWAY changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

Mr. GRAY and Mr. DEWINE changed their vote from "nay" to "yea."

So the motion to instruct was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints the following conferees: Messrs. WHITTEN, NATCHER, SMITH of Iowa, YATES, OBEY, ROYBAL, BEVILL, TRAXLER, MURTHA, LEHMAN of Florida, DIXON, FAZIO, HEFNER, CONTE, MCDADE, MYERS of Indiana, and REGULA, Mrs. SMITH of Nebraska, and Messrs. EDWARDS of Oklahoma, GREEN, and ROGERS.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Chair reserves the right to appoint additional conferees.

There was no objection.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. BILL NELSON

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 3, 1990

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, had I been present, I would have voted "aye" on rollcall Nos. 95 and 96.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

(Mr. MICHEL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I have asked to proceed for 1 minute that I might inquire of the distinguished majority leader the program.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHEL. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

We obviously have finished the business for today and the week.

On Monday, May 7, the House will meet at noon, but there is no legislativs business.

On Tuesday, May 8, the House will meet at noon to consider under suspension seven bills. Recorded votes on suspensions will be postponed until after debate on all suspensions. The suspensions are as follows:

H.R. 2793, establishing a program in the Department of Energy to develop ways of using hydrogen as an energy resource.

H.R. 2813, improving information available to emergency response personnel in the field.

H.R. 3656, Coordinated Clearance and Settlement Act.

H.R. 3657, Securities Market Stabilization Act.

H. Res. . Securities Act Amendments of 1990.

H.R. 237, Biological Weapons Act of 1989.

H. Con. Res. 272, regarding the presentation of a portrait of the Honorable William D. Ford.

On Wednesday, May 9, and Thursday, May 10, the House will meet at 2 p.m. on Wednesday and 11 a.m. on Thursday to consider the following matters:

First, there will be a motion to go to conference on H.R. 3, the Childhood and Development Act of 1989.

Then H.R. 2364, conference report on Amtrak Reauthorization and Improvement Act of 1989, 1 hour of debate.

□ 1240

There is H.R. 770, Family and Medical Leave Act of 1990, subject to a rule, and H.R. 4636, Supplemental Assistance for Emerging Democracies Act of 1990, subject to a rule.

I might add that that final piece of business may or may not be on the schedule depending upon the progress in talks and communications that are going on between the administration and the bipartisan group here in the Congress.

Friday, May 11, the House will not be in session.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman. I was going to inquire on H.R. 4636; the gentleman partially answered my question in that we have not come to any firm conclusion here. I was going to make the request that we, at least in the minority, be given the opportunity to present whatever substitute we might have from the administration if we do not have an accommodation or an agreement. That is probably more than what the gentleman can formally commit himself to, but at least to put the gentleman's side on notice that that is what is going on on the minority leader's side.

Mr. GEPHARDT. I understand.

Mr. MICHEL. Then, too, could the gentleman enlighten me on the parental leave? Is that the real measure that we are going to be considering, H.R. 770, or did I understand that there may be a substitution there?

Mr. GEPHARDT. If the gentleman will yield further, I am sure that, as I understand it, Members will be going to the Committee on Rules asking for substitutes and amendments. I am not prepared at this point to tell the gentleman exactly what that rule will be like, but I am sure there will be many communications between the parties and many Members on putting that rule together, so there is a fair consideration of the bill.

Mr. MICHEL. Then, finally, just before coming over to the office, I saw on my own desk the schedule for the month of May. Have all of the Members been advised now of that schedule of meetings or votes on Monday?

Mr. GEPHARDT. We have published that calendar. It has the usual procedure on all of the weeks except the week prior to the Memorial Day break in which, I think, we may have votes on Monday through Thursday of that week. As the gentleman knows, we have the Clean Air Act coming that we would like to get done before the Memorial Day break, so that could be a very active week prior to breaking.

Mr. MICHEL. Since the gentleman mentioned the Clean Air Act and the week before Memorial Day, is that the likely time now for consideration of clean air, or is that the earliest?

Mr. GEPHARDT. I think that it could come up the week of May 16 at the earliest, and at the latest, the week of the 21st.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished majority leader.

DISPENSING WITH CALENDAR WEDNESDAY BUSINESS ON WEDNESDAY NEXT

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the business in order under the Calendar Wednesday rule be dispensed with on Wednesday next.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY, MAY 7, 1990

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today, it adjourn to meet at noon on Monday next.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

ASIAN-PACIFIC AMERICAN HERITAGE MONTH

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H.R. 3802) designating the month of May as "Asian/Pacific American Heritage Month," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAUGHLIN). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, within that reservation, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. HORTON], the prime sponsor of this legislation.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to be the primary sponsor of H.R. 3802, which calls upon the Congress and the President to set aside the month of May 1990, as Asian-Pacific American Heritage Month.

I am indebted to my colleague, NORMAN Y. MINETA of California, for joining me in this effort. He has been supportive of this legislation from its outset and was an original cosponsor of the first resolution for Heritage Week. As one of his last legislative actions, my good friend, the late Senator Spark Matsunaga, introduced the companion bill, S. 2111, in the U.S. Senate.

With 252 cosponsors, H.R. 3802 would amend Public Law 95–419 and expand the Asian-Pacific American Heritage observance period from a week to a full month.

On June 30, 1977, I had the unique honor and pleasure of introducing House Joint Resolution 540 and later House Joint Resolution 1007, which, for the first time in this Nation's history, asked the Congress and the people of the United States to set aside a period in May as Asian-Pacific American Heritage Week. More than 13 years ago a woman came to my office and told my administrative assistant, Ruby Moy, and me a very compelling and persuasive story. Today, I share the origin of this landmark legislation.

The celebration of Asian-Pacific American Heritage Month has a very deep and personal place for Jeanie Jew and her family. Their story began sometime in the 1800's when a young man, M.Y. Lee, left Toishan, Canton, China, to find a better life in America. Mr. Lee was one of the first Chinese pioneers to help build the Transcontinental Railroad. He later became a prominent California businessman. When the Chinese were having difficulties in Oregon, Mr. Lee traveled to Oregon and was killed during that period of unrest. It was a time of anti-Chinese and anti-Asian sentiment.The revelations about Mr. Lee and the story of Asian Americans led this one woman to believe that not only should Asians understand their own heritage, but that all Americans must know about the contributions and histories of the Asian-Pacific American experience in the United States. Jeanie Jew, the creator of the idea for a heritage month, is the granddaughter of M.Y. Lee, that early pioneer.

The original resolution designated the week beginning May 4 as Asian-Pacific American Heritage Week because that week included two significant occasions in the proud history of Asian Americans. May 10, 1869, or "Golden Spike Day," was the day on which the Transcontinental Railroad was completed, largely by Chinese American pioneers. May 7, 1843, marks the date of the first arrival of the Japanese in the United States. Both dates will fittingly be included in Asian-Pacific American Heritage Month.

I want to commend the two women who made this event possible. Mrs. Jew turned a personal tragedy in her family history into a positive force.

Asian-Pacific American Heritage Month will now be observed by all Americans. I also want to thank Ruby Moy, my administrative assistant, for her efforts to pass this legislation. She holds the highest professional position to a Member of Congress. She is a second generation Asian American.

In 1977, Mrs. Jew and Ms. Moy cofounded the Congressional Asian Pacific Staff Caucus, an organization which collectively worked for the establishment of the first heritage proclamation and supports yearly efforts to perpetuate its recognition. The caucus, a group of professional staff members of Asian descent, periodically discusses and reviews legislation and issues of concern to Asian-Pacific Americans.

Sometime ago, Jeanie Jew discussed the idea of issuing a series of commemorative stamps with several Members of Congress including me. In light of this years historical change to a month-long observance, it is fitting to again request the U.S. Postal Service issue a series of postage stamps commemorating our Nation's Asian-Pacific American heritage. These stamps could depict Heritage Month, individuals, subjects, or places that are significant in Asian-Pacific American history in the United States. As a senior member of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, I urge the Citizens' Stamp Advisory Committee to consider issuing a stamp at the earliest possible date.

I hope my colleagues will join me in supporting these stamps and in recognizing the history and contributions of Asian-Pacific Americans, particularly during Asian-Pacific American Heritage Month.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I do so in order to yield to our colleague, the gentleman from California [Mr. MINETA].

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 3802, legislation which designates May as "Asian-Pacific American Heritage Month."

I would like to thank Mr. SAWYER, chair of the Subcommittee on Census and Population and Mr. RIDGE for their effective leadership in bringing this bill to the House floor today. I would like to express my appreciation to the gentleman from New York [Mr. HORTON] for his tireless efforts on behalf of this legislation.

Our great friend and distinguished colleague, the late Senator Spark Matsunaga, authored this legislation in the other body. This bill is a tribute to Spark's memory and to his achievements as a statesman, an educator, and a patriot.

During the last decade, there has been increasing visibility of the accomplishments of Asian-Pacific Americans which have benefited this great Nation. The designation of this month is a formal recognition of the important role that the Asian-Pacific American experience plays in our country's history and future.

Americans of Asian and Pacific Island ancestry have made many contributions to the rich and diverse tapestry of American culture.

Asian-Pacific Americans have devoted their energies to promoting equity in many important U.S. policies. They have been leaders in issues like civil rights, education, business, hate crimes, and many others, that are not only important to Asian-Pacific Americans but to all Americans.

A dozen years ago, before Congressman HORTON authored the resolution which established Asian-Pacific American Heritage Week, all too many of the outstanding achievements of Asian-Pacific Americans were unknown to most Americans, much less to the many within the diverse Asian-Pacific American communities. Since then, Asian and Pacific Island Americans have gathered strength through sharing our unique insights and experiences with each other. Now, the designation of Asian-Pacific American Heritage Month will allow us to share even more of our heritage and pride with the whole Nation.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

□ 1250

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, continuing my reservation, I yield to the gentleman from American Samoa [Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA].

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I certainly appreciate the opportunity to say a few words in full support of this legislation. As an original cosponsor of this legislation, I want to commend the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. HORTON] for his leadership and sensitivity toward the Asian-Pacific American community and for the leadership that he has taken in bringing about the successful conclusion of this proposed legislation, H.R. 3802. Mr. Speaker, I also want to thank the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RIDGE] for allowing me to speak in support of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, as stated earlier by the gentleman from California [Mr. MINETA], this is certainly a tribute to the distinguished gentleman, the late Senator Spark Matsunaga from the State of Hawaii, who certainly has made an outstanding contribution to our Nation, and especially to bringing about a positive recognition of the contributions that the Asian-Pacific American community has provided for our country.

Mr. Speaker, it is noted that the Asian-Pacific region of the world numbers in excess of 60 percent of the world's population, something that our country certainly needs to pay a little more attention to as to its economic, social, and political problems, and especially as it affects our economic and strategic interests in this important part of the world. Mr. Speaker, I submit the Asian-Pacific community throughout this great Nation of ours, are very proud to be Americans. Despite Kipling's pessimistic view that East and West will never meet, Mr. Speaker, I submit our country is probably the only nation in the world that at least attempts to bring East and West together. And it is by this integration process that will only add to our Nation's greatness and strength.

Mr. Speaker, I again want to commend the gentleman from New York [Mr. HORTON] for sponsoring this legislation, and would hope that our colleagues will support it.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, continuing my reservation of objection, I just want to echo the congratulations of the previous speakers in lauding the work of the gentleman from New York [Mr. HORTON] in promoting this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MCNULTY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

H.R. 3802

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Public Law 95-419 be amended by—

(1) inserting "annually" in between "proclaim" and "the";

(2) striking "seven-day period beginning on May 4, 1979" and inserting "31-day period beginning May 1, 1990";

(3) striking "Week" and inserting "Month";

(4) inserting "annually" in between "to issue" and "a proclamation";

(5) striking "seven-day period beginning on May 4, 1979" and inserting "31-day period beginning May 1, 1990";

(6) striking "Week" and inserting "Month";

(7) striking "week" and inserting "month";

(8) inserting "programs," in between "appropriate" and "ceremonies".

AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE OFFERED BY MR. KANJORSKI

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by Mr. KANJORSKI:

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

SECTION 1. ASIAN/PACIFIC AMERICAN HERITAGE MONTH.

The text of Public Law 95-419 after the resolving clause is amended to read as follows: "That the President may issue a proclamation designating May 1990 as 'Asian/Pacific American Heritage Month' and calling on the people of the United States, especially the educational community, to observe such month with appropriate ceremonies, programs, and activities.".

SEC. 2. CONFORMING AMENDMENT.

The title to Public Law 95-419 is amended to read as follows: "Joint resolution authorizing the President to designate May 1990 as 'Asian/Pacific American Heritage Month'.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KANJORSKI].

The amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

TITLE AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. KANJORSKI

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the title.

The Clerk read as follows:

Title amendment offered by Mr. KANJORSKI: Amend the title to read as follows: "An Act to designate May 1990 as 'Asian/Pacific American Heritage Month.' "

The title amendment was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include therein extraneous material on H.R. 3802.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 4641

(Mrs. BENTLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to include extraneous matter.)

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my name be removed as a cosponsor of H.R. 4641.

Although the legislative intent of this bill is excellent, provisions in the legislation calling for sanctions against India could have a negative impact on current negotiations between India and Amnesty International.

I insert into the RECORD a letter from Amnesty International's position on this issue.

AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL USA,
Washington, DC, April 25, 1990.

Hon. THOMAS S. FOLEY,
U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN FOLEY: Amnesty International USA has received a number of inquiries regarding a proposed bill by Congressman Dan Burton that would require the President to report to Congress whether the government of India is implementing its policy of prohibiting representatives of Amnesty International and other human rights organizations from visiting India to gather information and monitor the human rights situation.

In the event that the President reports that India is continuing to bar access to Amnesty International and other human rights organizations, Congressman Burton's bill would terminate all non-humanitarian aid to India given under chapter 1 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961.

Amnesty International wishes to go on record as stating that we played no role in the drafting of this proposed legislation. The policies and practices of Amnesty International are governed by our Mandate. The Amnesty Mandate prohibits us from supporting or opposing any economic sanctions that are linked to an improvement in the human rights situation in any country.

Similar legislation was proposed last year by Congressman Herger and Amnesty made clear its position on sanctions at that time. We cannot in any way support such a bill.

Amnesty International has been seeking a constructive dialogue with the government of India on the question of access and the possibility of Amnesty sending a mission to India. Our latest request is still before the government. We trust that the new Indian government will recognize that Amnesty is a non-partisan organization that seeks the protection of all people irrespective of race, ethnic origin or political belief.

Amnesty International has concerns about serious human rights violations in India which we wish to discuss with the Indian government. It is important for the government of India to recognize that Amnesty International has always treated India in the same nonpartisan and objective manner in which it deals with all governments.

Sincerely,

JAMES O'DEA,
Director.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

HOME CARE TAX PROTECTION FOR PERSONS WITH DISABILITIES ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAUGHLIN). Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. TAUKE] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. TAUKE. Mr. Speaker, yesterday I joined with four of my colleagues from Iowa in introducing legislation to protect a deserving group of Iowans with disabilities. Our objective is to improve the quality of their care while holding down the cost of such care.

H.R. 4722, the Home Care Tax Protection for Persons with Disabilities Act, would include from gross income amounts received under a State in-home care program by an individual who cares for a family member with disabilities.

Last month, several constituents alerted me to a significant tax problem which threatens the continued in-home care of their relatives.

The Internal Revenue Service wants these Iowans to pay back taxes on State payments they received to care for members of their families with disabilities. Although IRS officials in Iowa told me their intent was to go after nonrelated care providers who were not reporting this income, through inadvertence, the payments to related care providers came up in a computer printout. Nonetheless, IRS has declined a suggestion that the special examination process be restricted to its intended targets.

Frankly, Mr. Speaker, this IRS action is an example of bureaucratic excess, which threatens to institutionalize scores of Iowans with disabilities, many of whom are struggling to remain home with their families.

I asked IRS in March to work with me to find an administrative solution to this problem. So far IRS in Iowa and Washington has not been forthcoming with a favorable response.

The problem stems from Iowa's "In-Home Health Related Care" effort. This program in part provides for payments to individuals whose physical or mental health prevents independent self-care. Some beneficiaries rely on family members for help, rather than hiring doctors or nurses, or entering institutions.

IRS, arguing that these payments or other relatives are providing contractural services within their family, is trying to tax those State payments as income, and also subject them to self-employment tax. This assistance is limited to $368 per month and is not considered taxable income under Iowa law.

The care includes catheterization, dressings changes, monitoring medications and vital signs, helping with bath, hygiene and toileting, and performing incidental household services essential to health care at home and necessary to prevent or postpone institutionalization.

Federal tax policy should not require people who provide continuing care to relatives with disabilities to report such payments for tax purposes.

Therefore, we are introducing this legislation so that the law would be unequivocal and so our revenue laws would recognize the value we place on family members caring for each other. I appreciate the cooperation of my colleagues from Iowa, Congressmen FRED GRANDY, JIM LEACH, JIM LIGHTFOOT, and NEAL SMITH, who have joined me as original cosponsors of this bill, and Senator CHARLES GRASSLEY, who introduced a companion bill in the other body.

The Tax Code already excludes from taxation welfare benefits and other payments for sickness and injury. These families should not be penalized just because the State assistance payments are staying within the family.

An amendment to the 1986 tax act specifically excluded State payments for foster care assistance in the provider's home. In addition to the general foster care payments, "difficulty-of-care payments" are also not included in income. These are additional payments made to foster-care providers of physically, mentally, or emotionally handicapped individuals by a State. No stretch of the imagination is required for blood relatives to be treated comparable to foster families receiving State assistance for handicapped individuals.

This legislation would treat this type of payment the same as State payments for foster care and other assistance: exclude it from the provider's income when within the family. And the bill would make the exclusion retroactive to provide relief for the targets of the IRS collection effort.

I believe this approach resolves a policy conflict between families and taxes in favor of the family. IRS has told me that not taxing this income for assistance within a family would be unfair to those professional health care providers who assist nonrelated clients. However, Federal tax policy already reflects protected treatment for families in such matters as exemptions and the exclusion for foster care assistance, for example.

Enacting H.R. 4722 will also save money. The alternative costs of institutionalization, just for the 59 families in Iowa that have been identified so far, have been quoted as ranging from $4,000 to $9,000 per month, or $48,000 to $108,000 per year. For these 59 families alone, that's an estimated $4.6 million per year that would have to spend on institutional care. What these families are asking instead is that they be permitted to continue to care for their relatives in their own homes and not have the IRS deem that the disabled relatives have supposedly hired them to provide this assistance.

Without this legislation, the Federal tax as collected from these families, which includes both income taxes and self-employment taxes, will not exceed $112,800. This estimate presumes that all beneficiaries are in the 28 percent tax bracket, which is probably quite a stretch for many of them. The trade-off of $112 thousand in tax dollars to save millions of dollars for institutional care seems quite reasonable.

The self-employment tax is being assessed because IRS considers the relative as care provider to be an independent contractor, rather than an employee of the beneficiary who has some disability. An IRS group manager to one of my constituents: "Our position is that the taxpayer is in the trade or business or providing a service to an individual." I'm ashamed that a Federal official would describe the relationship between a parent and child in such terms.

Mr. Speaker, it is an affront to America's concept of family that IRS considers this care which a parent provides to a child with disabilities to be a trade or business taxable or not.

In addition, the provider as the financial guardian of the relative with disabilities is also supposed to issue an annual tax statement to him or herself for this payment.

Until recently, both the Iowa Department of Human Services and the Federal Internal Revenue Service have advised beneficiaries and their families that these assistance payments are not taxable. Perhaps not surprisingly, IRS not takes the position that its staff would not give such advice. However, IRS has told several constituents that penalties for failure to pay these taxes in the past would be waived, since there is no apparent willful failure to file. In fact, the effort by recipients to inquire about tax liability demonstrates good faith efforts to comply with the law.

I still hope to work for an administration solution to this problem. However, Mr. Speaker, the "Home Care Tax Protection for Persons with Disabilities Act" is an appropriate and compassionate solution to an inappropriate and frankly counterproductive policy problem. I urge my colleagues to support prompt enactment of this legislation.

THE "CITIZEN SOLDIER": KEYSTONE TO OUR MILITARY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I want to share with my colleagues a series of articles which appeared in the Roll Call newspaper in the April 30, 1990 edition in a special policy brief, titled "National Guard and Reserves in a Changing World." This brief was developed to describe the roles and missions of the Reserve components and to educate the readers. I wrote the lead article in hopes of generating interest by the readers to learn more about the Guard and Reserve. I commend my colleagues to read these articles to gain a better appreciation of the Guard and Reserve. Today I'm sharing the lead article and over the next few weeks, I will share the remaining articles by the distinguished authors who are Members of Congress, members of the military, or private citizens.

THE "CITIZEN-SOLDIER": KEYSTONE TO OUR MILITARY

(By Rep. Sonny Montgomery)

Since 1636 when settlers organized themselves into companies of militia in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, the "citizen-soldier" has been the keystone of our nation's military.

The aversion to a large standing army came from the colonial extension of early English traditions of providing for the common defense through citizen-soldiers.

In the past 350-plus years the militia system has developed into the Guard and Reserve that now provide substantial capability in meeting worldwide commitments. The modern National Guard and Reserve Forces have evolved as full partners in the Total Force of the U.S. Military.

This militia system has fulfilled two main functions. The initial function was primarily to serve as a state National Guard, available to the state governor to protect life, property, and maintain public safety.

The second was to serve as an augmentation force available for mobilization in times of national emergency. Since the early 1970s, emphasis has been on mobilization.

Since the 1970s, the Guard and Reserve have taken on new significance with the promulgation of the Total Force Policy. In this policy, emphasis is to be given to all components whether Active, Guard, or Reserve to provide a cost effective mix of forces to meet our national security goals.

In practical terms, this meant providing the Guard and Reserve with equipment, personnel, incentives, and training so that they could meet the readiness goals set by the military services.

National emphasis has allowed the Guard and Reserve to capitalize on increased funds and modern equipment, thus enabling them to meet the challenges of early deployment missions and any new roles they are assigned.

Events in Eastern Europe and the ongoing debate about our federal deficit have triggered an effort to redefine the Total Force Policy.

Attempts to adjust a policy that has stood the test of two decades should review the role of the Guard and Reserve prior to 1970: How successful have they been under the Total Force Policy?

Based on that review and in line with our predictions of future requirements, we can determine future roles and missions for the Guard and Reserve.

Today the Guard and Reserve provide tough meaningful training on top-of-the-line equipment. They are manned by the brightest, most capable troops in the history of our military.

No longer are the Reserves in a reinforcing role. The Guard and Reserve have more than 50 percent of the Army's combat missions, 33 percent of the Air Force combat missions, and over 20 percent of the Navy/Marine Corps combat capability.

Another way to put it is this: We cannot go into any level of conflict without some involvement by the Guard and Reserve.

The same circumstances that promulgated the Total Force Policy by Secretaries of Defense Laird and Schlesinger are driving the decision-making process today. The Total Force Policy is sound and should be the foundation for force realignment and new roles and missions for the force as a whole.

What does the future hold? As the Active components are drawn down, we must consider transferring more missions to the Guard and Reserve. We must maintain our maximum capability for the least possible cost consistent with our overall defense strategy. In this context the Guard and Reserve are the best buy for our defense dollar.

So what do we do? We must take a hard critical look at what our future force mix should be, commit the necessary resources—people, training, and equipment—and execute a viable plan to meet our future defense requirements.

To meet Guard and Reserve requirements, the Guard and Reserve must be structured, equipped, and trained just like the Active component and fully integrated into every contingency and mobilization plan.

As we have for the last 350 years, we must take full advantage of our citizen-soldiers. They have been truly "twice the citizens."

DEMOCRATIC POLAND CELEBRATES 199TH POLISH CONSTITUTION DAY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KLECZKA] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. KLECZKA. Mr. Speaker, today marks the 199th anniversary of the Polish Constitution declared on May 3, 1791, by King Stanislas Augustus and members of the Polish legislature, the Sejm.

This new legal code was an attempt to replace Poland's medieval political system with a modern constitutional monarchy and a more effective parliament. The new law, adapted from Western constitutional principles—including the American Constitution approved only 4 years earlier in 1787—was greeted by weeks of celebration throughout Poland's cities and towns and by acclaim from European and American statesmen.

Just like the rise of the courageous Solidarity trade union in the 1980's, this inspiring document marked a major advance for democracy and political unity in Poland. The new Constitution's ultimate goal, to create a stable and well-organized government to protect Poland from Russian expansionism, is similar to the aspirations of Poland's newly elected leaders who are striving to free their nation from the legacy of over 40 years of Soviet domination.

In 1793, just 2½ years after the declaration of the new Constitution, Poland was partitioned between Russia and Prussia. In contrast, today, Poland stands free, whole, and proud although the Polish nation continues its struggle to revive democracy, maintain its independence, and safeguard its borders against its powerful German and Russian neighbors.

While the United States unfortunately was unable to help Poland significantly in 1791, we are about to respond much more helpfully nearly 200 years later. The generous Support for Eastern European Democracy [SEED] Act, enacted into law last year, was one example of how America can share its technological and economic advances with Poland and other former Soviet bloc nations in Eastern Europe.

Mr. Speaker, on this 199th anniversary of Poland's first democratic constitution, I urge my congressional colleagues to continue to support Poland's transition to a fully democratic political system and a free-market economy.

POLISH CONSTITUTION DAY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, today marks the 199th anniversary of Poland's May 3, 1791, Constitution, and this Saturday, it will be my pleasure and honor to join with many other public officials, civic and community leaders, and officers of the Polish National Alliance who will be attending the 99th annual Chicago Polish Constitution Day parade, commemorating this milestone in the history of the Polish people.

The parade is sponsored by the Polish National Alliance, under the able leadership of my friend, Edward J. Moskal, president of the PNA; and the parade's chairperson, Helen M. Szymanowicz, who is also vice president of the PNA, is again working hard to ensure that this year's parade is an overwhelming success.

The Polish National Alliance has maintained an outstanding record of achievement, and has contributed greatly to the strength of America. I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate all of the officers and the members of this fine organization who have worked diligently on behalf of the Polish community and on behalf of the people of Poland.

The parade will step off at 12 noon on Dearborn Street and Wacker Drive in Chicago, and proceed to Van Buren Street, and will be televised live on WLS–TV in Chicago. The theme of this year's parade is "Freedom for All Nations," and will include many colorful floats, marching units, and drum and bugle corps.

The drafting and adoption of the Constitution of 1791 by patriotic Polish leaders marked a turning point in the history of Poland. By creating this significant document, the Poles effected a peaceful change in the structure of their Government without resorting to bloodshed and violence, which accompanied the French Revolution. With the adoption of this Constitution, the Polish leadership led their countrymen from the feudal ways of the Middle Ages to the concepts of individual liberty and responsibility which were characteristic of our own American Constitution of 1787.

During the past year, we have again witnessed a peaceful revolution in the history of the Polish people. Through democratic elections, the Polish people have ousted their Communist oppressors, and have created a new Solidarity-led government, embodying the hopes, aspirations, and democratic values of the May 3, 1791, Constitution.

To help our Polish friends in this effort, I was glad to sponsor legislation to provide assistance in restructuring Poland's political and economic systems, and to reconfirm the inviolability and security of existing borders between Poland and Germany. As a Member of the Congress, I shall continue to do all in my power to make sure that the new democratic Polish Government is secure and will prosper.

Mr. Speaker, on the 199th anniversary of the May 3 Constitution, I join with Polish Americans in the 11th Congressional District of Illinois, which I am honored to represent, and Americans of Polish descent all over this country, in commemorating this stirring event in the history of the Polish people. The May 3 Constitution serves as a source of strength and inspiration to the people of Poland, as they continue to rebuild a new democratic Poland, committed to ideals of justice, self-determination, and freedom.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE BUDGET REGARDING CURRENT LEVEL OF SPENDING AND REVENUES FOR FISCAL YEAR 1990

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Committee on the Budget and as chairman of the Committee on the Budget, pursuant to the procedures of the Committee on the Budget and section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended, I am submitting for printing in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD the official letter to the Speaker advising him of the current level of spending, credit, and revenues for fiscal year 1990. This is the second report of the second session of the 101st Congress.

The term "current level" refers to the estimated amount of budget authority, outlays, credit authority, and revenues that are available—or will be used—for the full fiscal year in question based only on enacted law.

Current level reports are intended to provide Members information to compare enacted spending and revenues with the aggregate ceilings on budget authority, outlays, and revenues established in a budget resolution, and also to compare enacted legislation with the allocations of new discretionary budget authority, entitlement authority, and credit authority made to a committee pursuant to subsection 302(a) of the Budget Act. This report compares the spending, credit, and revenue levels in current level with those assumed in the budget resolution for fiscal year 1990 (H. Con. Res. 106), adopted on May 18, 1989.

Current level reports provide information that is necessary for enforcing section 311 of the Budget Act. Section 311(a) prohibits the consideration of a spending or revenue measure if the adoption of that measure would cause the ceiling on total new budget authority or total outlays set in the budget resolution for a fiscal year to be exceeded or would cause revenues to be less than the appropriate level of revenues set forth in the budget resolution.

Section 311(b) provides an exception to the 311(a) point of order for measures that would breach the ceilings on total spending set forth in the budget resolution but would not cause a committee to exceed its "appropriate allocation" of discretionary spending made pursuant to section 302(a) of the Budget Act. Such an exception was first provided by the budget resolution for fiscal year 1985 (H. Con. Res. 280, 98th Cong.). The exception was made permanent by the amendments to the Budget Act included in the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (Pub. L. 99–177, Gramm-Rudman–Hollings). This exception is intended to protect a committee that has stayed within its allocation of discretionary budget authority and new entitlement authority from points of order if the total spending ceilings have been breached for reasons outside of its control. For fiscal year 1990, the 302(a) allocations to House committees made pursuant to the conference report on House Concurrent Resolution 106 were printed in House Report 101–50, May 18, 1989.

Section 311(c) of the Budget Act provides that, for purposes of enforcing section 311, the levels of new budget authority, entitlement authority, outlays, and revenues shall be determined on the basis of estimates made by the Committee on the Budget. Current level reports represent partial fulfillment of this enforcement responsibility of the Budget Committee by providing both estimates of enacted aggregate spending and revenues, and, for purposes of determining the applicability of the section 311(b) exception, estimates of the relationship between the budgetary effect of enacted legislation within a committee's jurisdiction and the allocation of spending authority made to that committee.

The estimates in this report are based on economic and technical assumptions in place at the time of the adoption of the budget resolution, House Concurrent Resolution 106, on May 18, 1989. This is intended to protect committees which acted on the basis of the assumptions of the budget resolution from changes in economic and technical factors over which they have no control. Unless the Congress adopts a subsequent budget resolution for a fiscal year that alters the assumptions concerning legislative actions, committees should be able to expect that measures that conform with the budget resolution will not be subject to points of order for violation of the Budget Act. To do otherwise and base enforcement on constantly changing economic and technical estimates would seriously disrupt the legislative process, penalize committees that are unable to complete work on legislation within a short period after adoption of a budget resolution, and undermine respect for budget enforcement procedures.

In addition to section 311, the Budget Act contains another point of order that requires Budget Committee estimates for enforcement. Section 302(f)(1) of the Budget Act prohibits the consideration of a measure providing new budget authority, new entitlement authority, or new credit authority if the adoption of that measure would cause a committee to exceed its allocation of new spending or credit authority made pursuant to subsection 302(b) of the Budget Act. The 302(b) allocation is a subdivision of the new spending, new entitlement, and new credit authority allocated to a committee pursuant to section 302(a), among either the subcommittees of that committee or among programs over which the committee has jurisdiction. This point of order was added to the Budget Act by the amendments included in the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985.

Section 302(g) provides that the enforcement of section 302 shall be based on estimates of spending and credit authority made by the Committee on the Budget. The Budget Committee fulfills this responsibility by providing, as necessary, a separate section 302 status report to the Speaker.

For information purposes only, current level reports will continue to include a comparison of the budget and credit authority divided among the Appropriations subcommittees by that committee's 302(b) division with the actual enacted spending and credit legislation within each subcommittee's jurisdiction.

As chairman of the Budget Committee, I intend to keep the House informed regularly on the status of the current level.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
COMMITTEE ON THE BUDGET,
Washington, DC, May 2, 1990.

Hon. THOMAS S. FOLEY,
Speaker, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: On January 30, 1976, the Committee on the Budget outlined the procedure which it had adopted in connection with its responsibilities under section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended, to provide estimates of the current level of revenues and spending.

I am herewith transmitting the status report under House Concurrent Resolution 106, the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 1990.

In the House of Representatives, the procedural situation with regard to the spending ceilings (total new budget authority and total outlays) and the revenue floor is affected by section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended by Public Law 99-177. Section 311(a) prohibits the consideration of a spending or revenue measure which would cause the ceiling on total new budget authority or total outlays set in the budget resolution for a fiscal year to be exceeded or would cause total revenues to be less than the appropriate level set in the budget resolution. Section 311(b) provides an exception to the 311(a) point of order for measures which would breach the ceilings on total spending in the budget resolution but would not cause a committee to exceed its "appropriate allocation" of new discretionary budget authority or new entitlement authority under section 302(a) of the Budget Act.

The intent of section 311(b) of the Budget Act is to protect a committee that has stayed within its spending authority allocations—new discretionary budget authority or new entitlement authority—from points of order if the total spending ceilings have been breached for reasons outside of its control. The 302(a) allocations to House committees made pursuant to the conference report on House Concurrent Resolution 106 were printed in the joint explanatory statement of the Committee of Conference in H. Rept. 101-50. (May 15, 1989).

The enclosed tables compare enacted legislation to each committee's 302(a) allocation of discretionary budget authority, new entitlement authority, new direct loan obligations and new primary loan guarantee commitments. The estimates of spending and revenues for purposes of the application of points of order under the Budget Act are based upon the economic and technical assumptions underlying the fiscal year 1990 budget resolution, H. Con. Res. 106.

Sincerely,

LEON E. PANETTA,
Chairman.

Enclosures.

REPORT TO THE SPEAKER OF THE U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FROM THE COMMITTEE ON THE BUDGET ON THE STATUS OF THE FISCAL YEAR 1990 CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET ADOPTED IN H. CON. RES. 106, REFLECTING COMPLETED ACTION AS OF MAY 1, 1990

[In millions of dollars]

	Budget authority	Outlays	Revenues
Appropriate level	1,329,400	1,165,200	1,065,500
Current level	1,326,993	1,171,407	1,060,266
Amount under ceilings	2,407
Amount over ceilings		6,207
Amount under floor			5,234
Amount over floor

BUDGET AUTHORITY

Any measure which provides budget or entitlement authority and which is not included in the current level estimate and that exceeds $2,407 million in budget authority for fiscal year 1990, if adopted and enacted, would cause the appropriate level of budget authority for that year as set forth in H. Con. Res. 106 to be exceeded.

OUTLAYS

Any measure which provides budget or entitlement authority that increases outlays and which is not included in the current level estimate for fiscal 1990, if adopted and enacted, would cause the appropriate level of outlays for that year as set forth in H. Con. Res. 106 to be exceeded.

REVENUES

Any measure that would result in a revenue loss which is not included in the current level revenue estimate for fiscal year 1990, if adopted and enacted, would cause revenues to be less than the appropriate level for that year as set forth in H. Con. Res. 106.

FISCAL YEAR 1990 BUDGET AUTHORITY—COMPARISON OF CURRENT LEVEL AND BUDGET RESOLUTION ALLOCATION BY COMMITTEE PURSUANT TO SEC. 302

[In millions of dollars]

House committee	Current level budget authority
Agriculture	(+604)
Appropriation [1]	(+1,746)
Armed Services	(+177)
Banking, Finance, and Urban Affairs	(+3,491)
District of Columbia
Education and Labor
Energy and Commerce	(+331)
Foreign Affairs
Government Operations
House Administration	(+4)
Interior and Insular Affairs	(+205)
Judiciary
Merchant Marine and Fisheries	(+200)
Post Office and Civil Service	(−330)
Public Works and Transportation
Science and Technology
Small Business
Veterans' Affairs
Ways and Means	(−7,695)
Unassigned (Sequestration)	(−4,288)

[1] See next table for detail.

Committees are over (+) or under (−) their 302(a) allocation for "discretionary action".

FISCAL YEAR 1990 HOUSE APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE DISCRETIONARY ACTION—COMPARISION OF CURRENT LEVEL AND BUDGET RESOLUTION SUBDIVISIONS OF THE HOUSE APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE PURSUANT TO SECTION 302

[In millions of dollars]

House Appropriations Subcommittee	Current level budget authority	Direct loans	Primary loan guarantees
Commerce, State, Justice	(−45)	(−32)	(+806)
Defense	(−141)
District of Columbia	(−2)
Energy and Water	(−38)
Foreign Operations		(−31)	(+1,959)
Interior
Labor, HHS, Education	(−1,384)
Legislative Branch	(−54)
Military Construction
Rural Development and Agriculture		(−71)
Transportation	(+2,113)	(−3)
Treasury, Postal Service	(+202)
VA/HUD/Independent Agencies	(+1,095)
Total	(+1,746)	(−137)	(+2,765)

Subcommittees are over (+) or under (−) their 302(b) subdivisions for "discretionary action".

FISCAL YEAR 1990—ALLOCATION OF NEW ENTITLEMENT AUTHORITY [NEA] PURSUANT TO SECTION 302

[In millions of dollars]

Committee	Allocation	Reported [1]	Enacted [2]	Enacted over (+)/ under (−) allocation
Agriculture	−600	−1,740	−86	+514
Appropriations		+1,676	+1,676	+1,676
Armed Services		+1,953	+2,060	+2,060
Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs	+399	+1,000	+2,000	+1,601
Education and Labor	+15	−24	−25	−40
Energy and Commerce	+200	+256	+151	−49
Interior and Insular Affairs		+205	+205	+205
Post Office and Civil Service	−550	−700	−745	−195
Veterans' Affairs	+457	+453	+458	+1
Ways and Means	−2,700	−4,278	−4,800	−2,100

[1] These figures are used for 401(b)(2) of the Budget Act.
[2] These figures are used for 302(f) points of order.

The figures for the Armed Services and Appropriations Committees represent the full costs of the January 3.6 percent pay raise for Federal military and civilian personnel respectively. The pay raise was assumed in the budget resolution, but New Entitlement Authority [NEA] was not allocated to any committee because the budget resolution assumed that the pay raise would be achieved through administrative action.

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, DC, May 2, 1990.

Hon. LEON E. PANETTA,
Chairman, Committee on the Budget, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Pursuant to section 308(b) and in aid of section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act, as amended, this letter and supporting detail provide an up-to-date tabulation of the current levels of new budget authority, estimated outlays, estimated revenues, and direct and guaranteed loan levels in comparison with the appropriate levels for those items contained in the 1990 Concurrent Resolution on the Budget (H. Con. Res. 106). This report, for fiscal year 1990, is tabulated as of close of business May 1, 1990. A summary of this tabulation follows:

[In millions of dollars]

	Current level	Budget resolution H.Con.Res. 106	Current level +/— resolution
Budget authority	1,326,993	1,329,400	—2,407
Outlays	1,171,407	1,165,200	6,207
Revenues	1,060,266	1,065,500	—5,234
Direct loan obligations	19,118	19,300	—212
Guaranteed loan commitments	114,701	107,300	7,401

Since my last report, dated February 22, 1990, there has been no action that affects the current level of spending or revenues.

Sincerely,

ROBERT D. REISCHAUER.

PARLIAMENTARIAN STATUS REPORT 101ST CONG., 2D SESS. HOUSE SUPPORTING DETAIL, FISCAL YEAR 1990 AS OF CLOSE OF BUSINESS MAY 1, 1990

[In millions of dollars]

	Budget authority	Outlays	Revenues
I. Enacted in previous sessions:
Revenues			1,059,700
Permanent appropriations and trust funds	937,469	772,111
Other legislation	583,287	591,457	566
Offsetting receipts	—193,106	—193,106
Total enacted in previous sessions	1,327,650	1,170,462	1,060,266
II. Enacted this session
III. Continuing resolution authority
IV. Conference agreements ratified by both Houses
V. Entitlement authority and other mandatory adjustments required to conform with current law estimates in budget resolution:
Salaries of judges	—2	5
Payment to judicial officers' retirement fund	—4	—4
Judicial survivors' annuities fund	—3	—3
Fees and expenses of witnesses	—2
Justice assistance	—4
Fisherman's guaranty fund	1	1
Administration of territories	—1	1
Firefighting adjustments	—624	—192
Federal unemployment benefits (FUBA)	5
Advance to unemployment trust fund	(48)	(48)
Special benefits	—24
Black Lung disability trust fund	52	32
Vaccine improvement program trust fund	7	7
Federal payment to railroad retirement	1	1
Retirement pay and medical benefits	—4
Supplemental security income	263	263
Special benefits, disabled coal miners	21
Grants to states for Medicaid	—907
Payments to health care trust funds	(325)	(325)
Family support payments to States	84	84
Payments to States for AFDC work programs	15	15
Payments to States for foster care	—83
Health professions student loan insurance fund	—25	—7
Guaranteed student loans	—175
College housing and academic facilities loans	—3	—3
Rehabilitation services	—79
Payments to widows and heirs	(1)	(1)
Reimnbursement to the rural electrification fund	111	111
Dairy indemnity program	(1)	(1)
Conservation reserve program	720
Special milk program	—2
Food stamp program	—800
Child nutrition programs	—74
Federal crop insurance corporation fund	(1)
Agriculture credit insurance fund	342
Rural housing insurance fund	(1)

PARLIAMENTARIAN STATUS REPORT 101ST CONG., 2D SESS. HOUSE SUPPORTING DETAIL, FISCAL YEAR 1990 AS OF CLOSE OF BUSINESS MAY 1, 1990—Continued

[In millions of dollars]

	Budget authority	Outlays	Revenues
Rural communications development fund	(1)
Payments to the farm credit system financial assistance corporation	—2
Coast Guard retired pay	—17
Payment to civil service retirement	(84)	(84)
Government payments for annuitants	—3	—2
Readjustment benefits	—62
Compensation	448	398
Pensions	—62
Burial benefits	—4
Loans guaranty revolving fund	238	238
Total entitlement authority	—657	945
Total current level as of May 1, 1990	1,326,993	1,171,407	1,060,266
1990 budget resolution H. Con. Res. 116	1,329,400	1,165,200	1,065,500
Amount remaining:
Over budget resolution		6,207
Under budget resolution	2,407		5,234

[1] Less than $500 thousand.

Notes.—Numbers may not add due to rounding. Amounts shown in parentheses are interfund transactions that do not add to totals.

ISSUES OF CONCERN FOR AMERICA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. DORNAN of California. Mr. Speaker, with this early adjournment of the House, just barely after 1 o'clock, only 10:05 in California time, 8:05, early morning in Hawaii and Alaska, I wanted to take this opportunity to cover several subjects. I was unable to address these subjects in the very brief and exciting 1-minute speeches that serve as a steam pressure valve for a lot of our feelings here in the House. We restricted them the other morning, so I am going to take the opportunity here in these very rare special orders to cover several subjects that have been burning inside of me, frankly, the last month. So I want to share them with you, and through you to the American people.

By the way, a little piece of housekeeping, Mr. Speaker, that I promised myself that I would mention at the beginning of any special order. Because of some mail that I get that is what I call sympathy mail, where people will write in and say, "Congressman, we appreciated your remarks on the floor; we agree or disagree with you, but we really felt bad that there is an empty chamber, that no one was listening, except for me."

It is a rather vain thing to think that they are the only people tuned in to the proceedings of the House, as it is extended all the way to Guam, and through cable television to the hotels in Switzerland and Beijing, the Caribbean Islands, the Central American nations. I have watched the House floor, in those locations, sometimes when I have been on a congressional trip. The whole world is actually tuned in to the U.S. Senate and this great deliberative body, and the number now is up to, on C-SPAN alone, Mr. Speaker, about 1 million viewers.

Why do we pan an empty chamber to create that feeling of pseudo-embarrassment for the viewer? It was instituted two Speakers ago by a delightful, colorful friend of all of ours, the great Tip O'Neill of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. But he did it to get at a young Congressman who was very scholarly in this well, carrying the battle to the majority that our minority or Republican rights were being trampled upon.That Speaker retired. There has been another Speaker in the interim, and that young Republican is not so young anymore. He is the esteemed and distinguished BOB WALKER. So to get at BOB, Tip said let us pan the empty Chamber and try and embarrass people that nobody is listening to him.

Mr. Speaker, through you to the million people that follow the proceedings of their Government, it is a growing audience, here are some subjects I intend to touch on today.

Lithuania. The Hilter-Stalin Pact and the Soviet massacre of almost 15,000 Polish officers, politicians, and dignitaries in the forests of Poland, and Byelorussia, and maybe even further to the east in the Siberian gulag camps of Stalin Russia, and they are still in existence to this day.

Another subject that I mentioned in my 1-minute speech, when we go from the international scence, which seems to be coming the way of freedom, liberty, democracy, we have to think of how are we doing on the streets of America. How are we doing in our streets, our mean streets, and the answer is not too good, because the death toll mounts regularly in our streets. The corruption of the public marketplace by pornographers and child molesters and the sleazy, under-the-rock part, dark side of freedom run wild, we are not doing too well there. And I want to reiterate the story of Jim Evans, Jimmy Evans in Alabama, a district attorney of the 15th Judicial District of the great State of Alabama who has taken on the pornographers of the world who show their ugly, sick, perverted wares through the modern technology of communications. They bounce their triple X films off satellites where they rent time, and is relayed into all of our 50 States. This courageous district attorney of one of our States that only has seven Congressmen, this decent young law enforcement officer said: "Enough."

What embarrasses me is he is a bachelor. He is working off a sense of common decency, and what Western civilization is supposed to be. He does not even have the five children I have, or many of us have, or the seven grandchildren with an eighth on the way, or like two of our colleagues, the gentleman from California [Mr. PACKARD], 23 grandchildren, and my good friend, the gentleman from Utah, HOWARD NIELSON, 26 grandkids and counting, 2 more on the way. That is a flesh and blood extension into the future, and we can no longer expect a sociological support system out there in the malls, the movies that our kids are subjected to, afternoon television, in open, free television, prime time at night. But the ugliest obscenity of all is the hard core, woman-degrading quadruple X. I will elaborate on that just a bit.

The third category is I would like to talk about Planned Parenthood and the National Abortion Rights Action League [NARAL]. These two groups take offense to bishops in our county, who try and use modern advertising skills, to explain to this Nation why it is intrinsically evil and a moral outrage to kill 1,600,000 babies in their mothers' wombs in this country, and how Planned Parenthood has given up any pretense of being a birth control organization. Planned Parenthood has flat out become the Nation's biggest, most powerful abortion-pushing operation for this multibillion-dollar operation. They have funded a candidate against me in my district. This candidate claims she has pulled out of the race because she is the spokesman for Planned Parenthood in southern California, or at least in Orange County and San Bernadino County. But she is endorsed by the Democratic Party structure, and she will win the primary. Then lo and behold, she will make an announcement that she has won the primary without campaigning, and that she had withdrawn because she did not want to be the Planned Parenthood candidate. But she will take a leave of absence from Planned Parenthood, and then on the lone issue of abortion she will proceed to try and unseat yours truly, Congressman ROBERT DORNAN of the 38th Congressional District of the State of California. If my staff can get it over here through our excellent mercurial page system, I will hold up the full-page ad that this woman as the public relations head for Planned Parenthood in San Bernadino and Orange County, devised. I looked at an ad Planned Parenthood constructed that began last November, and wondered if I was being too conspiratorial to assume that it was part of their master plan to enter the primary process against me, and then withdraw so that she would not have to give up her job through the months of March, April, and May. Then on June 5, when she wins the primary because her name is on the ballot, she will go into her high-gear operation with the collusion of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee in this town, and all of that big abortion money. My Democratic colleagues think that abortion is the big slam-dunk issue where they are going to pick up another 20 to 50 seats. They have misread the American people if they think that America wants abortion on demand for the most trivial of reasons throughout 9 months.

□ 1310

So we will discuss Planned Parenthood. Then I will close, related to that, with a little discussion about a group called ACT-UP. This is the most violent-oriented homosexual activist group in the country that defamed and desecrated the cathedral in New York where I was baptized in May 1933, where my parents were married in June 1921. I am talking about the incomparable Gothic beautiful cathedral paid for by the dimes of Irish and Italian immigrants in New York City, which was originally built out in the country and which is now midtown Manhattan. I am speaking of St. Patrick's Cathedral.

ACT-UP, the homosexual activist group, was spoken to by people from the National Institutes of Health. I am going to read what was in a British publication. I refuse to accept it on its face because it is too horrible to believe, too Frankensteinish in concept, but according to this British magazine called Nature People, doctors from NIH, paid for with your Federal tax dollars, told this group, ACT-UP, that their best hope for a cure was fetal tissue. This was 2 months before ACT-UP desecrated St. Patrick's Cathedral, spit out or tore up or threw at Cardinal O'Connor several communion hosts, which we Catholics believe is the body and blood of Jesus Christ, our Savior, 2 months before they performed this obscenity at St. Patrick's Cathedral. These homosexuals activists were told by an NIH doctor that the best hope for a cure for them is using live fetal tissue, tissue taken from babies extracted from their mothers' wombs before they are killed, or allowed to die. They can use this tissue and maybe cure AIDS.

Imagine telling people on the verge of a ghastly death where they will shrivel up into their prenatal position, their body covered with every type of opportunistic cancer, particularly Karposi's sarcoma, big black open sores, where they will get dementia attacks upon their brain, heart failure, lung attacks, pulmonary problems galore. Imagine telling these people, "The cure for you if you are HIV-positive, that is if you have already been infected with the disease but it has not manifested itself yet, or if you are an early ARC or if you are early dementia manifestation type, you feel yourself losing your memory or you are starting to lose body weight for no explicable reason," what they call the thinning disease in Africa when AIDS first manifested itself. Imagine somebody telling you that the way to save yourself is "to become active in the abortion movement, kill more babies, get more of those fetuses and use them in medical research, and it will extend your life."

So as a way to justify sodomy or whatever life style, high-risk group, that is the way the medical profession calls it, whatever got you into this mess, the way to get out of it is to get fetuses and use this living tissue to try to extend the life that you have foreshortened by your personal conduct.

Even to tell it to people who are innocent victims like little Ryan White, who just died, who got it through blood tranfusions, either for medical reasons, an accident, something like hemophelia is unconscionable. Doctors tell me that the entire hemophelia group, 10,000 to 15,000 in America, could be at risk because a contaminated blood supply is still possible if the medical professions of this country at the highest levels and the politicians in this and the other body are more interested in public relations, hysteria control, rather than in good normal health policy. In other words, AIDS, an always fatal veneral disease, is treated in a totally different way than we handle the other 58 communicable diseases. In California the diseases are registered, and none of them are fatal, where you have total reportability and contact tracing so that you can get a proper medical handle on any plague, let alone the worst plague to ever strike this country in its 214 years of post-independence history. For that matter all the worst plague to strike than land in the 200 or so years before that—the 300 years before that, since Columbus discovered, for Europeans at least, the New World.

THE KATYN MASSACRE AND OTHERS

All right, back to category 1.

I have just gotten halfway through a book, the first one I was able to get from the Library of Congress on the Katyn massacre, called simply "Katyn," by Louis Fitzgibbon.

This is not the book that I referred to in my special order the other day, entitled "Into the Woods," which is a current book. This was first printed in 1979.

This document on Soviet crimes at the beginning of the Second World War, in April and May, probably a few subsequent months, it is not easy to murder 15,000 strong, brave Polish officers and their Warsaw political infrastructure. It is not easy to murder that many people.

This book on the Katyn massacre and other books that I am going to read tell a story that, although the Soviet Union early in April of this year finally admitted their government under Stalin did this, they are still engaging in a long process of lies. They are acting like all the Polish officers were killed in Katyn and killed, by inference, by a renegade KGB operation or their predecessors before the MVD, which was the NKVD, which came after Stalin's original terror police, the CHEKA. To say that they were all killed and that all the Polish family members that survived the 15,000 murdered people, honorable military people who tried to defend their country from a double attack, from Hitler coming from the west and Stalin coming from the east is not true. The entire issue grows out of the Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact—those were just the foreign ministers—it should be called the Stalin-Hitler pact. I give Stalin top billing because according to the Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the president/general secretary of the Soviet so-called 15 republics, which includes Lithuania against its will, Mr. Gorbachev said that the world's greatest killer, is Stalin. Stalin killed far more people than Hitler because he had 29 years over his reign of terror, where Hitler, thanks to the entry of the United States into World War II, had 12 years of his potential 1,000-year Reich of terror.

Now the Soviet Union tells these Polish relatives, "Go to Katyn to grieve for your missing murdered family members. We only have excavated maybe two-thirds of the graves at Katyn," ironically excavated by Nazis with their own blood on their hands, to make the Soviet Union look bad. By that time the Nazis had in fact turned on Stalin, which is to be expected when you have pacts among killers. There is no honor among thieves, let alone murders. And when Hitler attacked Stalin on June 21, 1941, Operation Barbarossa, as they overran Poland and then overran Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia, the second invasion for the brave Baltic people in a period of less than a year and a half. It was then the Germans discovered these mass graves at Katyn.

Dachau, the Nazi prison camp, had opened up in 1933, the first year of the 12-year Reich, under its first camp commandante, Hess, the notorious No. 2 man under Hitler, who just died recently as the sole prisoner at the last remaining prison in Germany for German war prisoners, Spandau. Dachau had been in existence for 8 years when the Germans overran these graves.

The Germans brought in the Swiss Red Cross to document that this great massacre had taken place, while Heinrich Himmler, the head of the Gestapo, already was planning to expand Dachau into multiple camps. The number eventually reached over 300 if you count all the satellite camps. So they were already planning a little cover operation. But nevertheless even though the messenger was covered in blood himself, the honorable Swiss Red Cross people who investigated said this is a nightmare of atrocity. And since it came before the major part of the Nazi killing and their extermination, six extermination camps in Poland or the hundreds of work and labor and concentration death camps, the world was shocked. There were investigations by the U.S. Senate, by the House of Representatives in depth, investigations after World War II that persisted right up until the good efforts of the current Cabinet officer, Ed Derwinski, the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, who headed investigations in this House in his freshman and sophomore years. Being of Ukranian heritage, he wanted to get the record straight on Stalin's crimes since at that time we were still conducting and to this day the hunting down properly of Nazi war criminals. Now we have the Soviet Union saying with only 4,400-some of the bodies recovered out of the 15,000, "All you Polish relatives, we admit we did it, probably renegade operation. The people who did it are all retired, living off these Soviet pensions at the expense of the Soviet people. But you go grieve your loved ones in the Katyn woods."

But to do so, you have to travel from Poland into what is now property taken from Poland.

So, "You go grieve for your relatives there. We are not going to tell you what happened to the people from the other two camps like Starblessk."

□ 1320

They may have died in Siberia. They may have been put on massive barges, 2,000, 3,000, 4,000 at a time, taken to the Baltic Sea and sunk, which would be the greatest mass human disaster ever in the history of the recorded world, on the seas. But we are not going to come up with any more evidence. We will continue to lie, and we will do that lying and obfuscating and double talking and insulting Polish survivors through our President, General Secretary, Mr. Gorbachev.

Now, how does this relate to Lithuania? Well, the same Stalin-Hitler pact of incredible horror and war crime tragedy, that same pact signed on April 23, 1939, and the war started 9 days later, no coincidence. Then for Russia, it came home to them less than 2 years later, in June 1941. That Stalin-Hitler pact also divided Poland, and the beginning of the loss of liberty for starting north to south, Estonia, Lativa, and Lithuania.

There is no question around this Chamber, or around this city, or around my State, that I am a strong supporter of George Bush. I was the first Congressman or Senator to endorse him, and it was easy for me. Easy. He and my good friend, another World War II hero, BOB DOLE, are the last of the World War II heroes to ever run for the highest office in our country, and truly to be the leader of the free world. I wanted someone who had shown the grit and the courage that young Ensign and Lt. (jg.) George Bush has shown in World War II, where he flew 48 combat missions and was shot down twice. He then went to fly another 10 missions when it was his prerogative on recuperation in Hawaii to opt to go home to his family. George Bush is a hero to me.

However, as I have tried to convey to the President in private, through staff and from this House floor, finally once last week, to my good friend, our distinguished Secretary of State, Jim Baker, what is all this agonizing over recognizing Lithuania. I will state again a simple statement of fact: The United States of America, during the Hitler invasion of Lithuania, and in the Soviet invasion of Lithuania, we have never unrecognized the Government of Lithuania or its Embassy in this city since it achieved independence. These Baltic States for hundreds of years were part of Poland and Sweden and other duchies and suffered Russian occupation. When they achieved freedom after World War I, we recognized Latvia, Estonia, and Lithuania. In the early 1920's, Estonia made the mistake of moving the Embassy to New York, but Lithuania never left the Embassy, right up the street from the front door of the White House, 1600 Pennsylvania and 16th Streets. Right on 16th Street, about 1 mile north is the Lithuanian Embassy on the western side, and one block over, about a quarter mile away from that, is the Latvian Embassy. I visited them 14 years ago as a freshman. I know they are there. We are having a reception at the Heritage Foundation tonight for Lithuania with dignitaries, and it is set up by their Embassy here in Washington, DC. We can downgrade it now in diplomatic talk. This is a Republican and Democratic sin, and call them a legation, and feel uncomfortable referring to their senior person as an ambassador. But what I told the President, "Mr. President, all you have to say to Mr. Gorbachev," and he knows this is true, "if you are on a first-name basis you can call him Mike, Micky, Gorboman, or Mikhail." Say "My friend, we have never, ever unrecognized Lithuania." We have never accepted your Stalin conquest any more than we would have accepted Hitler's conquest a couple of years earlier of these three tiny Baltic nations who love their freedom.

Technically, they are not Russians, although Russians have infiltrated the country. Lithuania has the least, less than 10 percent, with Russian citizens who are dying to live in the Baltic States. Why? Because as an Intourist guide took me around the Soviet Union, with Bob Leggett of California. This lady Intourist guide, was probably a KGB colonel, as Mr. Leggett used to say. This Intourist guide said, "We love to visit the Baltic States, they are so European. Their food is so good, much better than Russia. Their standard of living so much higher."

These are three captive nations we are talking about, living better than their mother oppressor out of Moscow. Of course, that has been the standard in Hungary, Poland, Czechoslovakia, in the last couple of years. Even in Armenia you can get orange juice and wine, and even in Soviet Georgia. But you cannot get these staples most of the time in Moscow and Leningrad because the Soviets do not know how to run a simple trucking system in the motherland, the so-called Republic U.S.S. Russia, that dominates the other 14. It is worse off in the standard of living, and approaching or on the very eve of bankruptcy, worse than the others.

So Mr. President, all we have to do is study Katyn, the rape of Poland and the rape of Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, to understand that if we recognize the new government of Poland, recognize a new government, all we have to do with these three gentle Baltic countries is recognize that we never unrecognized them, and let it go from there. Do not put Mr. Landsbergis, their elected democrat, this music history teacher and professor, do not put his back up against the wall and make him say that he feels the United States and Europe are reliving Munich and the betrayal of Czechoslovakia because of Nazi invasions into the Sudetenland. No, we are not necessarily reliving Munich because we have instead of darkness ahead of Members, we feel time is on the side of freedom in Lithuania, but we are only arguing about a timetable here, that we do not want to undercut Mr. Gorbachev. Look, Mr. President, Mr. Speaker, and Members in sound of my voice who are going to read this transcript, Mr. Gorbachev is his own worst enemy. It is not just the so-called conservatives, a deliberate word game played by liberals in this country, because Stalinist and thugs from the past who want to get Mr. Gorbachev out of office can hardly be described as conservatives in modern American or British usage of that word. But the networks understand very well that Gorbachev, by not implementing aggressive, dynamic and immediate economic reforms, is his own worst enemy. They are bankrupt. They are not even a Third World nation anymore, they are a fourth-rate nation with nuclear weapons. Weapons that have not been diminished by so much as one warhead. Their strategic modernization program continues unabated while the free people now yell, "Bread, bread," that sounds like a Czarist period in Russia. They yell, "Bread," at Gorbachev. He was booed on May 1, Communist Day, May Day, Red Day, around the world. He is booed as he stands over Lenin's body, body worship, their godhead to replace the Russian Orthodox Catholic Church as it was driven out of the Soviet Union. As he stands over the remains of Lenin, he is booed by his own people. Do Members know what they were booing him about? Lithuana. In part, the Stalin horrors of the past, like the Katyn Forest massacre. They are saying, "Free Lithuana," on Red Square, to his face. As he lifted the mausoleum lid over Lenin, they screamed, "Resign, resign."

Who are his biggest defenders? The liberal dominant media culture in the United States and a State Department policy that cannot seem to find a way to say the words, "We, the United States, its executive branch and its Congress have never unrecognized Lithuana." So much for foreign policy.

My staff came through for me. To show Members how dynamic this process can be in the well, the first note is, "Your office can't find the Planned Parenthood ads against you." Within 5 minutes, "Article on the way by page." Within 3 minutes, the page arrives.

OK. Here is a full-page ad—excuse me, three-quarter page, designed to save a few dollars, but for all intents and purposes, it looks like a full-page ad. Here is a picture of a very thoughtful, intelligent woman that says, "For women, abortion is a tough decision. For Bob Dornan," at least they used my own PR picture which I do not look too horrible—"for BOB DORNAN it is a snap." Then they have a coupon that says, "Send us money, send the ad to DORNAN." I got about 400 replies, and the responses I received run about 20 to 1 against abortion. They claim most of theirs, which makes sense, was against me.

□ 1330

But the lady who designed this ad is now my opponent. I am not going to give her name. Let her get her own PR. She has now declared for Congress. She pulled her name out of the race, but her name stays on the ballot. I will repeat myself here. She is endorsed by the Orange County Democratic Party within days. She is going to get help from the Nation. Why? Because although I am unopposed in my Republican primary, she has one opponent, a guy that used to be a Republican that I beat way back in 1984. He has now become a Democrat, a LaRouche Democrat. And lo and behold, we do not think the Democrats want somebody representing those people that are giving us all this guerrilla theater, this grand theater out in the streets about "Free Mr. LaRouche, the political prisoner."

This is a guy that started out as a Marxist on the left and a proabortionist, and then reacts very cleverly to the Club of Rome, a big abortion group that started in Rome with a "Club of Life." And he comes up with all these conservative, harebrained, liberal schemes. Now he has all these followers around the country. Where do these people get their money to do all these demonstrations? But they do not want this LaRouche follower, so the Democratic Party will support this Planned Parenthood spokesman for Orange County and San Bernadino County who is still on the Planned Parenthood payroll. An organization that is a tax-exempt, nonprofit organization taking your tax dollars through title 10 grants. And they are running a candidate against this Congressman? What an outrage.

Then, with NARAL they start attacking the Catholic bishops, as they attacked some Protestant heroes around this country who have been carrying the front trench battle against abortion on demand for several years. My friend and my hero, John Joseph O'Conner, the cardinal and archbishop of the archdiocese where I was born and raised, in my first 10 years in New York, is going to spend $5 million to counter these attacks.

This is $5 million for an education campaign to let Americans know what is involved in abortion. Because I believe, strange as it sounds, that 90 percent of the people of this country do not know what an abortion is all about. They do not know that the heart starts beating within a couple of weeks. With an abortion you are extinguishing the sound of a heartbeat that can now be picked up. You could listen to the heartbeat during the abortion and you would know you are stopping a heart, a human heart.

That is why the National Right to Life Organization used the slogan, "Abortion Stops a Beating Heart," in their grossly undercounted march on April 28. At that march, my good friend and colleague, HENRY HYDE said they must have had one-half million people, if the abortion march claims 300,000 from the "Bataan Death March" on April 9, a year ago.

No, the level of ignorance on this issue is incredible.

My daughter-in-law, Theresa Hohenfeld Dornan, drove me to the airport in Los Angeles. She is only 4½-months pregnant. I am driving to give her a rest. There are just the two of us. I see her wince with a smile.

I said, "Is that baby moving already?"

She said, "Oh, this one is much more active than little Haley," my No. 7 grandchild. She said, "very active. Maybe it's a boy."

I said, "Don't let that deceive you. My three girls were more active than my two boys."

And I said, "Let me feel this." I put my hand on her tummy, and here is this baby moving like gangbusters, and I said, "Theresa, you are not 9-months pregnant?" I said, "When is the baby due, in a couple of months?"

She said, "No, late August."

I said, "August?" This was still April, a week ago. I said, "August? Of course. I am thinking about the abortion debate. You are not in your ninth month, your eighth month, your seventh or sixth month. You are just going to start your fifth month."

Well, she is now much bigger than she was with little Haley.

I said, "This is a human being in there." And the abortion people in this country are fighting for abortion on demand for any reason up through the last day of the ninth month. That is their argument.

I say to the American public, "Don't let them tell you they don't. Don't let them tell you there are only a few abortions in the ninth month."

There are 6,000, maybe 15,000 out of the 1,600,000 yearly abortions. Do we understand what 15,000 people is? That is a Katyn massacre.

But they are not arguing about the last trimester. If you bring in the fourth and fifth month, going into that middle trimester, then you are talking about 100,000 moving, living human beings with a heart that has been beating for over 4 months. That is 5, 10, 15 Katyn massacres we are killing in this country. The overall figure is 1½ million. The figure since the evil Roe versus Wade decision of January 22, 1973, is about 25 million Americans killed in their mothers' wombs.

Why do I say, Americans? Because if they were allowed to be born and whether the birthplace was on the Moon, in China, on the Mediterranean, or on a Caribbean cruise, wherever that child is born, if one of the parents is an American, that child is an American. So 25 million Americans are gone, and this decision is not properly debated.

So when the bishops say they are spending a piddling $5 million, what does Planned Parenthood say and what does former Catholic Kate Michaelman say? Her husband deserted her with three children when she was pregnant. What a slimeball he must have been. So her reaction tragically was to kill the fourth child in her womb. There goes a brother or sister to the other three. I feel sorry for her. She is a nice lady. But what does this former Catholic say? She attacks Bishop O'Conner and asks, "How can the church do this?" She is the executive director of NARAL. She said, "He should be spending money on the poor."

The Catholic Church spent almost $1 billion on the poor last year. It is one of their major ministries. If you take into account the money they spend worldwide, it is way over billions. In this country alone, in most of its programs, I think it is $980 million. And guess what? Cardinal O'Conner is not diverting any funds. He does not have to raise any funds. He has already got the funds in hand from wealthy Catholics and non-Catholics who have said, "Here is my $10,000, here is my $20, here is my $50." He has got grants galore from willing people.

So he has the $5 million. He can raise $50 million so he has the $5 million. He can raise $50 million or $100 million if he wants to. He could raise the money if he ever passes the hat nationwide in the churches the way they pass the hat for Catholic U. He could raise the money at a Catholic university where they would pass the hat nationwide. If he passes the hat with humble people putting in money, you watch the money the church is finally going to raise.

Do we know why the Catholic Church and other religions are playing catchup on this? Because the church, against my protestations allowed a Catholic Jesuit priest, a former president of Boston College Law School, to vote for abortion in this House for 10 years without criticism, from 1971 through January 1981. That gave such a bad example to the country that now they are playing catchup, and we have to spend millions of dollars through the advertising firm of Hill & Knowlton to try to educate our people as to what abortion is all about and how many abortions are being performed on children that could live outside the womb. And we cannot diminish it down to a few thousand because there is 1,600,000.

A few thousand children killed in the seventh, eighth, or ninth month of pregnancy is an absolute horror, a massacre, and it would be called a war crime if it were the rape of a village like Lidice in Czechoslovakia if a war was going on.

So enough about Planned Parenthood.

Now, back to this ACT-UP fetal tissue experimentation issue, an issue which helped me make a comback in this Congress in 1984, because I ran against a 10-year incumbent who was in the middle of Orange county, Reagan country, and had voted with 100 other Congressmen to keep living tissue of aborted fetuses for use in medical experiments.

Listen to this. This is from the British magazine, "Nature," and I am going right to the source in NIH, and I am going to pray to God that this is not a true story.

The New York-based lobbying group for AIDS patients, ACT-UP [Aids Coalition to Unleash Power], believes that research involving fetal tissue is one of the most promising fields of AIDS research and has pursuaded the New York Civil Liberties Union to consider taking legal action against the Bush administration for restricting research with potential to treat a life-threatening disease.

Mr. Speaker, this group is the one that trashed and desecrated St. Patrick's Cathedral. This article goes on to say that the enthusiasm of the AIDS community for fetal tissue research was inspired by one of the doctors at the National Institute for Allergy and Infectious Disease, who was a guest speaker at an ACT-UP meeting 2 weeks ago.

Mr. Speaker, let me do a footnote right here. One of the most loathsome things any person in this country can do is to go to a house of God, a Jewish temple, and put the broken cross of the reign of terror of Adolf Hitler on that synagogue, spray-paint it on that synagogue. Whether they call themselves a skinhead or a some kind of perverted right-wing conservative from an Aryan brotherhood group, with any child who would do that, they ought to haul the parents into court. What an offense that is to a synagogue, to a religion and a church with a heritage thousands of years old that suffered the extermination of 6 million of the 14 million worldwide Jewry in the Nazi Holocaust. What would be worse than going in and spray-painting ugly epithets and anti-Semitic slogans and a swastika on a temple? Do we know what would be worse? Yes, of course. Going into the temple and chaining yourself to the pews or going up to the main temple altar and spitting on the Torah, the most sacred thing in a Jewish temple, a house of God.

□ 1340

Mr. Speaker, when a Jewish temple is desecrated on the outside, and some temple schools have been desecrated inside right here in Maryland, when that happens, the dominant media culture properly goes up the wall and characterizes it with the toughest English American language this side of obscenities and scatological language. They characterize these people for the slime that they are.

I ask my colleagues, "Why didn't the dominant media culture: ABC, NBC, CBS, PBS, CNN, the New York Times, L.A. Times, Washington Post; why didn't the dominant media culture use these same strong words of outrage when a group desecrates the cathedral of God, the house of God, in New York, St. Patrick's Cathedral, when they do the equivalent of spitting on the Torah, and that is a noncommunity member taking the host of Jesus Christ into their mouths and spitting it on the floor or of taking it into their hands and breaking it and throwing it at Cardinal O'Connor?"

What did Mario Cuomo of New York say? He said that it was a terrible act, but he understood the provocation. I say, "In God's name, paisan, Mario, give me your rationale for using the word 'provocation.' You mean the 1,900-year-old history of the church, taking it from the Old Testament that says 'sodomy, sex outside of marriage notwithstanding, that sodomy, anal and oral sex between strangers or even consenting adults who barely know one another, bar pickups, that that's OK? And that to go against it with a 1,900-year unbroken standard is provoking this desecration of St. Patrick's? No, that's ACT-UP."

I saw representatives of ACT-UP on Night Line the other day, and they said, "You ain't seen nothing yet." They said they are bringing their outrages to this Capital City.

So, back to an NIH doctor telling ACT-UP the following: That, according to the transcript of the meeting, NIH doctor talking to this radical fringe group of homosexual activists, said, "Fetal liver tissues may very well be able to completely suppress the virus and allow reconstitution of the immune system." I had never heard this in 5 years of my reading and research on the human immunodeficiency virus [HIV]. Never.

Now, this is telling a homosexual community, some of whom are dying, that live fetal tissue liver cells can rebuild your immune system and give you your life back, another 20, 30, 40, 50 years on the planet.

He says, "Asked whether such research might be possible while the administration is staunchly opposed to fetal research," this doctor says, "there may have to be," quote from the transcript, "some serious pressure and some real rethinking about this." The doctor could not be reached for further comment. I am going to reach him.

The House of Representatives Subcommittee on Health and the Environment, chaired by my good friend, fellow Californian, HENRY WAXMAN, who agrees with me on the Katyn massacre and all the Hitler atrocities, will hold hearings on the issue of fetal experimentation. The gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] criticized Dr. Sullivan, the doctor who is now the Secretary of Health and Human Services, the biggest agency and the toughest job in the American Government. The gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN], although he thinks well of Dr. Sullivan, he criticized the Sullivan decision not to engage in fetal research. According to this transcript, the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] is purported to say that it would be tragic to reject the NIH's panel that went 14 to 0 to allow fetal research. Research that is conducted on living babies kept alive after they have been aborted to terminate their lives. This research has been rejected by Dr. Sullivan. The gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] is saying, though, that this research is sensible.

Mr. Speaker, anyone within the sound of my voice or the written RECORD, as abortion politics come down to arguing to defend victims of unsanitary sodomy in this country by killing more babies, or developing what they are worried about in Australia, fetal farms. It is bad enough that we have the first case emerge in a Frankenstein way, that a daughter says, "I will get pregnant and give my fetus or baby to extend my father's life because the rumors abound in the scientific community that keeping little fetuses alive and using their tissue can reverse Alzheimer's disease." I do not know; I may die of that, Parkinson's disease; I may die of that. Other types of nerve disorder diseases.

I know we had a doctor from UCLA, went over to Chernobyl, which the Soviets are finally going to shut down, I understand, and to try to save the worst of the radiated workers at Chernobyl, they were aborting babies, taking fetal tissue from bone marrow, and doing transplants. I said, "How many people did this doctor do this on?"

They said, "Six."

"How many lived?"

"None."

And one of his nurses crying to me, a nervous wreck on tranquilizers, she said, "But then again he has yet to save a single person at UCLA, nor has the team at Columbia who engages in fetal medical research."

My colleagues, I think it is fair when I say the word "Frankenstein" pops in my head. After all, the fiction of Dr. Victor Frankenstein in Mary Shelley's novel; he took dead body parts, built them together, and, in an obvious, harebrained way took electricity from the sky. Somehow or another they thought that was the source of life. Who knows?

As we put the Hubble space telescope up and find out about the outer fringes of the universe, maybe God in His wisdom did use some electrical impulse in some primordial ooze to begin the creation process that evolves in man with an immortal human soul to live forever, for all of eternity. Out of this primordial mud comes eternal creatures with free will.

Who knows what we are going to find out? Maybe electricity is involved.

But Dr. Victor Frankenstein takes the electricity and creates a person out of dead parts. He does not take living people in their most innocent life form in the womb, extract them in a violent procedure, and then use their tissue to take people at the end of their life spectrum. Alzheimer's, Parkinson's, although these diseases get some people in the middle of their life, or a young person shriveled up and dying of Kaposi's sarcoma in their early twenties or teens and say, "The way to give you life is to use this innocent life from the womb."

Mr. Speaker, if my colleagues do not think that we are in for some horrendous debates around here in the 1990's, I say, "You haven't followed the biomedical breakthroughs, advancements, and this whole career called biomedical engineering."

I had a 94-year-old lady approach me at a university auditorium before I came to Congress. That must have been about 1971 or 1972. She approached me, paid me a nice compliment. I remember it vividly because it was rather nice. She said, "We are all the architects of our own image, and you're building a beautiful one. Keep building." And then she said, "Mr. DORNAN, may I tell you something? Be careful of being handed a drink on a stage, or being given food before an appearance anywhere because anybody who speaks as you do, eventually their life is going to be in jeopardy."

I have never followed this advice. My wife thinks it is about time to start following it.

This nice lady also said, "Let me tell you something. I hope you serve in the Congress of the United States someday." I had not mentioned it in my remarks at this college gathering. She said, "We need people like you in the Congress." She said, "But, if you're there, let me warn you of something. The toughest debates in the U.S. Congress will come in the late eighties." She was premature by a handful of years, "and the nineties." She was correct. She said, "It will involve genetic engineering and the whole field of biochemistry where man thinks he can replace God in rebuilding human life and deciding who is not worthy of continued life."

Gov. Richard Lamm, Colorado, older people who are infirm, should do us a favor, and do their duty and die.

Why is euthanasia becoming such a topic of discussion around? Because when you start killing innocent human life in the womb, my fellow Americans and Mr. Speaker, you pull out all the stops. Nobody in this House, or in the other Chamber, can gainsay what I am about to say, although I cannot prove it, but I believe the reason we have a crime wave in this country is, or does, have its roots in abortion. Child abuse, off the charts in this country; rooted in abortion. Euthanasia; rooted in abortion. Violent crimes going off the charts, disregard, abuse of this temple of the Holy Spirit, our human bodies, with drugs, with booze, with promiscuous sex, with risk behavior life styles, that we cannot seem to pry some of these people apart with crowbars even though they know they are playing Russian roulette with unsanitary sex. All of these issues grow out on the domestic side of the lack of respect for human life, and it started in earnest with the Roe versus Wade decision.

We may be bringing liberty through our example on the national scene to other countries across this world, but, when people, long oppressed, particularly the young, come out of East Berlin to cross the decaying wall, which is now turning into paper weights all over the free world, to cross that hated, dreaded Berlin Wall, the first thing they seek before consumer goods is live sex shows in the liberated West; that is not my idea of freedom.

□ 1350

To turn these countries loose to say in Romania that even Ceausescu was a madman, although he enforced abortion for the first 20 years of his reign. He then got on an ego kick and wanted to drive their 25 million population up to 30 million, so he reverses all gears and starts enforcing childbearing and having undignified criminal assaults and investigations of women to see that they do not abort. Now to have planned parenthood and NARAC and everybody use the abortion horror of Ceausescu's latter regime where they forced people to have babies as a rationale to kill babies in the West is obscene.

The truth is that one of the first things all the Communist countries did was to legalize abortion and go at it so vigorously that in the Soviet Union a woman who had 7, 8, 9, 10 abortions is not rare. That is why they give the silver medal of motherhood to someone with 5 children and the gold medal of motherhood to someone with 10, because they killed off a great percentage of the next generation.

No. Genetic engineering is going to be a tough subject in this House. You are going to hear the words Dr. Frankenstein again and again if this story turns out to be true that doctors who earn their total income on your tax dollars are telling bigoted, prejudiced, violent-oriented defiling groups, like ACT-UP, who ripped up the house of God of my parents' marriage and my baptism as a Christian. If that group is going to be encouraged by federally funded doctors and told that their hope of life is extending, because we are all terminal, extending their years of mortal existence is at the expense of killing babies in their mothers' wombs, look out, folks. It is true, "You ain't seen nothing yet." We are going to have some wild philosophical debates right down to the gut level in this Congress of the United States, and if there is any example of some of the heroes that I know over in the Senate, like Senator GORDON HUMPHREY, who is unfortunately retiring of his own will after 12 years. He brought in the Harvard Medical Textbook that they have used for over a hundred years and read from the chapter, "When Does Life Begin?" If anybody understands basic science, you know when life begins. It is when there is a separate entity with the entire genetic code in place inside the mother and that little tiny heart begins to beat in a few days.

Mr. Speaker, I shall be back with more on all three of these subjects.

LITHUANIAN INDEPENDENCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I know the gentlewoman from Maryland will be joining us briefly for a special order of her own.

Mr. Speaker, one of the great benefits of having served as both chairman and cochairman of the Helsinki Commission is that from time to time I have had the opportunity to meet with individuals of great courage and commitment who give testimony to the ongoing quest for freedom, justice, and other values of the Helsinki Final Act.

Just a few hours ago, the Helsinki Commission had the honor of hosting one of those great individuals. The Honorable Kazimiera Prunskiene, the Prime Minister of Lithuania's first democratically elected government in more than 50 years, gave compelling testimony on the future of Lithuania and the crisis that has befallen that small country as a result of their pursuit of the right of self-determination, which is, Mr. Speaker, as all my colleagues know, a right assured them by the Helsinki Final Act.

Dr. Prunskiene spoke eloquently, movingly, and thoughtfully, referring to the challenges confronted by her little nation which was subsumed into the Soviet Union in 1940 under a deal between the dictator, tyrant, and assassinator who was Stalin and his counterpart, another of the two evil men of this century, Adolf Hitler.

Mr. Speaker, it is to the great credit of the United States that we have never recognized the forcible incorporation of the little nation of Lithuania nor of the neighboring Baltic States of Latvia and Estonia into the Soviet Union pursuant to that deal between Stalin and Hitler.

Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister acknowledges that the de jure sovereignty which the Lithuanian Parliament has declared will require much effort and a certain amount of time in order to be realized de facto. The Lithuanian people are showing calm determination and will not give up their legitimate claim to sovereignty. That was the message of the Prime Minister. That was the message of a representative of the people who have shown such courage in the face of an overwhelming challenge.

Mr. Speaker, Prime Minister Prunskiene made an interesting reference to the cold war, explaining that the Lithuanian people now are confronting a literal cold war as the Soviet Union has cut off energy to that small nation. In 2 weeks, Mr. Speaker, they may be out of energy, unable to heat their homes. Cold spells can still occur in Lithuania, but the people of Lithuania have courage and faith and commitment to freedom. As did our own Founding Fathers in confronting the overwhelming power of their time, the Lithuanian people have committed themselves to attaining the independence that is theirs. Indeed, it is not merely the attainment of independence, but the attainment of freedom that we must support. We have never recognized that the Soviet Union has a legal claim to Lithuania and we do not recognize that today.

Mr. Speaker, Prime Minister Prunskiene will be meeting with the President in a very few minutes. She will be speaking with the leader of the greatest nation on the face of the Earth—a nation that has paid a high price in furthering the freedom of others as well as our own. Prime Minister Prunskiene hopes that we stand with her and with the brave people of Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia, as they stand for the principles for which our Constitution stands, for which our Declaration of Independence stands and for which the Helsinki Final Act stands.

Mr. Speaker, all of us were proud when Vaclav Havel spoke on this floor just a few weeks ago. That poet-philosopher, now President of Czechoslovakia, spoke of the debt of gratitude that his people have for the people of the United States, for Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, Harry Truman, and for other leaders of our country who have stood for the principle that individuals combined together as peoples should have the right to self-determination.

Mr. Speaker, at this time I will submit for the RECORD the remarks of the Prime Minister of Lithuania, Dr. Kazimiera Prunskiene, made to the Helsinki Commission this day, Thursday, May 3, 1990. It is a short statement, but it is a compelling statement. As I said before, it is a statement of courage, a statement of commitment. I recommend to the Members of this House that they read this statement and that they recommit themselves not only to the Helsinki process, but on the floor of this House and in our communities and in our States and in our neighborhoods to join together with people who love freedom throughbout the world.

Mr. Speaker, the remarks of the Prime Minister follow:

REMARKS OF THE PRIME MINISTER OF LITHUANIA KAZIMIERA PRUNSKIENE TO THE HELSINKI COMMISSION THURSDAY, MAY 3, 1990

For some time now, Lithuania and her Baltic neighbors have been reminding the world of the fact of their existence and, by doing so, have aroused worry as well as interest.

The Lithuanian question did not arise because it was arbitrarily willed by someone or in order to frustrate someone else's will and desires. The restoration of an independent Lithuanian state was a legal act, expressing the nation's self-determination and its right to full sovereignty. By international agreement, this is a political right of all nations.

The most important preconditions for the restoration of independence were:

1. The Lithuanian nation's long-standing desire, shared by the other two Baltic nations, for independent statehood, which was given expression by its democratically elected parliament.

2. The refusal of other states around the world to recognize the annexation of Lithuania by the Soviet Union.

3. Political changes under Mr. Gorbachev which permitted the Soviet Union itself to declare the Hitler-Stalin pact null and void.

The act entitled "On the Restoration of an Independent Lithuanian State" which was passed by the Lithuanian parliament on March 11 begins to establish our state sovereignty. We have enacted a legal, de jure sovereignty which will require much effort and a certain amount of time in order to be realized de facto.

By no means does the Lithuanian parliament and government believe that de facto independence can be grabbed unilaterally and quickly, especially when dealing with the Soviet Union with its deep-rooted imperial traditions.

Lithuania does not want to burden Mr. Gorbachev with her problems, complicating his situation and raising a danger to his leadership or to perestroika, a danger that has been dramatized around the world. Lithuania also does not want to shift her problems, onto the West. Nevertheless, these three sides—the Soviet Union, Lithuania and the West—are drawn together through the Lithuanian issue. How the question is solved will depend first of all on the people of Lithuania themselves, on their unity, determination, calm and so long as the economic blockage lasts, on their stamina and enterprise as well. The people are showing the world that they do have those qualities.

The roles of East and West in the resolution of the Lithuanian question are complicated by a series of factors:

1. The Soviet Union does not have a balanced equilibrium of political forces. Although the influence of the democratic forces is increasing, it is not yet equal to the other side. The democratic forces are only starting to consolidate and often clash among themselves. From what I have observed, Mr. Gorbachev does not make full use of support from the democratic forces to overcome the reactionaries.

2. The western nations, thanks to whose non-recognition policy Lithuania was able to preserve the legal continuity of her independence, became accustomed to her factual dependence. They valued Mr. Gorbachev's perestroika as a way of ensuring human and national rights to the point that the process began to be valued more than the goal—the realization of these rights.

It is difficult for the West to perceive that pressuring the Soviet Union on the Lithuanian question helps rather than hinders Mr. Grobachev to be a consistent practitioner of democracy; more than that, to overcome the reactionary forces which oppose not only independence for the Baltic states but also political and economic reforms in general. The West's position now, during a period of economic difficulties for the Soviet Union, can be one of the most important arguments for a decisive turn to reform. This argument woud have been ineffective several years ago, for it is only now that the people dare to contradict the government and raise demands.

Lithuania is undergoing a great testing, but so too is the Soviet Union as well as the West. What sort of Russia or Soviet Union will emerge depends in part on how the Lithuanian issue will be resolved. This is understood by the democratic forces supporting us in the various Soviet republics and regions such as Moscow, Leningrad, Sverdlovsk, etc., where the newly-elected governments are sympathetic to us.

As regards the role of the West, we see and understand their desire to have in Mr. Gorbachev a reliable political leader in East-West relations. Here our interests coincide. But, for this we cannot sacrifice everything that is most important—the nation's future and its very existence. Such a sacrifice is senseless and not useful even to the West itself, because Lithuania's sacrifice would not help the Soviet Union enter a new stage of development as a nation of laws and a reliable economic partner for the West.

In other words the Lithuanian question can and must be solved without damage to democracy in the Soviet Union. In fact I would contend that the recognition of Lithuania's independence by East and West would be a tremendous victory for democratization in the Soviet Union within the context of perestroika. This political puzzle belongs to a former stage, since the majority of western states are sympathetic to Lithuanian independence.

You do not have to choose between Lithuania and Gorbachev. The solution is this: Gorbachev together with a breakthrough for democracy in the Soviet Union and an independent Lithuania. These are two compatible and converging sides of the same process, rather than alternatives.

I do not content that Mr. Gorbachev's preferred scenario for Lithuania coincides with Lithuania's own aspirations. I think that he would speak out for Lithuania remaining in federations, although not by force. However, even the world's darling does not have the monopolistic right to decide the fate of other nations. And here we cannot help him at all. For otherwise sympathy degenerates into toadyism, and the later gives birth to a cult.

Lithuania cannot demand support—she has neither the political nor the economic strength to do so. She is also prevented by an understanding of an elementary truth, that every state and its leaders have their own problems and their own interests.

Our hope lies not only in other nations' moral principals but also in the advantage which other states will sooner or later see in Lithuanian statehood and the role that she can play between East and West. This role will be the result both of her geopolitical situation and of the Soviet Union's abandonment of its imperial inertia, which we are testing at great risk and will have helped to shake up, if we are successful.

Even at present, when heads of state are not hurrying to put economic pressure on the Soviet Union or to help Lithuania, the world's attention is already a significant form of support. In such a situation, it is hard to imagine that the Kremlin, blockading us from the East, would succeed in isolating Lithuania from the West as well, preventing us from associating with the rest of the world. This would mean economic destruction, hunger, and the use of cold as a weapon (a literal cold war).

Until the last few days, the Western nations confined themselves to urging both sides to start negotiations. President Mitterand's and Chancellor Kohl's proposal for a temporary suspension of the execution of the Lithuanian Parliament's decisions, as a condition to spur the Kremlin to negotiations, significantly changes the situation. By this act these heads of state became in effect participants or mediators in the solution of Lithuania's problems, although they did not express such an intention. To suggest a course of action means at the same time to take on a certain amount of responsibility.

Lithuania's leadership, understanding that the path of no compromise in the execution of the enacted legislation is impossible, and appreciating the importance of guarantees by other states, is disposed to consider such a formula. But it must be stated without ambiguity or the possibility of different interpretations. We could temporarily suspend the quick and unilateral execution of the passed legislation if there were international guarantees. In no way does this mean a repeal of the acts passed on March 11 or a renunciation of independence. In such a case Lithuania would have to be guaranteed on the basis of international law: the continuity of Lithuanian independence, the continuation of her government and her territorial integrity.

The government of the Republic of Lithuania has proposed more than once to the leaders of the Soviet Union that we start a dialogue in search of compromises, naming a number of possible areas, such as: the reconciliation of military and defense interests, guarantees for civil rights of Soviet citizens in Lithuania, the division of wealth, and so forth. Concrete details would become clear during negotiations. The Soviet side did not express interest in conducting such negotiations. Compromises cannot all come just from one side, or they are no longer compromises, but rather the subjugation of the weaker by the stronger.

The Soviet Union, in demanding that the Republic of Lithuania repeal the acts of March 11, at the same time recognizes their validity, because the Soviet government itself cannot legally annul them. The economic blockage also confirms the factual separation of Lithuania from the Soviet Union, after which any pretensions to Lithuania as part of the Soviet Union's territory are no longer possible.

The attempt to force Lithuania to renounce her independence through economic coercion will not succeed, and will only create new socio-economic and political difficulties for the Soviet Union itself. The people's dissatisfaction with the individuals who made such decisions is growing. Meanwhile, Lithuania, although under very difficult conditions, is looking for alternative sources of needed materials, including those in the eastern market. Only by using the Soviet army would it be possible to totally interrupt barter exchanges of goods between Lithuania and her eastern trade partners within the Soviet Union. And the path leads from such exchanges to full market relations.

Lithuania is going through difficult times, deprived of oil, most of her gas, metal and other important products. A transportation and banking blockage is in effect. Enterprises are closing, unemployment has appeared. However, there is also some good resulting from all this, for it gives us the chance to develop speed, initiative, enterprise and market methods. We intend to hold out and survive, because there is no road back.

The approaching summit meeting between the American and Soviet presidents—the leaders of the world's largest nations—could make a decisive contribution to the solution of the Lithuanian problem. Fate is giving them the chance to leave an admirable mark in history, starting a new epoch in Europe and in relations between West and East. We trust that they will do so, not only because their nations expect this, but also because they will be guided by the internal moral code of popular, democratic leaders.

□ 1400

REINSTATEMENT OF SPECIAL ORDER

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I had a 60-minute special order reserved, and I ask unanimous consent that that be reinstated.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HUTTO). Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

IS "WHAT'S GOOD FOR GENERAL MOTORS GOOD FOR AMERICA?"

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. BENTLEY] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, first, I want to associate myself with the remarks of my colleague, the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER], and join in with him in urging that this country recognize the efforts of Lithuania to become a free nation once again.

Mr. Speaker, the title of my presentation today is: "Is 'What's Good for General Motors Good for America?' "

The January-February issue of Harvard Business Review has an article entitled "Who Is Us" which is the most wonderful endorsement of the growing purchase and/or establishment of foreign manufacturing operations in this country that I have ever heard.

Written by Robert Reich of Harvard, the thesis appears—on a cursory reading—to be, that as long as Americans are employed, it doesn't matter for whom they work or where the profits go. However, a closer inspection of the article shows gaping holes, not only in what is left unsaid, but in some of the supposedly factual information.

Robert B. Reich came to his professorship at Harvard from a stint served at the Federal Trade Commission. Some of that time was spent under the chairmanship of Michael Pertschuck, one of the toughest enforcers of the antitrust laws that Washington has ever seen.

From that background and his many liberal credentials, I am surprised that Mr. Reich finds any merit in the growing proliferation of multnational cartels—both ours and other nations—when the concern which continues to drive me from a political background, is the increasing lack of political control that any one country over any of these giant, expatriate companies. After the world's bitter experience of the cartelism of the 1930's—the corporate war machines of both Germany and Japan—it seems strange that in Reich's whole article, he presents no down side to a second generation of growth of cartels inside this country, no matter that not one of our antitrust laws which should be a break on this activity, has been repealed, just seemingly ignored by our Justice Department.

In his reiteration that Americans should have jobs no matter the nationality of the company, he never once addresses the many reasons that Americans now need to take jobs with foreign companies. No mention is made of U.S. tax law and foreign trade barriers which encourage U.S. corporate flight. No note is taken of tax forgiveness to foreign companies by a host of State Governors. Tax forgiveness which holds American companies liable for the land tax of their competitors.

He handles the matter of foreign investment and U.S. corporate flight as a given—something which cannot be changed—and therefore is not only to be accepted, but, according to the tone of the article, to be welcomed. His endorsement of the behavior of these giant companies begins to sound like the old quote of Charlie Wilson, when as President of General Motors, he is reputed to have defended his company's actions by saying, "What's good for General Motors is good for the country."

I wondered about that quotation several weeks ago when we were told in the steel caucus of the numerous American companies lobbying our negotiators at GATT to do away with antidumping provisions in the United States—I guess, because it would be good for IBM, or 3M, or Caterpillar, or any one of the transnational corporate giants no matter their country of origin.

But, would it be good for the number of small American companies which cannot flee to foreign nations? Captive American companies which cannot compete with foreign products dumped into our markets below a fair price. Many of these products being produced by government supported industries, or being manufactured in countries where wage and hour laws are nonexistant.

I am really fascinated that a political economist can overlook the well being and fortune of the vast amount of American companies that are truly American—owned and operated by Americans—employing American workers.

What difference does it make to the American employee who employs him? Well, in many instances, it will make a difference as to whether he has an opportunity to get into the top level of management. If he is a skilled employee, in a Japanese transplant, he may never have a highly skilled, highly paid job. Frequently, he will be in an assembly operation—screwdriver jobs.

Proof of that is no farther away than the recent years of staggering increases in imported automotive parts from Japan for the new Japanese auto plants. Each shipment another threat to our shrinking American-owned auto parts industry.

If he is a union member, there's a possibility that the new foreign plant coming in to replace the failed American producer will be nonunion. And, if the foreign plant is union, there is also a strong chance that his union—for the first time in my memory—will begin to appear in Washington lobbying for the interests of management!

As an American taxpayer, there is a probability—over 50 percent—that his taxes, along with his fellow employees, may be the only taxes collected by the government out of the plant operation.

The IRS has reported that at least 50 percent of 38,000 foreign companies have reported no profits on their American operations. And since many of these plants were enticed into the country by forgiveness of tax revenues by the State governments, the American worker—frequently—is carrying a much greater tax burden for his foreign employer than he realizes.

Mr. Reich makes much of the amounts of money donated by the Japanese to local benevolences. I wonder how many small town mayors would prefer that the money go into the school budget rather than into the United Way.

I was heartened to note, however, that Mr. Reich had some reservations. That he—to use his words—did not wish to, "entrust our national competitiveness to any corporation that employs Americans, regardless of the nationality of corporate ownership," because, "Some foreign-owned corporations (who) are closely tied to their nation's economic development—either through direct public ownership * * * or through financial intermediaries within the nation that, in turn, are tied to central banks and ministries of finance—in particular the model used by many Korean and Japanese corporations."

Because, as he points out, "The primary goals of such corporations are to enhance the health of their nations, and the standards of living of their nations' citizens, rather than to enrich their shareholders."

Since almost every country in the world with whom we trade has a socialist government and many of them contribute directly to their industries and, in some instances, companies like Thomson CSF and Renault are owned by the Government of France, what acceptable foreign companies remain for Mr. Reich to write about?

If Mr. Reich admits that most Japanese firms and Korean companies are tied directly to the national policy of their governments—and therefore may not be constructive employers of American workers—what foreign companies are left now producing in the United States that fit into the criteria of the article? British firms? Canadian companies? Maybe Phillips of the Netherlands. The list is very small. Hardly meriting the length of the article.

However, the thrust of the rest of the piece belies Reich's caveat when he argues later on that Thomson CSF should be eligible for U.S. R&D funds. As I pointed out before, Thomson is owned by Government of France—a fact that Mr. Reich never mentions in his article—even though Thomson fits Reich's criteria of companies which he suggests might not be in the best interests of America to have employing our people.

In his argument favoring foreign participants in United States HDTV research, he not only favors Thomson and Phillips, but also Sony—a Japanese model if there ever was one. If we are to believe Mr. Reich's qualifiers of a freestanding foreign commercial company, of the three which he mentions who should be considered, Phillips is the only one which should be eligible according to his own standards.

I do not agree with Mr. Reich that any foreign company should be receiving our scarce tax moneys for R&D, most particularly in the case of HDTV. It is interesting that Reich seemingly knows very little about the technology involved in high definition television since he refers to only one remaining U.S. television manufacturer in the running for a Government award.

The fight for HDTV R&D moneys is not for the commercial value of having a large, more sharply defined picture for watching ball games, but to have highly defined screens for businesses and defense and air traffic control. The commercial aspects are merely one application for the screens and for that reason, Zenith is but one of many U.S. companies who have been working to perfect the technology.

Mr. Reich is completely in error when he reports that Zenith is the only U.S. firm available for the award. DARPA received 82 applications for development and 49 were deemed worthy of funding.

I'm surprised that Mr. Reich would not do more research before he makes such a blanket statement.

But, there is another point here that bothers me about foreign firms getting into our basic research and walking away with U.S. Government contracts which pay for development of technology—and that is, would Gimbels have told Macy's where it got its best fabric?

In all of the heady atmosphere of high technology, we seem to be forgetting that all of these basic breakthroughs are targeted to one end—the market place and creation of wealth.

This year, it is reported that Thomson of France received the fourth highest amount of moneys awarded by the Defense Department in contracts. It is also well known that France is one of the largest weapons sellers in the world. This puts our Government in a position of subsidizing competition against our own beleaguered defense industries.

And if DOD contracts with France would proscribe the direct sale of those weapons—the many applications of component technology certainly will be used to the advantage of the Government of France, not to enrich the United States.

Mr. Reich hammers the point in his article that it is only by working on the projects that the level of skill and knowledge increases in the work force. On this we agree. But, why should U.S. Government money contribute to this growth in a foreign firm? U.S. moneys should be spent to create the jobs not only for the American worker, but for the American owner, also.

The opening up of HDTV R&D funds to foreign corporations not only will increase the technology base for foreign owners, accruing value to all other related technologies which they market, but in a more immediate way it will have a political effect.

The standards for the commercial performance of HDTV inside the United States will be set by the Federal Communications Commission and the interest and advantage to foreign producers that those standards be either for the EC model or Japanese product has been well known and well lobbied in Washington for a long time.

If, and I pray it comes about, the standards set are for U.S. production, it would mean that we would have an opportunity to regain a great deal of ground in microelectronic production. However, if foreign TV producers are allowed to compete with U.S. industry for scarce R&D government funding—we not only will be telling Macy's where we buy our best fabric, we will be giving them money with which to buy it before it gets there.

These foreign entities—then having been recognized as U.S. companies equal to all others in being eligible for funding—will be in a stronger position to influence the choice of standards.

I am really surprised that Mr. Reich is unaware of all of this. But then, when I read his statements on the Exon-Florio amendment and the Ways and Means proposal made in July of 1989—to tax foreign corporations by withholding a 10-percent capital gains tax and scrapping tax deductibility for interest on loans made by foreign parent companies to American subsidiaries—I realize how little knowledge he has of what is happening in the Congress.

The Exon-Florio amendment, as a deterrent to foreign purchases of strategic U.S. companies, has been one of the great disappointments of all time. The statement by Mr. Reich that "* * * foreign investors must get formal approval from the high-level Committee on Foreign Investments in the United States, comprising the heads of eight Federal agencies, and chaired by the Secretary of the Treasury, before they can purchase an American company" is a misreading of how the law works.

In the first instant, there is absolutely no requirement for foreign investors to notify anyone in the Government of their intent to purchase anything, which is quite different from the impression of Reich's flat-out statement, "* * * foreign investors must get approval * * *. Foreign investors can purchase U.S. companies and do purchase them at will. Any attempt the Congress has made, as in the Bryant bill of last year, to get some kind of registration of foreign ownership, has been knocked down every time.

Second, Exon-Florio offers only an appeal for consideration if and when there should be a challenge—by someone—that a company remain in U.S. hands for national security reasons. Very few U.S. companies under consideration for purchase would qualify under these stringent requirements. The CFIUS Committee which reviews the request, then passes it to the Cabinet who then makes the recommendation to the President.

In its 2 year history, only three recommendations have been made to the President and of those, only one was to stop a sale. Considering that in just 3 months of this year, 209 U.S. companies have passed into foreign ownership, according to business journal reports, proportionately, the law in no way represents the stumbling block to foreign investment that Mr. Reich would have us believe.

In addition, this section of the article contains a factual error about the Exon-Florio regulations. Exon-Florio does not require eight agencies of the Government to agree on the sale to a foreign entity, it only requires three.

As to the matter of the Ways and Means tax suggestions, I would urge Professor Reich to investigate the concerns of the IRS on the nonpayment of taxes by over 19,000 foreign corporations. I think, were he to have made just one telephone call to Ways and Means—for enlightenment—he would find that the committee was responding to the egregious use by these foreign companies of our tax laws to escape paying taxes to the United States. And at one time, before the mideighties, many foreign investors paid as high as 30 percent before repatriating profits. It is not a new idea. And, considering what is happening now on underpayments, it is not a bad idea.

But, then, maybe I am misjudging Mr. Reich, maybe he desires foreign manufacturers in this country at any cost.

Since Mr. Reich claims to be a serious economist, I am surprised he did not address our growing current accounts balance—the amount of demand that the world can make against us on our trade deficit and on repatriated profits of foreign owners of U.S. assets.

Nomura Securities did a recent study and report on what they estimate our debt to the world will be in 1995—less than 5 years away. The figure they use is $1.2 trillion. Critics of their study suggest the figure is more likely to be closer to $2 trillion. Now, that is money we will owe to the rest of the country.

Despite the 19,000 foreign companies who report no profits from operations in this country, profits and/or money to pay back loans to parent companies from these U.S. transplants are flowing out of this country every year swelling our debt to the world. And this debt only can be satisfied by bartering goods or real assets in exchange.

The recent glowing reports of the shrinking trade deficit with Japan only mirrors the growing number of exports to Japan of products produced in Japanese transplant corporations or of agricultural products being exported from Japanese owned ranches and citrus groves—products whose profits only will increase the debt in the current accounts balance.

It was very interesting to me that the Sony purchase of Columbia Pictures was in cash! Imagine, if you will, $3 billion in cash being piled up at the Coca Cola headquarters. Of course, it wasn't delivered in just that manner. But, since in the West we are not accustomed to such big deals for cash—if we question why it was handled in such a way, the answer! Japan is getting rid of dollars as fast as she can! She wants our assets.

Incidentally, information from Japan says that $2 billion out of the $3 billion for the Columbia purchase was loaned to Sony by the Bank of Japan 1¾ percent interest rate. Who would not borrow billions at that rate? And Mr. Speaker, that 1¾ percent interest tells how Japan incorporated functions. Japan's industries are strongly supported by their banks, and they by their government, a very strong three-legged foundation against which we expect our industries to compete.

This purchase represented a barter for $3 billion of our current accounts deficit. We traded off Columbia Pictures for 3 billion dollars' worth of cars and TV's and VCR's—Columbia Pictures with its power to propagandize, with its library of Americana. A purchase which also represents the completion of a vertical integration of the Sony Corp. by allowing Sony to move into the American software market.

I don't think it was a good trade myself. But, the continued repatriation of the profits of foreign corporations to their home countries only will exacerbate the sale of U.S. assets to foreigners. In the first quarter of this year, as I pointed out before, 209 American companies were sold to foreign owners; representing a growing demand of real U.S. assets against this debt.

Mr. Reich did not address this problem at all. His assertion that some of these companies now are exporting—and that will certainly help the deficit—completely finesses the loss of the profits—the cream which also is being exported every day.

Professor Reich, as an economist, seems to be unaware of the threat of colonization. If so, then he also must be unaware of the Southeast Asia coprosperity sphere—a colonization scheme envisioned by Japan in the early years of this century.

The similarities of operations—including the establishment, in this country, of Japanese schools for the children of the Japanese managers, the elite, should be informative.

Another Japanese plan, to have Silver Colonies—their title—to resettle retired Japanese workers to other countries was under consideration a couple of years ago. There seems to be some thought in that country of not only exporting its products, but also its people.

And I would wish, that before Professor Reich again pontificates he learn a great deal more about history—both ours and the Japanese. We were once a colony of a foreign nation and Japan has a long record of attempted colonization.

That Mr. Reich's attitude has powerful supporters was evidenced by a 3 page ad in the Wall Street Journal headlining the title of his article—"Who Is Us?"—paid for by a Japanese company. The 1 day ad cost in excess of $250,000. That's a lot of support!

And since I am on the Budget Committee, I am more aware than most that ads such as this are yet another deduction from profits made by foreign companies inside this country. In a way, we the taxpayer, financed this public display of support for Mr. Reich's theory.

Although I have found much to disagree with in Professor Reich's welcome to foreign firms, I am delighted that the issue has been raised. I am concerned that this invasion is taking place without a proper airing of what it will mean to the country—not only in jobs creation, but in jobs destruction—of how it will affect the upward mobility of our workers and the impact on the debt, both internal and external. A myriad of issues are involved which convince me that it is necessary that we address it in the broadest terms.

I wish I had more of the answers of how to respond to the challenge to American competitiveness of cartelism and country-owned and operated companies, but there is one thing I do know—just because we haven't yet been able to "lick 'em," we still don't have to join them. It's a shame, but overall, that seems to be the tenor of Professor Reich's thesis. I had hoped for more.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to:

Mr. LIGHTFOOT (at the request of Mr. MICHEL), for today, on account of personal reasons.

Mr. STUMP of Arizona (at the request of Mr. MICHEL) for today on account of attending the funeral for the former mayor of Phoenix.

SPECIAL ORDERS GRANTED

By unanimous consent, permission to address the House, following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore entered, was granted to:

(The following Member (at the request of Mr. HASTERT) to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. GINGRICH, for 60 minutes, each day, on May 7, 8, 9, and 10.

(The following Member (at the request of Mr. KANJORSKI) to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. HOYER, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. MONTGOMERY, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. KLECZKA, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. ANNUNZIO, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. PANETTA, for 5 minutes, today.

(The following Member (at his own request) to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. HOYER, for 5 minutes, today.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

By unanimous consent, permission to revise and extend remarks was granted to:

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. HASTERT) and to include extraneous material:)

Mr. LEWIS of California.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN.

Mrs. BENTLEY.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO.

Mr. MILLER of Ohio in three instances.

Mr. TAUKE.

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. KANJORSKI) and to include extraneous matter:)

Mr. SKELTON.

Mr. DICKS.

Ms. OAKAR.

Mr. ATKINS in two instances.

Mr. TALLON.

Mrs. BOXER.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Colorado.

Mr. LIPINSKI.

Mr. LAFALCE in two instances.

Mr. MONTGOMERY.

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts.

Mr. LANTOS.

Mr. HUBBARD.

Mr. COLEMAN of Texas.

Mr. STARK.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED

Bills of the Senate of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. 198. An act to amend title 17, United States Code, the Copyright Act to protect certain computer programs; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 459. An act to amend title 35, United States Code, with respect to the use of inventions in outer space; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. ANNUNZIO, from the Committee on House Administration, reported that that committee did on the following dates present to the President, for his approval, bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles.

On May 2, 1990:

H.J. Res. 546. Joint resolution designating May 13, 1990, as "Infant Mortality Awareness Day;"

H.R. 756. An act for the relief of Shelton Anthony Smith; and

H.J. Res. 553. Joint resolution to make technical changes in the Ethics Reform Act of 1989.

On May 3, 1990:

H.R. 1011. An act to provide for the establishment of the National Commission on Wildfire Disasters, to provide for increased planning and cooperation with local firefighting forces in the event of forest fires, and for other purposes.

ADJOURNMENT

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly, (at 2 o'clock and 30 minutes p.m.) under its previous order, the House adjourned until Monday, May 7, 1990, at 12 noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

3115. A letter from the Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. Act 8-199, "Board of Education Capital Construction Contracting Authority Act of 1990," and report, pursuant to D.C. Code section 1-233(c)(1); to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

3116. A letter from the Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. Act 8-200, "District of Columbia Family Support Act Federal Conformity Amendment Temporary Act of 1990," pursuant to D.C. Code section 1-233(c)(1); to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

3117. A letter from the Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. Act 8-201, "District of Columbia Retirement Reform Act of 1979 Amendment Act of 1990," and report, pursuant to D.C. Code section 1-233(c)(1); to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

3118. A letter from the Secretary of Education, transmitting a copy of the annual report of the Helen Keller National Center for Deaf-Blind Youths and Adults [HKNC] for the 1989 program year, pursuant to 29 U.S.C. 1903(b)(2); to the Committee on Education and Labor.

3119. A letter from the Assistant Secretary for Management and Budget, Department of Health and Human Services, transmitting a report of actions taken to increase competition for contracts for fiscal year 1989, pursuant to 41 U.S.C. 419; to the Committee on Government Operations.

3120. A letter from Deputy Associate Director for Collection and Disbursement, Department of the Interior, transmitting notification of proposed refunds of excess royalty payments in OCS areas, pursuant to 43 U.S.C. 1339(b); to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

3121. A letter from the Deputy Associate Director for Collection and Disbursement, Department of the Interior, transmitting notification of proposed refunds fo excess royalty payments in OCS areas, pursuant to 43 U.S.C. 1339(b); to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

3122. A letter from the Comptroller General, General Accounting Office, transmitting a report and recommendation concerning Mr. Norman R. Rick's claim for reimbursement of real estate expenses incurred when he relocated to accept an appointment from the private sector to a manpower shortage position with the Federal Government, pursuant to 31 U.S.C. 3702(d); to the Committee on the Judiciary.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. ROE: Committee on Science, Space, and Technology. H.R. 4522. A bill, to improve the information available to emergency response personnel in the field, and for other purposes (Rept. 101-473). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. ROE: Committee on Science, Space, and Technology. H.R. 4521. A bill to establish a Hydrogen Research and Development Program, with an amendment (Rept. 101-474). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 5 of rule X and clause 4 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BROOKS:

H.R. 4724. A bill to clarify the evidentiary requirement applicable to establishing foreign state compulsion as a defense to liability under the antitrust laws; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DREIER of California:

H.R. 4725. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide for a 15-percent income tax rate for all individuals, to repeal most deductions, credits, and exclusions for individuals, and to provide a one-time amnesty from tax penalties for certain taxpayers who pay previous underpayments of Federal tax to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ANDERSON (for himself, Mr. Bosco, and Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT):

H.R. 4726. A bill to require the Administrator of General Services to renovate the Pentagon Federal Office Building and Complex; to the Committee on Public Works and Transportation.

By Mr. STARK:

H.R. 4727. A bill to amend title XIX of the Social Security Act to require payment for prescription drug benefits as part of required Medicare cost-sharing for qualified Medicare beneficiaries; to the Committee on the Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. DEFAZIO (for himself, Mr. AUCOIN, and Mr. WYDEN):

H.R. 4728. A bill to amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act by designating a segment of the Klamath River in Oregon as a component of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

By Mr. HYDE:

H.R. 4729. A bill to amend the Federal Deposit Insurance Act to provide the same deposit insurance treatment for deposits of State and local government and nonprofit organization deferred compensation plans as is provided for deposits of Keogh plans and individual retirement accounts; to the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs.

By Mr. LIGHTFOOT:

H.R. 4730. A bill to exempt from the program ineligibility requirements of section 1221 of the Food Security Act of 1985 persons who produce an agricultural commodity on wetlands of two acres or less; to the Committee on the Agriculture.

By Mr. McMILLEN of Maryland (for himself and Mr. TOWNS):

H.R. 4731. A bill to amend the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 to provide additional grants to schools eligible for grants under chapter 1 of title I of such act that require students to maintain satisfactory grades as a condition of participation in extracurricular activities; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. NAGLE:

H.R. 4732. A bill to amend the Farm Credit Act of 1971 to allow borrowers to bring actions against institutions of the Farm Credit System in the Federal courts; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. PEASE (for himself, Mr. SCHUMER, and Mr. LANTOS)

H.R. 4733. A bill to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 to reform the provisions relating to child labor; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. SIKORSKI:

H.R. 4734. A bill to prescribe certain requirements for automatic garage door opening systems; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. TAUKE:

H.R. 4735. A bill to extend and amend programs under the State Dependent Care Development Grants Act; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Ms. OAKAR (for herself and Mr. HENRY):

H.J. Res. 562. Joint resolution designating October 21 through 27, 1990 as "National Humanities Week"; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

By Mr. SCHUETTE (for himself, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. HORTON, and Mr. SLATTERY):

H.J. Res. 563. Joint resolution designating the month of May 1990 as "Courtesy is Contagious Month"; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

By Mr. DANNEMEYER (for himself and Mr. ROHRABACHER):

H. Con. Res. 320. Concurrent resolution to support democracy in the Republic of Croatia; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. DREIER of California (for himself, Mr. MURPHY, and Mr. DANNEMEYER):

H. Con. Res. 321. Concurrent resolution to express the support of the House of Representatives for the progress toward democracy taking place in Yugoslavia; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

ADDITIONAL SPONSORS

Under clause 4 of rule XXII, sponsors were added to public bills and resolutions as follows:

H.R. 303: Mr. CONDIT.

H.R. 467: Mr. JONES of Georgia.

H.R. 1134: Mr. MILLER of Washington and Mr. TAUZIN.

H.R. 1249: Mr. SIKORSKI.

H.R. 1570: Mr. THOMAS of Georgia, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. ROE, and Mr. KOLTER.

H.R. 1676: Ms. MOLINARI and Mr. DYMALLY.

H.R. 1807: Mr. MARTINEZ.

H.R. 2460: Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York, Mr. HEFNER, Mr. VALENTINE, Mr. MONTGOMERY, and Mr. GOODLING.

H.R. 3037: Mr. VOLMER, Mr. ATKINS, Mr. ROWLAND of Georgia, Mr. COSTELLO, and Mr. HARRIS.

H.R. 3120: Ms. KAPTUR and Mrs. COLLINS.

H.R. 3270: Mr. WOLPE, Mr. EDWARDS of Oklahoma, Mr. DENNY SMITH, Mr. KANJORSKI, Mr. DICKINSON, Mr. RIDGE, Mr. MURPHY, Mrs. SAIKI, Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. GILLMOR, Mr. COSTELLO, Mr. IRELAND, Mr. FOGLIETTA, Mr. COOPER, Mr. BORSKI, Mr. BALLENGER, Mr. TAUKE, Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. BOUCHER, and Mr. DONNELLY.

H.R. 3389: Mr. CROCKETT, Mr. DIXON, Mr. FAUNTROY, Mr. TRAFICANT, Mr. DELLUMS, Mr. WOLF, Mr. ATKINS, Mr. GILMAN, Mr. MCCOLLUM, Mr. MILLER of California, and Mr. BROWN of California.

H.R. 3802: Mr. GINGRICH.

H.R. 3880: Mr. GIBBONS and Mr. TORRES.

H.R. 4084: Mr. DAVIS, Mr. SAVAGE, Mr. ATKINS, Mr. STOKES, Mr. CONYERS, Mr. CLAY, Mr. MFUME, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. DELLUMS, Mr. HAWKINS, Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, and Mr. FLAKE.

H.R. 4101: Mr. ATKINS.

H.R. 4160: Mr. APPLEGATE.

H.R. 4226: Mr. HASTERT.

H.R. 4254: Mr. RAY.

H.R. 4288: Mr. HAYES of Louisiana, Mr. PICKETT, and Mr. LANCASTER.

H.R. 4300: Mr. BERMAN, Mr. FRANK, and Mr. RANGEL.

H.R. 4564: Mr. PICKETT and Mr. SMITH of Vermont.

H.R. 4565: Mr. TRAFICANT, Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey, Mr. PURSELL, Ms. KAPTUR, Mr. WATKINS, Mr. RAHALL, Mr. HUGHES, Mr. CHAPMAN, Mr. NIELSON of Utah, Mr. TORRES, Mrs. MORELLA, Mrs. SAIKI, Mr. MURTHA, and Mr. VANDER JAGT.

H.R. 4575: Mr. KANJORSKI and Mr. STEARNS.

H.R. 4621: Mr. MCNULTY, Mr. BOSCO, and Mr. MARKEY.

H.R. 4652: Mr. MURPHY and Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut.

H.R. 4683: Mr. IRELAND, Mr. BUNNING, Mr. BALLENGER, Mr. ROTH, Mr. HUNTER, Mr. PAXON, Mr. WALSH, Mr. HUTTO, Mr. BARTLETT, Mr. ROBINSON, Mr. BLILEY, Mr. GOSS, Mr. DREIER of California, Mr. FIELDS, Mr. EDWARDS of Oklahoma, Mr. WEBER, Mr. COURTER, Mr. WELDON, Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT, Mr. DENNY SMITH, Mr. CLINGER, Mr. RITTER, Mr. GINGRICH, Mr. QUILLEN, Mr. DORNAN of California, Mr. MYERS of Indiana, Mr. BUECHNER, Mr. PORTER, Mr. COBLE, Mr. CALLAHAN, Mr. HEFLEY, Mr. SUNDQUIST, Mr. SKELTON, Mr. SMITH of New Jersey, Mr. MCCREERY, Mr. SENSENBRENNER, Mr. SOLOMON, and Mr. RHODES.

H.J. Res. 121: Mr. DONALD E. LUKENS, Mr. MCDERMOTT, Mr. GREEN, and Mr. SERRANO.

H.J. Res. 180: Mr. BLILEY.

H.J. Res. 268: Ms. SCHNEIDER.

H.J. Res. 467: Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois, Ms. OAKAR, Mr. ASPIN, Mrs. LLOYD, Mr. SPENCE, and Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota.

H.J. Res. 476: Mr. BROWN of California, Mr. BUSTAMANTE, Mr. DAVIS, Mr. EVANS, Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA, Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota, Mr. LAGOMARSINO, Mr. LANTOS, Mr. MCEWEN, Mr. NIELSON of Utah, and Mr. PALLONE.

H.J. Res. 487: Mr. BARNARD and Mr. PRICE.

H.J. Res. 512: Mr. ROBINSON, Mr. HILER, Ms. KAPTUR, Mr. MINETA, Mr. HEFNER, Mr. MCMILLEN of Maryland, Mr. SANGMEISTER, Mr. TRAXLER, Mr. BLILEY, Ms. OAKAR, Mr. COOPER, Mr. WOLPE, Mr. MCDERMOTT, Mr. SKELTON, Mr. SERRANO, Mr. YATRON, Mr. GALLO, Mrs. MORELLA, Mr. HARRIS, Mr. VALENTINE, Mr. TOWNS, Mr. APPLEGATE, Mr. BROWDER, Mr. MAZZOLI, Mr. MURPHY, Mr. GEKAS, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. SISISKY, Mr. OWENS of Utah, Mrs. COLLINS, Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey, Mr. SAWYER, Mr. OBERSTAR, Mr. DWYER of New Jersey, Mr. MCNULTY, Mrs. BENTLEY, Mr. BEVILL, Mr. DORNAN of California, Mr. CALLAHAN, Mr. LEHMAN of Florida, Mr. ROE, Mr. LEWIS of California, Mr. LANTOS, Mr. OLIN, Mr. HENRY, and Mr. KANJORSKI.

H.J. Res. 519: Mr. COOPER and Mr. JONTZ.

H.J. Res. 527: Mr. FAZIO.

H.J. Res. 543: Mr. INHOFE, Mr. ENGLISH, and Mr. KLECZKA.

H.J. Res. 556: Mr. BROWN of California, Mr. COLEMAN of Texas, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. MATSUI, Mr. MACHTLEY, Mr. LIGHTFOOT, Mr. RICHARDSON, Mr. GALLEGLY, Mr. ATKINS, Mr. HAYES of Illinois, Mr. VALENTINE, Mr. LENT, Mr. MILLER of Washington, Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut, Mr. WALGREN, Mr. TRAFICANT, Mrs. UNSOELD, Mr. BERMAN, Mr. CONYERS, Mr. GEREN, Mr. ROSE, Mr. COOPER, Mr. BENNETT, Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York, Mr. GREEN, Mr. STOKES, Mr. CAMPBELL of Colorado, Mr. LEVINE of California, Mrs. SAIKI, Mr. MCDERMOTT, Mr. MINETA, and Mr. VENTO.

H.J. Res. 558: Mr. WELDON and Mr. COX.

H. Con. Res. 178: Mr. LANCASTER, Ms. PELOSI, Mr. SMITH of Vermont, Mr. HORTON, and Mr. BUSTAMANTE.

H. Con. Res. 281: Mr. COYNE.

H. Res. 359: Mr. HASTERT.

DELETIONS OF SPONSORS FROM PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 4 of rule XXII, sponsors were deleted from public bills and resolutions as follows:

H.R. 3498: Mr. PAYNE of Virginia.

H.R. 4641: Mrs. BENTLEY.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

162. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the town meetings of Lincoln, MA, relative to the reduction of military spending; to the Committee on Armed Services.

163. Also, petition of the Interior Democrats, Fairbanks, AK, relative to the rights of the Baltic States to self-determination; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, May 3, 1990.

164. Also, petition of the Interior Democrats, Fairbanks, AK, relative to the use of public funds for abortions for victims of rape and incest; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

165. Also, petition of the town meeting of Lincoln, MA, relative to the unregulated dumping of low-level radioactive waste; jointly, to the Committees on Interior and Insular Affairs and Energy and Commerce.

SENATE—Thursday, May 3, 1990

(Legislative day of Wednesday, April 18, 1990)

The Senate met at 9:45 a.m., on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the Honorable PAUL SIMON, a Senator from the State of Illinois.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Richard C. Halverson, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Let us pray:

*The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised * * .—Luke 4:18.

Lord God, omnipotent, perfect in all Thy ways, on this National Day of Prayer, our hearts are filled with gratitude at the release of Robert Polhill and Frank Reed. We thank Thee that they were found to be in good health and for the unrestrained pleasure enjoyed by the families upon their release. May Thy blessings attend them as they return to life in their communities.

With heavy hearts, gracious Father in Heaven, we remember those who remain captives. We thank Thee that Thou hast not forgotten them, and we pray that we may never forget until they, too, are free. Give to their families the assurance of Your love, Your sovereign care and remind them and their loved ones in captivity that they are never alone, that You will never leave them nor forsake them.

Grant special wisdom to those who bear the burden of the release of the captives. Touch the lives of the captives with healing and strength; and encourage them every day of Your unfailing providence.

We pray in the name of Him whose mission was to "set at liberty them that are bruised * * *." Amen.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore [Mr. BYRD].

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, DC, May 3, 1990.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, section 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable PAUL SIMON, a Senator from the State of Illinois, to perform the duties of the Chair.

ROBERT C. BYRD,
President pro tempore.

Mr. SIMON thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the standing order, the majority leader is recognized.

THE JOURNAL

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Journal of the proceedings be approved to date.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SCHEDULE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, this morning, following the time for the two leaders, there will be a period for morning business not to extend beyond 10:30 a.m., with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 5 minutes each.

At 10:30 the Senate will begin consideration of S. 135, the Hatch Act reform bill. Senator ROTH will be recognized to offer an amendment. For the information of Senators, rollcall votes are anticipated today relative to amendments which may be offered to S. 135, and votes will occur, possibly throughout the day and well into the evening.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of my leader time, and I reserve all of the time of the distinguished Republican leader.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of morning business, not to extend beyond the hour of 10:30 a.m., with Senators permitted to speak therein for not to exceed 5 minutes each.

TASK FORCE ON THE U.S. ECONOMY IN THE 1990'S: PRODUCTIVITY GROWTH AND DEFENSE ADJUSTMENT

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, the ongoing political revolution in Warsaw Pact nations continues to change our world. The simple fact is the United States and its allies have won the cold war. Soviet communism, its political culture, economic system and military alliance, is all disintegrating.

These epic changes mean the end of the postwar era. Since World War II, our overriding goal has been the containment and, if possible, the roll-back of communism. Nothing symbolizes this era's end more than the pending reunification of Germany and potential termination of the four powers' control over Berlin.

These events have prompted a complete strategic review of U.S. national security and foreign policy. It is essential that this policy review lead to needed adjustments to United States strategies and policies because clearly the military threat posed by the Soviet Union—particularly in Europe—has changed fundamentally. There is more talk now of cooperating with the Soviet Government than of containing it. President Bush has been actively searching for ways to assist perestroika.

But while we usually think of the postwar era's end in geopolitical terms, we are coming to understand that, not by coincidence, it has also ended in an economic sense. As recently as the 1970's the United States was a dominating colossus in the world economy. That is no longer true as we enter the 1990's. The continuing slide in our relative standing to Japan and the European Community reflects both the success and the price of our cold war strategy.

During the past 40 years, we Americans have invested much more in international security than have our chief economic competitors. While the investment has paid a handsome return for U.S. foreign policy, it has also contributed to the relative decline of our economic strength. High public investment in the military sector has been accompanied by devoting less capital and technology and human resources to the performance of our civilian economy.

Unless a new major national security threat were to arise, I think we must now recognize that the United States has a golden opportunity to consolidate its victory in the global political competition by tending to our now eroding position in the global economic competition, because economic strength is increasingly the bottom line of global influence and leadership.

Our economic strength is what propelled the United States into our leading role in the early years of this century, and whether or not there will be a second American century stretching forward into the 2000's will almost certainly also be determined by our relative economic performance.

For this reason, the end of the postwar era demands a strategic review of economic policy just as much as it demands a strategic review of national security and foreign policy. The distinguished leader, Senator MITCHELL, has shown great foresight by calling for such a formal review. Today, he has announced the creation of a Task Force on the U.S. Economy in the 1990's: Productivity Growth and Defense Adjustment.

I am honored to have been asked to chair the Task Force on the U.S. Economy in the 1990's, which consists of Senator ADAMS, Senator BENTSEN, Senator BINGAMAN, Senator BOREN, Senator CONRAD, Senator EXON, Senator HOLLINGS, Senator KENNEDY, Senator LEVIN, Senator NUNN, Senator PELL, and Senator SHELBY who is here on the floor now.

In short, our task is to study ways of facilitating economic and social adjustment to lower defense spending as well as improving the rate of growth of U.S. productivity and overall economic growth which, of course, are the ultimate determinants of our standard of living and economic strength.

We need a coherent national strategy to manage this transition and capitalize upon the opportunity represented by the peace dividend. Piecemeal reaction to these epic changes will not be sufficient to keep America strong in economic, military, or diplomatic terms.

There have been a number of warning signs over the last decade of the need for a new national economic strategy. One has been our emergence as the world's largest debtor Nation. Our growing foreign debt represents a growing loss of control over our economic destiny. It is felt almost immediately in the area of monetary policy, with the level of our interest rates depending more and more on the willingness of foreigners to buy debt sold by the U.S. Treasury. We are adding international debt today at the rate of $1 billion every 3 days and we are estimated to reach a level of $1 trillion of outstanding foreign debt owed by us to others by 1992.

We have seen this in terms of bargain-basement purchases of critical U.S. assets, natural resources, companies, and technologies by foreign buyers who are often buying those assets with very cheap dollars.

The 1980's also saw an erosion of important segments of our industrial and technological base. In recent years, former and current officials in the defense community have been testifying before Congress that the loss of American technological supremacy in certain key industries is an important and growing factor. Business men and women in many industries continue to feel they are under siege.

Underlying these trends was a continuing pattern of poor performance in productivity. Productivity is the key to our growth and living standards. Between 1968 and 1988, labor productivity rose only by one-third as much as between 1948 and 1968. In 1988, U.S. productivity growth was considerably less than that of each of the six other leading industrial economies.

Perhaps the most alarming warning sign of all to emerge in the 1980's was the change in Americans' perceptions about their country's standing in the world. Recent polls find that only 29 percent of Americans believe the United States to be the world's leading economic power; twice as many, 58 percent, believe Japan to be. Similarly, 64 percent believe the U.S. economy will be dominated by foreign companies within 10 years. Such pessimism is startling; for over 200 years, optimism has defined America.

The end of the postwar era and the emergence of national teamwork can make America the world's leading economic power—with our best efforts—for a long time to come. A significant peace dividend poses new challenges and opportunities for America as we provide for an orderly transition for communities and companies affected by major cuts in defense spending and work to place the economy on a sounder footing. If we do this well we will have the means to deal with the other challenges facing our people and our Nation.

Again, I commend Majority Leader MITCHELL for his initiative and vision. I look forward to working with my colleagues on the Task Force on the U.S. Economy in the 1990's to meet these challenges.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, today the distinguished majority leader, Senator MITCHELL, announced the formation of a Senate Democratic Task Force on U.S. Economy in the 1990's, on which I welcome the opportunity to serve. The task force is charged with development of a plan whereby the Nation can absorb substantial cutbacks in defense spending in a way that will lead to a revitalized economy, enhanced U.S. competitiveness, and increased jobs, education, and opportunities for all our citizens.

At this watershed in history when our democratic ideals are triumphing around the globe, there is no more pressing challenge than that of restoring U.S. economic strength so that America can solve its pressing domestic problems and fully exert its potential for world leadership. It is unconscionable for the greatest Nation on Earth to have to choose between fully funding Head Start for our inner city children and lending a helping hand to the emerging democracies in Eastern Europe. By treating impending defense cutbacks as an opportunity, rather than a problem, we can focus America's talent and resources on our real economic and social challenges at home and abroad.

My recent trip to the Soviet Union convinced me that the extraordinary changes over the past months are irreversible. There really is a peace dividend, and we must not throw it away. I am confident that we can easily reduce Pentagon spending in real terms by over $20 billion in 1991—and by increasing amounts in each succeeding year through 1995. This will provide the Nation with a peace dividend of more than $200 billion over the next 5 years. And we can devote that dividend to meeting essential domestic needs—without raising taxes on the American people.

To direct that dividend toward meeting national priorities—rather than permitting it to be squandered in a sea of special interests—I have proposed the establishment of a new National Needs Trust Fund. Savings from the military budget should be put there, and spending from the trust fund should be limited to designated, critical investments—such as education, health care, housing, research and development, reviving our faltering infrastructure, and converting military plants to peacetime production—all purposes that reach to the foundation of our economic strength and our true security for the future.

The challenge of economic conversion offers an unparalleled opportunity to turn the talents of our most highly skilled citizens to serve the Nation's highest interest. Engineers and contractors who once built rockets and tanks can now build the bridges, airports, and rapid rail and telecommunications systems that will be the heart of our 21st century economy. Scientists in no-longer-needed defense labs can craft solutions to the massive problems of cleaning the environment, and creating safe—and nonnuclear—energy sources.

Economic conversion is more than adjustment assistance to displaced workers, discarded subcontractors, and disrupted communities—essential as that aid is. It is also the liberation of talent and treasure to revitalize our free enterprise system—and assure that America never becomes an economic colony of Germany and Japan.

Those critics who decry such domestic investments as big spending programs should consider the forthcoming Boston College computer study of the peace dividend. The study simulates the impact on the economy of shifting $20 billion out of defense into education. While defense cuts initially eliminate jobs, spending the same amount for education more than offsets that loss.

If the shift were in effect now, GNP would be $6.3 billion higher; 550,000 more people would be working. And their additional income would provide $1.4 billion more in taxes for the Federal Treasury and $350 million more for States and localities—without any increase in tax rates. And these numbers do not even attempt to measure the long-term benefit to the Nation from a better educated, more productive work force.

All spending is not equal. Military spending is essential to our security, but a drag on our economy. Investing in America is sound social policy—and sound economics, too.

The challenge of economic conversion is great. But the opportunity it affords is even greater. Through skillful economic conversion, we can revitalize the economy, address our unmet domestic needs, and ensure America's leadership role as we enter the unchartered terrain of the post-cold war world.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Delaware is recognized.

Mr. BIDEN. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. BIDEN pertaining to the introduction of S. 2568 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SHELBY. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. SHELBY pertaining to the introduction of Senate Joint Resolution 304 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KERREY). The Senator from Maine is recognized.

Mr. COHEN. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. COHEN pertaining to the introduction of S. 2568 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

TINA PANETTA

Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, each of us know how dependent we are on our personal staffs and at least I do not acknowledge that enough in thanking everyone on my staff. It is not only our personal staff and it is not only the committee staff. It is the pages; it is the people who report what we have to say. It is the people who look after security in this body. It is a host of people who are unacknowledged who should be acknowledged.

The other day I was down in the Senate dining room talking with a marvelous Italian-American woman by the name of Tina Panetta, who said that she is going to be retiring later this year. I asked her to put down on paper for me her life story. She is one of these people who have just been very friendly, very helpful to those of us who are in the Senate but also to our constituents and our guests. For 23 years she has been working in the Senate doing a marvelous job. Her life story is a story of America.

She was born in Italy, married over there at the age of 21. She and her husband came to the United States. Her husband preceded her. They have three children who have gone through college. One went through law school. It is a great story. It is not only the Members of the Senate who contribute to seeing that our Government operates. It is all the many other people who do not get recognition. Tina Panetta of our Senate is one of those.

I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, to have printed in the RECORD the biography that she wrote for me at my request.

There being no objection, the biography was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BIOGRAPHY OF TINA PANETTA

I was born on Nov. 13, 1925 in the region of Abruzzi, Italy, in a small town called Ovindoli. At the young age of 21, I married Ettore Panetta. I had two sons, John who was born April 11th, 1949 and Dino who was born on July 13th, 1951.

Times were hard for us in Ovindoli. Both my father and my brother came to the United States to look for work. My mother remained in Italy. My husband also needed to find some work, so he traveled to Venezuela where the jobs were abundant. He was gone for five years. Soon after my husband's departure my mother also immigrated to the United States to be with her husband. I was left on my own for five years until Ettore returned.

In July of 1955, upon my husband's return, we decided to immigrate to the United States—specifically Washington, DC. After being here one week, Ettore was able to find a job as a bus boy at the Statler Hilton and I found a job at Sholl's cafeteria as a kitchen helper.

The most humiliating thing about coming here to the United States was not knowing how to read and write English. John, our son, was nearly refused acceptance into first grade since he could barely speak English. From that point, my husband and I made a decision that at all costs, we wanted our children to be sent to the best schools. We also decided to make America our home for life and five years after our arrival in this country we became American citizens.

On January 19th, 1961, the day prior to Kennedy's inauguration, I gave birth to our youngest child, Maria Teresa.

In January of 1968, I began to work as a waitress in the Senate Dining Room. Not being able to read and write English made it difficult at first. However, with time I learned the English language and I also learned the menu!

With our many years of sacrifices and much hard work, my husband and I sent our children to Catholic grade school and high school. Two of our children went on to Maryland University. Our oldest son decided to go to Georgetown University and then went on to the University of Miami Law School.

For my husband and me, having been able to finance our children's education has been a great sense of pride. It wasn't easy to do since the language and the country were new to us.

As my retirement approaches, I can look back at my 23 years in the Senate Dining Room as a happy time. Retirement brings mixed emotions to mind. I'll greatly miss everyone. However, I am looking forward to enjoying my grandchildren.

It's been a pleasure to meet and serve many Senators and their families. The recognition that I've received over the years has been heart-warming. I'll always think of all of the Senators that I've met as part of my own family. I hope to enjoy my years of retirement and I look forward to visiting the Hill and keeping in touch with everyone.

Mr. SIMON. When I thank Tina Panetta, what I am doing also is thanking the many others who contribute to the operation of this Capitol Building and this Government.

Mr. President, I question the presence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan [Mr. LEVIN] is recognized.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. LEVIN pertaining to the introduction of S. 2569 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. LIEBERMAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut is recognized.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. LIEBERMAN pertaining to the submission of Senate Concurrent Resolution 126 are located in today's RECORD under "Submission of Concurrent and Senate Resolutions.")

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROTH. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR SPARK MATSUNAGA

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, when our colleague Spark Matsunaga died on April 15, we lost a great Senator, a war hero, an advocate of peace, a poet, and a friend to all of us.

Spark Matsunaga and I shared in particular a love of poetry. He wrote many poems in the traditional Japanese Haiku form and succeeded in establishing the position of American Poet Laureate.

In remembering Sparky I am reminded of the saying, "You will not find poetry anywhere unless you bring some of it with you." And that he did.

Sparky's personal poetry manifested itself in his warmth and friendship, which he extended to all of us. He saw poetry in the people around him, which led him into the many close friendships he formed over the years.

A clear manifestation of his warmth and generosity was his practice of bringing Hawaiian visitors into the Senate dining room as his guests of honor. It was a familiar sight to see Sparky sitting at the center table surrounded by beaming constituents.

Sparky was a man with intense knowledge of war and a deep commitment to peace. As a highly decorated member of the All-Nisei 100th Battalion of the 42d Regimental Combat Team—the most decorated in the history of the United States—he received the Bronze Star and two Purple Hearts. His familiarity with the pain of war gave him special determination in his fight for peace. He succeeded after 21 years in establishing the U.S. Institute for Peace, which awards graduate degrees to those who help settle disputes within and among nations.

He also worked to compensate those who endured unnecessary pain during World War II by leading the fight for reparations for Japanese-Americans who were interned during that conflict.

Spark Matsunaga will be missed by all of us and will be remembered for his many accomplishments as a soldier and a legislator. But more importantly, Sparky will be remembered for his poetry of the soul, which he shared with all of us.

TERRY ANDERSON

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise to inform my colleagues that today marks the 1,874th day that Terry Anderson has been held in captivity in Beirut.

MAJ. GEN. BURTON R. MOORE, DIRECTOR OF AIR FORCE LEGISLATIVE LIAISON

Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, on behalf of the entire Senate Armed Services Committee and particularly Senator WARNER and myself, I want to take this opportunity to recognize Maj. Gen. Burton R. Moore for his distinguished service to our committee and the U.S. Senate. General Moore has served for the last 4 years in Air Force legislative liaison. In that capacity, he was our direct link with the Secretary of the Air Force and the Air Force staff.

In the Armed Services Committee's daily work, access to timely, accurate information is absolutely critical. General Moore was instrumental in providing complete and accurate information to the committeee on the full spectrum of Air Force issues. Whether he was responding to one of the inquiries which we forward on behalf of our constituents or addressing questions regarding a critical weapons system program, General Moore insured that we were fully informed.

Today, more than ever, we must have appropriate facts available to make informed decisions in constructing a balanced defense that ensures quality people and quality forces to provide a credible deterrent. General Moore's thorough understanding of the congressional environment, fiscal constraints and realities, and the intricacies of the legislative process allowed him to coordinate and supervise the highly successful actions of Air Force legislative liaison in that regard.

We have indeed been fortunate to have Burt Moore as our liaison to the Air Force. As the Air Force's ambassador on Capitol Hill, he served with distinction in a demanding and highly visible position. He has earned our gratitude for the contributions he has made to the defense of our country. I know my colleagues on the Armed Services Committee and in the Senate join me in wishing General Moore continued success in his new assignment as Director of Operations of U.S. Central Command.

Senator WARNER and I have written our personal thanks to General Moore but I want to take this opportunity to highlight his service for our colleagues.

THE NEED FOR EXPORT CONTROL REFORM

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I rise to discuss an issue of great importance to the emerging democracies of Eastern Europe, the unity of our Western Alliance, as well as the exporters of this country. That issue is the need to reform dramatically our export control regime. Two important events relating to this issue have occurred this week that I would like to comment on. Yesterday, the White House announced a proposal to loosen certain controls, and today, the House Foreign Affairs Committee reported out legislation to reauthorize and reform the Export Administration Act [EAA], which expires this September.

Mr. President, I don't think the timing of these two events is any coincidence. The administration has been under pressure from our allies and Congress to come up with new controls for Eastern Europe. The White House doesn't want Congress to micromanage or tie its hands before the Cocom meeting in June. However, the United States has traditionally been the odd-man-out in Cocom, and if the United States doesn't move to loosen its hard line stance, the entire multilateral system could fall apart. I think the action taken by the subcommittee and potential further reforms by the full committee got the administration moving and led to yesterday's announcement. The Congress has played an instrumental role in moving the administration on this issue and must continue to exercise careful oversight.

Mr. President, of the two events which have occurred this week, the administration's proposal is the more amazing, but the House action is the more significant. I must say, I am pleased that the administration has finally seen the light and come up with a meaningful export control proposal. Unfortunately, I don't think it goes far enough toward recognizing the new realities of Eastern Europe. In addition, the proposal is very vague. Many details are yet to be known, and quite frankly, it's details which have done so much harm to our exporters in the past. I am also concerned that, in only creating a favorable consideration zone for computers up to the green line, not only will all licenses still have to go to Cocom—which takes about 4 weeks—but the Defense Department will still have its nose in the process. For too long, DOD has had de facto veto power and has overstepped the bounds of its legitimate role in the process. I might also add that U.S. governing procedures for favorable consideration must be in line with our allies. Otherwise, we are imposing a unilateral control on U.S. exporters. I only hope that the administration will flush out some of these details and will go to Paris with enough flexibility to agree to a new system which is credible to our allies and will loosen the stranglehold on our exporters.

The House, on the other hand, has taken a dramatic step in the direction of a more rational and responsible export control system. I commend

Chairman FASCELL and subcommittee Chairman GEJDENSON for their leadership on this issue. Unlike the typically timed White House response, the Foreign Affairs Committee has taken bold action in creating a license-free Cocom and decontrolling all items up to the China green line. They have also addressed many of the issues which have plagued the system for years, namely, interagency disputes. They have restricted the role of the Defense Department and have created a better process for jurisdictional disputes between State and Commerce.

Mr. President, my bill, S. 2207, makes many similar reforms to the EAA. It is imperative that we take decisive action this year to help the emerging democracies of Eastern Europe, and to keep our exporters competitive in the global marketplace. I look forward to working with my colleagues on the Banking Committee in the coming weeks to ensure that the Senate contributes significantly in our effort to create a more effective and efficient export control regime.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter 10 of my colleagues and I recently sent to the President on this issue appear in the RECORD at the end of my statement.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,
Washington, DC, April 27, 1990.

The PRESIDENT,
The White House,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: We welcome the statements that you and officials in your administration have made on the need for reform of export controls to Eastern Europe. We firmly believe the new political and economic realities of Eastern Europe should be matched by fundamental reforms of the multilateral export control system. We were encouraged that the February CoCom agreement began the process of easing restrictions on high technology exports to Eastern Europe. We are concerned, however, that if the pace of our response is not accelerated, our CoCom allies will move ahead without us, endangering the very existence of an effective multilateral control system and putting our exporters at a further disadvantage in Eastern Europe.

Thus, we are following the events leading up to the high level CoCom meeting in June with a great deal of interest. As that meeting approaches we urge you to take the steps necessary to ensure that the U.S. brings a proposal to the table that meets the challenges posed by the dramatic developments in Eastern Europe while continuing to protect our national security by ensuring that adequate safeguards are in place to prevent diversion of goods and technology to the Soviet Union.

We are mindful that unnecessary delays and conflicts between the relevant agencies within the Administration could result in the U.S. bringing a "lowest common denominator" proposal to CoCom in June. It is unlikely that such a proposal would pass the credibility test with our allies.

The United States has pressed for human rights for the oppressed people of Eastern Europe for the past four decades. At the heart of those human rights is the ability for the people of Eastern Europe to communicate and travel freely. These freedoms are now politically possible. However, as a practical matter, they cannot be fully realized without the necessary infrastructure in place. Advanced telecommunications equipment and computers for civilian use are needed to develop that infrastructure. We support steps to make these products more readily available to those Eastern European nations that have committed to adopt the necessary safeguards. In addition, we believe that the pace of political and economic freedom in these countries will be advanced by making products in other sectors such as medical equipment, banking, environmental protection, and transportation more readily available as well.

We understand that the National Security Review, aimed at reevaluating the strategic threat posed by the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, is now complete. With this study in hand, we hope that the U.S. will move forward in formulating a bold and credible proposal for the June CoCom meeting. Failure to formulate such a proposal will not only endanger the unity of CoCom, it will also surely provide added impetus to achieve export control reform through legislation.

We appreciate your consideration of our views on this important issue.

Sincerely,

Alan Cranston, Brock Adams, Bob Graham, John F. Kerry, Donald W. Riegle, Jr., Richard Bryan, Christopher J. Dodd, Mark O. Hatfield, Albert Gore, Jr., Joseph I. Lieberman, Alan J. Dixon.

THE DEATH OF THE MOST REVEREND VINCENT J. HINES

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, the people of Connecticut have lost a beloved religious leader this past week, with the passing of the former bishop of Norwich, Vincent J. Hines.

Bishop Hines was a native of Connecticut. One of five sons of John and Nora Richford Hines, of New Haven, the bishop began his career in the church at age 12, as an altar boy, and after graduation from New Haven High School, he attended St. Thomas Seminary in Bloomfield. After further study at a seminary in France, Reverend Hines served as an assistant pastor of St. James Church in Manchester for 6 years before volunteering as a chaplain in the Army.

In the Army, Father Hines served with Gen. Omar Bradley's 12th Army group as it drove through Europe to Berlin. As one of the first Americans to enter Berlin after Hitler's downfall, he gained an immediate impression of the widespread devastation and suffering left by the war, and he reported this personally to Pope Pius XXII in 1945.

After receiving a doctorate in canon law from the Lateran University in Rome, Reverend Hines returned to Connecticut to serve in a number of capacities with the archdiocese of Hartford. In 1960, he was named bishop of the diocese of Norwich by Pope John XXIII.

As bishop, Reverend Hines saw his flock through difficult times in the sixties and seventies. He attended Vatican II, and he subsequently made ecumenism one of his primary concerns, lecturing on it, and appointing a diocesan commission to promote ecumenical goals. In addition, he oversaw the establishment of three diocesan high schools and the opening of 10 new parishes during his tenure.

Those of us who knew Bishop Hines will long remember his quite, compassionate manner. He was not a fiery orator who enjoyed speaking in front of large crowds. But Bishop Hines' great devotion to the clergy who served under him, as well as to the lay people of his diocese, made him a leader by example. Rarely in this life does one encounter an individual who labors so tirelessly for the well-being of others.

As one fortunate enough to have known Bishop Hines, I am greatly saddened by his passing. But even as I mourn, I cannot help but give thanks for his wonderful work, and for the fine example he set for all of us.

Mr. President, I ask that obituaries from the Norwich Bulletin and the Hartford Courant further detailing the life and accomplishments of Bishop Hines be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the obituaries were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follow:

BISHOP VINCENT HINES; LED DIOCESE OF NORWICH

(By Gerald Renner)

Bishop Vincent J. Hines, who served in the Roman Catholic Diocese of Norwich from 1960 to 1975, died Monday at St. Francis Hospital and Medical Center in Hartford. He was 77.

Hines retired for health reasons in 1975. He lived in West Hartford.

As the second bishop of the Norwich diocese, Hines was responsible for the establishment of 10 parishes and three diocesan high schools; Xavier, a school for boys in Middletown; Mercy, a school for girls in Middletown; and St. Bernard's, a coeducational school in the Uncasville section of Montville.

Hines took particular pride in having been a "council father," a distinction won through participation in all sessions of the Second Vatican Council between 1962 and 1965.

He took a special interest in the council's decree on ecumenism and lectured on the subject when he returned to the diocese, which covers four counties in Connecticut and has about 200,000 Catholic residents.

Hines also established a Diocesan Ecumenical Commission to promote Christian unity and a Senate of Priests.

The Most Rev. Daniel P. Reilly, the current Norwich bishop, Monday described Hines as "a devoted and capable priest" known for his kindness and patience who "gave an example of meticulous and tireless labor" to fellow priests.

Hines was named bishop of Norwich by Pope John XXIII, Nov. 27, 1959. He succeeded Bishop Bernard J. Flanagan, the first bishop of Norwich, who was transferred to Worcester, Mass.

Before being named bishop, Hines had earned attention as a church lawyer for the Archdiocese of Hartford in the 1950s. He served in a number of legal positions with the diocesan court system, including presiding judge of the Metropolitan Marriage Tribunal. He later held the two top administrative positions in the diocese—vice chancellor and chancellor.

A native of New Haven, Hines was one of five sons of John and Nora Richford Hines. He was educated at St. Francis Catholic School and New Haven High School. He prepared for the priesthood at St. Thomas Seminary in Bloomfield.

Hines studied philosophy and theology from 1932 to 1937 at the Seminaire St. Sulpice in Issy-les-Moulieaux, France.

He was ordained a priest May 2, 1937, in the seminary chapel.

Returning to the United States, he spent six years as assistant pastor at St. James Church in Manchester.

In 1943, Hines volunteered to serve as a chaplain in the U.S. Army. Fluent in German, he was stationed first at a camp for German prisoners-of-war in Colorado.

Later, he served with a hospital unit in England and on the staff of Gen. Omar Bradley after the Allied invasion in Normandy, France.

Hines was awarded five battle ribbons and the Bronze Star. The bishop of Verdun, France, presented him a Silver Medal for his assistance to the French people.

After the war, he studied at the Lateran University in Rome, earning a doctorate in canon law in 1949.

Hines leaves six nieces, June and Anne Hines, both of East Haven; Mary Walsh of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Margaret Holland of Killingworth; Regina Singer of Old Saybrook; and Josephine Vuolo of New Haven, and three nephews, Vincent and Walter Hines, both of New Haven, and F. Durk Hines of North Haven.

A funeral mass is scheduled for Friday at 11 a.m. in the Cathedral of St. Patrick, 213 Broadway, Norwich. Burial will be in St. Joseph Cemetery on Route 12 in Norwich.

Calling hours are Wednesday from 2 to 9 p.m. at the Bishop's Residence, 274 Broadway, Norwich. The body will be transferred to the cathedral in Norwich Thursday at 2 p.m., and will lie in state until the funeral mass.

Memorial donations may be made to the Bishop Vincent J. Hines Memorial School Scholarship Fund, P.O. Box 527, Norwich 06360.

The Thomas L. Neilan and Sons Funeral Home, 12 Ocean Ave., New London, is handling arrangements.

BISHOP HINES DIES; A "PATIENT SHEPHERD"
(By Susann Viafora)

NORWICH.—Members of the Catholic community were saddened yesterday by news of the death of the Most Rev. Vincent J. Hines, former bishop of the Diocese of Norwich.

Bishop Hines, 77, died yesterday at St. Francis Hospital in Hartford. His health had been steadily worsening over the past few years and had reached a critical point about three weeks ago.

Among the many accomplishments of his 15-year career in Norwich, friends credit Bishop Hines with initiating the construction of five new secondary parochial schools througout eastern Connecticut. In 1962, he was summoned to Rome to attend the Second Vatican Council—but that wasn't the first time he'd been called to Rome on important business.

During World War II, Bishop Hines served as chaplain with the 12th Army Group, which drove through France and Belgium toward Berlin. He was one of the first Americans to reach Berlin after Hitler's fall. Pope Pius XXII soon called on Bishop Hines to brief him on conditions in the city, according to the Rev. Richard Fontaine, who served as the bishop's secretary for 10 years.

On one occasion, Bishop Hines had to fly from Berlin to Paris and continue by train to Rome to meet alone with the Pope for two hours, Fontaine said.

Fontaine remembered Bishop Hines as a "brilliant, kind" person, and "a real churchman." But he also said the bishop was a shy and retiring man, an introvert who did not like to stand up in front of a crowd. "That was a great cross for him," Fontaine said.

"I loved him, I can say that very easily. He was the bishop who loved his priests the most and was responsible for all. He really gave his health to the building of the high schools in the diocese."

In a press statement issued late yesterday, the Most Rev. Daniel P. Reilly, Bishop Hines' successor, described him as "a kind and patient shepherd of his flock. Bishop Hines gave himself completely to the task of serving his people. To his priests he gave an example of meticulous and tireless labor in the Lord's vineyard."

Bishop Hines grew up in New Haven. As a 12-year-old altar boy, he ran errands and did odd jobs after school for a local pharmacist for $5 a week. He was ordained in 1937, and was awarded a doctorate in Canon Law in Rome in 1949. After serving in the Hartford Diocese for several years, he was installed as the Norwich Diocese's second bishop on March 17, 1960—a snowy St. Patrick's Day.

He retired in 1975 in failing health. "That was something that was very painful for him, because mentally, he was as sharp as ever," recalled Monsignor Joseph King, a close friend of the bishop's who served with him as chancellor for 13 years. King is now in residence at St. Francis of Assisi in Middletown.

"Even though he retired years ago, he kept his interest in the diocese, and followed closely the events in the diocese," King said.

King also described Bishop Hines as a kind, gentle man. "His motto was, 'In charity and patience.' He exemplified that in his relationships with his priests and with his people."

"He came to serve," King said. "He had a great high sense of service, where you want to do a job right."

Shortly after assuming his diocesean post, the bishop began to appoint pastors to create eight new parishes in the region, King said.

During the latter part of his career—the turbulent 1960s and '70s—Bishop Hines saw many social and political upheavals as well as a steady decline in the numbers of people entering the priesthood and religious orders. "He had the responsibility of implementing what the Vatican decreed, yet (there were) troublesome times throughout the world," King said.

"He was a pastoral bishop. He thought a lot about the welfare of his people," King said.

The funeral Mass will be Friday at 11 a.m. at St. Patrick's Cathedral, 213 Broadway, Norwich. Principal celebrant will be Archbishop John F. Whealon of Hartford. Burial will follow in the Priest's Plot, St. Joseph Cemetery, Route 12, Norwich. Bishop Hines' body will lie in state at the cathedral on Thursday until the funeral Mass. Bishop Reilly of Norwich will celebrate a Pontifical Mass for the repose of Bishop Hines' soul at 7 p.m. Thursday.

THE S&L BAILOUT TAX

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, earlier this week, while considering the dire emergency supplemental bill, the Senate engaged in a spirited debate on the issue of working capital to be used to bail out the rascals in the S&L industry. The leadership of the Budget and Appropriations Committees apparently considered it a dire emergency that we approve another $33 billion in bailout bootie—off-budget, outside the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings calculation, out of sight out of mind. We were told, "Don't worry, it is only an accounting technicality. That $33 billion isn't really real, so we don't want to distort things by putting it in the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings calculations." What nonsense.

Of course, Mr. President, that $33 billion is all too real. It is money we will spend on a bunch of dubious S&L assets that nobody else will purchase even at the radical discounts being offered by the Government. The bankers euphemistically call such assets nonperforming, which is a polite way of saying they are an ungodly menagerie of dogs, turkeys, and white elephants. So that $33 billion is going to be spent, but don't believe this hooey to the effect that the $33 billion will come back to the Treasury in future years as the assets are sold off.

Every dime, or, more to the point, every billion we spend on the S&L bailout is money down a rabbit hole. It is an expenditure not an investment. That money is, by and large, gone. The only reason some people want the bailout billions taken out of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings calculations is because, if they were on-budget, then the nominal deficit would skyrocket and—lo and behold—someone might try to make the case that we should raise taxes in order to pay for all the red ink.

Democrats and Republicans alike prefer the irresponsible, feel-good politics of "read my lips, no new taxes." Of course, this very "read my lips" slogan is a fraud and deceit worthy of any S&L con artist. Because the fact is we are indeed paying taxes for the S&L bailout and for the rest of the run-amok deficit spending of the Federal Government. I am not talking about the shadow taxes proposed by Messrs. Bush and Darman—the whole raft of user fees, ticket surcharges, transaction fees, you name it, adding up to some $13.9 billion in new revenue-raisers proposed by the President for 1991.

No, I am talking about two specific new taxes that are taking untold billions out of the pockets of ordinary working Americans. The first tax is the FICA payroll tax, which was increased yet again on January 1, and is racking up a billion a week in surplus revenues—revenues that are not being spent on Social Security, but on the S&L bailout, on the Pentagon, on welfare, on the whole range of Government programs.

The second tax is even more costly to the American people. It is the tax of higher interest rates—interest rates that have climbed a full percentage point since the Treasury's last refinancing auction. Simply put, to finance the S&L bailout and all the other deficit expenditures of the U.S. Government, the Treasury has become the 900-pound gorilla of world capital markets. It soaks up hundreds of billions of dollars in available capital, crowds out private borrowers, preempts money that would otherwise go to investment and R&D, and runs up the cost of mortgages and other consumer loans. The Treasury has driven up the cost of capital—interest rates—so high and so precipitously that America's and the world's economic prosperity is threatened. Can you imagine a more devastating, regressive, irresponsible tax than these rising interest rates? "Read my lips," indeed.

Mr. President, on this score, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article from this morning's Washington Post titled "Indirect Costs of S&L Bailout Rise—Treasury Borrowing Seen Boosting Rates." Ponder this article next time you hear that $33 billion for the S&L bailout is only "technical," not real. Ponder it next time you hear some irresponsible politician utter the deceit, "Read my lips, no new taxes."

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, May 3, 1990]

INDIRECT COSTS OF S&L BAILOUT RISE—TREASURY BORROWING SEEN BOOSTING RATES

(By Steven Mufson)

Even though the Bush administration has not raised taxes to pay for the cleanup of the savings and loan industry, Americans are already paying for the S&L bailout in other ways.

Bond traders, economists and government officials agree that the bailout costs are forcing the Treasury to borrow more, pushing up interest rates for the government and consumers alike.

"We're paying for it in higher interest rates," said Lawrence Chimerine, an economic consultant. "Higher interest rates will mean lower investment, lower productivity growth and ultimately lower living standards" Even if the president sticks to his "no new taxes" campaign pledge, Chimerine said, "We pay for it [the bailout] one way or another."

Administration sources concede that the need to borrow money for the savings and loan cleanup is already having "a noticeable effect on interest rates." At a press conference yesterday announcing the government's regular quarterly auction of Treasury bills to cover the deficit, Treasury Undersecretary Robert Glauber said that the cost of the thrift bailout "is obviously a demand on the market for funds."

This comes at a time when interest rates are already being pushed up by a variety of factors other than the bailout.

Since the last Treasury refinancing auction, interest rates in the United States have climbed by more than 1 percentage point, increasing the cost of financing the federal deficit by more than $100 million a year just for next week's $10 billion offering of 30-year Treasury notes, Platt estimated. Mortgage rates have also increased for homeowners.

The need to raise money for the Resolution Trust Corp., the agency responsible for running insolvent thrifts, is "adding to the overall demand for credit and contributing to higher interest rates," agreed Richard Peach, an economist for the Mortgage Bankers Association of America.

Because so many other factors have contributed to rising interest rates recently, however, it makes it difficult for economists—or voters—to pinpoint the price paid for the thrift cleanup. This muffles the political effect.

"It is hard to quantify," said the head government bond trader for a major New York-based securities firm.

Elliott Platt, an economist in the government bond department of Donaldson Lufkin & Jenrette, estimated that $500 million of the $10 billion auction of one-year Treasury bills today will go to finance the RTC. The head trader of another firm estimated that the size of the auctions of one-year Treasury bills would rise by $400 million every four weeks in order to cover the working capital needs of the RTC.

By the end of the year, the Treasury will need to borrow $42.7 billion to cover costs of taking over insolvent thrifts, Glauber said.

Economists caution that much of the money raised for the savings and loan bailout will go back into the nation's savings pool and need not lead to an increase in interest rates. That also makes it difficult to measure the impact of savings and loan bailout borrowing on interest rates. "It is hard to factor out," Glauber said.

But Chimerine said "it would be optimistic to assume there will be no impact whatsoever. Not all of the money goes back to the nation's savings pool, and besides, it has a negative effect on the psychology of the market."

The government bond market is usually a leading indicator for much of the rest of the market, and Peach said the "mood and tone of the market is quite negative."

In a speech at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government on Tuesday night, the Bush administration's budget director, Richard G. Darman, also mentioned government borrowing for the savings and loan cleanup as one factor raising interest rates.

In the last three months, interest rates overseas have risen to levels that rival U.S. rates and will mean the United States will have to compete more vigorously with other countries for investment funds.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Let me point out, by way of emphasis, the lead line of this article, which says:

Even though the Bush administration has not raised taxes to pay for the cleanup of the savings and loan industry, Americans are already paying for the S&L bailout in other ways. * * *

"We are paying for it in higher interest rates," said Lawrence Chimerine, an economic consultant, formerly with Chase Econometrics, "Higher interest rates will mean lower investment, lower productivity growth and ultimately lower living standards."

Further on in the article, Treasury Under Secretary Robert Glauber said that the cost of the thrift bailout "is obviously a demand on the market for funds."

Going further in the article by way of emphasis:

The need to raise money for Resolution Trust Corp., the agency responsible for running insolvent thrifts is "adding to the overall demand for credit and contributing to higher interest rates," agreed Richard Peach, an economist for the Mortgage Bankers Association of America.

And Elliott Platt is quoted:

"It is hard to quantify," said the head government bond trader for a New York-based securities firm.

Finally, Mr. President, the article states:

In a speech at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy school of Government on Tuesday night, the Bush administration's budget director, Richard G. Darman, also mentioned government borrowing for the savings and loan cleanup as one factor raising interest rates.

So the ruling was not only parliamentarily sound, but judicious.

There is a report in the morning news that the majority leader and the Speaker of the House along with their Republican counterparts, have been invited to meet with the President on Sunday regarding the budget mess. If I were going to write an article on this summit, I would entitle it, "We've Got To Stop Meeting Like This." The sorry fact is that we meet on everything except what is significant or important. And what is significant or important is the bottom line, the baseline, the starting line. What matters is not an argument about the peace dividend, or an argument about social programs and entitlement programs versus defense, or an argument about a few little user fees here or there.

Specifically, let us add it up the looming deficit for 1991. Everyone agrees we are going to have to reduce by at least $37 billion to get to the $64 billion target. Add on some $58.9 billion to compensate for the underestimate by Mr. Darman based on absurdly optimistic economic and technical assumptions. Add on $20 billion to $30 billion in additional spending for the S&L bailout. Tack on $36 billion to pay for the Moynihan rollback of FICA taxes. Plus another $20 billion in unanticipated interest costs. Add another $5 billion to pay for the capital gains tax cut. So, in essence, we are dealing with a $180 to $185 billion problem. Our difficulty is, Madam President, when we met together in budget summits, as we have met heretofore for the past 10 years, a deal is a deal whether it was with President Reagan or now President Bush, and we chronically and extravagantly lowball the task at hand. We deceive not only the people of America, but we deceive ourselves.

We would be lucky if we could get to this year's target of $100 billion, much less next year's, 1991, target of $64 billion. That is not to say that we should, in order to comply with the target, get down by $180 billion or $185 billion. Economically that would be foolish. But if we can agree on the task at hand, then we can program out, let us say, the $37 billion that the House has found or that the Senate Budget Committee has found or that President Bush recommends in his budget, that amount to this year, and then program it out in revenues for the next 4- or 5-year program.

The most debilitating, devastating thing that occurs is when the President of the United States comes in a State of the Union message and says baldfacedly to the American public that the deficit is going down when in fact it is going up, and "read my lips, no new taxes, we do not need taxes," when we positively do. That misleads the American public. And it misleads us into going into conference thinking it is really a political standoff with a Democratic Congress versus a Republican President and getting together on that basis on a $37 billion task. Next year the crisis will be even deeper, and they will come and say, oh, what we need is a constitutional amendment for a balanced budget or a line item veto. In the meantime, we slide by the 1992 reelection.

Therein is what could occur on Sunday. I hope not. It has occurred now for 10 years running. I hope, if nothing else, we can agree on how you make your cuts or what programs you are going to support or not support or what about the peace dividend. Those are really not the issues.

The challenge is for our leadership to agree on the task at hand. It is a mammoth task, and it has distorted the markets, and it is destroying the opportunity that we have as a people to really take the tide at the flood, with the fall of the Wall in Europe and free elections down in Central America, to really provide the resources that we need domestically for clean air and education and all the other programs, child care and otherwise that we all favor, and really do something for the next generation rather than posturing ourselves, as we have done now off and on, for the next election.

So I hope, Mr. President, that we will have a good get-together. But I hope we will stop meeting like we have in the past, pretending that the problem is a lack of bipartisanship, and that if only we could get together the problem is solved.

The problem will never be solved until we really own up to the task at hand, and it is a mammoth one.

I yield the floor.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is now closed.

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS OF 1989

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now proceed to the consideration of S. 135, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 135) to amend title 5, United States Code, to restore to Federal civilian employees their right to participate voluntarily as private citizens, in the political processes of the Nation, to protect such employees from improper political solicitations, and for other purposes.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Delaware is recognized to offer an amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 1576

(Purpose: To clarify and simplify regulations regarding the political activities of certain Federal employees)

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk in the nature of a substitute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. ROTH] proposes an amendment numbered 1576.

Mr. ROTH. I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That the Office of Personnel Management shall prescribe regulations to clarify and simplify the political activity prohibitions applicable to employees of the Federal Government or the government of the District of Columbia. Such regulations shall supersede determinations regarding political activity made by the Civil Service Commission prior to July 19, 1940, under the rules prescribed by the President, and any subsequent decisions based on such determinations.

"SEC. 2. The provisions of this Act shall take effect on January 1, 1991.".

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.

AMENDMENT NO. 1577 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1576

(Purpose: To provide for a plan to educate Federal employees about their rights of policital activity, and for other purposes)

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I send to the desk a second-degree, perfecting amendment and ask that it be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. McCONNELL] proposes an amendment numbered 1577 to amendment No. 1576.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 2, strike out lines 3 and 4 and insert in lieu thereof:

"SEC. 2. Each agency employing any employee to whom the provisions of subchapter III of chapter 73 of title 5, United States Code, apply shall (in consultation with the Office of Personnel Management, the Office of the Special Counsel established under section 1211 of title 5, United States Code, and any labor organization representing such employees) develop a plan to educate such employees regarding the provisions of the Hatch Act and Federal employees' rights of political activity under the provisions of chapter 73 of title 5, United States Code. Such plan shall be—

"(1) filed no later than two months after the date of the enactment of this Act with the Office of Personnel Management;

"(2) implemented as to new employees immediately after filing; and

"(3) implemented as to existing employees four months after such date of enactment.

"SEC. 3. The provisions of this Act shall take effect on January 1, 1991.".

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, the amendment I am offering this morning is very simple in nature—I propose that all Federal agencies be required to take affirmative steps to educate and inform their work force as to their rights of political activity under the Hatch Act. But before I discuss my amendment any further, I would like to take a moment to compliment my friend and colleague, the senior Senator from Delaware—both for his amendment and, as well, for his excellent job of managing this legislation for this side.

My colleague's substitute cuts through the mass of rhetoric surrounding this issue, and strikes to the heart of the problem—if there is truly a problem at all. The Senator's substitute amendment would require the Office of Personnel Management to prescribe regulations to clarify and simplify the political activity prohibitions applicable to Federal employees.

I am not convinced that these regulations are at all ambiguous. However, I do recognize that some confusion can ensue from regulation of this scope and magnitude. The amendment of the senior Senator from Delaware will address any need here in a systematic and comprehensive manner.

The amendment of the Senator from Kentucky, my amendment, addresses another branch of the proponents' arguments—namely, that Federal employees are so confused about—and ill-informed—regarding the provisions of the Hatch Act that they are in effect chilled in the exercise of their existing political rights.

I am not sure this argument carries any weight either—during my tenure in the executive branch, workers who desired to participate in political activities knew who to contact for information on whether a particular activity was permissible or not—either within or without the department.

The Office of the Special Counsel has a well-designed series of pamphlets and posters geared toward this end. The Office of the Special Counsel also stands ready to issue advisory opinions upon request. The Federal employee and postal worker unions can and should also do more to educate their memberships.

However, if there is any confusion lingering among Federal employees as to what they can and cannot do, then we should take steps to ensure that they are fully and adequately educated as to their rights. My amendment would accomplish this goal.

I propose that each agency employing "Hatched" workers be required to take steps to educate those employees as their rights of political activity under the Hatch Act. Agencies would be required to develop a plan—in consultation with OPM, the Office of the Special Counsel, and Federal employee unions representing workers at that agency—to educate the work force. The plan would be required to be filed 2 months after the date of enactment with OPM, and would take effect immediately as to new hires. The plan would take effect as to existing work force 4 months after the date of enactment.

I have purposefully left the form of education necessary to carry out this act ambiguous—to allow agencies to tailer their program to their individual needs. However, congressional oversight and those ever-present Federal employee unions will help ensure that the agencies develop and implement their plans in good faith.

Taken together, the Roth and McConnell amendments address the Hatch Act dilemma—if there is any dilemma at all—in a comprehensive, but limited form appropriate to the subject matter. I simply do not understand why we should throw out better than 50 year's worth of experience under the Hatch Act in favor of an unworkable distinction between on- and off-duty activities.

The Roth-McConnell substitute offers the only comprehensive approach to the Hatch Act necessary and appropriate under the circumstances—the only Hatch Act reform the system can bear. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting these amendments, and rejecting the underlying legislation.

I yield the floor.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1578 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1577

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I send a perfecting amendment to the McConnell amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. ROTH] proposes an amendment numbered 1578 to amendment number 1577.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 2, line 14, strike "1" and insert in lieu thereof "2".

(Mr. KOHL assumed the chair.)

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, what I am proposing in my basic amendment as a substitution is that we direct OPM to simplify the rules and regulations that have been issued under the Hatch Act.

My reason for doing so is that one of the principal thrusts of objections to the Hatch Act on the part of the majority has been that the Hatch Act, as administered, is too complex, too difficult to understand.

Let me start out by saying that essentially I do not agree with much of their argument. The so-called 3,000 rules that predated the Hatch Act are not part of the regulatory system. The administrative agency has reduced the rules and regulations to 13 do's and 16 don'ts. Yes, some questions come up under them. But there is a hotline to which the Federal employee who has a question can address any question he may have.

On the other hand, I have never yet seen a series of rules and regulations in the Federal Government that could not be improved upon, could not be simplified. So that is the main thrust of our legislation and a matter that I will want to address in greater detail later this morning.

Mr. President, a number of arguments were made yesterday on behalf of S. 135. I have to candidly say that I am more impressed by what they did not say rather than what they did say.

The principal reasons that were given in favor of S. 135 was the point I have just made, the lack of clarity under the current law; the problem that three union presidents, who were on leave of absence from the Federal Government, were prosecuted for violating the Hatch Act. I would point out that ultimately they were cleared of such charges. But because of the concern that has been expressed in this area—and I agree that such individuals should be in a position not to run the risk of such prosecution—we will, undoubtedly, later offer an amendment to address that concern as well.

The third argument made is the constitutional one. The constitutional claim is that the rights of Federal employees are being violated, being violated in that they cannot get involved fully and participate in political activity; that it is an infringement of the first amendment.

I would just point out, as I intend to address this matter in greater detail in just a few minutes, that this question has gone up to the Supreme Court not once but twice, and in both cases the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the Hatch Act was indeed constitutional.

But, as I said in my opening remarks, I have been more interested in what has not been said by those who are advocating S. 135. And well they might remain silent, because I think when it becomes clear as to what the real thrust of this legislation is, the American people will indeed be concerned.

Let me point out that essentially what this basic legislation would do would be to create what would essentially be a national Federal and postal PAC. It would create the situation where far more money probably could be collected than is currently possible.

And I just would like to point out that these organizations already do pretty well. In yesterday's paper, the Washington Post, it points out in a front-page article that "PAC-Man Pursues Hectic Schedule." George B. Gould, lobbyist for the Letter Carriers Union, goes to a fundraiser at the National Democratic Club. The first paragraph pointed out that "Mr. Gould is a popular man, which is not surprising for someone who last year helped to pass out almost $769,000 to political candidates."

If you turn inside to page 8, you find out who is getting the money. And I must say only one of them is Republican. But 14 different Senators get between $5,000 and $10,000 for their next campaign.

As I said, what the individual has spread is $800,000, so they are doing pretty well already. But the point I am making is that what this legislation that is before us in S. 135 would do is open the door to even greater PAC collections. Is it not ironic that the advocates of this great expansion, the creation of a national organization that would be free to collect funds from an employee organization—a term that is not defined, and I think is a matter that ought to be looked into with some care—is it not interesting that this problem is raised at the very time, presumably, when the next item on the agenda will be campaign reform?

One of the principal thrusts of campaign reform is to do something about PAC's. PAC's are seen as the evil. So why is the majority proposing we expand PAC's at this time when the legislation is before us and next week we expect the opposite is going to be proposed, hopefully by both sides, to reduce if not eliminate PAC's?

As I said, is it not interesting that at this very time when they are promoting a change in the Hatch Act which has worked so well, that it goes contrary to the kind of reforms we are supposed to be considering next week.

The second matter on which they are very silent, and I can understand why, is what could occur under this S. 135 is the creation of a national network of Federal and postal employees. This legislation provides that Federal employees can campaign—not only "can," but it encourages them to campaign and get involved in partisan politics off duty. What a network.

Let me just point out, we could take the postal employees alone, and they reach into every district and every State, and through their mail delivery service you would have one of the greatest networks ever available to any political organization. We all know, those of us who have campaigned, one of the most difficult things is to deliver your campaign literature to every household in your State or district. Well, under this law, all that would have to be done is to get your postal employees on Sunday, an off duty day, and have them distribute in that day all your literature. What a wonderful natural political organization would be available. And why not? Why not move in that direction?

Well, Mr. President, the purpose of the Federal Government, the Federal laws, are to serve the American people, not the Democrats, not the Republicans, but the American people. The purpose of the Hatch Act has been to ensure to the American people that the laws of the Federal Government will be administered fairly and squarely in a nonpartisan way. Presidents going way back to George Washington have been concerned, deeply concerned that Federal employees might use their position to influence in a partisan way. And they recognized that was a wrong under our form of Government. It was not until 1939 it was corrected. It was corrected by the passage of the Hatch Act that very carefully tried to work out a balance between the interests of the Federal employees to exercise the right to vote as American citizens, and at the same time to ensure the American people that those laws were going to be administered in a fair and nonpartisan manner.

It was a great triumph, and that law, I might say, which was enacted under a Democratic President and a Democratic Congress, has served the American people and has served the Federal employees well for the 60 years it has been in effect. No wonder so many Federal employees do not want any change.

Mr. President, one of the charges that has been made is that it violates the U.S. Constitution. This is a matter of such importance that I think we should deal with this question at some length.

Mr. President, I have heard it suggested a number of times that the Hatch Act is unconstitutional—that it is a violation of the first amendment protections of free speech. While I am a staunch guardian of that right, I must address the issue raised by those who suggest that the Hatch Act is unconstitutional.

On two occasions, the Supreme Court has specifically upheld the constitutionality of the Hatch Act. In one other instance, the Supreme Court upheld a prohibition against Federal employees contributing to or soliciting other Federal employees for political purposes. This legislation would repeal a similar provision in current law.

In 1882, the Supreme Court considered a case Ex parte Curtis, which arose before the major civil service reforms of both the Pendleton Act and the employee protections of the Lloyd-LaFollette Act and the Hatch Act. In this case, the Supreme Court upheld a prohibition against Federal officers or employees contributing to or soliciting other Federal employees for political purposes. The Court held:

If contributions from those in public employment may be solicited by others in official authority, it is easy to see that what begins as a request may end as a demand, and that a failure to meet the demand may be treated by those having the power of removal as a breach of some supposed duty, growing out of the political relations of the parties.

Contibutions secured under such circumstances will quite as likely be made to avoid the consequences of personal displeasure of a superior, as to promote the political views of the contributor * * * the law contemplates no restrictions upon either giving or receiving, except so far as may be necessary to protect, in some degree, those in the public service against exactions through fear of personal loss. No one can for a moment doubt that in * * * these statutes the object was to protect the classes of officials and employees provided for from being compelled to make contributions for such purposes through fear of dismissal if they refused.

In 1947, 8 years after the Hatch Act became law, the restrictions on voluntary, off-duty political activities by Federal employees within the act were directly challenged on constitutional grounds, and the law was upheld by the Supreme Court in United Public Workers, CIO, versus Mitchell.

The Court explained that the case involved a comparison between the statute's "interference with free expression" and the "freedom of the civil servant under the first, ninth, and tenth amendments," as well as the due process clause of the fifth amendment, on the one hand, and "the requirements of orderly management of administrative personnel," on the other.

The Court emphasized that the perceived need for such regulation was a judgment of the Congress and the President, and not one of the Court: "Of course, the question of the need for this regulation is for other branches of Government. * * *" The Court thus deferred to the judgment of the Congress and the President regarding the need for such regulation, and found that such expressed need, on balance, would overcome the interference of the statute in the freedoms of the civil servant:

Again this Court must balance the extent of the guarantees of freedom against a congressional enactment to protect a democratic society against the supposed evil of political partisanship by classified employees of government.

Another Congress may determine that, on the whole, limitations on active political management by federal personnel are unwise. The teaching of experience has evidently led Congress to enact the Hatch act provisions. To declare that the present supposed evils of political activity are beyond the power of Congress to redress would leave the nation impotent to deal with what many sincere men believe is a material threat to the democratic system.

Congress and the administrative agencies have authority over the discipline and efficiency of the public service. When the actions of civil servants in the judgment of Congress menace the integrity and the competency of the service, legislation to forestall such danger and adequate to maintain its usefulness is required. The Hatch Act is the answer of Congress to this need. We cannot say with such a background that these restrictions are unconstitutional.

Commenting on the similarities between the objectives of the provision on contributions reviewed in ex parte Curtis and those of the present provisions of the Hatch Act the court explained:

The Conclusion of the Court, that there was no constitutional bar to regulation of such financial contributions of public servants as distinguished from the exercise of political privileges such as the ballot, has found acceptance in the subsequent practice of Congress and the growth of principle of required political neutrality for classified public servants as a sound element for efficiency. The conviction that an actively partisan governmental personnel threatens good administration has deepened since Ex parte Curtis.

The provisions of section 9 of the Hatch Act and the Civil Service Rule 1 are not dissimilar in purpose from the statutes against political contributions of money. The prohibitions now under discussion are directed at political contributions of energy by government employees. These contributions, too, have a long background of disapproval. Congress and the President are responsible for an efficient public service. If, in their judgment, efficiency may be best obtained by prohibiting active participation by classified employees in politics as party officers or workers, we see no constitutional objection.

A constitutional challenge to the Hatch Act again reached the Supreme Court in 1973. In a case, National Association of Letter Carriers AFL-CIO versus U.S. Civil Service Commission, the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia found the provisions of the Hatch Act to constitute and impermissible vague and overbroad intrusion into protected first amendment rights.

The Supreme Court, in a 6-3 decision, reversed the lower court ruling and upheld the statute against the vagueness and overbreadth challenge. The Court first reaffirmed the holding of the Mitchell case, that partisan political activities by Federal employees is a proper subject for regulation by Congress, if Congress decides that, on balance, such restrictions on employees' fundamental rights are needed for the furtherance of the important governmental interest of assuring "fair and effective government" and an "impartial execution of the laws." The Court explained:

As the Court held in Pickering v. Board Education, the government has an interest in regulating the conduct and "the speech of its employees that differ(s) significantly from those it possesses in connection with regulation of the speech of the citizenry in general. The problem in any case is to arrive at a balance between the interests of the employee, as a citizen, in commenting upon matters of public concern and the interest of the government, as an employer, in promoting the efficiency of the public services it performs through its employees."

Neither the right to associate nor the right to participate in political activities is absolute in any event. Nor are the management financing, and conduct of political campaigns wholly free from governmental regulation. We agree with the basic holding of Mitchell that plainly identifiable acts of political management and political campaigning on the part of federal employees may constitutionally be prohibited.

The Court emphasized that the restrictions on political activities, while not necessarily prohibited by the Constitution, are not required by any finding of the Court but rather are in place because of the judgment of Congress and the President as to the restraints needed to assure the integrity of the public service:

Although Congress is free to strike a different balance than it has, if it so chooses, we think the balance it has so far struck is sustainable by the obviously important interests sought to be served by the limitations on partisan political activities now contained in the Hatch Act.

Perhaps Congress at some time will come to a different view of the realities of political life and Government service; but that is its current view of the matter, and we are not in any position to dispute it. Nor, in our view, does the Constitution forbid it.

As to the questions of vagueness, the Court noted that the language of the statute itself, prohibiting one from taking "an active part in political management or in political campaigns," might legitimately raise vagueness questions as to the conduct prohibited and that permitted, but that the duty of the Court was to construe the language of the statute so as to preserve both the intent of Congress and the constitutionality of the provision. The Court found that Congress in an amendment had specifically incorporated by reference within the statute the rulings and the regulations of the Civil Service Commission on political activities which had governed employees in the competitive service prior to the passage of the Hatch Act:

It is to these regulations purporting to construe section 7324 as actually applied in practice, as well as to the statute itself, with its various exclusions, that we address ourselves in rejecting the claim that the Act is unconstitutionally vague and overbroad.

The Court found that the statutory prohibition on active participation in partisan campaigns, incorporating as it did the civil service rules of 1940, was therefore not "open ended," but was "limited to those rules and proscriptions that had been developed under Civil Service Rule I up to the date of passage of the 1940 act." The fact that the conduct under the act was thus frozen or fixed at that which had been prohibited prior to 1940, that the Commission was not authorized to expand the categories of prohibited conduct and that the regulations of the Commission spelled out in some detail that conduct which was permitted and that which was prohibited, allowed the Court to find that such regulations and rulings provided the specificity required of statutory restrictions bearing on first amendment rights.

The issue, Mr. President, of the constitutionality of the basic provisions of the Hatch Act enacted by Congress as its solution to preserving nonpartisan and efficiency in the Federal work force appears to be settled.

In conclusion, Mr. President, let us put to rest the suggestion that the Hatch Act is unconstitutional. The Supreme Court has spoken clearly. The Hatch Act is constitutional. I urge my colleagues to consider that point as they consider this legislation.

Mr. President, I have, of course, sent an amendment to the desk and it has been twice amended. As I have already expressed, I have some very serious reservations about the legislation we are considering today.

The issue raised by S. 135 is indeed important to all Americans and all Federal employees, not just those who favor the amendments, but to those who strive to maintain the current protections.

The Hatch Act protections serve every civil servant day after day. Moreover, these protections serve to provide neutral, nonpartisan Government service, which is, indeed, a right of American citizens in their relationship with their Government.

In 1976, President Ford vetoed Hatch Act so-called reform legislation.

It is clear that this President, our current President's senior advisers, including Attorney General Thornburgh and the Office of Personnel Management Director Connie Newman, would recommend a veto if the Congress chose to enact this legislation.

Mr. President, we are being asked to take a very, very serious step. With all due regard to the sponsors and others, make no mistake about it, this legislation would vastly change the nature of the Hatch Act and permit Federal employees to participate in political campaigns to an extent not seen in more than 50 years. Maybe we can accomplish the sponsor's objectives by simplifying the regulations instead of repealing them.

Since my amendment would supplant S. 135, I believe that it is relevant and important to note some of the problems with the legislation.

Some suggest that the merit system protects the Federal employees so well that the Hatch Act is no longer necessary. The Hatch Act's purpose and function for 50 years has been to ensure that civil service is based solely on merit and not on politics. I, for one, believe it has worked.

I have other concerns. Public identification of Federal employees with partisan politics would indeed erode public trust in their Government. The resulting politically active work force would erode public confidence in Government. I, for one, fear a return to the spoils system. The Hatch Act protects employees now. The Hatch Act reflects the historical and continuing necessity to balance the rights of Federal employees as citizens with the overwhelming public interest in an impartial, politically neutral and independent civil service. The changes being proposed harm that balance.

The truth is that it is human nature to do what is necessary to advance one's self. No superior has to command an employee to get into politics. The employee knows or senses when political activity is a plus for him or her. This legislation simply fails to understand human nature.

I need not speculate about human nature. We have had over a century of history without a Hatch Act, and we know well the evils of the spoils system that prevailed. We can learn from history, or we can ignore history and suffer its repetition.

Even if all of these problems were corrected, I would still have very serious reservations about this legislation because it tries to achieve the impossible, a work force free to engage in politics without being subject to political pressure.

But there is the argument that the regulations implementing the Hatch Act are confusing. On this point, I find the testimony somewhat persuasive. In spite of the information made available to the Federal work force by the special counsel, there appears to be some confusion.

As I stated yesterday, the regulations governing what is considered permissible and prohibited political activities can be found in 5 CFR 733. There are 13 permissible activities and 16 impermissible activities found in these regulations.

Proponents of reform frequently mention the several thousand administrative decisions of the former Civil Service Commission which predated the passage of the Hatch Act in 1940, and the effect of these rulings on current interpretation and enforcement of the act.

As the Office of Special Counsel has pointed out, "some individuals have erroneously referred to these decisions as 'rules' or 'regulations,' creating the false impression that there are some 3,000 rules and regulations currently governing political activity by Federal employees. Such individuals clearly misapprehend the legal and historical significance of these decisions."

Rejecting the argument set forth by the National Association of Letter Carriers in the aforementioned case, the Supreme Court, of course, ruled the proper subject of inquiry was not—emphasize was not—the "several thousand adjudications of the Civil Service Commission," but rather the regulations that were extracted from them. The Court held that "It is to these regulations purporting to construe section 7234 as actually applied in practice, as well as the statute itself * * * that we address ourselves in rejecting the claim that the act is unconstitutionally vague and overbroad."

In addition, Mr. President, I do not understand the logic of the argument that if the implementation of a law is confusing, the law should be repealed. I believe one would hate to see this argument applied to the Bill of Rights, which has for nearly 2 centuries raised an endless stream of litigation designed to clarify its application. The appropriate response to the argument is to do what is necessary to eliminate the confusion.

This amendment is particularly timely in view of the Biller, Blaylock, and Sombrotto cases prominently mentioned in the committee report and repeatedly referred to by the sponsor of the legislation as one of the main reasons that the Hatch Act legislation is now being considered by the Senate.

Recent Federal Appellate Court cases in the Second and Eleventh Circuits have further clarified the issue of what is and is not permissible political activity. The distinction drawn by the courts appears very straightforward. The court in Blaylock versus U.S. Merit System Protection Board held that the Hatch Act's prohibition against taking an "active part in political management or in political campaigns" encompasses only active participation in, on behalf of, in connection with, organized efforts of political parties or partisan committees, clubs, and candidates. In an effort to clarify the existing regulations in light of these Appellate Court decisions, the Office of Personnel Management, in conjunction with the Office of Special Counsel, should promulgate new regulations to clarify the restrictions on political activity.

Both Appellate Courts interpreted the Hatch Act and the term partisan activity to allow Federal employees to make, publish, and circulate public statements endorsing a political candidate for public office in a partisan election, as long as such activity was independent, that is, involved "personal expressions of political opinion" and was not coordinated, in connection with or on behalf of a candidate, political party or party organization.

Since my analysis has led me to conclude that the Hatch Act is good for the employee, good for the government, and good for the public and since I believe that claims of confusion over the implementation of the Act have some merit, I propose a substitute amendment in lieu of this legislation that the Office of Personnel Management be directed to issue new regulations that would clarify and simplify the guidance that has been given to Federal employees with respect to the Hatch Act. This proposal would satisfy the best argument of proponents for change without risking the benefits of the Hatch Act for American society. Moreover, I am sure that we are all aware that this legislation, if passed, would be vetoed. This proposal, in contrast, would not be.

And, if I might just add as an aside, the Office of Special Counsel revised its booklet on the Hatch Act that the chairman referred to yesterday because of these appellate court rulings.

This amendment is timely because these regulations should be clarified to reflect these appellate court decisions.

In addition, Mr. President, I believe this amendment addresses directly the concerns stated by the proponents of the legislation in the committee report and on the floor that the regulations are confusing and that should be clarified. That is exactly what this amendment does.

We do not have to repeal the entire Hatch Act to meet these concerns. Instead, a carefully crafted amendment which addresses these specific needs should be the subject of our concerns. The choice for the Senate is clear: "do some good or make a major mistake." I urge that we choose to do good and adopt this amendment.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LIEBERMAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LIEBERMAN].

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President, I rise to oppose the amendment presented by my friend and distinguished colleague from Delaware, and the perfecting amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. MCCONNELL].

But I must say, in the offering of these amendments, there is some encouragement for those of us who feel the Hatch Act is an unacceptable intrusion on the political freedom of 3 million of our fellow Americans who happen to work for the Federal Government.

The good news, the encouragement, is that these amendment acknowledge that there is a problem, that there is at least confusion, and at worst such a maze of conflicting regulations that it ultimately equals a ridiculous state of affairs.

Unfortunately, Mr. President, in introducing these amendments, my colleagues acknowledge that there is a problem, but do not come up with the right cause, because they are building on a system that is inherently inconsistent, and can never avoid the confusion, silliness, and ridiculousness that are part of the existing maze of regulations pursuant to the Hatch Act.

The truth is that the Office of Special Counsel, which promulgates these regulations, has not tried to create rulings to confuse the act; they have tried to clarify the act. Whenever there are vague or general rules in a statute or a regulation, those rules must be applied in actual cases with a large number of factual variations.

What has led to the morass of confusing rulings in the case of the Hatch Act, in my opinion, is the basic problem. It is the tension between the general rule, which is that partisan political activity cannot be indulged in by Federal employees, and the continual desire of those employees to exercise that political freedom in some capacity.

It is the tension between the purposes of the act, which are to limit political freedom, and the strong and driving strain in our culture and society and government to encourage political freedom and political participation.

It is the tension between the purposes of the act, which are to proscribe political freedom, and the understandable unwillingness of the drafters of the original bill, those who had to live with it, to actually say to Federal employees, "No, there is nothing you can do. You cannot be involved at all in political activities."

Once you begin to say you could be a little involved and have to explain why you cannot be involved in all the other ways, it inevitably leads to confusion and silliness. And, in my opinion, the only answer to that is—in my personal opinion—repeal of the Hatch Act. But it is the purpose of S. 135 before us now at least to improve the situation by moderately reforming the Hatch Act to make for more political freedom for public employees and less confusion.

My colleague from Michigan [Mr. LEVIN] was on the floor yesterday, and discussed, I thought very convincingly, some of the tension and confusion in the current situation with the Office of Special Counsel rulings. A Federal worker may or may not be allowed to invite his or her neighbor to accompany him to political rally, depending on his intention in doing so.

I mean, this is an incredibly offensive intrusion of the Government into the private—forget for a moment political lives—lives of the American people to say that an American citizen has to worry about whether to invite a neighbor to accompany him to a political rally; and the question is, did he intend, in inviting that neighbor, to make that neighbor part of a partisan campaign? And, if he did, he actually may be doing something that is unlawful and be subject to the penalties for that.

Under this existing state of the law and regulation, you can publicly express your opinion about a candidate if you are a Federal employee, but you cannot make a speech for a candidate. What is more fundamental to being an American than the right of political speech?

According to the Office of Special Counsel, you can put a sign on your car or lawn only if this is an expression of personal opinion. What a distinction. Those types of ambiguous rulings come up over and over again under the act, because those who have tried to live with the act and make it sensible cannot do so, because they are not willing to eliminate all expression of political opinion and all exercise of political freedom.

Mr. President, this amendment does not deal with the basic problem. And the basic problem is that Federal employees deserve and want political freedom. Senator ROTH and Senator MCCONNELL are attempting in these amendments to renovate a house that is built on a weak foundation. The fact is, it is built on no foundation. The foundation does not exist, because any time we in America try to limit political freedom, we run against our grain and against our first principles. This amendment is in the nature of a substitute, but it leaves all the existing rules and prohibitions in place, and it simply asks for a little more clarity. I say over and over again that that clarity is simply impossible.

Under S. 135, it is important to say again that Federal employees will not be forced to do anything. It simply allows them to do whatever they want, whatever any of the rest of us who live in this country can decide to do. Nobody is going to be forced to stuff envelopes; nobody is going to be forced, under the example given by my distinguished colleague from Delaware, to deliver pieces of literature. For a supervisor of postal workers to coerce, implicitely or explicitly, his subordinates, off their working hours, to work in a political campaign, let alone deliver literature, would be a violation of the act, after S. 135 is adopted.

Mr. President, it is not clear that this amendment would clarify much, if any, of the confusion. Again, I do not think that can be done without statutory changes. The distinguished majority leader gave a great example yesterday, I thought. Two shipyards in Maine, both building ships for the U.S. Navy; workers are paid with taxpayers money, U.S. Government funds. But the employees in the Navy shipyard have some political rights, very few because of the Hatch Act, while those in the Bath shipyard, privately owned, can participate fully in the political process. That is a ridiculous result, and it would not be changed under the amendment by my colleague from Delaware.

In addition, there are problems with who is covered by the act. I do not think we have clarified that in this debate. For example, a temporary Federal worker is covered by the Hatch Act, even though he has none of the rights or benefits of a civil servant. That is the ruling, the regulation, issued by the appropriate agency. But an intermittent workers, perhaps a consultant, who is doing the same work as a regular Federal employee, is not covered by the Hatch Act when he is working and the Government clock is running on him.

Private contract employees at NASA, for example, may be sitting right next to regular NASA employees, doing the same work, but because they happen to be private contract employees, they are not covered by the Hatch Act; therefore, they can exercise political freedoms. And those Government employees at NASA, who have so much to contribute to our political system, cannot.

An employee on leave or furlough is covered by the Hatch Act, even though they may not have received a Federal paycheck for years. So the reach of these prohibitions goes on even after a person leaves full-time Federal Government service.

Mr. President, the only way to bring clarity at least, if not full political freedom, to Federal employees in this whole area is to pass S. 135, because it changes the balance, it makes clear what is not permitted. Therefore, it opens up much more clearly the rights of Federal employees. It puts the burden where it should be. The burden is on anyone who would claim to limit the political freedom of people in this country.

S. 135 states very clearly that it does not permit employees to engage in political activities while on duty in a Federal building, while wearing a uniform or official insigna, or while using a Government vehicle. It prohibits Federal employees from running for any political office at any level. It still would do that after S. 135 is adopted. It prohibits employees to solicit, accept, or receive political contributions from the general public.

My colleague from Delaware raises fears about what might happen if S. 135 passes with the creation of enormous PAC's, political action committees, of Federal employees, what would happen with the influence of money of Federal employees in political campaigns. Again, it will remain illegal to coerce, explicitly or implicitly, any Federal employee to do anything. But what is allowed when it comes to political contributions under S. 135 is extremely limited. A Federal employee can only solicit a fellow employee in his or her own bargaining unit, own work area, and is not allowed to solicit a subordinate. So we avoid the problem of a superior coercing a subordinate employee.

Though the individual can contribute to a candidate directly himself, a Federal employee cannot solicit another Federal employee to make a check directly to a candidate committee, if S. 135 is adopted. All that is allowed is the solicitation of fellow employees for a multicandidate political action committee, a precircumscribed right, no right to solicit any member of the party for a political contribution.

That will continue to be a prohibition under S. 135. Also, an employee will not be able to give a contribution to any person to vote or to refrain from voting or to give, solicit, or accept a contribution from or to a superior or to give, solicit, or accept a contribution while in a Government building. So at least we make clear what is not permitted and what is permitted, that is, that employees are permitted to participate in a full range of political activities off duty and off the worksite. That puts the burden where it ought to be.

Mr. President, Senator ROTH dealt with the constitutional question—I indicated yesterday at the beginning of the debate that I take some personal pleasure being involved in this debate, because when I was at law school, not a few years ago, by coincidence, I wrote a paper alleging that the Hatch Act was unconstitutional. Unfortunately, the Supreme Court of the United States has not yet reached the same conclusion, but I think it is important to make clear what they did do in the 1947 and 1973 cases.

They clearly recognized that the Hatch Act infringes upon the first amendment rights of public employees. But they applied a balancing test. They weighed those rights against what they said to be the right of Congress to enact laws to protect society against the "supposed evil of political partisanship." They did not accept the evil of that, but they said we in Congress had the right to see such a threat. In striking the balance, they came out not for the correctness of this policy covered in the Hatch Act, but simply to defer to the judgment of Congress and say, if we chose to enact these limitations under the balancing test, they were correct, they were acceptable under the Constitution.

The Court went on to say—and they do not always say that, so I thought it was interesting they did in the 1973 case—"Congress is free to strike a different balance than it has." I think it is important for us to say that, because the Supreme Court has found the Hatch Act constitutional in two cases, does not mean that it is good policy, does not mean that it is the right policy.

In my opinion, and I say this very, very strongly, it is exactly the wrong policy. There were very, very strong dissents in both of those Supreme Court cases and I think they are instructive. In the first case Justice Hugo Black, one of the great Justices in Supreme Court history, not just in this century, argued very, very, very vehemently that the law was unconstitutional on its face. And he emphasized a participation in political activities really is a liberty guaranteed by the first amendment and that any law restricting political liberty should "be so narrowly drawn to meet the evil aimed at."

That is the problem of the Hatch Act: it is not so narrowly drawn to meet the evil aimed at. The laws of the United States are full of specific prohibitions against coercing employees, conflict of interest, coercing anyone implicitly or explicitly that deals with the Federal Government based on political partisanship.

All of the evils that we worry about and that are described by those who oppose S. 135 are illegal now and will remain illegal if S. 135 is adopted. Justice Black was entirely right on that and he said about any law infringing political liberty, that it should affect "only the minimum number of people imperatively necessary to prevent a grave and imminent danger to the public."

Here there has simply been, neither, in my opinion, in the origin of this act in 1939, and certainly not since then or today in this debate, has there been any proof that what we are doing is addressed as a grave and imminent danger to the public. What we have here are fears.

We have no record of any danger, let alone a grave and imminent danger to the public. Justice Black criticized the act as legislation which muzzles several million citizens and, he said, threatens popular government by depriving it of the political participation and interest of such a large segment of its citizens.

I thought it, personally, an outstanding opinion written by Justice Black, not just because I agree with it.

In a later case there was another dissent by Justice Douglas, which harshly criticized the law for having a chilling effect on the political freedoms of Federal employees and he called agressively for revision of the Hatch Act, describing its effect on Federal workers as "self-imposed censorship imposed on many nervous people who live on narrow economic margins," a very personal rendering of the impact of the act.

So, Mr. President, these amendments before us acknowledge a problem, they tinker with it, but they offer no hope of any real relief from the confusion of silliness of the existing Hatch Act. They offer, more importantly, no relief to the 3 million Federal employees who currently live as second-class citizens in this country without justification for that lower censorship when it comes to the exercise of their political freedoms.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes Senator PRYOR.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I thank the chair for recognizing me. I think this debate that we are finally having, is very healthy. It is extremely constructive. We have waited a very, very long time for the opportunity to look at this issue and to examine it.

Mr. President, during my 11 or so years as a Member of this great body, one of the rare opportunities that I have had is not only serving on the Governmental Affairs Committee but more specifically having the pleasure and the honor of serving as a fellow committee member with my very good friend and colleague from Delaware, Senator ROTH.

That has truly been a distinction, because on many, many occasions I have seen Senator ROTH actually go against the bureaucracy, fighting for the opportunities and right of individuals but, more critically, to seize the opportunity for the legislative branch, which the constitution gives us the right and the duty and the challenge to pursue, and to meet obligations.

Mr. President, in respect I say this to my friend from Delaware, this is one of those times when we disagree on an issue and in this particular case, I am very surprised. In fact, I am flabbergasted that my friend from Delaware has sided basically with a bureaucratic approach to solving a national issue that the Congress, we who are elected, we who are accountable, must solve.

The Roth amendment, and although I can see why Senator ROTH may have envisioned that a bureaucratic solution might be better than a legislative solution, I will not in any way question or impugn his motives which very simply says let the bureaucrats do it.

I would like to ask a question, and I hope at some time during the debate on the Hatch Act that this question can be answered.

I would like to ask, under the Roth proposal, who is going to be writing the regulations; who will be writing those regulations that the Federal employee not only full time but part time be governed by? Who will be doing that? I think the answer is the Office of Personnel Management. The Office of Personnel Management under Senator ROTH'S proposal will be drafting this new set of rules and regulations, do's and don'ts for the Federal employee.

Mr. President, I have had the opportunity to participate in several hearings relative to Hatch Act reform. I do not recall an opportunity during any of those hearings when the Office of Personnel Management has come forward and basically taken up the rights of the Federal employee to participate in our Government. In fact, on the other hand, the Office of Personnel Management historically has been against that right. The OPM has been against that opportunity for the Federal employee to participate in the American political system.

Under Senator ROTH'S proposal we would put the rulemaking, the regulation writing, in the hands of those individuals who oppose the Federal employee's right to participate in our political system.

Mr. President, that is wrong. It is not fair. And one other thing that I think so egregious about the overall result of the Roth proposal is that this proposal, if accepted by this Senate and the other body and signed into law by the President, this particular proposal will send absolutely shockwaves to every Federal employee, who for generations have wanted to participate in this system, but has been precluded by absolutely crazy rules and regulations which are totally unfair, unclear, and extremely bureaucratic.

The majority leader was on the floor, either today or yesterday talking about the two shipyards. The distinguished Senator from Connecticut just revisited that particular issue: How workers in one shipyard can participate, and right down the street, the workers in the other shipyard cannot, both doing the same job, both getting ultimately paid with Federal taxes. A rewrite of regulations by OPM can not change this strange situation.

One of the concerns that I have had for a decade is the issue of contracting out for government services. I think we contract out too many of our services. I think accountability is lacking. I think it is an open-money sack. I think it is a buddy system.

But all that aside, that contractor who is doing the identical same work as the Federal employee working side-by-side or desk-by-desk apart. You can not even ascertain which is the consultant or contractor and which is the Federal employee sitting next to him or to her. That private contractor, even though engaging in the most sensitive of our Nation's business top secret information, that individual can participate fully in political activities. They can go to rallies. They can have a sticker on their car. They can go in their homes and hold fundraisers for a candidate of their choice. But what about that Federal employee right at the next desk? Absolutely not. They are precluded. They are prohibited. By whom? By the very same people that the Roth amendment would allow to write the "new" set of rules and regulations.

Mr. President, what is going on around here? I think—we have a hard time learning. We have a hard time learning from our mistakes. When do we make our greatest mistakes in the legislative body? If there is a hot issue out there and we do not want to face it or we think it is too complex for us or our staffs, what do we do? We say, let us delegate this to someone else. Let us walk away from our responsibility. Let us abdicate this particular role of the legislative branch of Government. It is too hot. We will get in trouble back home.

But I would say, Mr. President, that the greatest trouble that we have gotten into back home is when we accept this theory of not doing our duty and not meeting our responsibilities.

Example: section 89. I am sure the Senator from Delaware remembers section 89. Was that a legislative act? No. That was a regulation or a set of regulations written by the bureaucracy. What happened? Well, ultimately, of course, we repealed it.

Senator ROTH and I were in the Senate I think before the distinguished occupant of the chair arrived and we had another issue. That issue was on automobile recordkeeping. Does anyone remember the automobile recordkeeping issue around here? Did we enact that legislation, craft it ourselves in this body and send it out to the public? No. We told the Department of the Treasury: "There are some abuses out there in the way people keep records on the business-related use of their automobiles. Now you nice people down at the Treasury Department write some little rules and regulations out there that are going to be fair and will not get us in trouble, where people will have to keep records on their automobiles."

That was done in the fall one year, Mr. President. I will guarantee you, I got in my car in Little Rock, AR, on New Year's afternoon after hearing from my constituents and I drove the 2 days from Little Rock to Washington so I could be the first Member of this Senate to repeal and to nullify that regulation. I found that only about 60 other Senators had the same idea and they beat me to Washington. I become, I think, the 61st cosponsor of the repeal. That was automobile recordkeeping. That was section 89.

Also where we make many of our mistakes, I think—and I am not trying to say what is wrong with this body because much more is right with it than wrong—is when we allow the Internal Revenue Service to write rules and regulations to impose penalties upon taxpayers.

Does the Congress impose penalties upon taxpayers? Probably in about 7 or 8 or 10 instances. Does the IRS? Probably in about 130 instances. Did we write those penalties? No. That was a bureaucratic decision, Mr. President.

Today, the distinguished Senator from Delaware, my friend, who historically and traditionally has been antibureaucracy, is now saying, "Bureaucracy, you write these rules and regulations. You tell these poor Federal employees and these part-time workers what they can do."

Mr. President, the sad fact is that the bureaucracy, OPM, the Office of Special Counsel, the Justice Department, they do not even know what the current rules and regulations are for the Federal employee. They do not know if a Federal employee, a lady who works for the Farmers Home Administration, decides to have a political fundraiser for some even minor candidate in her home, if she can also participate in that fundraiser with anyone else. Can they put up a yard sign? Well, it may have to be 2 feet, or 4 inches, or whatever. They do not know the rules.

Or if a nonfederal worker decides to have a fundraiser or get-together or whatever in their home for a political purpose, can they invite their spouse who works for the Government? Does the spouse have to sit outside, in the garage, or take a walk around the block, or take a drive around town, or go to a movie and come home after the political activity is over? Maybe he could sit back in the kitchen while the rest of them are in the living room.

It is this type of thing, Mr. President, that for 50 years has been on the books. It is this type of absolutely awesome bureaucratic, unjustified, unfathomable regulations and rules that do not make any sense, that the Congress, not the Office of Personnel Management should be dealing with. We must accept that challenge and we must accept it now. And we have an opportunity to do it now.

We have an opportunity to do it now by first defeating Senator ROTH's substitute to a very well-crafted piece of legislation that for 50 years has been waiting, and that after 50 years is finally going to say clearly what the rules of the game are for the Federal employee, the part-time employee, the full-time employee, the spouse of the Federal employee. These are things, Mr. President, that we should do.

The question is whether we do it, whether we accept our responsibility, or whether we abdicate and delegate that responsibility to an agency which opposes—opposes—the right of the Federal employee to participate in the American political system. That is what this issue is about Mr. President.

I thank the Chair for recognizing me. I yield the floor.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, if it is acceptable to the managers of the bill, I ask unanimous consent to speak as if in morning business for 5 minutes.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object and I will not object, is it the understanding and do we have a ruling of the Chair that the time on the bill will continue running during this?

There is no time limit? I am sorry.

Mr. President, I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LIEBERMAN). Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee is recognized.

Mr. GORE. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. GORE pertaining to the introduction of S. 2571 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senate minority leader.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, if there is no objection on the part of the managers I would like to use a couple of minutes of my leader time to speak on another matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

REMEMBER COL. BILL HIGGINS

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, like all Americans, I join in rejoicing over the recent release of two American hostages—Mr. Polhill and Mr. Reed.

As the Senate knows, I led a congressional delegation to the Middle East during the most recent recess. On a stop in Syria, we urged President Assad and Foreign Minister Shaara to do everything they could to assist in winning the release of hostages.

I have subsequently telephoned Mr. Shaara—immediately after the release of Mr. Polhill—to thank him for Syria's constructive role in that endeavor.

As an aside, I note that Iran's President Rafsanjani is complaining this morning that we are not showing enough gratitude toward Iran—for what he implies is its role in winning the release of the two hostages.

I do not know what role, if any, Iran has played. If they have played a constructive role, as an American, I do say: Thank you.

But I also say this: Helping obtain the release of innocent hostages, taken by terrorists, is what all civilized nations ought to do, as a matter of course.

It is what we do, as a nation—and I note that the President, this morning, indicated we are going to do what we can to gain an accounting for four Iranians missing in Lebanon.

There are still seven Americans held hostage, or not finally accounted for in Lebanon, and a number of non-Americans. Iran has a very large amount of influence over at least some of the groups holding those hostages, or knowing of their fate.

Iran—not as a matter of geopolitical bargaining, but as a matter of simple humanity—ought to be doing what it can to obtain information on, and release of, those innocent Americans as well as others from other countries who may be held.

As long ago as his Inaugural Address, President Bush pledged that we would respond to any such moves by Iran. He repeated that pledge today. Hopefully, Iran's leaders will understand President Bush is serious about that pledge.

In any case, this morning, I also telephoned our Ambassador in Damascus, Ed Djerejian—who, by the way, is doing an outstanding job—asking that he again pass on my thanks to Mr. Shaara.

Of course, I took the occasion, too, to urge that we continue to push as hard as we can for the release of the other American and Western hostages. As two families rejoice, too many others still live in anguish.

Speaking both for myself and Senator METZENBAUM—who was part of our Middle East delegation—I also asked Ambassador Djerejian to urge the Syrians to deal justly with three Syrian Jews being held without official charge in Syria. This was another issue we raised in our meeting with President Assad.

But what I really want to mention this morning is another item that I raised with President Assad, and spoke about this morning again with Ambassador Djejerian. That is the matter of Col. William Higgins—the Marine officer taken captive while on duty with U.N. peacekeeping forces in Lebanon.

As the Senate knows, those believed to have held Colonel Higgins have announced to the world that they have executed him. But no one knows for certain.

While the families of Mr. Polhill and Mr. Reed understandably celebrate—and while the families of other hostages at least can take some hope for the release of their loves ones—Colonel Higgins' family knows only frustration and sorrow.

I know Mrs. Higgins—Marine Maj. Robin Higgins. In the past several days, I have received a private note from her.

She is a loving wife, a steadfast marine, and a fine human being. She has borne up remarkably well, under incredible stress. She does not insist that her husband's name be in the headlines every day; she does not demonstrate, or complain, or seek attention for herself or her plight.

But she does not want Col. Bill Higgins forgotten.

We care, equally, about all Americans who have been taken hostage, and all their families.

But Colonel Higgins was there as a member of the American armed services, on official duty—as I said, seconded to the U.N. peacekeeping forces.

As a Nation, we do not—we must not—rest until we have a final accounting of all our military personnel lost, or missing, on official duty. As a people, on a humanitarian basis, we care deeply about those Americans serving their country who have been lost.

That is why we continue to press so hard on the question of our POW-MIA's from the Vietnam era.

That is why we must not forget—why we must not stop, or reduce our efforts—to obtain final and authoritative information on Colonel Higgins. And, should it turn out he is dead, to at least recover his remains, for return to his country and his family.

In his press conference today, President Bush emphasized Colonel Higgins' case.

As I said, I also discussed it with Ambassador Djerejian. and I will continue to raise it, wherever and whenever it might have some effect.

I urge all Americans—as we join in rejoicing over the release of hostages, and in hopeful prayers for the safe release of others—to remember Colonel Higgins; and to remember that our national agenda on hostages will not be fully resolved until his case, too, is fully resolved.

Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of my time, and I thank the managers for permitting me to intervene.

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS OF 1989

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I regret that this morning I had to chair a hearing and could not be here for a while. I certainly appreciate Senator LIEBERMAN, who is now the Presiding Officer, filling in for me in that particular situation here on the floor.

Mr. President, I was not here when my distinguished Republican colleague submitted his substitute for S. 135, and I would like to make some comments on that.

It says, starting on line 3 of the proposed amendment:

> That the Office of Personnel Management shall prescribe regulations to clarify and simplify the political activity prohibitions applicable to employees of the Federal Government or the Government of the District of Columbia. Such regulations shall supersede determinations regarding political activity made by the Civil Service Commission prior to July 19, 1940, under the rules prescribed by the President and any such decisions based on such determinations.

Mr. President, the Office of Personnel Management has been free to make these clarifications any time they wanted to. We have implored them to do that through the years. We had hearings 2 years in a row and out of those hearings asked them to do this kind of clarification work, and they just have not done it. This does not give them any authority to do anything that they cannot do right now.

These things have been on the books. They are described as the determinations regarding political activity made prior to July 19, 1940. We have pointed these things out repeatedly as needing clarification.

I point out the Hatch Act has been in effect since 1939. Why on earth has it taken 50 years to correct some of these inequities?

Under the present Hatch Act, it is very, very difficult to know even how to make some of these judgments. It is that unclear, and that is what we are trying to clarify, basically, with this legislation. This legislation does not dump the old legislation. This is reform. It is improvement, so it will be clear enough that people will know clearly what they can and cannot do. Confusion and illogical of some of the current Hatch Act restrictions are serious problems, and they have a very chilling effect on employees participating even in permissible activities.

The amendment of the Senator from Delaware proposes to do exactly what our legislation does, it proposes to clarify the current situation. That is exactly what this legislation, S. 135, does. The Governmental Affairs Committee held hearings in 1988 and in 1989 on the need for clarifying all the confusion surrounding the Hatch Act.

But I submit that it may not be possible to clarify the present law without legislation. Many of those administrative rulings on the Hatch Act are contradictory; and who will decide which is correct? The way to correct it, I believe, is as this legislation does: Here is what is permitted on the job, period, and that is, nothing of a political activity, to answer that statement. There is nothing you can do on the job of a political nature; it is not permitted. You cannot even wear a button under the new legislation. That is permitted now. So for whatever import we give that, we are tightening up on the legislation. We even go down to that level: You cannot do anything on the job, and that is the way it should be.

Right now it is very confusing, what you can do on the job. You can wear a button, you can say something, cannot say something—people throw up their hands and stop trying to figure out what they can and cannot do. It is that contradictory.

Who will decide which is correct? Even if certification were possible, the lack of clear guidelines in the statute, such as those in S. 135, would be likely to lead to a new round of rulings. Lack of clarity means that people cannot decide what to do or not do. I submit that murky laws invite disobedience, either accidental or intentional. What we are trying to do is take murky laws and make them more clear.

What we need are clear statutory guidelines that both limit any restrictions to only what is absolutely necessary and draw very bright, clear guidelines between what is permissible and impermissible activity, and that is what S. 135 does. It does nothing more than that. It does not knock out great chunks of the Hatch Act.

In addition, I need to point out that clarifying rulings does not address all the basic issues involved in reforming the act. Let us take the example the distinguished majority leader gave here on the floor the day before yesterday.

Senator MITCHELL cited the two shipyards in Maine where employees of the Bath Shipyard are free to participate fully in the political process. Employees right nearby of the Navy shipyard in Portsmouth cannot participate. How will making clarifications address this basic inequity?

I gave the example yesterday of one of the things that triggered off the new interest in this law was that regarding the Mondale situation where during the 1984 Presidential election, the presidents of three major postal employees unions endorsed Walter Mondale's candidacy, and their union newsletters encouraged their memberships to vote for him. Was that wrong?

It turns out that the presidents of those three unions were themselves Government employees who were on leave of absence from their regular jobs in the U.S. Government to be the heads of those unions, and that is permitted under Federal law. That is not wrong. That is permitted under Federal law. Of those three, the shortest time any of them had been on that leave of absence was 16 years, but they were still technically on a leave of absence.

So what happened in that particular case? The Merit Systems Protection Board said there is a prohibition against political participation by Federal employees even though they have been off the job 16 years. So they filed suit. They found them guilty and they kicked them off their job for 60 days, a job they had been off for 16 years anyway. So that was not a big deal as far as that part went.

And so they continued in their jobs as heads of the union, still on leave after that 60-day technical suspension. This was appealed and two Federal circuit courts reversed the finding that had gone in favor of the Merit System Protection Board, and they found that no Hatch Act violations had even occurred.

Would the proposal by my distinguished colleague correct that situation? No, I do not think it would. It would not correct it at all, as I see it. But S. 135 would clarify it by saying that if you are on the job, if you are working in a Government job, you are there in the Federal workplace, you cannot participate in political activity. And that is clear. It is well-defined. There is not any doubt about it. You cannot do it or you will have suit filed against you, and rightly so.

That is the intent of it. It is not to weaken the act; it is to clarify it so it will work better, so it gives better protection. It takes away all these indistinct parts of it right now.

At the same time then, how about when you are off duty? Can a person go back to Fairfax or Arlington County or Prince Georges or Montgomery County, wherever, and participate and go to a political meeting of the Republican Party? Can that person vote in the Republican Party matters there? Could that person be free to go, if he or she wanted to, to a national convention? Should they be free to go? Why should they not? And yet right now they are prohibited from doing that.

We keep some protections in this act, some very good protections in this act. The House did not do this in their bill; we do so in ours. Our bill says you cannot run for public elective office; that person cannot sit in a Government job someplace and at the same time run for elective public office where you have to be out campaigning a good part of the time. You cannot do that.

The second thing, you cannot solicit contributions. Two big protections. And so when reference is made to some of these things here on the floor, which has already been done, they are referring in those cases to the House restrictions, to the House knocking out the restrictions, to the House bill saying, yes, you can solicit contributions and, yes, you can run for public office. That is not the intent here.

It was said yesterday on the floor that, well, that is the way we are headed. This person is not headed in that direction. I stick with S. 135, I can tell you that. I think it clarifies things and still keeps the restrictions we need.

Let me go back. I was giving a couple of examples. I gave the one by the distinguished majority leader as to the two shipyards in Maine where employees of Bath Shipyard are free to participate in the political process, while the Navy shipyard in Portsmouth cannot.

I really fail to see how just making clarifications would address that basic inequity.

The amendment, as I understand it, would substitute for the whole of S. 135.

Let us look at another situation. We have many farmers around the country. I do not know how many of them are aware that they may well be in line to have some charges leveled against them. Do you know what they do? They are willing to serve, but they may be violating the Hatch Act by performing a service for their country. Here is what happens.

The Farmers Home Administration needs to make some judgments on loans and other matters involving the administration of Farmers Home loans, and other matters involving the farms, and where do they go for advice on how to do this? I will tell you what they do. The Farmers Home Administration employs farmers who really know what is going on on the farms. They hire farmers on an intermittent basis; usually they work 1 day a month, or sometimes less. They are on the county committees, the Farmers Home county committees, to approve loans and for other matters.

We had testimony on this before the Governmental Affairs Committee last July. Even the Office of Special Counsel was surprised to learn that these employees were "Hatched" by the Department of Agriculture.

In other words, if a farmer has enough public spirit, he is willing to go along with them on this intermittent basis and serve for 1 day a month, or even less than that sometimes, the Agriculture Department says if you are willing to do that for us, the first thing we have to tell you is you are "Hatched," and you cannot take part in any local political process; you cannot do all the other things we know of that have been interpreted under this act.

That does not make any sense to me. How would these employees be addressed by the substitute submitted by my learned colleague? Would all intermittent employees be exempt? Define intermittent first, I guess. And once we were by that hurdle, would we then try to define exactly what they could do? Could they vote on nothing that involves someone in their own political party, or could they join with this group of county executives to say, well, we will cut out this group or that group or something else? That is not what they do. How would they be handled? We do not know.

Let us take another case. This may be slightly farfetched, and I admit that going in, but let us go through it anyway, just to show how this would not address all the problems. Let us take a case where an employee contributes $1,000 to a candidate, but by present rules that person cannot donate his or her time to stuff envelopes in the back room some place. It is a lousy job to begin with. You go down in the back room someplace. You are not permitted to stuff envelopes. You are not permitted to give $1,000 to a candidate, but you cannot stuff envelopes. Does that make any sense? Let me make further nonsense out of this, if I might.

Let us say that this person happens to have a private business in the office service field. The candidate could contract with that firm to stuff envelopes using the $1,000 contribution. Is that legal now, when he cannot stuff the envelopes by hand, but he can use the money to stuff them by machine? And we are trying to define things like that with these rulings. How do you clarify that situation?

Supposedly, employee organizations can prepare and distribute the voting records of congressional Members on issues of concerns to those members of the organization. However—and this actually happened—one member of one organization recently received a warning letter from the Office of Special Counsel. What was the offense? For distributing a flier containing the organization's listing of a candidate's voting record. Therefore, an organization—organization—can distribute voting records, but members of the organization cannot.

Organizations, I submit, are made up of members. How does the new ruling clarify that conflicting set of circumstances?

There has been some talk that Federal employees do not really want these changes in the Hatch Act. I believe that is false. We have more than 30 organizations representing over 2 million employees that strongly support S. 135. If anyone doubts their organizational support for it, all you have to do is go out in the reception room when we are debating the Hatch Act on the floor. The other night the room was two-thirds filled up with those people who are that concerned about S. 135. They want it.

Some individual workers will want to participate in the political process and others will not. Bless them. That is their choice. But no one should be denied that choice. No one should say to them you cannot do this, you cannot do that, unless it is necessary to put some restrictions on them.

I do not think we want the kind of paternalistic view that existed when the Hatch Act was passed back in 1939, and which no longer exists in this country. Back then, about 80 percent of the people were not covered by anything that protected them, and now in this day the figures have been reversed; about 80 percent of the people are fully protected.

Whether those figures mean anything or not, changes we are proposing here in S. 135 protect that 20 percent even better than they have been protected in the past. Because once this is passed, they will then know what they can do; they will know what they cannot do.

So they no longer operate out there in a big, murky area, not knowing what they can do or cannot do.

I do not think the American public believes any longer that people need the kinds of protections that have been talked about here on the floor, because S. 135 will not open this up to where they are not going to be protected. If anything, I see that it makes their protection even stronger.

Mr. President, obviously, I do not agree with the suggested amendment, which basically replaces what I consider to be a long overdue improvement in the Hatch Act, one that makes it better because it is going to be much more clear than it has been in the past. As I said earlier, murky legislation, which the Hatch Act has been for many years, murky legislation, murky laws on the books, only invite disobedience. They invite disobedience by those who would intentionally subvert the political process because they do not think they are going to get caught. The law is that fuzzy and that unclear.

Murky laws also invite disobedience accidentally by people who, quite in good conscience, might stop by a political convention, and they would be wrong in going in, particularly if they are standing there minding their own business, and someone says, "Hold this sign 1 minute for me here while I go make a phone call," and the fellow is standing there holding a sign. That is against the law. He cannot wave that sign. But the person can go outside and put the same sign on his car and it is legal—or in his yard. That is legal. But I would say the murky laws invite disobedience either from those who are intentionally trying to subvert the process or those who accidentally violate the process.

What we need are clear, statutory guidelines so everyone knows exactly where they stand. That is what S. 135 does. That is the reason I oppose the amendment by my distinguished colleague from Delaware.

I yield the floor.

VISIT TO THE SENATE BY THE PRIME MINISTER OF THE REPUBLIC OF LITHUANIA

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, today the Senate is honored by the presence of a very distinguished visitor, Kazimiera Prunskiene, the Prime Minister of the Republic of Lithuania. She was elected to that office on March 17, 1990, in the country's first democratic election in more than 50 years. She served as deputy director of the Lithuanian's SSR Agricultural Economic Research Institute from 1986 to 1988. In 1988 she was appointed rector of the Institute for Improving Qualifications of Economic Specialists and Managers.

It is a great pleasure for me, on behalf of my colleagues, to welcome the Prime Minister of Lithuania.

[Applause, Senators rising.]

RECESS

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent, in order that our colleagues may express welcome to this distinguished visitor, that the Senate stand in recess for 3 minutes.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 1 p.m., recessed until 1:03 p.m.; whereupon, the Senate reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer [Mr. SANFORD].

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS OF 1989

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I have several things I would like to discuss, but when others want to return to the amendment or the bill at hand I will be glad to yield the floor.

In the meantime, may I have unanimous consent to proceed as in morning business until such time as we are prepared to return to the Hatch Act?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

LITHUANIA

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I do not know how many of my colleagues hold my view. Some on the other side, Senator D'AMATO and Senator HUMPHREY, in particular, and others, have expressed their view about our lack of policy about what we are going to do with reference to Lithuania. It bothers me a lot. I suggest in the friendliest terms to this administration that I consider our China policy and our Lithuania policy to be no policy.

I read a column the other day that said the President has said he does not want to make any mistakes with reference to the problem in Lithuania. This columnist wondered whether not doing anything at all cannot be fairly interpreted as being a mistake.

I want to remark about that a little bit, Mr. President. I have here before me a memo from the Lithuanian-American community. These things come to our offices, and unfortunately, I think many of us do not see them; somebody on staff does. But my staff people know how much I am concerned about what we are doing with reference to Lithuania, so this has been brought to my desk. It is one page.

I do not know how many might be watching back in their offices, how many staff people, at least, might be watching. My dear friend, the Senator from Washington, who is a ranking Senator from the Armed Services Committee I see on the floor; at least this will enlighten him. But I want to read this:

Although the government of the Soviet Union announced Sunday, April 29, 1990 that they were easing the blockade by increasing natural gas flows into Lithuania, the actual effect was minimal. The increase in natural gas flow was a 30% increase to one factory at Jonava, which produces fertilizer exported to the Soviet Union. There is no increased natural gas for consumer use or for other factories.

The current effects of the economic blockade imposed on Lithuania by the Soviet Union the week of April 16, 1990 are as follows:

Over 35,000 people are unemployed.

Under conditions of rationing, limited supplies of gasoline are available to individuals. Medical facilities have reduced their services to outlying rural districts. Ambulances have greatly reduced their services.

The electricity "brown-out" has improved a little because one of the two blocks at the Ignalina nuclear power plan is back on-line.

The normal heating season is about to end, but heating to most residential housing was eliminated last week. Households are conserving cooking fuel.

Mr. President, this is a country that wants freedom. This is a country that became a part of the Soviet Union as a consequence of a terrible agreement between Adolf Hitler and Joseph Stalin.

The most difficult conditions are in the hospitals where all surgical, radiological and laboratory testing procedures have been suspended except in life-threatening situations because of a shortage of the most elemental supplies: surgical thread, scalpels, gauze and cotton balls, sterilizing chemicals, surgical gloves, etc. There is no heat for the hospital wards and there is reduced electricity to even the operating rooms.

The blockage of goods is almost total.

Here is a list of products no longer delivered to Lithuania, no longer delivered to a little country of 3.5 million people that only wants to be free. They are not trying to cause trouble in the world. They just want to be free.

Here is a list of products no longer delivered to Lithuania; the list is from a directive issued by the Soviet Minister of Communications, Konarev, on 4/19/90:

Steel and steel sheeting; tin; all types of piping; plastics; phosphate concentrates; all types of rubber products; wood products; including materials for furniture, flooring, etc. prefabricated wood housing; paper; asbestors; various metal and aluminum construction materials; synthetic fibers and textiles; glass packaging materials, gold products and silver, trucks and automobiles, including automotive spare parts; tractors; bulldozers; diesels and diesel generators.

Among food items embargoed: sugar; coffee, tea, cocoa; oils; citric acid; fish and fish products; nuts; liquor products; margarine and dried foods.

Mr. President, I think our policy with reference to Lithuania is a shameful policy. I do not know precisely what the policy ought to be, but for us to enter into a trade agreement, for us to give most-favored-nation status to the Soviet Union, for us to extol the virtues of Gorbachev and elevate him in public esteem at the expense of 3.5 million freedom-loving people who only want to be free, Mr. President—there will be a time in our history when we will be so embarrassed about this page in our history. This is not to our credit.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the communication from Lithuanian-American Community, Inc. be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the communication was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LITHUANIAN-AMERICAN COMMUNITY, INC., NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, GOVERNMENT AFFAIRS OFFICE, Arlington, VA.

To: Supporters of Lithuania.

From: Government Affairs Office, LAC, Inc.

Date: May 3, 1990.

Re: Economic blockade of Lithuania by the Soviet Union.

Although the government of the Soviet Union announced Sunday, April 29, 1990 that they were easing the blockade by increasing natural gas flows into Lithuania, the actual effect was minimal. The increase in natural gas flow was a 30% increase to one factory at Jonava, which produces fertilizer exported to the Soviet Union. There is no increased natural gas for consumer use or for other factories.

The current effects of the economic blockade imposed on Lithuania by the Soviet Union the week of April 16, 1990 are as follows:

Over 35,000 people are unemployed.

Under conditions of rationing, limited supplies of gasoline are available to individuals. Medical facilities have reduced their service to outlying rural districts. Ambulances have greatly reduced their services.

The electricity "brown-out" has improved a little because one of the two blocks at the Ignalina nuclear power plant is back on-line.

The normal heating season is about to end, but heating to most residential housing was eliminated last week. Households are conserving cooking fuel.

The most difficult conditions are in the hospitals where all surgical, radiological and laboratory testing procedures have been suspended except in life-threatening situations because of a shortage of the most elemental supplies: surgical thread, scalpels, gauze & cotton balls, sterilizing chemicals, surgical gloves, etc. There is no heat for the hospital wards and there is reduced electricity to even the operating rooms.

The blockade of goods is almost total. Here is a list of products no longer delivered to Lithuania; the list is from a directive issued by the Soviet Minister of Communications, Konarev, on 4/19/90:

Steel and steel sheeting; tin; all types of piping; plastics; phosphate concentrates; all types of rubber products; wood products; including materials for furniture, flooring, etc.; prefabricated wood housing; paper; asbestos; various metals and aluminum construction materials; synthetic fibers and textiles; glass packaging materials, gold products and silver, trucks and automobiles, including automotive spare parts; tractors; bulldozers; diesels and diesel generators.

Among food items embargoed: sugar; coffee, tea, cocoa; oils; citric acid; fish and fish products; nuts; liquor products; margarine and dried foods.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I do not understand how we embrace this nonpolicy of the administration. Anyone can examine my record in almost a decade here, and I am one who believes politics stops at the water's edge.

I am a Democrat who has supported the administration on a lot of tough policies, like Contra assistance and other things, where I thought the policy was temporarily unpopular in the country, but in the long term it was the right policy to defend freedom's interests in the world. But twice recently now I have seen a policy that I think is wrongheaded. The China policy and now this policy are wrongheaded.

This is a policy of kowtowing to the powerful at the expense of the weak, the suppressed, and the needy people of the world. I think it is an unacceptable policy.

Beginning tomorrow and for the next several days, a representative of Lithuania will be here. This Senator, along with some of my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, will hear from the Prime Minister and will have an opportunity to visit with her.

I encourage my colleagues to take that opportunity seriously, and have a cup of coffee tomorrow and listen to this lady talk about her country and its needs.

Let me say this. I do not come here advocating some tremendously dramatic and difficult course that could involve tragedy, Mr. President. I respect the President of the United States. I understand his concerns. I want him to be pragmatic and practical in how he does this thing.

I see the problems. But we have to do more for this little country than we are doing. We have to do more than ignore this little country. We have to do more as a great nation to influence the course of historical events than what we are doing now, I think, with respect to Lithuania.

Mr. President, I am prepared to talk briefly on another subject, if no one else has need for the floor. I do not mean to impose. May I say to my good friend and colleague, for whom I have the warmest regards, when anybody comes over here I will be glad to yield immediately.

S&L FRAUD PROSECUTION EFFORT NEEDS MORE RESOURCES

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, Senators will recall on Monday of this week, I was pleased to cosponsor and support an amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Colorado, my warm friend and Banking Committee colleague, Senator WIRTH, to the supplemental appropriations bill, which would have provided more money to prosecute S&L crooks.

Senator WIRTH was absolutely correct. As I stated on Monday, the Justice Department has received over 20,000 savings and loan fraud and embezzlement referrals that the Department has not yet followed up on due to inadequate resources. A March 1990, FBI survey shows that 2,327 inactive cases are on the books. Over 1,300 of these cases are classified by the FBI as major cases involving over $100,000 each. The FBI is pleading for additional resources, Mr. President.

Last year, Congress took steps to provide those resources by authorizing $75 million for additional FBI agents and U.S. attorneys. Yet, the administration only asked for $50 million last year, and it is only asking for $50 million again this year.

I think Senator WIRTH did the Senate a real public service, Mr. President, by bringing this sad situation to our attention and by coming up with a sound, workable plan for rectifying the administration's mistake. Frankly, I think it was unconscionable that a procedural device was used to avoid a vote on the Wirth amendment.

Let me make this point absolutely clear. I think it was absolutely unfair and inequitable to use a Budget Act point of order against the Wirth amendment. I want to remind those in the administration who thought this was such a clever ploy that the very same point of order could have been made against the Panama and Nicaragua assistance in the supplemental.

Let me make my point clear. When the other side offered a point of order against the Wirth amendment, a section 302(b) point of order, that we were violating Gramm-Rudman-Hollings by what we did on the Wirth amendment, that same point of order would have applied to the whole question of Panama and Nicaragua assistance in that supplemental bill.

If this Senator or the Senator from Colorado wanted to be mean-spirited, we could have made the same point of order to the bill and required 60 votes to waive the budget to get to the merits of that legislation, which we refrained from doing out of consideration for many on both sides of the aisle and, frankly, out of consideration for the administration.

But process does matter. Senator WIRTH had a good amendment, a budget-neutral amendment, may I point out, and he deserved a vote on the amendment. It simply cannot be right to raise a point against his amendment when the identical point of order could have been made against the Central American money that those who made the point of order against Senator WIRTH were trying to protect; wrong though it was. However, that is what was done.

But additional FBI agents and U.S. attorneys to go after those who looted savings and loans and who cost American taxpayers literally hundreds of billions of dollars were sacrificed in order to protect $30 million for the promotion, Mr. President, of Panamanian tourism. Frankly, I do not see how those who supported the use of that Budget Act device defend that result.

I know the American people do not understand it. They know our priority must be to go after those executives who thought an S&L charter was a license to fleece the public and an invitation to line their own pockets at the Nation's expense.

Mr. President, this is one Senator who intends to do everything he can to see that every single person who committed fraud, who embezzled, or who committed any crime that contributed to this largest financial scandal in all of our history has to face a judge and receive the sentence they so richly deserve.

I want to put the administration on notice, Mr. President, that this issue is not going away. I know that Senator WIRTH will be looking for additional opportunities to get the necessary additional funding for the FBI and the U.S. attorneys, and I intend to help in that effort and to keep working at it until every S&L crook is brought to justice.

We should have taken care of this issue on the dire emergency supplemental. I am afraid, however, that the administration and some in the Senate did not know that the bill was a dire emergency supplemental. I am sure they could not have known, since if they had known, they surely would not or could not have supported funding for Panamanian tourism over prosecuting S&L crooks.

Mr. President, we need more money for the FBI and for the U.S. attorneys' offices around the country to prosecute these cases. There is no emergency more dire than that. I hope and expect that once the Senate understands the mistake it made, it will do the right thing and provide the necessary money we need to accelerate our efforts against savings and loan fraud.

Mr. President, I want to thank my colleague from Washington State and my dear friend, the manager of this bill, the Senator from Ohio, for permitting me to make these remarks.

Unless there is other business, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS OF 1989

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I would like to advise people listening in the office or anyone within the sound of my voice that we are available for whatever discussion or amendments to be put on this bill. We are prepared to consider them here, debate them here, and are ready to act on them. We hope people will get over here and get them in if they have amendments. If not, this side is prepared to move to a vote.

We have one amendment on this side that I am aware of, by Senator ROBB, and it involves stiffer penalties for violators of the Hatch Act. The amendment will be accepted certainly on this side, and I believe the indication by Senator ROTH has been that it will be accepted on his side, also. So we will get that one out of the way.

We have a technical amendment over here that I will propose on behalf of the committee. It makes technical corrections to the bill to make it conform with different portions of the United States Code.

The only amendment I am aware of is one currently before us by the distinguished Senator from Delaware [Mr. ROTH]. So I encourage anyone else with an amendment to get over here.

We all too often complain about being here weekends, Friday afternoons, not being able to get out, and yet, we cannot get people to bring possible amendments to the floor. So I urge anyone who has an amendment to get it to the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1579

(Purpose: To authorize the Office of Personnel Management to prescribe exceptions to certain prohibition regarding employees who reside in certain municipalities, to provide for the enforcement of the provisions of subchapter III of chapter 73 of title 5, United States Code, and to make technical corrections)

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I offer an amendment on behalf of myself and Senator STEVENS to makes certain technical corrections to the bill.

The amendment would incorporate provisions currently in law regarding activities of employees residing in impacted areas which were inadvertently omitted.

Also it authorizes special counsel to seek corrective action in the same way as if a prohibited personnel practice were involved.

I believe this is acceptable to the other distinguished floor manager of the bill on the minority side, and with this agreement I urge the amendment be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. GLENN], for himself and Mr. STEVENS, proposes an amendment numbered 1579.

Mr. GLENN. I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 2, line 4, strike out "1989" and insert in lieu thereof "1990".

On page 4, line 14, strike out "and".

On page 4, insert between lines 14 and 15 the following new subparagraph:

"(B) not a subordinate employee; and

On page 4, line 15, strike out "(B)" and insert in lieu thereof "(C)".

On page 6, line 3, strike out the end quotation marks and the period following the end quotation marks.

On page 6, between lines 3 and 4, insert the following:

"§ 7325. Political activity permitted; employees residing in certain municipalities

"The Office of Personnel Management may prescribe regulations permitting employees, without regard to the prohibitions in paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 7323 of this title, to take an active part in political management and political campaigns involving the municipality or other political subdivision in which they reside, to the extent the Office considers it to be in their domestic interest, when—

"(1) the municipality or political subdivision is in Maryland or Virginia and in the immediate vicinity of the District of Columbia, or is a municipality in which the majority of voters are employed by the Government of the United States; and

"(2) the Office determines that because of special or unusual circumstances which exist in the municipality or political subdivision it is in the domestic interest of the employees and individuals to permit that political participation.".

On page 6, at the end of the matter between lines 11 and 12, strike out the end quotation marks and the following period and insert the following before line 12:

"7325. Political activity permitted; employees residing in certain municipalities.".

On page 6, insert after the matter between lines 11 and 12 the following new section:

SEC. 3. AMENDMENT TO CHAPTER 12 OF TITLE 5, UNITED STATES CODE.

Section 1261(c) of title 5, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(c) If the Special Counsel receives an allegation concerning any matter under paragraph (1), (3), (4), or (5) of subsection (a), the Special Counsel may investigate and seek corrective action under section 1214 and disciplinary action under section 1215 in the same way as if a prohibited personnel practice were involved.".

On page 6, line 12, strike out "SEC. 3" and insert in lieu thereof "SEC. 4".

On page 7, line 18, strike out "SEC. 4" and insert in lieu thereof "SEC. 5".

On page 8, line 1, strike out "SEC. 5" and insert in lieu thereof "SEC. 6".

On page 8, line 8, strike out "SEC. 6" and insert in lieu thereof "SEC. 7".

On page 8, line 14, strike out "SEC. 7" and insert in lieu thereof "SEC. 8".

On page 8, line 18, strike out "7327" and insert in lieu thereof "7325".

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry. I was told a little while ago that I did not need to move to set aside the current amendment to consider another amendment. Is that correct? Or do I need to move to set the Roth amendment aside?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It depends on the construction of the amendment, if the Senator will give us an opportunity to look at it.

Mr. GLENN. This is not an amendment to the Roth amendment. This is to the bill itself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment, then, is in order.

Mr. GLENN. I urge its adoption.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Mr. ROTH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. ROTH. The proposed amendment is satisfactory to the minority side, and we are willing to accept it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Ohio.

The amendment (No. 1579) was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. ROTH. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed as in morning business for the next 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

WHOLE HERD BUYOUT

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I rise in support of a resolution offered last week, by my colleague from Wyoming [Mr. WALLOP].

The Agriculture Committee is currently in the process of marking up the language that will become part of the 1990 farm bill. There is a title for dairy in that farm bill. There will not be a title for beef cattle.

That is precisely the way that those of us involved in the beef cattle industry want it. The dairy industry represents an extremely difficult line of work. Dairymen have to be on the job, twice a day, 365 days a year, year in and year out. The dairy program helps to bring some stability to that line of work.

Cattlemen and women work within their industry just as hard as those in the dairy industry. And they want stability just as badly. To them, the stability comes from keeping the Government out of the cattle business.

That is the goal of this resolution. In 1985, the Food Security Act included provisions for stabilizing the price of milk by allowing for the culling of thousands of dairy cattle from dairy herds. Where did those cattle go?

They went to slaughter. And for all efforts to the contrary, the effect was to depress beef prices and to destabilize an important industry.

I do not want to see a repeat of the developments of 1985. I do not think that anyone in this body wants to inadvertently hurt one segment of our society while trying to help another.

But we need to remind ourselves of that fact once in a while.

I wish the Agriculture Committee the best of luck as it drafts replacement language to the 1985 farm bill. And I remind them just one more time: "A whole herd buyout is in no ones best interest."

I yield the floor.

MIDEAST PEACE PROCESS

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to state my position on the Mideast peace process—a process much discussed by my concerned colleagues.

I want to reassure Israel that we have not forgotten that it is a true ally. I would also like to state both my commitment to Israel's security as well as my respect for Israel's right to make its own decisions as a sovereign state.

We have heard a great deal on the Mideast process, and there are a few things that I would like to have considered at this time. I would like to take this opportunity to offer my support for taking a broad examination of the entire Mideast, not just Israel. As Americans, we expect a great deal from ourselves, as we should. We examine ourselves with a critical eye, as we should.

In turn, we expect a lot from other democracies. We in the Western World have a tendency to view Israel with the same high expectations that we have of ourselves. But we must remember that Israel carries a daily burden that we do not. It is a tiny country, unlike us, surrounded by numerous, hostile factions operating from within neighboring countries.

If we aid these antagonistic factions by caving in to their pressure, then we will have assisted them in achieving their goal of destroying all of Israel. We will have aided in the destruction of a true ally in the Mideast. I know that none of my colleagues wants to see that happen.

Now is not the time to display haste. Pressure has been applied through the media in order to manipulate public opinion. It's working. Israel, on the other hand, is depending solely on the common sense of Western civilization.

Problems with Israel should be discussed as among friends, not in public. Public criticism sends the wrong signals to Israel's antagonists. It sends a false message that United States support is decreasing to Israel or is shifting to Israel's adversaries.

Israel is a proven ally. It is our ally in the United Nations. It is our strategic ally, as well. It is vital to our national interests in the Mideast. As our access to the Mideast shrinks, Israel becomes even more critical as a friend. The aid we give to Israel is aid to a friend. It is aid to keep a democracy in existence. It is aid to further our national interests in that region. It is not an excuse to dictate policy to Israel or to demand that it act as our puppet. Israel is a sovereign state. We would not allow Israel, or any other country, to tell us how to handle our domestic issues.

We want peace in the Mideast, as does Israel. Let us let Israel decide the best path, since it is the one who stands to lose the most. The best thing we can do is to give Israel balanced advice.

A wise man, a man who was once a man of war and later became a man of peace, said, "When the bells of peace ring there will be no hands to beat the drums of war. Even if they existed, they would be stilled." That wise man was Egypt's late President Anwar el-Sadat in his address to the Parliament of Israel in November 1977, and who was brutally assassinated by extremists. For peace to work in the Mideast, it must be right for all parties.

I know that all of my colleagues are committed to a long lasting peace in the Mideast. I hope that they are also just as committed to Israel's survival.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

Mr. DIXON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ADAMS). The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to go forward as in morning business until such time as my friends, the distinguished manager and the distinguished Senator from Delaware, should suggest that they are prepared to go ahead.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there any objection to the request for the extension of time for morning business? There being no objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Illinois is recognized in morning business.

WES CHRISTOPHERSON—A MAN OF BUSINESS AND PUBLIC SERVICE

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I want to take a moment to recognize the outstanding contributions of Mr. Weston R. Christopherson to the State of Illinois. Wes Christopherson has recently retired as chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the Northern Trust Corp. in Chicago, IL. He is an exceptional example of business and civic leadership.

Wes Christopherson was born in North Dakota. After serving in the U.S. Navy and obtaining his undergraduate and law degrees from the University of North Dakota, this outstanding American came to Illinois. Wes began his business career at Jewel Co., a Chicago-based grocery and drug retailer, where he eventually rose to be chairman of the board and chief executive officer.

Six years ago, Wes Christopherson began another career. He joined Northern Trust Co. as chairman of the board and chief executive officer. He recognized that the bank would have to change because old traditional ways were not enough to meet emerging financial challenges. Under Wes's leadership the bank more than met those challenges. While many financial institutions are experiencing difficulties today, I am pleased to say that Northern Trust Corp. just completed a record year.

In addition to his major business accomplishments, Wes Christopherson has been outstanding in his service to our community in a number of roles. He was a founder and has served with me as vice chairman of the Institute for Illinois. I am especially grateful for his leadership role in the institute. In addition, he is a trustee of the University of Chicago, and past director of the MacArthur Foundation, the McCormick Theological Seminary, and Children's Memorial Hospital, as well as other important organizations contributing to the improvement of the quality of life in Illinois.

Mr. President, in all these positions, Wes has executed his responsibilities with integrity, enthusiasm, and dedication.

We are fortunate to have Wes Christopherson in our State.

On behalf of the Illinois congressional delegation, let me take this opportunity to express our sincere appreciation as we say thank you to Wes Christopherson for his personal and public efforts in behalf of his fellow citizens in Illinois.

Mr. President, I would be delighted to talk briefly about my support for things that my chairman of the Armed Services Committee, Senator NUNN, has said here on the floor. But, again, may I say to my colleague on that committee, the manager, whenever he or my distinguished friend from Delaware want to go ahead, I will yield. I can do this at another time.

Mr. ROTH. Go ahead.

REEXAMINING U.S. DEFENSE STRATEGY

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I commend the distinguished chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee for his comprehensive approach to this year's national security debate. Recently—in two speeches before this Chamber—he took an exhaustive look at the future of U.S. defense strategy, and presented in broad terms his thoughts on a potential corresponding budget.

In the absence of adequate leadership from the President on these vital matters, the chairman has stepped into the void. Importantly, he has grounded his approach upon an assessment of existing and future U.S. national security needs and has avoided the temptation—which I might add many others have succumbed to—of simply making up a new defense budget number. While I may not accept all of Senator NUNN's assumptions or recommendations outlined 2 week ago, I am pleased to say that we are in substantial agreement on many important issues.

For example, Senator NUNN said that we can deter nuclear war with less weapons and greater stability and called for a significant decrease in spending for nuclear modernization. Mr. President, I could not agree more. I have been insisting all along that the administration's defense budget request places far too much emphasis on nuclear weapons modernization, as it makes no cuts at all in these major programs. Senator NUNN is helping push the debate in the right direction. However, I do not necessarily accept the argument that we should continue SDI at the current level of funding, or that we should proceed with two mobile missile programs.

The chairman also suggested that we can ultimately reduce U.S. forces in Europe by a greater number than is not being discussed in the CFR talks. Mr. President, he is right again. I too was impressed by Dr. James Schlesinger's testimony and I am sure that would have been true of my distinguished friend, the Senator from Ohio who is a very important member of the committee. I was impressed by Dr. Schlesinger's testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee that 75,000 to 100,000 U.S. troops in Europe will eventually be enough. I remind the Senate we have 305,000, with supporting dependents, however, I would add that I believe we can make progress toward this goal immediately. While continuing the CFE talks, we should also withdraw a significant number of troops from Europe now—perhaps 50,000. This is a tangible action that we can take in the near term. It would demonstrate to our citizens, and to the world, that we are serious about dealing with the changing world in which we live.

Mr. President, there are many other areas where I think Senator NUNN has hit the bull's-eye. He has called for greater reliance on the reserves. As for this Senator, he is preaching to the choir. I believe that as we draw down forward deployed forces, we should be transferring missions and capabilities to the Reserves and the Guard, so that we can cost effectively preserve sufficient strength in a time of diminishing threat. The chairman has also argued for maximizing our defense resource allocation by "improving existing platforms and reducing new starts." Again, I could not agree more. As I have said before, "* * * when confronted with a choice between maintaining an existing program that we know works, or sacrificing it for a future program that we might not need, I say we stick with what we have and make gradual improvements as necessary."

Finally, Senator NUNN has emphasized that "preserving a viable defense industrial base"—an issue for which I have long had particular concern—is a key component of a new U.S. defense strategy.

The senior Senator from Georgia also proposed—as part of his new defense strategy—that we should, in his words, "employ a concept of flexible readiness." He defines this concept as "the adjustment of the readiness status of various forces based on the threat; the amount of warning time; the likelihood these forces will go into action; and the ability to transport them to the battle." As chairman of the Armed Services Readiness, Sustainability, and Support Subcommittee, this concept is of particular interest to me.

Senator NUNN believes that a prudent course would be to keep certain high priority forces, such as strategic forces, expeditionary forces, forward deployed forces, special operations forces, and selected intelligence units, at a high state of readiness. In contrast, the chairman suggests that other forces, such as those specifically configured to fight a conventional war in Europe against the Soviet Union, would be kept at adjustable readiness levels. Importantly, Senator NUNN points out that forces such as these should be maintained so that their readiness could be quickly increased if we observe major changes in the threat.

Mr. President, I believe that the chairman's concept of "flexible readiness" represents a sensible approach to adopting our armed services to the diminishing threat. I think he is correct that careful implementation of this type of approach would not result—and this is important—in the hollow military forces that we had in the 1970's. No one wants that again. As chairman of the Readiness Subcommittee, I will make sure that however we proceed in this area, we will not return to those days.

Finally, and I conclude, Senator NUNN made valuable recommendations on what he believes represents a realistic defense spending figure for fiscal year 1991 and the out-years. Now, Mr. President, I am not going to stand here before you today and say that I have my own special defense spending number to throw into the debate. There are already enough numbers flying around, and I will resist adding to the confusion. However, I would like to associate myself with the chairman's basic approach: We must take this year's major defense funding cuts in budget authority rather than outlays. To do otherwise would require immediate and massive cuts in manpower, training, and other day to day military funding areas, and would impose an enormous and unacceptable burden on our Armed Forces.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

I thank my friend from Delaware and I thank my friend from Ohio for giving me this time.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time for extension of morning business has been completed with the Senator yielding the floor.

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS OF 1989

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. We are now once again on the bill and the Chair recognizes the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. GLENN. I thank the distinguished Presiding Officer.

AMENDMENT NO. 1580

(Purpose: To prohibit the coercion of political activity from federal employees)

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment to offer on behalf of Senator ROBB. The amendment is acceptable on this side of the aisle and I believe on the other side also.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. GLENN], for Mr. ROBB, for himself, and Mr. WARNER, proposes an amendment numbered 1580.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 7, after line 11, insert the following:

(c) Chapter 29 of title 18, United States Code (18 U.S.C. 592 et seq.), relating to elections and political activities is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 610. COERCION OF POLITICAL ACTIVITY.

"It shall be unlawful for any person to intimidate, threaten, command, or coerce, or attempt to intimidate, threaten, command, or coerce, any employee of the federal government as defined in 5 U.S.C. 7322(1), as amended, to engage in, or not to engage in, any political activity, including, but not limited to, voting or refusing to vote for any candidate or measure in any election, making or refusing to make any political contribution, or working or refusing to work on behalf of any candidate. Any person who violates this section shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.".

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. ROBB. Mr. President, as a cosponsor of S. 135, the Hatch Act Reform Amendments of 1989, I applaud the commitment of the distinguished chairman of the Government Affairs Committee, Senator GLENN, to developing a reasonable and workable alternative to the current act. I strongly believe that Federal employees should be able to have the same political freedoms currently enjoyed by State and local government employees in my own State of Virginia, free of intimidation by management or labor.

I believe my amendment will complement the chairman's yeoman's work on this important legislation. My amendment includes language specifically prohibiting intimidation or coercion of Federal workers by any individual or group. I believe this amendment is acceptable to the chairman.

Mr. GLENN. I have reviewed the amendment to S. 135 offered by Senator ROBB. The language included in the amendment reflects the committee's strong commitment to protecting Federal workers from intimidation and coercion while, at the same time, allowing them to voluntarily participate in the political process in an off-duty, nonofficial manner. I am, therefore, pleased to accept the amendment.

Mr. ROBB. Mr. President, I appreciate the chairman's kind consideration of this amendment, and I thank him for his leadership in this important area.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I have no objection to the proposed amendment. But prior to its acceptance, I would like to make, if I may, a comment or two.

What the proposed amendment does is to increase the penalties for those who would violate S. 135. The section is entitled "Coercion of Political Activity." While I have no objection to increasing the penalty, I think it is important in doing so that it be clearly understood that it is going to be very difficult, if not impossible, as a general rule, to effectively enforce the law.

As a matter of fact, I have a letter dated July 24, 1989, a copy of a letter from the U.S. Department of Justice, Office of Legislative Affairs, in which it is pointed out that the current bill includes several provisions, specifically 7321 and 7324, which although theoretically intended to prevent abuses will be ineffective in achieving that goal as a practical matter.

Further, these provisions could be virtually impossible to enforce effectively and could invite a flood of litigation by disgruntled employees.

What my concern is, Mr. President, is that, while we are increasing the sanctions, as a practical matter, under S. 135, for reasons spelled out in considerable detail in the letter, it is going to be extraordinarily difficult to enforce the sanctions. Just let me point out that the core argument of proponents of this legislation is that if coercion of Federal employees is the central concern, then proscribing partisan political activity is overkill, particularly when Federal employees can be fully protected by a simple anticoercion statute. Moreover, it is said that some of the States have repealed their Hatch Acts and have adopted anticoercion statutes in their place with good results. No cases of coercion have been found.

While this core argument has a veneer of plausibility, it is rotten at the core. The argument is at odds with reality. Frankly, it misunderstands the nature of coercion. It brings to mind, many centuries ago, when King Henry II of England wondered aloud how he might be rid of "this troublesome priest" and four of his subordinates, having overheard him, rode off and murdered Thomas Becket in Canterbury Cathedral. Were those four coerced? If you were the special counsel, how would you prove that case? What evidence would you offer? Can there be coercion without a coercer?

Suppose there are two GS-15's in the Labor Department who both hope to earn the same promotion. Under this legislation, one of them engages in partisan political activity to please his superior. The other who belongs to the opposite party nevertheless undertakes similar political activity to eliminate his competitor's supposed edge. The superior is, in fact, oblivious to the political activity of either subordinate.

Is the activity of the GS-15, a member of the opposite political party, voluntary? How can it be voluntary when it is something he does not want to do? Is it coerced? As far as the GS-15 is concerned, he has been coerced. Yet no one has coerced him.

This example will recur countless times under this bill. Yet there will be no legal evidence of a coercion violation. No cases will be brought. No cases should be brought, since there are no violations of law, only violations of the values of the first amendment.

I am hardly persuaded that the lack of prosecutions by the various States after repeal of their Hatch Acts is proof that repeal works. Rather, I find the absence of cases rather troubling. It means to me that there are many employees suffering in quiet anxiety, who are engaging in partisan political activity because of subtle pressures "beyond the reach of any anticoercion statute," as President Ford so perceptively observed.

Human nature does not change. It does not matter whether the time or place is England in the Middle Ages, Kentucky in the 1930's, or the Department of Labor next year. People are ever striving to get ahead, to better themselves. That makes them vulnerable to the subtle pressures I have noted.

Congress understood this in 1939 when it enacted the Hatch Act. The central idea, the core principle, of the Hatch Act is that a simple anticoercion statute will not effectively control coercion. That was the lesson—the hard lesson—of history. If we ignore history, we are doomed to repeat it.

Despite my concerns about the general thrust of the legislation, as I said, Mr. President, I have no objection to the adoption of the proposed amendment on behalf of Senator ROBB.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my Virginia colleague, Senator ROBB, in what we feel will be an important enhancement to the Hatch Act reform amendments.

Among the criticisms of the underlying bill, S. 135, is that it potentially could contribute to increased instances of political coercion of Federal and postal employees. The subtle nature of pressure in the workplace, in our judgment, requires a strong deterrent.

We have proposed, therefore, significant penalties should even an attempt to coerce be made. This would include a maximum fine of $5,000 or a prison sentence of up to 3 years. It is our view that this amendment will help to put teeth into the legislation by thus strengthening the U.S. Criminal Code.

I would like to take this opportunity to express my thanks to the distinguished managers of the bill, Senators GLENN and ROTH, for their assistance in accepting our amendment. I would also like to recognize the leadership of my Virginia colleague, Senator ROBB, in initiating this constructive measure of protection for the Nation's 3 million Federal and postal employees.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I ask for the adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. GLENN] on behalf of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. ROBB].

The amendment (No. 1580) was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ROTH. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SENATOR SASSER'S PROPOSALS FOR DEFENSE SPENDING

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I rise today to congratulate our friend and colleague, Senator SASSER, for his leadership and vision as chairman of the Budget Committee. I want to emphasize those two terms: Leadership and vision.

While the Bush administration ignores the realities of Eastern Europe after the collapse of the Warsaw Pact, calling for a status quo cold war military budget, Senator SASSER has recognized the need for bold action to meet the new realities of the decade of the 1990's and beyond.

Senator SASSER has called for major reductions in defense spending next year, in the fiscal year 1991 defense budget, and, through his leadership, the Senate Budget Committee has now approved major reductions.

Of course, Senator SASSER's first responsibility, as chairman of the Budget Committee, is to make sure that we achieve the deficit reduction targets. Given the revolutions sweeping Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, it is entirely appropriate that major defense cuts contribute to deficit reduction.

I supported Senator SASSER's call for defense outlay cuts of $12 billion below the administration request of $303.3 billion for fiscal year 1991, or a proposed defense outlay of $291 billion. The Budget Committee resolution at $293.9 billion is close to Senator SASSER's recommendation, and we, of course, may be addressing that even further on the floor.

In addition to cutting outlays, I agree with Senator SASSER that we must look beyond the year-to-year Federal budget problems. We must take a long-term view, and this is where the vision and the leadership of our distinguished Budget Committee chairman has really come into play.

Defense spending should depend on real defense needs, not on some arbitrary percentage of last year's budget. Clearly, the military threat from the Soviet Union, which previously justified 60 percent of our military budget, is declining. Everyone from junior high school students to the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency recognizes this reduced threat—everyone, that is, except those who drafted the administration's defense budget.

As one extreme example, the administration's original budget request included funds to develop the followon to the Lance tactical nuclear missile. This short-range missile, which must have a range less than 300 miles under the INF Treaty, could at most reach East Germany, a little bit of Czechoslovakia, or a little bit of Poland. This is a clear example of waste: $112 million requested in the President's budget to prepare a nuclear tip missile to attack Lech Walesa with nuclear weapons. I thought Poland, Czechoslovakia, and East Germany were now our friends. The administration requested $112 million to modify and upgrade this Lance nuclear tip missile.

But this is not an aberration in the Bush-Cheney budget. The top 11 strategic nuclear weapons programs have been increased by an average of 30 percent. This is clearly wasteful and unnecessary as threats are decreasing daily.

We need to recognize the new realities of the 1990's, a world in remarkable and joyous change, one moving toward both democracy and free markets; a world with greatly reduced danger of Soviet military attack. We need to cut out wasteful spending, reduce procurement fraud, and stop buying new weapons that have no rational use in today's world.

Senator SASSER is a true leader in cutting through all of the rhetoric to recognize that the defense budget can and must be significantly reduced and redirected. He has correctly noted that we can provide for our Nation's long-term defense while cutting back from current record peactime spending levels.

But cutting this year's outlays is not enough. We must also stop budget authority for expensive and unneeded new weapons systems, systems started primarily to stop a surprise Soviet attack on Western Europe.

The Bush/Cheney request of $306.9 billion in budget authority would create another bow wave of new weapons procurement commitments—commitments that would come due in future years.

We must terminate unneeded weapons systems and postpone procurements of other weapons until testing is complete and their need is fully justified. Otherwise, we will create wasteful spending and exacerbate outlay problems in the years ahead.

Again, Senator SASSER recognized this need. He initially recommended that defense budget authority be reduced by some $26 billion below the President's request, to a level of $281 billion in 1991. While the budget resolution is slightly higher at $285.6 billion, this is still $21.3 billion less than the President's request and is very close to what Senator SASSER had initially proposed.

I encourage all of our colleagues to support Senator SASSER's proposals for defense. This is the first step in restoring fiscal responsibility while leaving in place a robust military force, fully capable of defending American interests around the globe, with or without Mr. Gorbachev.

Again, Mr. President, I congratulate the chairman of the Budget Committee.

I know I, like all other Senators, get asked all the time when we go back home, is there going to be a peace dividend? I guess the short answer is in this next year, not much. We are going to cut some outlays that Senator SASSER has proposed, but the big peace dividend comes down the way. It comes in 1994, 1995, 1996, and 1997, and the only way it can come is by cutting and reducing budget authority to terminate the procurement of these new and unneeded weapons systems. That is when our country will feel the effect of the peace dividend, and that is when we are going to need it.

We are going to need it for deficit reduction. We are going to need it for health care. We are going to need it for education. We are going to need it for care for the elderly. We are going to need it for biomedical research. But we are not going to have it available unless we follow Senator SASSER's lead in both reducing outlays for next year, which gives us a little bit of the peace dividend next year, but in following his lead in cutting the budget authority to at least the level that the Budget Committee has recommended. That really is the beginning of this country realizing the peace dividend.

Again Mr. President, I want to congratulate the distinguished chairman of the Budget Committee, the Senator from Tennessee, for his vision and his bold actions. Again, Mr. President, I encourage all of our colleagues to follow his visionary lead on this subject. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, I want to thank the distinguished Senator from Iowa for his kind words this afternoon on the floor of the U.S. Senate. But more important, I want to thank the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN] for the foresight that he has displayed on these very critical and crucial issues. These are, indeed, historic times. There is no doubt that there must be major revisions in our outlook on the world.

When the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, the primary spokesman for assessing the threat to this Nation, states before a Senate committee, "There is little chance that Soviet hegemony could be restored in Eastern Europe," then I think it is high time that we take heed of that warning.

I point out that our proposals to make what some are calling dramatic reductions in military spending still will leave the United States with a very potent military force. I submit, Mr. President, the most potent military force on the face of this globe.

With the cuts that the Senate Budget Committee is proposing and which have been endorsed on the floor by the distinguished Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], we would still retain a 14-aircraft carrier battle group, just as the President's budget does. Yes, we might be cutting 1 air wing, but we would still have 35 air wings left.

Yes, we might cut three Active Army divisions instead of the two proposed by the administration. But even if we cut 3 Active Army divisions, there would still be 15 Active Army divisions that would remain, and that does not count the 3 Marine divisions that are also stationed in the United States and abroad; one in Okinawa, if memory serves me correctly.

We might very well have to cut 100,000 troops instead of the 38,000 recommended by Mr. CHENEY. But the United States would still have almost 2 million men and women under arms and available in our United States to defend our interests anywhere in the world.

I would like to congratulate today the distinguished Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN] for his foresight and for his leadership on this critical issue. Senator HARKIN of Iowa was the first of our colleagues in either body to recommend that we cut budget authority for defense now and cut it well below the outlays to prevent the buildup of another so-called bow wave of expensive weapons bills that we do not need that will be coming due 3, 4, 5 years from now.

Back in January, it was Senator HARKIN of Iowa, who was the first to call for cutting the defense budget authority to $282 billion for fiscal year 1991. It was Senator HARKIN who sent the material to me outlining this cut. It was Senator HARKIN who helped to persuade me and countless others in this body that major cuts in budget authority are not only appropriate but prudent in this post cold war era.

In fact, the approach of the distinguished Senator from Iowa outlined several months ago was publicly endorsed by the House and Senate just this past week.

The Budget Committee of the House of Representatives agreed to a $283 billion budget authority figure for defense. That was very close to the number recommended by Senator HARKIN.

I might say, parenthetically, that the distinguished chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Senator NUNN, has also called for major cuts in defense budget authority.

So I say to my friend from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN] that I agree with his long-term perspective. We must cut weapons procurement now. We must cut weapons procurement now in the outyears even if we do not provide significant outlay reductions in the first year. We must have vision. We must cut procurement of many of the next generation of nuclear weapons for which we have no need. We must also end some new conventional weapons that are on the drawing board, intended to stop a surprise Soviet conventional attack that has been rendered absolutely obsolete and militarily untenable by the revolutions that have occurred in Eastern Europe in 1989 and this year.

I might say, Mr. President, that it was our friend from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN] who also called for major long-term reductions in the defense budget, returning to the previous peacetime levels near $200 billion in constant 1990 dollars by 1995. This is not inconsistent with numbers later proposed by the distinguished chairman of the Armed Services Committee, Senator NUNN.

The call by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN] for $200 billion by 1996 as an outlay goal in 1990 dollars is a prudent goal, far more realistic for the new realities of the 1990's than the administration's plan for $325 billion in budget authority for 1995.

Even adjusting for inflation, the administration is equivalent to $272 billion in 1990 dollars, far above previous peacetime levels that dipped to $200 billion in 1990 dollars following the Korean and Vietnam wars.

I also compliment the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], for his leadership in keeping outer space a weapons-free sanctuary. Now is the time to stop the arms race in outer space, stop it before any nation has taken that first step to putting up the first weapon and, God forbid, the first nuclear weapon.

I am sad to say that the administration's continued push for rapid deployment of a space-based star wars defense could eliminate a unique opportunity to keep outer space a sanctuary for peaceful exploration for all mankind in order that we may further commerce and science.

Mr. President, I would be remiss if I did not tell my colleagues here today that the distinguished Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], has been a leader on the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, attempting to prevent a dangerous escalation in antisatellite or so-called Asat weapons development.

The United States depends more and more on satellites for both military and civilian functions. Now that relations are improving between the superpowers, we have a truly unique opportunity to curb the so-called Asat arms race, to protect our assets in space. the Pentagon's own net assessment admits that the threat to our satellites is truly diminishing, and yet, in the face of that, the administration has requested a 181-percent increase in the Pentagon's kinetic energy Asat weapon. Building effective, dedicated Asat weapons would only stimulate the Soviets to develop better Asat weapons themselves that could be used in the future to put our critical satellites at risk.

So I want to congratulate the foresight of the distinguished Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], for seeking to end the dangerous Asat arms race. I look forward to working with Senator HARKIN in the weeks and months ahead as we attempt to bring the administration's cold war into line with the fiscal and global realities of the decade of the 1990's.

I yield the floor.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I thank our distinguished chairman of the Budget Committee for his kind remarks and to say to him that I have appreciated very much his openness and willingness to receive the materials that I sent him; his willingness to have his staff people work with me and my staff in developing some of these numbers; and, again, my high esteem for his leadership in crafting and creating the budget that really truly recognizes the new realities.

I look forward to working with the distinguished presiding officer [Mr. ADAMS] not only in that capacity but also as members of the Appropriations Committee—the distinguished presiding officer is also a member of the Appropriations Committee—to make sure that the dollars we appropriate recognize this new reality and fit in accordance with the budget that the Senator from Tennessee has so creatively, and I think with great foresight, developed for us in the Senate.

I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I agree with the comments made by the two preceding Senators when they say that there will be a substantial peace dividend. But let me say that I feel it is very important as we achieve this dividend that it be not used for additional Federal spending but be used to return to the taxpayer who for the last 40 years has been bearing the burden of high taxes to support the defense effort.

The distinguished senior Senator from New York has proposed that there be a cut in Social Security taxes on the grounds that the FICA has imposed an unfair tax, a heavy burden on the low and middle income.

I, too, am concerned about that factor. I do not think we want to mess around with Social Security. I do not think the American people want us to mess around with Social Security. So what I have proposed is an amendment, or legislation that would reduce over 5 years the marginal rate of taxation of the low and median income that would as I say in turn offset the additional burden being paid by those taxpayers under Social Security.

I fear that what will happen is that the peace dividend will be used to increase spending rather than to provide the relief that I personally believe the taxpayers are entitled to.

So while I agree that we will be able to make savings in defense spending, to the extent that is a reality I would hope that we would return it to the American taxpayer.

I yield the floor.

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS OF 1989

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the time between now and 4 p.m. be equally divided between myself and Senator ROTH, and that at 4 p.m. I be recognized to table the Roth substitute amendment; that no other amendments or motions be in order prior to the disposition of the Roth substitute amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. and it is so ordered.

Mr. ROTH. I make a point of order a quorum is not present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBB). Who yields time?

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I yield myself such time as I may require.

Mr. President, I urge everyone whether in the offices or whereever if they have amendments to this bill to please bring them to the floor. I say on the Democratic side, we disposed of the technical amendments, we have disposed of the Robb amendment which the Presiding Officer sent over and we passed a little while ago. That has now been successfully passed. To the best of my knowledge we have no more amendments, no more changes proposed to S. 135 on our side of the aisle.

The only thing I know of pending on the other side of the aisle is the substitute amendment by Mr. ROTH. We will be voting on that at 4 o'clock.

Mr. President, I do not know whether it is going to be possible to have final passage on this bill today. But I urge anyone on either side of the aisle to please bring their amendments over so we can dispose of this.

If that is not to be the case, if we were to have a long string of amendments, we hate to use that nasty word around here, but "filibuster by another means," I think that will become apparent later on. But if that is not the intent, and if that becomes the intent, then the majority leader has already indicated his desire to file cloture on this bill at the earliest possible time so we can get on with the business of the Senate and of this country.

So I urge if that is not the intent on the other side, then let us get the amendments over here, vote them out, and maybe we can have final passage today. We are taking up the Roth amendment at 4 o'clock. If there are no other amendments I hope we can go to final passage by early this evening. We hope that will be possible because we are finished on our side of the aisle on this bill.

With that, I yield the floor.

Mr. ROTH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. ROTH. I yield myself such time as I may take.

Mr. President, as I said this morning I was more impressed by what was said by the proponents of S. 135 than by what we said. As I indicated then, the three principal reasons for this proposed legislation seems to be first, the question of constitutionality.

As I pointed out in a later statement, there is no question about the constitutionality of the Hatch Act. It has been taken to the Supreme Court twice. In both cases it was upheld. One may disagree with those decisions but it is very clear that the Supreme Court feels the Hatch Act is proper, is constitutional, and of course for that reason upheld in both of these cases.

A second reason given for the legislation is because of the so-called confusion or lack of clarity of the regulations under the Hatch Act.

Of course, that is what my amendment before the Senate floor seeks to do, to provide the kind of clarification that will help the Federal employees who must abide by these rules.

A third reason given for the legislation is the fact that three union leaders were a few years ago charged with violating the Hatch Act. As I point out, the courts later found that there was no such violation, so that in fact that question is no longer an issue. But I do intend later to offer an amendment that would make it clear that this kind of situation does not arise again.

I agree that the leaders of the Federal unions who are on leave of absence should not be regulated, should not be subject to the provisions of the Hatch Act. For the reason, at a later time, I will propose that the law be cleared so that situation does not arise again.

But as I said earlier this morning I am surprised that the advocates of S. 135 do not choose to speak about what the proposed legislation is all about. They talk about details. They talk about the arguments I just referred to, but they do not talk about what the adoption of this legislation will really mean.

I must respectfully disagree with my distinguished chairman, when he says S. 135 does not represent a repeal but only an amendment of the basic law.

In my judgment, nothing can be further from the truth. What the Hatch Act has sought to do and has done successfully is to avoid partisan political action on the part of the Federal employee. What we are talking about here is a balance of interest.

Again, I have not heard the advocates of this legislation make any substantial reference to the rights and the interests of the American people. We have two interests which come into conflict here, and what the Hatch Act has sought to do is to arrive at a balance that protects the basic rights both of the Federal employee to participate in the electoral process and to help ensure to the American people that the laws of this land are administered in a neutral, nonpartisan way.

As I have pointed out time and again, this has been a concern, a concern from the earliest days of this Republic. George Washington, the Father of our country, the first President, spoke about his concern with Federal employees trying to influence in a partisan way; likewise, Thomas Jefferson.

Down through the years, even though each succeeding President had expressed concern, it was not until 1939 under President Roosevelt's stewardship the Hatch Act was finally adopted. And for 50 years this legislation has both protected the Federal employee from coercion by his superiors or others, and it has protected the American people in ensuring that the laws are properly administered.

Now some are saying, because there may be some lack of clarity in these regulations, we should throw the baby out with the bathwater. I do not believe that is the case. I believe that would be a serious, critical mistake.'

So what we are proposing by our substitute amendment is that we direct OPM to clarify these rules and regulations. To me, this is the way to address the problem and not to reverse the direction of the policy.

There is no way you can argue that this is merely a matter of reform or amendment, because the present law, the Hatch Act, says to the Federal employee, you will not become involved in partisan political activity. What does S. 135 say? Just the opposite—a 180-degree change. Instead of not being involved, not participating, S. 135 encourages the Federal employee to become involved in partisan political activity.

So what this legislation really means, if it became law, is that you would be creating the potential for a new national political organization, a new national political organization that would reach into every district in every State of the Union, a potential political organization where Federal employees could solicit tremendous sums of money from the others who belong to this organization.

As I pointed out earlier today, the unions already have PAC's with substantial money in it, and that is their right, just as it is the right to have PAC's in other organizations. But it is not ironical, as I said earlier, that at the very time we are talking about campaign reform and a centerpiece of that campaign reform is to revise, modify, if not eliminate PAC's, that we are proposing legislation that will expand PAC's. This week we are going to expand PAC's; next week we are going to eliminate or reduce PAC's. It does not make much sense to me, and I am sure it does not make much sense to the American people.

Second, not only does it provide the potential for a tremendous national organization or make it possible to create a tremendous national organization that can collect funds from every district in every State, but it would provide for a national network of partisan workers. That is the reason this legislation is being proposed, not to clarify the rules or regulations, not because there is concern of the constitutionality, but because it will make for the potential for one of the most effective political organizations in the entire country.

Be that as it may, let me go back to this question of clarification. First of all, let me read what Common Cause had to say. Common Cause, a public organization to protect and promote the public interest, has sent a letter to all Members of the Senate opposing S. 135, and on the question of the clarity of rules and regulations, has this to say:

Common Cause recognizes that the current regulations governing administration of the Hatch Act are complicated. There may be ways to clarify and simplify for workers the degree of participation they are permitted under the Hatch Act without lifting the basic restrictions on partisan activity. We would urge the Senate to instead explore this possibility. As a core principle, however, a careful balance must be struck between an individual's first amendment right of free speech and association and the public's right to impartial administration of government. We believe S. 135 upsets this balance and would open the possibility of a dangerously politicized civil service.

So the question I think is stated so eloquently by this letter from Fred Wertheimer, the president; do we want to go back to the spoils system?

This morning, the distinguished Senator from Arkansas, for whom I have the greatest respect and one with whom I often join hands in legislative matters, particularly in efforts to reduce and minimize fraud, waste, and abuse in the bureaucracy, said that the problem with the amendment is that it would require the bureaucracy, OPM, to redefine the rules and regulations under the Hatch Act. And that is true, that is what we propose. That is their job.

But let me point out that if we adopt the new legislation, the same fact will be true. The new law would be regulated by OPM just the same as in the current law.

Just let me point out there are many ambiguities in the proposed legislation. In fact, I would argue that they are even more serious than those contained in the present law. At one point in the legislation it says an employee may not engage in political activity. What is political activity? No effort is made to define that in the legislation. Does it include only partisan political activity or not? What about nonpartisan political activity; is that included or not?

There is no guidance, no effort to define the legislation in S. 135, so who is going to have the responsibility for doing that? OPM. OPM, the same bureaucracy that the distinguished Senator from Arkansas complained about this morning. But what we are doing is going to give it broader power and opportunity because even less would be known about the new law than the current.

I thought it was interesting on this point that when James T. Bland, Jr., the president of the Federal Bar Association, testified in one of two hearings before our Governmental Affairs Committee on February 23 and 24, 1988, he had the following to say on this very point.

Let me say we are opposed to enactment of H.R. 3400 for three reasons. First, the act fails to define the political activity permitted by Federal employees, instead leaving such definition to subsequent administrative regulation. This duplicates the principal criticism of the present statute. It leaves the operative phrase legislatively undefined and therefore subject to potential regulatory ambiguity, inconsistency and absurdity.

So if, as I understand the arguments of the advocates of S. 135, there is lack of clarity in the present law, instead of improving the situation they are making it only worse.

Now as bad as that situation is, let me point out some other ambiguities.

In the proposed legislation it is provided that in its definition of "partisan political office" it shall not exclude any office or position within a political party or affiliated organizations.

Under this proposed legislation in the Senate side, in contrast to the House, a Federal employee cannot seek a partisan political office. But under the exclusion I just read, that Federal employee can be national, State, or local chairman of either the Republican or Democratic Party. Let me just point out he can be national chairman of one of the political parties at the same time he is a member of the Federal Elections Commission.

Who is going to have any confidence in that individual who at night is a partisan chairman of a party and in the daytime presumably purportedly fairly administers the law, the election laws in a nonpartisan way?

I can guarantee you that that is going to create great doubt, great lack of confidence on the part of the American public in the Federal Government.

But going back to the question of ambiguities, let me point out that the proposed legislation also defines the words "political contribution." Political contribution not only includes money and gifts and subscriptions, but it also includes the provision of personal services.

A Federal employee is forbidden under this proposed legislation to solicit personal contributions, including personal services, which as I have just pointed out is defined as part of political contribution. Then you have the very ridiculous but ambiguous situation where the law explicitly says a Federal employee can be a national chairman of a political party but he cannot direct or solicit volunteers among Federal employees or others to work in a campaign. There is no way a national chairman of a party or a State chairman can function efficiently if he cannot direct the volunteers that partake in the campaign.

So, with one hand we say you can be a national chairman and on the other hand we say, well, yes, but you cannot do all these things; for all practical purposes it would be next to impossible to serve effectively.

So what I am arguing here is that we have language that creates great ambiguity, great conflict, impossible to administer, so that rather than improving the situation, if you buy the argument that all S. 135 does is to clarify the law, instead of clarifying it, it is creating greater confusion, greater ambiguity, and lack of confidence on the part of the American people in its Government.

So, Mr. President, it seems to me that the right way to go is to build on the base we already have, on the law that for 50 years has served the Federal employee, has served the Federal Government, and has served the American public well.

I urge the enactment of my substitute legislation.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yield time?

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I yield myself such time as I may require.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio is recognized for such time he may require up to 27 minutes and 56 seconds.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I do not quarrel with my distinguished colleague from Delaware one bit on the constitutionality of the Hatch Act. I fail, however, to see how that is brought up as being germane to the discussion here today because no one has questioned the constitutionality of the Hatch Act and we do not try to disturb that constitutionality of the Hatch Act with S. 135 in any way, shape or form. The constitutionality has indeed been upheld by two Supreme Court decisions, and that is fine; it legitimizes it. It has been in effect for 50 years. That is a long time.

I say to my distinguished friend from Delaware who talks about political activity not being adequately defined, political activity is just as defined in this as it has been for the last 50 years. The Hatch Act has worked. And he defends the Hatch Act and I defend the Hatch Act. There has not been a definition of the Hatch Act as far as political activity under the Hatch Act. We know what it is. They administered the written rules and regulations pursuant to what they thought were political activities and it has worked fine, and we do not try to change that one bit.

So once again I do not know quite what the argument is over that. It was not defined before. But it has worked for 50 years, and I would not propose that we disturb that one bit.

What this basic bill itself is about is fairness. We are talking in this bill about correcting the myriad misimpressions, misconceptions, mistaken ideas surrounding the Hatch Act, the ones we have been through over and over again on the floor.

We could go back through some of these things again as to why we think you need a change in the Hatch Act.

Necessary are some of the things that have been interpreted under the Hatch Act, whether there are 3,000 or what. We can debate that, I guess. And most of those 3,000 were before 1940, but they were folded in, they have been changed and added to, and it has led to such an incomprehensible mass of rules and regulations that Federal employees literally do not know what to do.

As I said this morning, when you have murky legislation on the books and murky laws, you are bound to get violations, either from those who intentionally wish to misinterpret those laws, or from those who cannot interpret what it is. So they go ahead and do something, find out they are wrong, and somebody calls them to task, suspends them from their jobs, and penalizes them for something that was so indistinct to begin with, they did not know how to interpret it.

Mr. President, we clarified this. That was the only intent of this thing, to make a workable Hatch Act, not some Alice-in-Wonderland-type thing where everything is blue smoke and mirrors, and we do not know what is going on, and Federal employees do not know what they can or cannot do. That is no way to have laws.

What we do, we clarify this. We say if you are on the job, you are a Federal employee and you are on the job, what political activity are you permitted? None. A one-word answer, no political activity on the job.

Right now, with the Hatch Act, it has been interpreted, through one of these myriad interpretations that we have on the books, that you can wear a campaign button on the job. That would be illegal under our bill, because nothing of a political nature is permitted on the job; I mean nothing.

Should that mean that as an American, when you are off the job, you are home in Arlington County, where the Presiding Officer lives, where I used to live, over in that area, or Fairfax County, over in the northern area of Virginia, that you should not be able to participate in a partisan whatever, school board, election or campaign for someone, or you cannot go to a rally, and wave a sign for this person at that rally?

You can put the sign on your frontyard or automobile, but you cannot hold it, under the present interpretation. It does not make much sense. What we do with S. 135 is not try and add more regulations. We say it is very clear cut. You cannot do anything on the job, but off the job you can do some things, but still with restrictions.

And I still keep hearing on the floor references to the House bill. This is not the bill passed by the House of Representatives, where they would permit, in that bill, going out and soliciting campaign contributions; permit you to run for elective office, as I understand it, public elective office; not just a party, but public elected office.

We think here that is going too far. We considered that in committee, that that is going too far, and I did not go along with that. I do not now. I think we still do have to have these protections in it. So that is not what this bill does.

The thing that we prohibit, if you are off the job, home at night in your community and you want to participate in the county or State—whatever it is—political activities, you still could not run for elective office under S. 135, and you could not solicit anyone for political contributions under S. 135 if you are a Federal employee.

The distinguished Senator from Delaware commented that this would create a new national political organization that woud go into every State. As I gather, it can provide new ways to tap new sources of money. Not by Federal employees; you cannot. No way.

They bring up the things I have heard before about, well, how about the retirees of some of the unions now have who can be used as sort of gofers? They are retired, so they are no longer "Hatched" so they can go out and raise money and give it by some machinations, which would be to get the money raised and give it to some organization.

Well, I would submit that is the case right now. No one permits it right now. If you are retired, not "Hatched," you are not a Government employee. You are on your own to do what you want to do. I do not want to see people like that being used as a conduit to avoid the law and other restrictions. I think all the things brought up here are things that are possible right now, under the existing Hatch Act that we have right now.

The purpose of the Hatch Act, as my distinguished colleague said, was to avoid partisan political action. Well, I would submit I agree with that 100 percent. I have been a big backer of the Hatch Act throughout the years of my own personal public services to avoid partisan political action. Now, on the job, I agree with that 100 percent, and that is what S. 135 contains.

In fact, it makes it more clear so that it is more workable. It makes existing law clear, so people know what they can do and what they cannot do. Right now, they do not have any idea. There are so many rules and regulations, you cannot even keep up with them; thousands of them out there.

Well, we feel that to have a good law on the books, it needs to be made workable. And by workable, that means that you have to be able to know exactly what is expected of you and what you can do and what you cannot do. Is there some lack of clarity, which my colleague referred to? Their certainly is. I buy that 100 percent. There is a lack of clarity. That is the reason for S. 135, to make it very clear what you can and cannot do, not just to put it back again to OPM, which, had they wished to straighten this out, has had 50 years to do it since the Hatch Act came in and these things started being folded in here that were so confusing for the last 50 years.

I frankly do not know how long OPM has been there. Maybe they have not been there 50 years. But whatever the oversight body was in the executive branch of Government, they could have corrected these a long time ago on either Democrat or Republican watches over there, I would submit, had they wanted to take this on and do it.

And the authority for them to do it is there right now. They can do it today, start this afternoon; start before 4 o'clock, I challenge them if they want to. Get these things clarified even before this passes. That would be a great benefit. Why have they not gotten into this thing? Maybe had they done that through the years, we would not have had to address this with legislation.

Well, what can you do if you are "Hatched"? I have said before, you can wear that campaign button, the infamous campaign button that we have talked about so many times, and you can write a $1,000 check to a candidate, but you cannot give any in-kind of contribution of your time. You cannot go down after you gave that $1,000 and stuff envelopes in the back room. Why not? You can give $1,000, which certainly is going to be reported to the FEC if it is at the Federal rate going over there, and public knowledge—you give it; it is no secret; you tell people about it—but yet you cannot put little letters in envelopes to help out the same person you gave a thousand bucks to?

You cannot wave a political poster at a rally, as I said, but you can put it on your car or front lawn. You can express an opinion about a candidate publicly, but you cannot make a speech or campaign for or against a candidate. If you say something publicly, are you supposed to make sure you say it out there in the open, but nobody is allowed to listen? It is going to look a little goofy, standing out there talking to yourself. But yet that is what the law says you are permitted to do: Say something publicly, but you cannot make a speech or campaign for or against the candidate.

Maybe we should call for definitions in the act now of what a speech is. Does a speech require so many people to listen? Or is a speech if you are just giving it to one person? This is not a joke on this one, I might add, either. I am treating it rather lightly, but let me tell you in the last election it became a serious issue in the State of Washington, during the last election, when Navy shipyard workers were notified they could not actively participate in the State's Presidential caucuses.

Remember, in the primary you can vote absentee, you can go in the booth or put your ballot in, whatever kind of election you have there. But, in a caucus, you have to be there. You either can vote by ballot or some of the caucuses even have a show of hands and you count hands.

The shipyard workers were notified they could not actively participate in the State's Presidential caucuses without violating the Hatch Act. If they had been in a primary State, they would have been able to vote. They were being denied their rights to vote in a caucus State because of the Hatch Act.

Was that intended? No. Now, that scares the devil out of other people, thinking, when they go to a caucus, if they are a Federal employee, can they go to a caucus in those caucus States? That would be clarified in this legislation, that off the job, you can go and you can participate. That is your right as an American citizen. On the job, you are there to do your job, not to politic, and anything you bring up in a political way is wrong.

When we had our hearing, there were so many conflicting interpretations of statutes and regulations that we actually had people laughing at the hearing at the ridiculousness of some of these things.

If we wanted to correct these things by an amendment such as that proposed by my colleagues from Delaware, that could have been done at any time over the last 50 years by anybody at OPM, or whatever, if they wanted to straighten these things out. But they did not do that.

What we have had a problem with really is not defining political activity, the problem has been in determining which political activities are permissible and which are not.

That brings it down to the specific reason why we have S. 135: what political activities are permitted and which political activities are not permitted. This would clarify it. This would say anything on the job is verboten, it is out, it is not permitted. If it has been interpreted under the Hatch Act as being permitted, it no longer is. If you are on duty and you are on the job, that is it, no politics. Off the job, with the restrictions I mentioned of no right to collect money and no right to run for public elective office yourself, with those restrictions, which are very different from the House version of the bill; this would go along ways, I think, toward clarifying what direction we want to go for the future.

There have been abuses under the present Hatch Act, too, that I mentioned before. One of the reasons why this has come up now, as I said before, is because of what happened in the 100th Congress. During the 1984 Presidential election, when the heads of three major Government employee unions endorsed Walter Mondale, suit was filed against them because these three heads of unions were technically Federal employees who were on an extended leave of absence from their Government job. That was permitted under law, fully permitted under law. They were on leave of absence from their jobs to accept the position of heads of their unions. Of the three people involved, the lowest amount of time any of them had been off their Federal job was 16 years. Yet, because their unions endorsed Mondale and because they authorized publication of that and support for Mondale in their union publications, the Office of Special Counsel brought suit against them, asserting they had violated the prohibition against active political participation.

They had been out of their position in Government on leaves of absence for over 16 years. The Merit System Protection Board upheld that OSC finding. Do my colleagues know what they did? They suspended them from their jobs for 60 days. They had been gone already for 16 years and they suspended them for 60 days, as a penalty.

Obviously, it did not really affect them that much to have that kind of a penalty when they were already gone for some 16 years, technically, but it was looked at as establishing a principle. So that was taken to appeal. What happened on appeal? Two Federal circuit courts ruled that the merit system protection order should be reversed, and they reversed it on the findings that no Hatch Act. violations had occurred. The point here is that enforcement under the Hatch Act can be used for its own onerous political purposes. And that is not right.

What would this bill do to correct the situations like that? If they are gone off their Government job, as we say, then they can participate, with the exception they cannot run for public office and they cannot raise money. But, anyway, that is one of the reasons this whole thing has come up, because of that kind of abuse. S. 135, I think, would go a long way toward making certain that that kind of a situation was not so unclear that anyone could use it for whatever political partisan purposes it may or may not have been used before.

Back when the Hatch Act was put in, there were great abuses. No one quarrels with that. It served a noble purpose even though it did not receive much hearing here. It was passed rapidly. Some 300,000 employees of Government at that time had been slap dashed into Government jobs in a very rapid fashion. There really was serious concern that Government rolls were literally loaded up strictly for political purposes. So the Hatch Act was put in. There was very little debate on it. It was passed so fast that what they had to do, Mr. President, is they had to come back in later and correct the original legislation to permit the President, Vice President, and Members of Congress to run for political office.

It was a mistake. My colleague is right, it was a mistake. My colleague is right. I hear him in the background. But it was a mistake.

Anyway, the idea was, if you are already a Federal employee and cannot campaign politically, you cannot run for office again, and it was passed so fast they did not even pick up things like that. They came back an corrected it. I am not claiming S. 135 corrected that or anything like that because that was a mistake to begin with and we know that. But that is how fast this was passed.

But has it served us well? Yes. Basically it has served us well. But it has been one of the most confusing things on the books in all Federal law as far as how individuals and organizations interpret it. Because almost every instance you find permission to do something, you find another one you can interpret as saying, well, maybe I should not; maybe there is some doubt about that. Law should not be that way. Murky law only invites those who will intentionally use it for their own partisan purposes, or it will lead people of good intent to do something and then find later, unknown to them, there was some obscure interpretation for which they now can be penalized. It is not right to have laws like that on the books.

All S. 135 does—it does not gut this bill. It does not gut the Hatch Act. It strengthens it, because now for the first time things will be very, very clear as to what you can do and cannot do. I think that makes a stronger Hatch Act, not a lesser strength to the original Hatch Act legislation. So, in that respect I think it strengthens Government employees' protections; it does not lessen them.

Mr. President, we could go over all the things we debated here for the last couple of days. I do not plan to do that, obviously, in the limited amount of time that is left. We have about 10 minutes left on the bill. I ask how much time do I have left?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator controls 6 minutes and 5 seconds.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I do not know whether my distinguished colleague wishes to address us or whether we should put in a quorum call and charge the remaining time equally to both of us.

Mr. ROTH. How much time do I have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware controls 4 minutes and 3 seconds.

The Senator from Delaware is recognized.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I agree with my distinguished chairman when he says the Hatch Act has served us well. It certainly has served all of us well: The Federal employee, protecting him or her from coercion while assuring the American people that their laws are enforced in a neutral, nonpartisan way. I also say I agree there is some confusion in the rules and regulations as stated by the distinguishd chairman.

But where I disagree, Mr. President, is when he would throw out the baby with the bathwater. Instead of trying to correct the problem of the regulations, he wants to repeal the law. I have to disagree very strongly with him when he claims S. 135 is merely an amendment, a reform, because the Hatch Act across the board comes out against partisan political activity on the part of Federal employees.

What this proposed law would do is just the opposite: Encourage partisan political activity, admittedly limited to off duty. But the evil is that coercion can be just as effective off duty as it can on duty.

One of the things that concerns me, Mr. President, is nothing is ever mentioned on the other side about the public good, the public interest. Is it not ironic that a majority, roughly 66 percent of the Federal employees, are either opposed or neutral to modifying the Hatch Act. It seems to me that those figures demonstrate the effectiveness of this law in protecting the Federal employee from being coerced. There is no majority demand that we gut the Hatch Act and adopt something new.

I have to respectfully disagree with my chairman, political activity is not mentioned in the Hatch Act. There is no experience as to what that language means from the Hatch Act. It is a new concept, a new phrase not defined in law that is included in this new proposal.

I also point out that no effort was made to show that there was no ambiguity under the legislation permitting one to be a national chairman but not to solicit voluntarism, so that the new law would create more ambiguity rather than less.

In closing, let me say, Mr. President, my amendment is timely because these regulations should be clarified to reflect the appellate court decisions of Biller, Blaylock and Sombrotto. In addition, I believe my amendment addresses directly the concerns stated by the proponents of the legislation in the committee report and on the floor, that the regulations are confusing and that they should be clarified.

I ask unanimous consent for 30 additional seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senator is recognized for 30 additonal seconds.

Mr. GLENN. Take it off my time.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, this is exactly what the amendment does. We do not have to repeal the Hatch Act to meet these concerns. Instead, a carefully crafted amendment, which addresses these specific needs, should be the subject of our concerns. The choice for the Senate is clear: Do some good or make a major misake. I urge that we choose to do good and adopt my amendment. I yield back the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time controlled by the Senator from Delaware has expired. The Senator from Ohio has 6 minutes remaining.

Mr. GLENN. Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President, I do not like to see strawmen set up to be knocked down, and knock them down, supposedly, in opposition to S. 135. This does not repeal the law; it reforms the law. It makes it workable, is what is does, instead of unworkable in its complexities that it has now.

In our discussion before this last discussion here, it was mentioned this bill does not deal with PAC's. It was criticized because it would permit some things under PAC's apparently, but the bill does not deal with PAC's at all. PAC's are not part of this. They are not dealt with in the original Hatch Act, nor in this, really.

Additionally, the public good has been mentioned. I submit, Mr. President, that for the protection of Americans of whatever stripe, in and out of Government uniform, or whether they are civil servants, or whatever they are, or private citizens, it does not bode well for the public good when we take a particular group and artificially restrict their freedoms, any more than is absolutely necessary for the overall public good.

We say it is in the public interest in S. 135 that we not let Government employees run for partisan political office and they cannot go out and solicit contributions.

Outside of that, can they take part in partisan political processes? Why should they not? Why should we artificially restrict public employees beyond what is necessary? We want to do this fairly. We want to say we cannot let them go out and run for public office, we cannot let them go out and raise some money. We differ from the House bill on that.

Let me address another thing brought up about Common Cause. Common Cause says we need simplification. I absolutely agree with Common Cause 100 percent: We need simplification. That is the purpose of this bill. We need simplification. We need to get it down, simplified enough that it is workable; but they also say without lifting the basic provisions of the Hatch Act.

That is exactly what we do. I submit to Common Cause, if they have read this thing and seen how it would operate, I would think an organization like Common Cause would want to support this. It balances free speech and public participation. They do not want a dangerously politicized Government system. I agree with that 100 percent. That is exactly what this bill provides. We provide for protection for the individual and only restrict the individual where we feel they should be restricted.

Mr. President, I appreciate the fact that Senator ROTH says he will submit another amendment later on, I gather, so that we exempt Federal union heads who are on leave from Federal jobs, from other Hatch Act requirements, I guess.

That is fine. I agree with that. That should have been done a long time ago. But I think it has already been taken care of by the court decisions in that regard. I think they have already been exempted by two Federal court cases from the kind of suit that was tossed at them when their particular unions and they personally supported the Mondale campaign. So I do not quarrel with what the Senator is proposing to do. I think it is already covered, is the point I would like to make.

Mr. President, this is basically a bill in fairness. It says to those who have been living under rules and regulations that interpretations of those rules and regulations are so arcane, so complex, so contradictory, that the people they are supposed to limit do not even know what is limited and what is not.

The simplified version of this bill permits absolutely no political activity of any kind on the job. It says off the job you still cannot solicit contributions nor can you run for public political office yourself. That makes it pretty clear. Outside of that, you can participate off the job.

I will not start through, in the limited time left, all the different things that are conflicting that have arisen under this, but we need to correct them and S. 135 does that. Mr. President, I believe my time has almost expired. How much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 43 seconds remaining.

Mr. GLENN. I yield what time I have left to the distinguished Senator from Delaware.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware is recognized for 28 seconds.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I would just like to point out section 9(a) of the Hatch Act reads that an employee in an executive agency or employed by the government of the District of Columbia may not take an active part in political management or in political campaigns. S. 135 says just the opposite. It says an employee may take an active part in political management or in political campaigns.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has expired. Under the previous order, the hour of 4 p.m. having arrived, the Senator from Ohio is recognized to make a motion to table the Roth amendment, No. 1576.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I move to table the amendment of the distinguished Senator from Delaware.

Mr. ROTH. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. KOHL] is necessarily absent.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ARMSTRONG] is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. MIKULSKI). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 67, nays 30, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 77 Leg.]

YEAS—67

Adams	Fowler	Mikulski
Baucus	Glenn	Mitchell
Bentsen	Gore	Moynihan
Biden	Graham	Murkowski
Bingaman	Harkin	Nunn
Boren	Hatfield	Packwood
Bradley	Heflin	Pell
Breaux	Heinz	Pryor
Bryan	Hollings	Reid
Bumpers	Inouye	Riegle
Burdick	Jeffords	Robb
Byrd	Johnston	Rockefeller
Conrad	Kasten	Sanford
Cranston	Kennedy	Sarbanes
D'Amato	Kerrey	Sasser
Daschle	Kerry	Shelby
DeConcini	Lautenberg	Simon
Dixon	Leahy	Specter
Dodd	Levin	Stevens
Domenici	Lieberman	Warner
Durenberger	Lott	Wirth
Exon	McCain
Ford	Metzenbaum

NAYS—30

Bond	Gorton	McConnell
Boschwitz	Gramm	Nickles
Burns	Grassley	Pressler
Chafee	Hatch	Roth
Coats	Helms	Rudman
Cochran	Humphrey	Simpson
Cohen	Kassebaum	Symms
Danforth	Lugar	Thurmond
Dole	Mack	Wallop
Garn	McClure	Wilson

NOT VOTING—2

Armstrong	Kohl

So the motion to lay on the table amendment No. 1576 was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. Madam President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. ROTH. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. Madam President, the bill stands open for further amendment. I repeat what I said a little while ago. There are no other actions on this side of the aisle, and we welcome the opportunity to keep the amendments coming from the other side so we can dispose of this.

I had hoped to be able to close out business on the bill and have a final vote this evening. It looks as though that may not be possible. But we would appreciate it if those on the other side would bring their amendments to the floor. We have had delays this afternoon, and there have been opportunities for people to speak in support of or against amendments. Nobody showed up. We hope any amendments will be forthcoming, so we can dispose of them and get on with this legislation.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Madam President, earlier this week, I asked both the minority and majority leader that I be excused from the Senate proceedings on Friday to accompany Ambassador Armacost on the trip to my State.

However, there has been a death in my family, and tomorrow I am going to be attending a funeral in Washington State and going up to Alaska tomorrow night.

For this reason I ask unanimous consent that I be excused from Senate proceedings tomorrow, Friday, May 4. I will be returning sometime on Monday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLENN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GLENN. Madam President, I know we get accustomed to great amounts of patience around here, waiting for things to happen on the floor. Today is certainly no exception.

We had hoped to move the ball along this evening. It has now been, within about a minute, a half-hour since the quorum call was first put in on the bill.

We are all finished, I would say to my friends on the other side. We are all finished with this on our side of the aisle. We have no more amendments of any kind that we know of, or any action to be taken on this bill. I know we want to move this thing along if we possibly can.

I heard the distinguished majority leader in an earlier conversation indicate it was his hope, if we could get through with this today, we probably would not have to have votes or session tomorrow and Monday. But absent that, we have so much business in the Senate we do have to move along and we cannot wait forever on this.

At one time they were discussing whether cloture was going to be filed on the bill itself once we got to that and once we got past the motion to proceed. Well, that is the situation we find ourselves in right now.

I say for those who wish to be out of here and home campaigning or whatever it is they are going to do on Friday and Monday, if they can possibly influence other people to bring their amendments to the floor so we can get them finished, that is a distinct possibility, that we could be out tomorrow and Monday. But absent that, I think it has been expressed as the will of the leadership, we probably are going to be in tomorrow and Monday. I know that does foul up a lot of schedules for people.

Whatever can be done on the other side to get people to the floor so we can consider these amendments, we are certainly prepared to be here and address these tonight, and hopefully we can get final passage yet tonight. We have not given up on that. I suggested that earlier and did not get agreement from the other side on that, but I am still hopeful, even at this late time, we might get agreement tonight so there is a chance at least we can be out all day on Friday and all day on Monday and have the next session starting on Tuesday.

I think absent that, absent completing action on this bill, that is not likely to occur. So I certainly hope Senators can get their amendments to the floor. We are here ready and waiting.

Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LAUTENBERG). Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1581

(Purpose: To provide that the provisions of subchapter III of chapter 73 of title 5, United States Code, shall not apply to certain Federal employees serving as president of a national labor organization, and for other purposes.)

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. ROTH,] proposes an amendment numbered 1581.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

That (a) chapter 73 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 7328 the following new section:

"§ 7329. Employees serving as president of a national labor organization

"The preceding provisions of this subchapter shall not apply to any employee who, during a leave of absence, serves as the president of a national labor organization under the provision of chapter 71 of title 5, United States Code (including the president of any national labor organization representing the United States Postal Service).".

(b) The table of sections for chapter 73 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 7328 the following:

"7329. Employees serving as president of a national labor organization.".

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, if you look at the committee report, you will learn that according to the proponents of the legislation: "Several events combined to make amendments of the Hatch Act a major civil service issue in the 100th Congress." The committee report cites the prosecution of three Federal and Postal Employee Union presidents for alleged violations of the Hatch Act as the impetus for this legislation.

On Tuesday, and again yesterday, the sponsor of the legislation, the chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee, cited these three cases as one of the fundamental reasons this legislation has been pushed so hard.

I find it difficult to understand, Mr. President, that the prosecution of these union leaders would lead one to conclude that the protections afforded by the Hatch Act should be repealed and replaced with language which encourages Federal employees to become involved in partisan politics, and will allow Federal employees to participate in politics to an extent prohibited for more than 50 years. If this legislation is passed, Federal employees will be able to:

Hold office in a political party;

Distribute campaign literature and solicit votes;

Organize and participate in phone banks;

Organize and participate in political meetings;

Publicly endorse candidates and urge others to support them; and Solicit contributions to the PAC of a Federal employee organization to which both the employee and the donor belong.

We have heard very little about the need for Federal employees to engage in these activities. We have heard about the vagueness and the complications of the regulations, and the fact that the prosecution of these three individuals was the impetus for this legislation.

Mr. President, my amendment will allow for the continued protection of the Federal employee work force from coercion while addressing the concerns raised by the sponsor of this legislation. This amendment is a substitute amendment which provides that the Hatch Act will not apply to a president of a national labor organization as defined under the provisions of title 5 of the United States Code which governs the civil service. This provision also includes any president of a national labor organization representing the U.S. Postal Service. These employees, like Messrs. Biller, Blaylock, and Sombrotto, will be required to be on leave from their Federal employment when they serve as national union presidents. Just to restate, Mr. President, this amendment would provide the very protection to the individuals stated to be at the very heart of the concerns of those promoting these dramatic changes.

Mr. President, I would like to read from the committee report.

Several events combined to make amendments to the Hatch Act a major civil service issue in the 100th Congress. During the 1984 Presidential election the presidents of three major Federal and Postal employee unions endorsed Walter Mondale's candidacy for the Presidency and in their union newspapers encouraged their members to vote for him. The unions involved were the American Federation of Government Employees, the National Association of Letter Carriers, and the American Postal Workers Union. All three Presidents had been on leave from their Government jobs for more than 16 years.

The Office of Special Counsel brought suit against these three presidents, Messrs. Biller, Blaylock, and Sombrotto and the Merit Systems Protection Board upheld the Special Counsel's finding and penalized the three presidents by suspending them from their jobs for 60 days. Because these employees had been on leave from their jobs as they served as union officials, the suspension had no real effect.

On appeal, the U.S. Appeals Courts for 2d and 11th Circuits overturned the rulings of the Merit System Protection Board and found for Messrs. Biller, Blaylock, and Sombrotto.

Both appellate courts interpreted the Hatch Act and the term "partisan activity" to allow Federal employees to make, publish, and circulate public statements endorsing a political candidate for public office in a partisan election, as long as such activity was independent, that is, involved "personal expressions of political opinion" and was not coordinated, in connection with or on behalf of a candidate, political party, or party organization.

As explained by the Court of Appeals in the Second Circuit in Biller versus U.S. Merit Systems Protection Board:

Although considerable argument is raised relative to petitioners' employment status, we assume for purposes of this appeal that they were not union employees, but were postal employees on extended leave. Since, on that assumption, petitioners are subject to the Hatch Act, the question then becomes whether they violated the Hatch Act.

The concern is that federal employees—through coercion or machine politics—will act in concert and produce an inordinate influence on the way the government executes its laws and provides services. Thus, finding "partisan activity" implicitly requires a nexus between the government employee and the effort to promote the political party or elect its candidate. It is not enough that the federal employee and the candidate pursue the same goals independently; the two must work in tandem or be linked together for there to be a violation of the Hatch Act.

It is undisputed that neither Biller nor Sombrotto acted in concert with a political party or campaign organization. In fact, neither of the petitioners had any connection with a political party. The Board itself conceded that there was no nexus between petitioners and the Mondale campaign or the Democratic Party. The nexus required to establish their activities as partisan under the Act is therefore lacking.

According to the committee report, "The prosecution of Biller, Blaylock, and Sombrotto, on grounds which has never before been asserted, raised the issue of partisan enforcement of the Hatch Act." Mr. President, this amendment will remove any doubt that this specific and particular class of individuals should be exempt from the Hatch Act's provisions.

Now I understand that the courts have said that these union officials did not violate the Hatch Act, but I add my concerns to the concerns of the chairman of the committee and sponsor of the legislation that perhaps there should be a more solid basis on which union presidents can rest assured that they are not violating this law.

That is exactly what this amendment would accomplish. This amendment provides that the Hatch Act will not apply to a president of a national labor organization as defined under the provisions of title 5 of the United States Code which governs the civil service. This provision also includes any President of a national labor organization representing the U.S. Postal Service.

Mr. President, I believe this amendment addresses directly the concerns stated by the proponents of the legislation in the committee report and by the sponsor of the legislation as we turned to this legislation earlier this week. We do not have to repeal the entire Hatch Act to meet these concerns. Instead, a carefully crafted amendment which addresses these specific needs should be the subject of our concerns. I urge the adoption of this amendment.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I agree 100 percent with parts of the proposal by the distinguished Senator from Delaware, but the part that I just as violently disagree with is the part which says that this amendment is a substitute for the entire bill before us, all of S. 135. To me, then, that is unacceptable.

If this was made an amendment to S. 135, I would accept it and not even require a vote on it. I would be happy to accept it because I think it does clarify that little part of it. But any amendment that is a substitute for the entire bill before us is certainly not acceptable, and this amendment, like the previous amendment that was defeated by a vote of 67 to 30, just attempts to kill the bill by offering the deal. In this case the deal is we will release from political bondage the heads of the major Federal and postal unions in return for continuing the political bondage of nearly 3 million rank-and-file Government employees. That is not much of a bargain to me, especially when the political bondage of the heads of the Federal and postal unions has already been addressed by the Federal courts and protection for them has come from the judicial system.

So while I am very pleased to see the distinguished Senator from Delaware agreeing that the previous attempted prosecution of the union leaders was unfair and uncalled for, I am at the same time sorry that he feels the need to gut the entire bill, or to eliminate all the rest of the bill and go back to the original Hatch Act we are trying to reform and improve in return for preventing such a grossly unfair and partisan action against the union leaders from happening again.

I do not want to see that happen again either, and I would not mind putting that in the law. In fact, if the Roth amendment was to be submitted as an amendment to S. 135, I would be quite happy to accept it at this time but not as a substitute for the entire bill before us, for all the reasons we have given in the lengthy debate that has already occurred on this bill. I will not start at this time to go back through all the things we have repeated over and over and over again as abuses that still are permitted to occur under the Hatch Act in addition to this one involving the union heads, in addition to what we are trying to correct in S. 135. We are trying to make it very clear what can be done on the job and what can be done off the job with regard to political activity. Take all of this guesswork out of it so more cases do not come up similar to the one that involve union leaders back in that earlier Presidential election.

Mr. President, I must oppose this amendment. I do not know what the wishes of the distinguished Senator from Delaware may be as far as calling for a vote on this, or whether he prefers to debate it for a while. But I am prepared to move to a vote at the present time.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I make a point of order a quorum is not present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, the distinguished junior Senator from California is here and he is ready to propose an amendment which I think would be in order under the circumstances.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, what is the current business before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pending is the substitute amendment to S. 135.

Mr. GLENN. What would be required to move to consider the amendment of the Senator from California?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is further amendable. By asking unanimous consent, the amendment can be set aside.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, the unanimous consent was not asked for I believe; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. GLENN. We are still on the amendment of the Senator from Delaware?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is true.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, since my amendment is a substitute, will not it be in order for an amendment to be offered to the original bill without setting mine aside?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct. That would be in order.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, that is what I was just proposing in my earlier remarks.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, at the appropriate time I will move to table the amendment of the Senator from Delaware. I am aware that he wishes to have some more discussion, some more debate on his amendment. Is it possible that we could have a time certain when we could vote on the amendment? Could we say at 6 o'clock.

Mr. ROTH. I am not willing to agree to a unanimous consent at this time.

Mr. GLENN. Could the Senator give us any idea of how long the debate will be on his amendment once we resume on it if we go to the amendment of the Senator from California?

Mr. ROTH. Of course, how long that will take and how many others may want to contribute to the debate I am not in a position to say. But I thought that in the orderly expeditious handling of the matter we might in effect set aside my amendment and take up the proposal of the Senator from California.

What I am saying, Mr. President, is I agreed to exactly the same thing with respect to two amendments offered by the majority earlier today.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I will object to moving to the amendment of the distinguished Senator from California. I believe under the rules of the Senate he has the right to offer this amendment at this time. All I am trying to do, obviously, is move things along here.

I will repeat what I said about half hour ago. We are completely finished on this side. I hope those who have amendments can bring them to the floor and get them ready so we can dispose of the amendments by the distinguished Senator from Delaware and the distinguished Senator from California and that we would be able to move on. I hope we could get some time agreement even at this late stage to vote tonight.

As I indicated a little while ago, I know it was intended if we could get agreement on this we probably would be out of session tomorrow and out of session Monday. I cannot commit to that, obviously. But I was led to believe that would be what would happen.

So we are going to find ourselves in session all day tomorrow and all day Monday. I hope people will get their amendments to the floor as fast as possible.

Mr. ROTH. I point out, and I agree with the distinguished Senator from Ohio, that we are anxious to have all who have amendments on our side to bring them down which is, of course, the current conduct.

I have brought up an amendment. We are continuing. We have only been on that amendment less than a half hour. The Senator from California is here with his amendment. I thought in the orderly disposition of that, that would be making programs.

I yield the floor.

Mr. WILSON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I take it it is now in order to offer this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

AMENDMENT NO. 1582

(Purpose: To provide for a report by the General Accounting Office concerning political activities of Federal employees, and for other purposes)

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] proposes an amendment numbered 1582.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 8, strike out line 14 and insert in lieu thereof:

SEC. 7. GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE REPORT ON UNALLOWABLE POLITICAL ACTIVITY.

(a) GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE REPORT.—(1) Beginning one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, and at intervals of 1 year thereafter for a period of 3 years after such date, the Comptroller General of the United States shall prepare and transmit to the Congress and to the taskforce established under subsection (b) a report describing the results of a review of the implementation and enforcement of this Act during the preceding 12-month period, for the purpose of determining if employees have—

(A) used official authority or influence for the purpose of interfering with or affecting the result of an election;

(B) knowingly solicited, accepted, or received a political contribution from any person, unless such person is—

(i) a member of the same Federal employee organization; and

(ii) the solicitation is for a contribution to the multicandidate political committee (as defined under section 315(a)(4) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(4)) of such Federal employee organization;

(C) engaged in political activity—

(i) while such employees are on duty;

(ii) in any room or building occupied in the discharge of official duties by an individual employed or holding office in the Government of the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof;

(iii) while wearing a uniform or official insignia identifying the office or position of the employee; or

(iv) using any vehicle owned or leased by the Government of the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof;

(D) engaged in overt or covert action to coerce one or more other employees to engage in political activities;

(E) rewarded (such as a promotion or pay incentives) one or more other employees for action taken in relation to or participation in political activities;

(F) penalized one or more other employees for such employee's refusal to take action in relation to or participate in political activities; and

(G) used official authority or influence to make or to audit Federal grants, awards, or contracts, to implement a Federal policy, or to administer a Federal program, based upon criteria or procedures that are not provided for under applicable Federal law, rules, or regulations.

(2) In each report, the Comptroller General shall make a specific determination as to whether the implementation of this Act has resulted in a pattern of unallowable political activity in the Federal work force.

(3) If the Comptroller General has determined that such a pattern of unallowable political activity has resulted, the report shall include—

(A) a description of the scope of that activity; and

(B) recommendations for such legislation as may be appropriate to deter or remedy such activity.

(b) REVIEW BY TASK FORCE.—(1) The Attorney General, jointly with the Director of the Office of Personnel Management and the head of the Office of the Special Counsel, shall establish a taskforce to review each report of the Comptroller General transmitted under subsection (a).

(2) If the report transmitted includes a determination that the implementation of this Act has resulted in a pattern of unallowable political activity, the taskforce shall, taking into consideration any recommendations in the report, report to Congress recommendations for such legislation as may be appropriate to deter or remedy such discrimination.

(3) The Committee on Post Office and Civil Service of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate shall hold hearings respecting any report of the taskforce under paragraph (2) within 60 days after the date of receipt of the report.

(c) TERMINATION DATE FOR THE ACT IF REPORT OF UNALLOWABLE POLITICAL ACTIVITY AND CONGRESSIONAL APPROVAL.—The provisions of this Act shall terminate 30 calendar days after receipt of the last report required to be transmitted under subsection (a), if—

(1) the Comptroller General determines, and so reports in such report, that a pattern of unallowable political activity has resulted within the Federal work force; and

(2) there is enacted, within such period of 30 calendar days, a joint resolution stating in substance that the Congress approves the findings of the Comptroller General contained in such report.

(d) EXPEDITED PROCEDURES IN THE SENATE.—(1) For purposes of subsection (c), the continuity of a session of Congress is broken only by an adjournment of the Congress sine die, and the days on which either House is not in session because of an adjournment of more than 3 days to a day certain are excluded in the computation of the period indicated.

(2) Paragraphs (3) and (4) of this subsection are enacted—

(A) as an exercise of the rulemaking power of the Senate and as such they are deemed a part of the rules of the Senate, but applicable only with respect to the procedure to be followed in the Senate in the case of joint resolutions referred to in subsection (c), and supersede other rules of the Senate only to the extent that such paragraphs are inconsistent therewith; and

(B) with full recognition of the constitutional right of the Senate to change such rules at any time, in the same manner as in the case of any other rule of the Senate.

(3)(A) If the committee of the Senate to which has been referred a joint resolution relating to the report described in subsection (c) has not reported such joint resolution at the end of 10 calendar days after its introduction, not counting any day which is excluded under paragraph (4) of this subsection, it is in order to move either to discharge the committee from further consideration of the joint resolution or to discharge the committee from further consideration of any other joint resolution introduced with respect to the same report which has been referred to the committee, except that no motion to discharge shall be in order after the committee has reported a joint resolution with respect to the same report.

(B) A motion to discharge under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph may be made only by a Senator favoring the joint resolution, is privileged, and debate thereon shall be limited to not more than 1 hour, to be divided equally between those favoring and those opposing the joint resolution, the time to be divided equally between, and controlled by, the majority leader and the minority leader or their designees. An amendment to the motion is not in order, and it is not in order to move to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to.

(4)(A) A motion in the Senate to proceed to the consideration of a joint resolution shall be privileged. An amendment to the motion shall not be in order, nor shall it be in order to move to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to.

(B) Debate in the Senate on a joint resolution, and all debatable motions and appeals in connection therewith, shall be limited to not more than 10 hours, to be equally divided between, and controlled by, the majority leader and the minority leader or their designees.

(C) Debate in the Senate on any debatable motion or appeal in connection with a joint resolution shall be limited to not more than 1 hour, to be equally divided between, and controlled by, the mover and the manager of the joint resolution, except that in the event the manager of the joint resolution is in favor of any such motion or appeal, the time in opposition thereto shall be controlled by the minority leader or his designee. Such leaders, or either of them, may, from time under their control on the passage of a joint resolution, allot additional time to any Senator during the consideration of any debatable motion or appeal.

(D) A motion in the Senate to further limit debate on a joint resolution, debatable motion, or appeal is not debatable. No amendment to, or motion to recommit, a joint resolution is in order in the Senate.

SEC. 8. EFFECTIVE DATE.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, this amendment simply seeks to assure that if S. 135 should become law it will contain sufficient protections for Federal employees so that they may not become the victims of coercion, so that the public may not become the victims of the bill by virtue of the actions of some who would seek either reward or penalize other employees for their political activity.

Mr. President, the existing Hatch Act allows participation of Federal employees, and they cannot only vote and contribute funds but they can attend fundraising events. They are actually given quite a little bit of latitude in terms of their political participation.

Clearly, we do not intend that Federal employees give up the rights of citizenship. But what we are very much concerned with—and the roots of the Hatch Act back to the fears, the very reasonable fears that have arisen repeatedly through the years at all levels of Government, local, State, and Federal—is with respect to the corruption of the process of Government by political influence being exercised from within the very organization of government itself.

The unhappy number of examples go back to the origins of this Republic, we will find, and indeed it was part of the letter from the Justice Department to the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs; reference made to the concerns of Thomas Jefferson in his own administration. To quote that letter, it states: The Hatch Act was passed in 1939. Its roots are much deeper. For example, the political activities of some of those in the executive branch disturbed Thomas Jefferson who issued an order which stated the right of any Senator to give his vote as a qualified citizen is not to be constrained. However, it is expected he will not attempt to influence the votes of others or take part, any part, in the business of electioneering, that being deemed inconsistent with the spirit of the Constitution and his duties to it.

Those first concerns of Thomas Jefferson were very properly taken because, as time would prove, in the ensuing two centuries since he uttered his concern there have been repeated examples of abuse of the governmental process by its being suborned by the political process.

This amendment is aimed at those very problems, the same concerns stated by Jefferson, the same concerns that moved Carl Hatch on the floor of the Senate to undertake reform.

The kind of things that were happening in those years just before World War II finally created sufficient pressure for reform that led to the enactment of the Hatch Act. Mr. President, let me read to you briefly a statement that was given to the committee on July 25 of last year by the very distinguished Constance Newman, the Director of the Office of Personnel Management.

In her statement to the committee, Ms. Newman set forth what she termed three fundamental principles in what is governing the conduct of the Nation's business for civil service. I think she set them forth very well, very simply, and very clearly. She stated:

> The first principle is that the administration of all laws must be in the public interest and must be nonpartisan. The second prinicple is that selection and advancement of personnel must be based on merit. The third principle is that Federal employees must be protected against any form of coercion for political purposes. Any actions that threaten conformance with those principles cannot be tolerated.

As she pointed out, the Hatch Act grew out of the abuse of Federal employees during both the 1936 and 1938 elections.

> Government employees were forced to change their party registrations, and instead of working in the public interest, Federal employees on the Government payroll devoted official time to pernicious political activities. Patronage was the order of the day, not only in terms of employment but in terms of the allocation of Federal dollars.
>
> Although the Pendleton Act creating the merit system was on the books and President Theodore Roosevelt banned employees from engaging in political campaigns, there were insufficient protections against the politicization of the Federal public service. Hence, the need for legislation to virtually prohibit all employees of the executive branch from engaging in the active management of political campaigns.

Mr. President, let me come back to those three principles she enunciated, that the public interest must be served by the administration of all laws in a way that is nonpartisan. The second principle that she enunciated is that the selection and advancement of personnel must be based on merit. It follows from the first.

If, instead, promotions are based not upon merit, but upon political activity, very clearly you have a corruption of her first principle that the public interest must be served by a nonpartisan administration of all of the laws, and clearly that is what the Pendleton Act was all about. That is what the Hatch Act was all about; it was to prevent either the allocation of Federal tax dollars not upon merit, but upon political coloration of the grantee.

That is the kind of corruption that we need to be concerned with even in this time, even when it may seem to have become a remote concern by virtue of the actual protections that have been afforded us by the Hatch Act in the past 50 years.

Let us not lose sight of the fact that human nature being what it is, that these pervasive pressures for the politicizing and corruption of the process, so that it is not nonpartisan, so that promotions are based not upon merit but upon political activity, has to be as much a concern today as it was in the time of Thomas Jefferson or the time of Boss Tweed, or the time of any political boss who has used the actual employees of Government to be his political machine. That is what we are concerned with.

It is that third principle stated by Ms. Newman, that the Federal employees must be protected against any form of coercion for political purposes, that we must continue to assure. This amendment, I submit, will go a long way toward doing that.

What it states specifically is that in addition to assuring the specific prohibitions set forth in S. 135, there needs to be a constant vigilance, a policing, in order to assure that we do not have the most fundamental kinds of pressures applied to public employees.

Specifically, the amendment is geared to Federal employees. It would authorize the General Accounting Office, and it would in fact direct the Comptroller General, to prepare and transmit to Congress, and to a task force to be established hereunder, a report describing the results of review of the implementation and enforcement of this act, S. 135, should it become the law, during the preceding 12-month period, and it would require that for a matter of some 3 years.

It is aimed expressly at seeing that there is compliance with the provisions of S. 135, but it goes further, because the report is also to determine whether or not anyone has used a position of authority or influence in the Government of the United States to either reward, through promotion or pay incentives, one or more other employees for action taken in relation to or participation in political activities, or whether such a person enjoying a position of authority or influence shall have used that position to penalize one or more other employees for such employees' refusal to take action relation to or participate in political activities.

It seeks, by its express language, to determine whether or not Federal employees have been engaged in overt or covert action to coerce one or more other employees to engage in political activities.

It seeks to determine whether or not an official authority or influence is used in the making or the auditing of Federal grants, awards, or contracts, to implement a Federal policy, or to administer a Federal program, based upon criteria or procedures that are not provided for under applicable Federal law, rules, or regulations.

What we are trying to do with this amendment is to assure that Federal employees are not coerced, that they are not induced to engage in political activity by promise of reward or of promotion; that they are not coerced by threat or by the actual imposition of some penalty, like the refusal of a promotion that has been earned, because they have refrained from engagining in political activity, the kind which in the most flagrant instance, as described in the letter from which I read, had to do with forcing people to change their registration, to give money to candidates for whom they had no particular allegiance.

There is a pertinent consideration that deserves mentioning at this stage, as well. Congress is expected to act upon legislation reforming the civil service pay system. Many of the current proposals recommend a greater reliance upon merit pay, and upon a system of promotion based upon performance. That is all the more reason to protect employees from coercive influences and to safeguard them from the kind of things that have happened so often in the past at all levels of government.

If the Comptroller General determines that a pattern of unallowable political activity has resulted, he is required to so report to the Congress, specifically to the Committee on Post Office and the Civil Service of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate; and those committees are required to then hold hearings upon the report of the Comptroller General and the task force within 60 days after receipt of report.

As a result of those hearings, what may occur, if it is the judgment of the committees, is that the report and the recommendations contained in it translated into legislation may come forward, but even without legislation, the report would come forward to the floor of the House and the Senate and, specifically, if the Comptroller General determines and so reports in such report that a pattern of unallowable political activity had resulted within the Federal work force and if there is also enacted within a period of 30 calendar days a joint resolution stating in substance that the Congress approves the findings of the Comptroller General contained in such report, then the act would be terminated.

This is, in effect, a sunset condition upon the finding of corruption, to put it in simplest terms, the finding that there has been coercion, the finding that there has been promise of reward or threat of penalty, a finding of unallowable pattern of political activity that undermines those very principles which Director Newman set forth with such great clarity harkening in 1989 the very concerns almost two centuries earlier expressed by Thomas Jefferson.

I really do not see how anyone could vote against this amendment because, if you are for S. 135, clearly you are for what you think is an expansion of the rights of Federal employees. But, certainly, how in the world, having that view, could you oppose anything that seeks to protect them, protect them from coercion and from the threat of penalty that would in fact deny them the basic freedom that they are entitled to enjoy?

If you are opposed to S. 135 and think that the act itself, with good intentions, threatens the undermining of those principles stated by Miss Newman and the process of good government, this will simply give you some assurance that there will be on the books expressed requirements that will lead to an active monitoring of the process to prohibit the very concerns that may actuate members to vote against S. 135.

So it seems to me there are no good reasons to vote against it. I urge my colleagues to vote for it, whichever view they hold. Whether they are for or opposed to S. 135, this is an amendment that all should favor, because it very simply protects the public interest by protecting the freedom of Federal employees and providing protections against coercion. It is that simple, Mr. President, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, what is the parliamentary situation now? Are we in the mode here where we could vote on the amendment by the distinguished Senator from Delaware or do we have to have a motion to bring it back?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A motion can be made to table the amendment of the Senator from Delaware. That is the situation at the moment.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I move to table the amendment by the distinguished Senator from Delaware.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI] is traveling to Santa Fe this evening. Senator DOMENICI has been invited to address a meeting of attorneys general from all over the United States and throughout Mexico. This is the same group of Mexican and United States officials that Attorney General Thornburgh addressed on Wednesday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. GLENN] to table the amendment of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. ROTH]. The yeas and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. KOHL] is necessarily absent.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ARMSTRONG], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI] and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. THURMOND] are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BRYAN). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 66, nays 29, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No 78 Leg.]

YEAS—66

Adams	Boren	Burdick
Baucus	Bradley	Byrd
Bentsen	Breaux	Conrad
Biden	Bryan	Cranston
Bingaman	Bumpers	D'Amato

Daschle	Jeffords	Nunn
DeConcini	Johnston	Packwood
Dixon	Kasten	Pell
Dodd	Kennedy	Pryor
Durenberger	Kerrey	Reid
Exon	Kerry	Riegle
Ford	Lautenberg	Robb
Fowler	Leahy	Rockefeller
Glenn	Levin	Sanford
Gore	Lieberman	Sarbanes
Graham	Lott	Sasser
Harkin	McCain	Shelby
Hatfield	Metzenbaum	Simon
Heflin	Mikulski	Specter
Heinz	Mitchell	Stevens
Hollings	Moynihan	Warner
Inouye	Murkowski	Wirth

NAYS—29

Bond	Gorton	McConnell
Boschwitz	Gramm	Nickles
Burns	Grassley	Pressler
Chafee	Hatch	Roth
Coats	Helms	Rudman
Cochran	Humphrey	Simpson
Cohen	Kassebaum	Symms
Danforth	Lugar	Wallop
Dole	Mack	Wilson
Garn	McClure

NOT VOTING—4

Armstrong	Kohl
Domenici	Thurmond

So, the motion to lay on the table amendment No. 1581 was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. CRANSTON. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1582

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question now is amendment No. 1582, the Wilson amendment.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from New York is recognized.

Mr. D'AMATO. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. D'AMATO pertaining to the introduction of S. 2579 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

AMENDMENT NO. 1582

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, what is the business before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is the Wilson amendment, 1582.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I believe the distinguished Senator from California wished to have just a few minutes—I understand it will be just a few—to summarize his views before I move to table. I am glad to wait for that length of time.

Does the Senator wish a rollcall vote?

The Senator does wish a rollcall vote. I yield the floor.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I had, when I offered this amendment, fully expected that it would be accepted. The decision I think probably has prompted some Members to leave, so it would be my hope that the leader would be gracious enough to afford a 30-minute rollcall for some people in both parties who have left under the impression that they had cast their last vote for the day.

Mr. President, this is a very simple amendment. Again in addressing the Senate, I quoted the words of Constance Berry Newman, the Director of the Office of Personnel Management. She has set forward simply and clearly what she regards as three fundamental principles governing the conduct of the Nation's business by our civil service. The first she says is that the administration of all laws must be in the public interest and for that to occur must be nonpartisan. The second is that selection and advancement of personnel be based on merit and not political activity. The third is that Federal employees must be protected against any form of coercion for political purposes.

Mr. President, that is what this amendment is all about—coercion. What it says in the simplest possible language is that GAO must seek to determine whether or not there has been, on the part of a superior, action that would be guilty of that superior being construed as having rewarded one or more employees by giving promise of promotion or pay incentives or with having threatened penalty for an employee's refusal to take action.

Mr. President harking back to the time of Thomas Jefferson up to the time of the 1930's when Carl Hatch, on the floor of the Senate, brought us the Hatch Act to prevent corruption, what we have had is the constant reiteration at State and local as well as at the Federal level of Government of the threat of corrupting the process, of politicizing what should be a nonpartisan administration of the law.

There are countless examples in the report, identified in the letter from the Justice Department, to show how the process can be corrupted by a superior seeking to impose his political will upon an employee, encouraging political activity, even the change of registration by the promise of some reward, by the offering of some incentive or more often by threat, as occurred in the example of the Clark County Road Department where people were summarily fired for their refusal to contribute campaign funds to a candidate.

Mr. President, that kind of thing should not happen, and what this amendment provides is that it will not happen. It looks to GAO to perform the same kind of study they have just undertaken and completed with respect to the Kennedy amendment that was offered to the Immigration Reform and Control Act that sought to determine whether or not there was discrimination by employers against those who may speak or sound foreign. They have been through this process. This is a far less demanding task, one of a much lesser magnitude. But this is the kind of law and in fact this is the language that we have just seen them perform and perform very well.

Mr. President, if we are sincere, if we do not intend to create a situation in which Federal employees can be pressured into political activity, then we must simply adopt what are very clear provisions.

I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the proposal of the distinguished Senator from California. My remarks will be very short, for those who are waiting to vote, on the substance of the Wilson amendment. I do not disagree with the fact that it might be a good idea to have somebody like GAO look into how this local Hatch Act is working out. But the details spelled out in this bill and what would be required of GAO, unless there is a great deal more clarification than there is in the bill and by the discussion so far, as well be beyond the scope of GAO to perform.

There are some other questions here about whether it is right to or whether it is legal to submit some of these reports and require actions by other agencies in the executive branch. I am sorry we did not get this legislation much earlier on. We might have been able to work out some accommodation by softening some of these things.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that on the upcoming motion to table the rollcall there be a 30-minute rollcall vote.

Mr. ROTH. Reserving the right to object, and I do not plan to object, I ask the distinguished chairman whether he or the majority leader can tell us what we will do upon the completion of that vote.

Mr. GLENN. I do not know the answer to that. I cannot speak for the majority leader. But if that request is made, we will see if we can locate him before I move to table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request made by the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. ROTH. Reserving the right to object——

Mr. GLENN. While we are proceeding, I ask unanimous consent that when the vote occurs it be a 30-minute rollcall vote, and I withhold the motion itself until we find out what the majority leaders wants.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BUMPERS. Reserving the right to object, what is the purpose of extending the rollcall vote?

Mr. GLENN. That was requested on the other side. Some Members were off the Hill, and they wished to have a 30-minute time period.

Mr. BUMPERS. Does the floor manager know of any other amendments that are ready to be debated and voted on tonight?

Mr. GLENN. No, I do not. I have been imploring the other side to get the amendments to the floor. We have all the business on this S. 135 taken care of, to the best of my knowledge, on the Democratic side.

We had hoped we would be able to finish with this this evening. I know of no other amendments after this.

I address my colleague across the aisle: Are there other amendments available this evening, or can we go to final passage?

Mr. ROTH. My understanding is that there are a number of amendments. How many are for tonight, I cannot say.

Mr. GLENN. Can the distinguished Senator tell me whether they would be willing to enter into time agreements on these amendments?

Mr. ROTH. I am not in a position to answer that. That would have to be addressed to the minority leader.

Mr. GLENN. Can the Senator give us some period this evening when we might be able to get to these amendments?

Mr. ROTH. I know there is at least one amendment that could be debated tonight.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is a request pending for unanimous consent for a 30-minute rollcall vote propounded by the floor manager, the Senator from Ohio [Mr. GLENN].

Is there objection? Hearing none, the request is agreed to. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I want to ask the distinguished floor manager for information to answer the question of the distinguished Senator from Delaware. I do not see any reason why we could not go ahead and vote.

Mr. GLENN. The Senator had asked as to whether this would be the last vote; what the plans for the evening were. And he wanted to know before the vote started, if possible.

Mr. BUMPERS. There is a little sign they can put down there at any time that says, "This is the last vote today."

Mr. GLENN. We can determine that after the vote is underway. I move to table the amendment of the Senator from California, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Ohio to lay on the table the amendment of the Senator from California.

On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. FORD] and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. KOHL] are necessarily absent.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ARMSTRONG], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI], and the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. NICKLES] are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr LEVIN). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 59, nays 35, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 79 Leg.]

YEAS—59

Adams	Glenn	Mitchell
Baucus	Gore	Moynihan
Bentsen	Graham	Murkowski
Biden	Harkin	Nunn
Bingaman	Hatfield	Packwood
Boren	Heflin	Pell
Bradley	Hollings	Pryor
Breaux	Inouye	Reid
Bryan	Johnston	Riegle
Bumpers	Kassebaum	Robb
Burdick	Kennedy	Rockefeller
Byrd	Kerrey	Sanford
Conrad	Kerry	Sarbanes
Cranston	Lautenberg	Sasser
Daschle	Leahy	Shelby
DeConcini	Levin	Simon
Dixon	Lieberman	Stevens
Dodd	McCain	Warner
Exon	Metzenbaum	Wirth
Fowler	Mikulski

NAYS—35

Bond	Gorton	McClure
Boschwitz	Gramm	McConnell
Burns	Grassley	Pressler
Chafee	Hatch	Roth
Coats	Heinz	Rudman
Cochran	Helms	Simpson
Cohen	Humphrey	Specter
D'Amato	Jeffords	Symms
Danforth	Kasten	Thurmond
Dole	Lott	Wallop
Durenberger	Lugar	Wilson
Garn	Mack

NOT VOTING—5

Armstrong	Ford	Nickles
Domenici	Kohl

So the motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, are their more amendments to be brought up this evening? I ask my distinguished colleague from Delaware, are there more amendments that we can work on this evening?

Mr. ROTH. I am not aware of any further amendments this evening.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator BRADLEY be added as a cosponsor to the amendment agreed to earlier today. That was the Robb-Warner-Glenn amendment. I do not remember the number of it. Senator BRADLEY asked to be added as a cosponsor of that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF POSITION ON A VOTE

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I missed the rollcall prior to the one we just voted on. This was a motion by Senator GLENN to table the Roth amendment, amendment No. 1581.

I ask at this time for unanimous consent to be positioned on that amendment. If I had been here, I would have voted "no" against the motion to table.

I would also like to explain I went to the hospital to visit my wife. Some time ago she broke three bones of her foot playing tennis and she is having some trouble, and I regret that I missed this rollcall. I did not realize it would come as quick as it did.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senator's statement will be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I rise to express the basis for my opposition to the legislation that the Senate is now considering, S. 135, the Hatch Act reform amendments.

I truly believe that it is unwise for the Senate to take this step toward politicizing the Federal work force at a time when public confidence in the Federal Government is very low. Over the past few years, the Pentagon has been rocked by allegations that its officials have engaged in favoritism in awarding Government contracts. The public and the Congress are outraged by the revelations of political favoritism and deals that were seemingly rampant throughout the Housing and Urban Development programs during the past administration. The Iran-Contra affair, the savings and loan scandal, and the Wedtech scandal are all still fresh in the minds of the public, leading them to question whether scandal and conflicts of interest have become routine, and just the way the Federal Government does business.

These stories take a great toll on the public's level of confidence in its Government, by signaling to the person in the streets that his or her Government's decisions are clouded by conflicts of interest or partisan political goals, and that the system can be manipulated to further the goals of either personal, financial, or even political gains.

It seems ironic to me that so soon after the Congress has called for tighter ethics laws for all three branches of government, and almost on the eve of the Senate's debate of campaign finance reforms, we are ready to undermine the Hatch Act, a law that has, for decades, been accepted as a major symbol of government integrity. Even beyond irony, I believe that it is very dangerous for the Congress to further erode public confidence in the Federal Government by allowing partisan political activities to become widespread within the Federal civil service.

I am not persuaded that the current law enslaves Federal workers and that the legislation before us is necessary to liberate them from their chains. Instead, it is the Hatch Act itself, in its current form, that protects Federal workers from the subtle coercions and the pressures in the workplace to become involved in partisan politics. In short, the Hatch Act gives the Federal workers the right to "just say no" to the subtle pressures of their superiors who may want them to participate in, or support, partisan politics. It is a system that has worked well, and one that should be retained.

I do not agree with those who argue that other provisions of law provide adequate protections for Federal employees from coercion. Other provisions of law do not adequately prevent the many subtle ways that superiors could retaliate against subordinates for participating, or even refusing to participate, in political activity. Promotions, job assignments, and job evaluations can all be used as means of subtle coercion and retaliation. The current Hatch Act was enacted to prevent such subtle pressures, that usually occur well outside the sight of any witness and which are very difficult to prove, but which are very easy for the Federal employee to feel.

I do believe that there is merit to the claim that the current regulations and opinions issued under the Hatch Act are confusing, and that such confusion may even prevent Federal employees from engaging in political activities that are permissible under the act. The proper response to this argument, however, is to clarify and simplify the guidance that is given to Federal employees on what is acceptable and unacceptable under the existing law, and I am supporting Senator ROTH'S and Senator MCCONNELL'S amendments to direct such clarifications and improve training on the Hatch Act rules and regulations.

To discard the entire Hatch Act simply because its interpretation and implementation needs to be improved would be a gross overreaction and would, in the long run, severely harm the public's trust in, and perception of, its Government.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, as a cosponsor of the Hatch Act reform amendments, I strongly urge my colleagues to vote for this bill.

This is a good, reasonable, balanced bill.

It restores to Federal employees the right to participate in political activities in their spare time, while at the same time protecting these employees from undue pressure to participate in partisan activity.

Federal employees are citizens and should possess all the rights of citizens, including the right to participate in the political process.

Under current law, the Secretary who works for FDA and lives in Rockville, MD, cannot go door-to-door on a Saturday afternoon on behalf of her favorite candidate for mayor.

The attorney who works for the FTC cannot host a gettogether in his home for his college roommate who is running for the State legislature.

Why should we impose these unreasonable restrictions on citizens who simply want to have a voice in how their communities are governed?

Mr. President, political participation is dropping off in our Nation.

Voters are tuning out. Citizens feel they do not have the time or the interest to get involved.

That is dangerous. We need the active participation of the citizenry to keep democracy alive.

Meanwhile, we are telling Federal workers—who are among the brightest, best-informed and most public-spirited Americans—that they are not allowed to make their voice heard.

That does not make sense.

We should welcome their active involvement, should they choose to devote their spare time to political activity.

I commend my friend, the chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee, Senator GLENN, and the other distinguished members of that committee for their work on this bill.

The Governmental Affairs Committee has a full plate this year.

Not only has it worked hard on Hatch Act reform and many other issues, it must now turn its attention to the task of deciding how to reform Federal pay.

There is wide recognition that the growing disparity between private sector pay and Federal pay poses a problem for the ability of the Federal Government to attract, and retain, highly skilled employees.

There is a close relationship between the pay issue and the issue of Hatch Act reform.

The scientist at NIH, the air traffic controller, the accountant at the IRS, the civil rights lawyer in the Justice Department—we are losing too many of these people because they feel that there are just too many tradeoffs involved in working for the Federal Government.

The protection of our citizens—their very lives—depend in many cases upon Federal Government employees. We need to attract the best, and keep them working for the Federal Government.

Let us start today to remove one of the burdens of working for the Federal Government.

Let us restore to these employees the ability to express themselves freely on political matters of concern to them. Let us pass this bill and reform the Hatch Act.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I am pleased that the Senate is finally debating S. 135, a bill to reform the Hatch Act. As an early cosponsor, I want to commend Senator GLENN and the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee for the hard work and initiative it took to bring this bill to the Senate floor.

For nearly five decades now, the political lives of Federal workers have been governed by restrictions on their activity put in place by the Hatch Act. The original act was a commendable response to the abuses of the age, but it has become encrusted with regulations which are complicated, inconsistent, and unduly restrictive. This legislation would broaden the range of activities permitted Federal workers while maintaining what is, in my judgment, the cornerstone of the Hatch Act, the prohibition against on-the-job political activity.

I do not minimize the concerns of those opponents of Hatch Act reform who fear that undue, and subtle, political pressure would be brought to bear upon employees working in a changed environment; but I believe that the prohibitions contained in S. 135 provide full protection against direct and indirect coercion. In that regard, the comments of the junior Senator from Connecticut were particularly instructive to me and, I hope, to my colleagues. As Senator LIEBERMAN mentioned during an earlier floor statement, he did extensive research on the Hatch Act while he was in law school, and I want to associate myself particularly with his conclusion that those who would infringe on the basic political rights of a large group of Americans bear a heavy burden of proof that the restriction is justified.

The arguments in defense of the current Hatch Act simply do not meet that test. To suggest that Federal employees need the paternal protection of Federal statute to prevent their enslavement to supervisors is to demean their integrity and their intelligence. Moreover, it flies in the face of the reality of their working lives for decades, since political appointees have always filled Federal high-level management positions.

Finally, I believe there is a particularly compelling case for reform of the Hatch Act at this time. For too many years the Federal work force was cast as a symbol of Government run amok by those who saw Government as the root of all our problems, and who aimed to solve these problems by the simple expedient of shrinking and downgrading the Federal work force. The climate of opinion produced by that attitude has demoralized and degraded a distinguished body of skilled public servants, who have continued to serve their country well in the face of 8 years of pillorying and the diminishing of their pay, benefits, and working conditions.

It is instructive to note that the charges of misuse of public office and corruption which have so dishonored the Government in recent years arose not from the misconduct of the career civil servant, but rather from the cavalier behavior in office of the very individuals whose responsibility it was, under the current Hatch Act, to ensure a pristine and apolitical Federal work force. We are unlikely to see any worse behavior under a revised Hatch Act, and it is quite possible that standards of public behavior will improve.

Finally, I agree with the point made by the majority leader that there is sad irony in the spectacle of our applauding the birth of democracies in Eastern Europe and Central America while denying the full measure of the rights of citizenship to the very people charged with impelementing public policy in our own country. In sum, Mr. President, I believe it likely that reform of the Hatch Act will unleash the civil energies of a group of skilled men and women who will enrich the life of our communities and our Nation, and I urge my colleagues to join with me in supporting S. 135.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanious consent that when the Senate resumes consideration of the Hatch Act reform bill tomorrow, Senator ROTH be recognized to offer an amendment regarding caucuses, and that upon completion of the debate on that amendment, Senator ROTH again be recognized to offer an amendment regarding personal causes of action.

I further ask unanimous consent that when the Senate resumes consideration of the bill on Monday, May 7, the following Senators be recognized to offer first-degree amendments on the subject matter indicated: Senator DOLE, a germane amendment; Senator DOLE, another germane amendment; Senator ROTH, an amendment regarding a ban on holding office within the party; and Senator SIMPSON, an amendment regarding the effective date of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, for the information of Senators, having obtained this agreement and further understanding with the distinguished Republican leader and the managers of the bill, there will be no further rollcall votes this evening. And there will be no rollcall votes tomorrow, or Monday. It is my intention to stack the votes on the six amendments in the agreement to begin at approximately 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning.

So Senators should be aware that two amendments will be debated tomorrow, as indicated in the agreement, four amendments will be debated on Monday, and the votes on or in relation to those amendments or on any second-degree amendments relating thereto will be held Tuesday morning beginning at approximately 10 o'clock. I will announce the precise time hopefully by sometime tomorrow.

Mr. President, this enables us to continue to make progress on the bill and also to accommodate the schedules of many Senators who have other matters to which they must attend on tomorrow and Monday.

I have discussed the pending bill on several occasions with the distinguished Republican leader, and I am pleased that we were able to proceed in making this progress. It is my intention that we be able to complete action on this bill next week because I hope that we will then be able to turn to other matters, including the campaign finance reform bill.

I recognize there are some who are opposed to this bill, but I think the votes so far show a very substantial majority of the Senators favor action on this legislation.

I hope that by Tuesday, following the party caucuses, we will be able to have some indication of when we might move to final passage on the bill, hopefully early next week.

If we are unable to obtain such assurance, I have indicated to the Republican leader that I would then have to consider filing cloture on the bill on Tuesday, with a cloture vote to be held Thursday morning, with the expectation and intention that, once cloture is obtained, the Senate would simply stay in session until we finish the bill as we complete the 30 hours and get final action on the bill. I hope that is not required.

I am attempting to balance the interests of the overwhelming majority of Senators who favor action on this legislation with the legitimate rights of those who oppose it to do so by offering amendments, and debating them and the bill in a fair and full manner.

I believe that the process which I have outlined is the best that we can do to balance those interests in regard to this legislation.

So I thank the distinguished Republican leader for his cooperation in helping us to obtain this agreement as well as the distinguished managers of the bill, Senator GLENN and Senator ROTH, for their cooperation. I repeat just one final time, therefore, that there will be two amendments debated tomorrow, four amendments debated Monday, and all votes on or in relation to those amendments to be stacked to begin early Tuesday morning.

I hope we can complete action on the bill by Tuesday, but, if not, if we are unable to obtain assurance of completion by a time certain next week, I will then consider filing a cloture on Tuesday with a cloture vote Thursday morning and stay in session until we finish the bill.

Mr. President, I yield to the distinguished Republican leader.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the minority leader.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I concur in most everything the majority leader has to say. I guess the point I would make is we have so far had nothing but germane amendments. Today we lost a couple of hours in quorum calls. It seems to me, if we have the two amendments tomorrow, the four amendments on Monday, we will have policy luncheons on next Tuesday, I will be in a better position to advise the majority leader after the policy luncheons.

Obviously, he can file cloture any time he wishes. We do have problems, as we always have when we get to Friday. Next Friday happens to be a problem with several Members who are going on an official business trip to NATO. So that will be one factor we can discuss privately, and there may be others I am unaware of.

So I thank the majority leader. I thank my colleagues. I guess the burden then is on those of us who have amendments to be here, debate those amendments. It may not take an hour in each case; it may take much less; in some cases it might take more.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, in the agreement, I did not seek to or obtain specific time limits. It is the expectation of all concerned that each of these amendments will take about an hour, but since there will be no votes on either day, I thought it best to leave that out so as to permit the parties to use what time they think necessary and appropriate—some may take a little less, some may take a little more—rather than burdening the managers and the offerers of the amendments with the specific time limitations. But for the information of Senators, the debates are expected for about an hour on each of the six amendments that I identified.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a period for morning business with Senators permitted to speak therein.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE LIFTING OF MARTIAL LAW IN TIBET

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, Chinese Premier Li Peng announced on April 30 that martial law will be lifted in Lhasa, the capital of Tibet. This is a welcome move indeed, if following this proclamation, China demonstrably eliminates its policies of what Chinese Politburo member Qiao Shi called merciless repression.

Although the lifting of martial law may have been designed in part to appease the United States Government at a time when China's most-favored-nation trade status is up for review, it nevertheless may also be the most significant action the Chinese leadership has yet taken in the area of human rights since the events of Tiananmen. However, the Chinese leadership must realize that to gain goodwill from the United States they will have to do more than declare an end to martial law: we hope that they will follow this declaration with concrete measures to improve the human rights situation in Tibet.

First, military and police presence should be reduced considerably. Political prisoners, those who have been arrested for merely expressing an opinion or for only the suspicion of holding an opinion, should be released. Religious harassment and the destruction of Tibetan culture should end. I especially agree with the Bush administration recommendation that the Chinese Government resume allowing routine visits to Tibet by foreign diplomats, journalists, and other interested observers.

The lifting of martial law follows a recent period in which there have been many discouraging signs. The Associated Press reported on April 26 that the last monks of the once great monasteries surrounding Lhasa—Sera, Ganden, and Drepung—are being expelled by the Chinese authorities. This is particularly cruel considering that at the end of Mao's Cultural Revolution in 1976, only 8 of Tibet's 6,000 monasteries, once known throughout Asia as centers of intellectual and religious debate, were left standing.

The Tibet Information Network has also reported that houses and other buildings in the Tibetan quarter surrounding the Barkhor Plaza are being bulldozed. This neighborhood is the center of Tibetan life in Lhasa. It is the final destination of Buddhist pilgrims who travel by the thousands each year to reach its more holy shrine, the Jokhang Temple. The religious significance of this historic center is not unlike that of the Holy City of Jerusalem.

If China is sincerely interested in improving relations with the United States, revoking martial law will mean a return at least to the less repressive policies of the middle 1980's, and I hope it will go beyond that to eventually allow more autonomy for the Tibetans. Finally, I hope that the Chinese Government will agree to negotiate with the Dalai Lama and Tibetan leaders in exile. The Dalai Lama has received the Nobel Peace Prize and increasing international support for his overtures to the Chinese Government, and discussion with him and other Tibetan leaders holds the only long-term hope for a peaceful resolution of the problems in Tibet.

AGRICULTURAL PRACTICES EXEMPTION RELATIVE TO THE WETLANDS

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. President, as I indicated earlier this week, the Environment and Public Works Committee has been working with USDA, EPA, the Corps of Engineers, the White House, and Senators PRYOR, BUMPERS, JOHNSTON, and BREAUX to clarify the types of farming and aquaculture activities that are either exempt from regulation or qualify for general permits under section 404 of the Clean Water Act.

In a letter to the chairman of the Agriculture Committee, Senator LEAHY, on April 19, 1990, Assistant EPA Administrator for Water LaJuana Wilcher and Assistant Army Secretary Robert Page had earlier clarified what constitutes normal rice farming and how wetlands determinations are made under the Federal Manual for Identifying and Delineating Jurisdictional Wetlands.

However, this letter did not adequately clarify a number of issues concerning normal farming practices and construction of fish ponds, particularly in Arkansas and Louisiana. Now, thanks in large part to the efforts of Senators BUMPERS, PRYOR, BREAUX, and JOHNSTON, the corps and EPA will issue today a memorandum to their field staffs which provides additional, detailed guidance on: First, normal farming activities, including crop rotation, land leveling and rice farming; second, construction of fish ponds; third, consultation with the Cooperative Extension Service and land grant universities; and fourth, enforcement. On the subject of fish ponds, this memo makes reference to a general permit that is expected to be issued by June 1, 1990.

Finally, in a letter to me and the other Senators involved in this matter, Assistant Administrator Wilcher and Assistant Secretary Page have indicated that: First, the corps districts will be asked to issue special public notices providing the information in the memorandum to field staff guidance; second, EPA and the corps will issue press releases to further distribute this information; and third, both agencies will initiate a public outreach process, working through the Extension Service, to ensure that there is a continuing opportunity for dialog between the regulatory agencies and the agricultural community.

I appreciate the efforts of my colleagues from Arkansas and Louisiana to clarify that section 404 does not apply to normal farming activities. I also want to express my appreciation to the administration for its cooperation in resolving this matter.

It is vital to the continued abundant supply of affordable food and fiber and to the continued conservation of wetlands that any uncertainty surrounding the application of section 404 to agricultural activities be eliminated. I hope that the agreed upon guidance to corps and EPA field staff will result in closer cooperation between those agencies and the Department of Agriculture and land grant universities in determining what constitutes normal farming activities in a given area and in communicating information to farmers and others about the 404 program's requirements and exemptions.

I ask unanimous consent that copies of the EPA/corps letter of April 19, 1990, to Senator LEAHY; the EPA/corps memorandum of May 3, 1990; the draft general permit for fish ponds (CELMK-OD-FE 14-General Permit-48); and the EPA/corps letter of May 3, 1990, to me, be printed in the RECORD immediately following this statement.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY,
OFFICE OF WATER,
DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY,
OFFICE OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY,
Washington, DC, April 19, 1990.

Hon. PATRICK J. LEAHY,
Chairman, Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Thank you for your letters of March 27, 1990, to Administrator Reilly and Lieutenant General Hatch concerning implementation of the Section 404 permit program in relation to certain farming activities. As the national program managers for the Clean Water Act Section 404 program, we appreciate the opportunity to respond to your concerns. We share your deep interest in this issue and recognize the need to work expeditiously to provide appropriate clarification.

We strongly agree that it is incumbent upon our agencies to communicate effectively to landowners and farmers how the Section 404 program may apply to their activities. This communication is critical in assuring that the regulated public understands regulatory requirements that may apply, and to minimize any misconceptions and confusion that may exist concerning our program. As your letters recognize, it appears that some misunderstanding has arisen regarding the relationship of the Section 404 program to certain farming operations involving, in particular, rice levees and construction of catfish ponds. We understand these concerns, and have recently initiated several actions that will allow farmers to understand better the regulatory program and provide more efficient and equitable mechanisms for implementing provisions of the Section 404 program. These actions include:

Progress toward developing a general permit authorizing discharges of dredged or fill material associated with the construction of levees and ditches for the construction of catfish ponds.

Initiating a review of the Federal Manual for Identifying and Delineating Jurisdictional Wetlands (Interagency Manual) with the Soil Conservation Service and the Fish and Wildlife Service to determine what, if any, modifications are necessary. As part of this review, we will be holding public meetings to solicit technical comments on the Interagency Manual. The first meeting is scheduled for May 5, 1990 in Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

Initiating development of clear and easily understood information for the agricultural community regarding Section 404 regulatory requirements, focusing on wetlands jurisdictional determinations in agricultural areas and the applicability of the Section 404(f) exemptions to agricultural activities (including the definition of "normal" farming activities). We are currently developing a joint issue paper on this topic.

In addition to these actions, we are committed to continuing to work with representatives of the agricultural community to explore other opportunities to improve the effectiveness of our wetlands protection efforts, remaining ever-mindful of the special needs and concerns of the Nation's farmers. We will work diligently to ensure that the Section 404 requirements are better understood by all participants in the permit process, and are convinced that improve communication is essential to the program's ability to successfully provide fair and equitable protection for the Nation's critical aquatic resources. In that regard, we intend to contact the Department of Agriculture to develop an effective means of distributing information to farmers concerning the relationship between the Section 404 program and agricultural activities.

Your letters also raise a concern regarding the changing environment in the Federal treatment of wetlands under Section 404. There are two issues related to this concern to which we would like to respond. First, it is our position that discharges of dredged material associated with the construction of rice levees in wetlands which are in established agricultural crop production are "normal farming activities" within the meaning of Section 404(f)(1)(A) and are therefore exempt from Section 404 regulation under the following conditions:

The purpose of these levees is limited to the maintenance and manipulation of shallow water levels for the production of rice crops; and

Consistent with current agricultral practices associated with rice cultivation, the height of the rice levees should generally not exceed 24 inches above their base; and the material to be discharged should generally be derived exclusively from the distribution of soil immediately adjacent to the constructed levee.

Second, we understand that concern has been expressed that our agencies may be using only one parameter (i.e., soils) to delineate wetlands in areas currently in agriculture. In fact, all three parameters of the wetlands technical criteria (i.e., hydrophytic vegetation, hydric soils, and wetlands hydrology) must be considered when making a wetlands determination. The definition of wetlands in our regulations (33 CFR 328.3(b); 40 CFR 230.3(t) and 232.2(f)) provides for a three parameter approach in identifying an area as wetlands. Moreover, the Interagency Manual, cooperatively developed by the Corps of Engineers, Environmental Protection Agency, Fish and Wildlife Service, and Soil Conservation Service, describes field indicators for all three parameters (i.e., hydrology, soils, and vegetation) and articulates methods for delineating wetland boundaries. In general, field indicators of all three parameters must be demonstrated in making a wetlands delineation. However, in describing these indicators for determining the presence of the three parameters, the Interagency Manual identifies certain assumptions which may apply. For example, there will be circumstances where the wetlands hydrology indicators (i.e., the hydrological indicators listed in the Interagency Manual, including, for example, visual observations of inundation or soil saturation) are not readily observed in the field (e.g., the site visit is during the dry season). Section 3.37.11 of the Interagency Manual states that "[i]f an area meets the field indicators for hydric soils and there is no indication of significant hydrologic modification, then it can be assumed that the area meets the wetland hydrology criterion" (emphasis added).

In routine situations, positive indicators of soils, vegetation, and hydrology are sought. However, there are circumstances where such indicators are not available, for example where wetlands vegetation is not present due to clearing activities or as a result of winter die-off annual vegetation. When this occurs, under the Interagency Manual the type of soils present and the hydrology will indicate the type of vegetation that would be present under normal circumstances. Similarly, the presence of hydric soil indicators and the absence of modifications to the hydrology can indicate the presence of wetlands hydrology.

As provided in the Interagency Manual, while a site is effectively and legally drained to the extent that it no longer meets the regulatory wetlands hydrology criteria (as interpreted by the Interagency Manual), it is not a wetland subject to jurisdiction under Section 404 of the Clean Water Act. In addition, in making determinations, agency staff are required to ensure that hydrology is not determined based solely on soil characteristics in areas currently in agriculture. Areas in agriculture are considered disturbed areas and indicators of all three parameters are evaluated utilizing the "disturbed area" section of the Interagency Manual (Sections 4.20 through 4.23). In making determinations, indicators of all three parameters are evaluated and the hydrology parameter is not assumed to exist based solely on soil characteristics in areas currently in agriculture.

We hope this letter addresses your concerns. If you have any additional questions, please contact us or David G. Davis, EPA Office of Wetlands Protection, (202) 475-7791, or David Barrows, Office of the Assistant Secretary of the Army (Civil Works), (202) 695-1376.

Sincerely yours,

LAJUANA S. WILCHER,
Assistant Administrator for Water, Environmental Protection Agency.
ROBERT W. PAGE,
Assistant Secretary of the Army (Civil Works).

ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY, OFFICE OF WATER, DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY, OFFICE OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY,
Washington, DC, May 3, 1990.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE FIELD

Subject: Clean Water Act Section 404 Regulatory Program and Agricultural Activities.

A number of questions have recently been raised about the applicability of the Clean Water Act Section 404 Regulatory Program to agriculture. This memorandum is intended to assist Section 404 field personnel in responding to those questions and to assure that the program is implemented in a consistent manner. At the outset, we should emphasize that we respect and support the underlying purposes of the Clean Water Act regarding the exemption from Section 404 permitting requirements for "normal farming" activities. The exemptions (at Section 404(f) of the Act) recognize that American agriculture fulfills the vitally important public need for supplying abundant and affordable food and fiber and it is our intent to assure that the exemptions are appropriately implemented.

What are normal farming activities? Who makes that determination? Can agricultural producers plant crops in wetlands areas that have been farmed for many years? These are questions that have generated significant confusion and concern in the agricultural community. This memorandum will explain the extent of the Section 404 program and clarify some misunderstandings that may exist in the field. Therefore we encourage you to widely distribute this memorandum.

WHAT IS SECTION 404?

The Federal Water Pollution Control Act Amendments of 1972 established the Section 404 Regulatory Program. Under this Act, it is unlawful to discharge dredged or fill material into waters of the United States without first receiving authorization (usually a permit) from the Corps, unless the discharge is covered under an exemption. The term "waters of the United States" defines the extent of geographic jurisdiction of the Section 404 program. The term includes such waters as rivers, lakes, streams, tidal waters, and most wetlands. A discharge of dredged or fill material involves the physical placement of soil, sand, gravel, dredged material or other such materials into the waters of the United States. Section 404(f) exemptions, which were added in 1977, provide that discharges that are part of normal farming, ranching, and forestry activities associated with an active and continuous ("ongoing") farming or forestry operation generally do not require a Section 404 permit.

With this background in mind, we can now turn to the issues that are the focus of concern. As previously noted, Section 404(f) exempts discharges of dredged or fill material into waters of the United States associated with certain normal agricultural activities. Of course, activities that do not involve a discharge of dredged or fill material into waters of the United States never require a Section 404 permit. Further, as provided in the Interagency Federal Manual for Identifying and Delineating Jurisdictional Wetlands, while a site is effectively and legally drained to the extend that it no longer meets the regulatory wetlands hydrology criteria (as interpreted by the Interagency Manual), it is not a wetland subject to jurisdiction under Section 404 of the Clean Water Act.

WHAT IS THE "NORMAL FARMING" ACTIVITIES EXEMPTION?

The Clean Water Act exempts from the Section 404 program discharges associated with normal farming, ranching and forestry activities such as plowing, cultivating, minor drainage, and harvesting for the production of food, fiber, and forest products, or upland soil and water conservation practices (Section 404(f)(1)(A)). To be exempt, these activities must be part of an established, ongoing operation. For example, if a farmer has been plowing, planting and harvesting in wetlands, he can continue to do so without the need for a Section 404 permit, so long as he does not convert the wetlands to dry land. Activities which convert a wetland which has not been used for farming or forestry into such uses are not considered part of an established operation, and are not exempt. For example, the conversion of a bottomland hardwood wetland to crop production is not exempt.

In determining whether an activity is part of an established operation, several points need to be considered. First, the specific farming activity need not itself have been ongoing as long as it is introduced as part of an ongoing farming operation. For exemple, if crops have been grown and harvested on a regular basis, the mere addition or change of a cultivation technique (e.g., discing between crop rows to control weeds rather than using herbicides) is considered to be part of the established farming operation. Second, the planting of different agricultural crops as part of an established rotation (e.g., soybeans to rice) is exempt. Similarly, the rotation of rice and crawfish production is also exampt (construction of fish ponds is not an exempt activity and is addressed on page 5 of this memorandum). Third, the resumption of agricultural production in areas laying fallow as part of a normal rotational cycle are considered to be part of an established operation and would be exempted under Section 404(f). However, if a wetland area has not been used for farming for so long that it would require hydrological modifications (modifications to the surface or groundwater flow) that would result in a discharge of dredged or fill material, the farming operation would no longer be established or ongoing.

As explained earlier, normal farming operations include cultivating, harvesting, minor drainage, plowing, and seeding. While these terms all have common, everyday definitions, it is important to recognize that these terms have specific, regulatory meanings in relation to the Section 404(f) exemptions. For example, plowing that is exempt under Section 404(f) means all mechanical means of manipulating soil, including land levelling, to prepare it for the planting of crops. However, grading activities that would change any area of waters of the United States, including wetlands, into dry land are not exempt. Minor drainage that is exempt under Section 404(f) is limited to discharges associated with the continuation of established wetland crop production (e.g., building rice levees) or the connection of upland crop drainage facilities to waters of the United States. In addition, minor drainage also refers to the emergency removal of blockages that close or constrict existing drainageways used as part of an established crop production. Minor drainage is defined such that it does not include discharges associated with the construction of ditches which drain or significantly modify any wetlands or aquatic areas considered as waters of the United States. Seeding that is exempt under Section 404(f) includes not only the placement of seeds themselves, but also the placement of soil beds for seeds or seedings on established farm or forest lands. Cultivating under Section 404(f) includes physical methods of soil treatment to aid and improve the growth, quality, or yield of established crops. Except as provided under Section 404(f)(2) as explained below, construction or maintenance of irrigation ditches or maintenance of drainage ditches is also exempt.

Recognizing area and regional differences in normal farming practices, EPA and the Corps agree to develop additional definitions or normal farming practices in consultation with the designated Land Grant Colleges and the Cooperative Extension Services. We also further encourage our field staffs to utilize the expertise in these colleges and agricultural services in the ongoing implementation of the Section 404 program.

WHEN THE NORMAL FARMING ACTIVITY EXEMPTIONS DO NOT APPLY

Section 404(f)(2) provides that discharges related to activities that change the use of the waters of the United States, including wetlands, and reduce the reach, or impair the flow or circulation of waters of the United States are not exempted. This "recapture" provision involves a two-part test that results in an activity being considered not exempt when both parts are met: 1) does the activity represent a "new use" of the wetland and, 2) would the activity result in a "reduction in reach/impairment of flow or circulation" of waters of the United States? Consequently, any discharge of dredged or fill material that results in the destruction of the wetlands character of an area (e.g., its conversion to uplands due to new or expanded drainage) is considered a change in use of the waters of the United States, and by definition, a reduction of their reach, and is not exempt under Section 404(f). In addition, Section 404(f)(1) of the Act provides that discharges that contain toxic pollutants listed under Section 307 are not exempted and must be permitted.

However, discharges that are not exempt are not necessarily prohibited. Non-exempt discharges must first be authorized either through a general or individual Section 404 permit before they are initiated.

WHAT ARE GENERAL PERMITS?

Even if farming activity is one that does not fall under an exemption and a permit is required, some farming activities are eligible for General Permits. Section 404(e) of the Act authorizes the Corps, after notice and opportunity for public hearing, to issue General Permits on a State, regional or nationwide basis for certain categories of activities involving a discharge of dredged or fill material in waters of the United States. Such activities must be similar in nature and cause only minimal adverse environmental effects. Discharges authorized under a General Permit may proceed without applying to the Corps for an individual permit. However, in some circumstances, conditions associated with a General Permit may require that persons wishing to discharge under that permit must notify the Corps or other designated State or lcoal agency before the discharge takes place. A list of current General Permits is available from each Corps District Office, as well as information regarding notification requirements or other relevant conditions.

RICE FARMING

Questions have arisen regarding the relationship of the Section 404 program to rice farming. We understand these concerns, and recently have initiated actions that will allow farmers to understand better the regulatory program and provide more efficient and equitable mechanisms for implementing provisions of the Section 404 program.

In an April 19, 1990 letter responding to a request from Senator Patrick J. Leahy, Chairman, and 11 members of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, we stated our position that discharges of dredged material associated with the construction of rice levees for rice farming in wetlands which are in established agricultural crop production are "normal farming activities" within the meaning of Section 404(f)(1)(A) and are therefore exempt from Section 404 regulation under the following conditions:

(1) The purpose of these levees is limited to the maintenance and manipulation of shallow water levels for the production of rice crops; and

(2) Consistent with current agricultural practices associated with rice cultivation, the height of the rice levees should generally not exceed 24 inches above their base; and the material to be discharged for levee construction should generally be derived exclusively from the distribution of soil immediately adjacent to the constructed levee.

Land levelling for rice farming in wetlands which are in established crop production also is a "normal farming activity" within the meaning of Section 404(f)(1)(A) and is therefore exempt from Section 404 regulation.

FISH PONDS

We are developing a General Permit authorizing discharges of dredged or fill material associated with the construction of levees and ditches for the construction of fish ponds in wetlands that were in agricultural crop production prior to December 23, 1985. A draft General Permit has been developed by the Vicksburg District Army Corps of Engineers and should be issued by June 1, 1990. This General Permit should serve as a model permit for other areas of the country and this activity will be considered for a nationwide General Permit.

It should be made clear, however, that the Section 404(f) exemption for "normal farming activities" and the General Permit being developed for fish ponds apply only to the use of wetlands which are already in use for agricultural crop production. These provisions do not apply to 1) wetlands that were once in use for agricultural crop production but have lain idle so long that modifications to the hydrologic regime are necessary to resume crop production or, 2) the conversion of naturally vegetated wetlands to agriculture, such as the conversion of bottomland hardwood wetlands to agriculture.

LIMITATIONS OF THE SECTION 404(f) EXEMPTIONS

It should be emphasized that the use of Section 404(f) exemptions does not affect Section 404 jurisdiction. For example, the fact that an activity in wetlands is exempted as normal farming practices does not authorize the filling of the wetland for the construction of buildings without a Section 404 permit. Similarly, a Section 404 permit would be required for the discharge of dredged or fill material associated with draining a wetland area and converting it to dry land.

ENFORCEMENT

Given that the normal farming practices as described above are exempt from regulation under Section 404, neither EPA nor the Corps will initiate enforcement actions against farmers or other persons for engaging in such normal farming activities. Further, there will be no enforcement against actions that meet the description of activities covered by, and any conditions contained in, general permits issued by the Corps.

CONCLUSION

Proper implementation of the Section 404 program is an issue of extreme importance to the nation. We encourage you to distribute this memorandum not only to your staffs but to the public at large so that there will be a better general understanding of the program and how it operates. If you have any questions regarding this memorandum, please contact us or have your staff contact Suzanne Schwartz in EPA's Office of Wetlands Protection at 202-475-7799, or John Studt in the Headquarters' Office of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers at 202-272-1785 (temporary number 202-272-1294).

LAJUANA S. WILCHER,
Assistant Administrator for Water,
Environmental Protection Agency.
ROBERT W. PAGE,
Assistant Secretary of the Army.
(Civil Works).

ARMY CORPS OF ENGINEERS,
VICKSBURG DISTRICT,
Vicksburg, MS.

GENERAL PERMIT

For: Regulated activities associated with the construction of ponds (fish ponds, sewage lagoons, and irrigation reservoirs) in cleared wetlands areas.

Where: States of Mississippi, except Mobile district's area of regulatory jurisdiction, and Arkansas and the regulatory jurisdiction of the Vicksburg district in Louisiana.

By Whom: The district engineers of the respective districts on behalf of the general public.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is hereby issuing a General Permit for construction activities in waters of the United States conducted in conjunction with construction of ponds and for the associated discharge of dredged and fill material. These activities include, but are not limited to, construction of levees and ditches associated with construction of catfish ponds, crawfish ponds, minnow ponds, sewage lagoons, and/or irrigation reservoirs. The General Permit is valid only in wetlands which were in agricultural production prior to December 23, 1985.

Since the General Permit is valid in portions of four Corps Districts, subsequent authorizations to proceed with work under this General Permit would be granted by the appropriate District within which the work would be located. A map indicating the District boundaries is enclosed (enclosure 1). Also enclosed are the mailing addresses for each of the Districts (enclosure 2).

This General Permit contains certain limitations and conditions intended to protect the environment and natural and cultural resources. Conformance with conditions contained in the General Permit does not necessarily guarantee authorization under this General Permit. In cases where the District Engineer considers it necessary, application will be required for individual permits. Construction, dredging, or fill operations not specifically covered by this General Permit are prohibited unless authorized by a separate permit.

This action is being taken pursuant to Federal regulations printed in the Federal Register on November 13, 1986, concerning permits for activities in waters of the United States. These regulations state the Corps of Engineers' responsibility for regulating structures or work in or affecting waters of the United States under Section 10 of the Rivers and Harbors Act of 1899 (30 Stat. 1151; 33 U.S.C. 403) and Section 404 of the Clean Water Act (33 U.S.C. 1344). In compliance with requirements of Section 401 of the Clean Air Act, the Vicksburg District has applied for water quality certifications from the Arkansas Department of Pollution Control and Ecology, the Louisiana Department of Environmental Quality, and the Mississippi Department of Environmental Quality stating that the work authorized by the General Permit will not violate applicable provisions of Sections 301, 302, 306, and 307 of the Act. Copies of the water quality certifications are enclosed (encls 3, 4, and 5).

Note: The use of terms such as prior converted (PC), farmed wetlands (FW), and converted wetlands (CW) are in accordance with the Food Security Act of 1985. The terms are defined as follows:

Prior Converted (PC).—Wetlands that before December 23, 1985, were drained, dredge, filled, leveled, or otherwise manipulated for the purpose, or to have the effect of, making the production of an agricultural commodity possible and an eligible agricultural commodity has been produced at least once prior to December 23, 1985.

Farmed Wetlands (FW).—Crop fields that have been manipulated prior to December 23, 1985, but which continue to meet wetland criteria by being seasonally flooded or ponded for at least 15 consecutive days of the growing season on a 50-percent chance of occurrence.

Converted Wetlands (CW).—Wetlands that have been drained, dredged, filled, leveled, or otherwise manipulated (including any activity that results in impairing or reducing the flow, circulation, or reach of water) for the purpose or to have the effect of making the production of an agricultural commodity possible.

The term wooded wetlands is not defined in the Food Security Act of 1985, but for the purpose of this General Permit is defined as follows:

Wooded Wetlands (WW).—Area of predominant hydric soils vegetated with a prevalence of hydrophytic vegetation.

Request for authorization under the general permit: In order to receive authorization under this general permit, persons proposing the work are required to submit, in writing, the following information to the appropriate district engineer at least 30 days prior to proposed commencement of work:

a. State the number of the General Permit under which the work is to be conducted (CELMK-OD-FE 14-GP-48).

b. A statement that the work will be conducted in compliance with the terms and conditions of this General Permit.

c. Map from the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) showing designation of the land, i.e., prior converted, farmed wetlands, converted wetlands, and wooded wetlands.

d. Description and purpose of the proposed work.

e. Drawing of the proposed levees and/or ditches including dimensions, total length, amounts of excavated and fill material in cubic yards, and total acres impacted.

f. Estimated starting and completion dates.

g. For proposals involving farmed wetlands, a full description of the proposed mitigation plan. (For mitigation requirements refer to Special Condition 10.)

h. For proposals in Arkansas, the applicant must obtain a letter of no objection from the Arkansas Department of Pollution Control and Ecology, Post Office Box 9583, Little Rock, Arkansas 72209. Information required by the Department prior to issuance of the required letter of no objection is listed in enclosure 6. The letter from Arkansas Department of Pollution Control and Ecology must be provided to the Corps with the request for authorization under this General Permit.

1. Name, address, and telephone number of the person applying for authorization.

Eligibility: No after-the-fact authorizations will be granted under this general permit.

No authorization will be granted to any applicant found to be in noncompliance with any prior department of the Army permit or to any applicant with an outstanding section 404 violation until such noncompliance or violation has been resolved.

Special conditions: 1. To be considered eligible for authorization under this General Permit, the proposed project can not impact more than 640 acres of cleared wetlands. If the wetlands include both prior converted cropland designated as wetlands and farmed wetlands as identified by the Soil Conservation Service, not more than 5 percent of the total wetland acreage impacted by the project can fall into the farmed wetland classification; except that for projects impacting 200 acres of wetland or less, the farmed wetland portion may be up to 10 acres and the 5-percent limit will not apply.

2. No work in areas designated as wooded wetlands will be authorized.

3. No work in areas subject to backwater flooding will be authorized.

4. New drainage ditches shall have a side slope of 3 horizontal to 1 vertical or flatter.

5. Drainage ditches will be constructed a minimum distance of 10 feet from the outside toe of the new levee.

6. New drainage ditches will not alter the hydrology of adjacent wooded wetlands.

7. Material excavated from new ditches will be placed between the ditch and adjacent wooded areas (where applicable) to maintain existing hydrology in wooded areas.

8. All new levees will be seeded with a species of grass that is adapted to the area.

9. Buffer strips will be created and maintained between new levees and adjacent wooded areas and/or natural waterbodies.

10. Mitigation requirements: All applications involving farmed wetlands must contain a plan to mitigate the loss of the functions and values of those wetlands. The mitigation plan will remain in effect for the life of the project.

If the mitigation site chosen by the applicant is farmed wetlands, a 1.5:1 mitigation ratio is required. One or more of the measures listed below, a.-c., will satisfy the mitigation requirement in the ratio of 1.5 acres mitigated for each acre converted to non-wetland, upland or open water by construction activities.

a. Increase shallow flooding duration via water control structures/levees November 15 to February 15.

b. Reforest with bottomland hardwoods.

c. Plant annually with millet or other waterfowl food plants.

If the mitigation site chosen by the applicant is prior converted cropland, a 1:1 mitigation ratio is required. One or more of the measures listed below, a, b, will satisfy the mitigation requirement in the ratio of 1 acre mitigated for each acre converted non-wetland upland or open area by construction activities.

a. Provide shallow flooding via water control structures/levees November 15 to February 15.

b. Abandon the site, provided a small levee (12-14 inch height) is constructed to induce ponding on the site.

11. The discharge will not occur in a component of the National Wild and Scenic River System or in a component of a State Wild and Scenic River System without the appropriate Federal or State authorization.

12. The discharge will not occur in a Coastal Zone Management Area without the appropriate State authorization.

13. The discharge will not destroy or endanger the critical habitat of a threatened or endangered species as identified under the Endangered Species Act.

14. If the permittee, during prosecution of work authorized herein, encounters a previously unidentified archeological or other cultural resource within the area subject to Department of the Army jurisdiction, he shall immediately notify the District Engineer. The District Engineer will then contact the appropriate State Historic Preservation Officer for a determination whether or not the site might be eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places.

15. The discharge will not adversely affect a public water supply intake.

16. Authorization under this General Permit is valid for 3 years from the date of the authorizing letter.

General Conditions: 1. You must maintain the activity authorized by this permit in good condition and in conformance with the terms and conditions of this permit. You are not relieved of this requirement if you abandon the permitted activity, although you may make a good faith transfer to a third party in compliance with General Condition (2) below. Should you wish to cease to maintain the authorized activity or should you desire to abandon it without a good faith transfer, you must obtain a modification of this authorization from this office, which may require restoration of the area.

2. If you sell the property associated with the authorization under this General Permit, you must contact this office so that the authorization can be transferred to the new owner.

3. You must allow representatives from this office to inspect the authorized activity at any time deemed necessary to ensure that it is being or has been accomplished in accordance with the terms and conditions of your permit.

4. This permit does not obviate the need to obtain other Federal, State, or local authorizations required by law.

5. This permit does not grant any property rights or exclusive privileges.

6. This permit does not authorize any injury to the property or rights of others.

7. This permit does not authorize interference with any existing or proposed Federal project.

8. In issuing this permit, the Federal Government does not assume any liability for the following:

a. Damages to the permitted project, or uses thereof, as a result of other permitted or unpermitted activities or from natural causes.

b. Damages to the permitted project or uses thereof as result of current or future activities undertaken by or on behalf of the United States in the public interest.

c. Damages to persons, property, or to other permitted or unpermitted activities or structures caused by the activity authorized by this permit.

d. Design or construction deficiencies associated with the permitted work.

e. Damage claims associated with any future modification, suspension, or revocation of this permit.

9. In issuing individual authorization under this General Permit, the government will rely on the information and data which the permittee provides in connection with his permit application. If, subsequent to the authorization, such information and data prove to be false, incomplete, or inaccurate, this authorization may be modified, suspended, or revoked, in whole or in part, and/or the Government may, in addition, institute appropriate legal proceedings.

This General Permit is valid for 5 years. At the end of that time, the cumulative environmental effects of completed work will be reviewed and reissuance of the permit may be considered. However, if unforeseen adverse environmental effects result from the issuance of this General Permit, it may be modified or terminated at any time.

Copies of this notice are available upon request from:

U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Vicksburg District, attn: CELMK-OD-F, Post Office Box 60, Vicksburg, Mississippi 39181-0060.

JAMES W. HARRISON, P.E.,
Chief, Operations Division.

Enclosures.

Requests for authorization of work under general permit CELMK-OD-FE 14-General Permit-48 should be forwarded to the district in which your project site is located. The addresses are listed below:

U.S. Army Engineer District, Little Rock, attn: SWLCO-P, Post Office Box 867, Little Rock, Arkansas 72203-0867, Telephone: (501) 378-5295.

U.S. Army Engineer District, Memphis, attn: LMM-CO-G, Clifford Davis Federal Building, Room B-202, Memphis, Tennessee 38103-1894, Telephone: (901) 521-3471.

U.S. Army Engineer District, Nashville, attn: ORNOR-F, Post Office Box 1070, Nashville, Tennessee 37202-1070, Telephone: (615) 251-5181.

U.S. Army Engineer District, Vicksburg, attn: CELMK-OD-FP, Post Office Box 60, Vicksburg, Mississippi 39181-0060, Telephone: (601) 631-7071.

In order to receive the required letter of no objection, applicants proposing work in Arkansas must forward the following information to the Arkansas Department of Pollution Control and Ecology:

I. Aquaculture Ponds.

1. Maps from the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) showing the exact location of the proposed project and the designation of the wetlands: i.e., prior converted wetlands, farmed wetlands, converted wetlands, and wooded wetlands.

2. The applicant shall develop (consistent with Arkansas Soil and Water Conservation Commission guidelines) a water conservation plan which will include, but is not limited to:

a. Description and purpose of proposed project.

b. Determination of specific water needs.

c. A thorough description of the operation and maintenance plan for the proposed project.

d. An alternate site analysis to indicate that the chosen site minimizes environmental impacts.

e. Identify source of fill water.

3. The applicant shall develop (with assistance from either the Soil Conservation Service or a licensed professional engineer) plans and specifications of the project including:

a. Elevations, levee and ditch dimensions, and total length of levee.

b. Amount of excavated and fill material in cubic yards.

c. Volume of impounded water.

d. Stocking and harvest estimates in lbs/acre.

e. Identification of soil types and documentation to support that the soils will not allow leakages. If soils are unsuitable, a synthetic liner to prevent leakage is required.

4. The applicant shall provide estimated starting and completion dates.

5. In the event of a levee breach or failure resulting in a discharge, it shall be the applicant's responsibility to notify Arkansas Department of Pollution Control and Ecology immediately.

II. Irrigation Reservoirs.

1. Conditions 1, 2, and 3(a)(b)(c) in Section I (Aquaculture Ponds) shall apply.

III. Sewage Lagoons.

1. Condition 1 of Section 1 (Aquaculture Ponds), shall apply.

2. The issuance of a Section 401 Water Quality Certification by ADPC&E is for discharge of dredged or fill material only. It should not be interpreted as meeting the National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) permit requirements. The applicant for sewage lagoons shall be required to file an NPDES Permit Application with Arkansas Department of Pollution Control and Ecology.

ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY,
OFFICE OF WATER,
DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY,
OFFICE OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY,
Washington, DC, May 3, 1990.

Hon. QUENTIN N. BURDICK,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR BURDICK: We are pleased to provide you with a copy of the enclosed Memorandum for the Field which the Environmental Protection Agency and the Department of the Army have developed to clarify a number of questions that have recently been raised regarding the relationship between the Clean Water Act Section 404 Regulatory Program and agriculture.

Proper implementation of the Section 404 program is an issue of critical importance to this nation. We hope that wide distribution of this memorandum to field staff, farmers, and the general public will allay the misunderstandings that have been recently generated on the Section 404/agriculture issues. We intend to distribute this memorandum to all Environmental Protection Agency and Corps of Engineers field offices. The Corps Districts will issue special public notices, and both agencies will issue press releases which will further distribute this information. In addition, the American Farm Bureau will include the substance of the memorandum in its newsletters which has a circulation of 3.5 million farmers. Finally, we will be initiating a public outreach process, working through the Agricultural Extension Service, to ensure that there is a continuing opportunity for dialogue between the regulatory agencies and the agricultural community.

We appreciate your personal attention to this matter and look forward to continuing to work with you as these issues are addressed.

Sincerely yours,

LAJUANA S. WILCHER,
Assistant Administrator for Water, Environmental Protection Agency.
ROBERT W. PAGE,
Assistant Secretary of the Army (Civil Works).

WETLANDS

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my colleagues from Arkansas and Louisiana in a discussion of the relationship between section 404 of the Clean Water Act and agricultural activities. These remarks follow up our April 30 announcement that the Department of the Army and the Environmental Protection Agency had agreed to issue guidance to their field personnel in order to clarify some of the confusion surrounding these issues.

When Congress reauthorized the Clean Water Act in 1977, section 404 was amended to exempt the following activities: "normal farming, silviculture, and ranching activities such as plowing, seeding, cultivating, minor drainage, harvesting for the production of food, fiber, and forest products, or upland soil and water conservation practices." Several other activities relating to farming, such as construction or maintenance of stock ponds, irrigation ditches, and farm roads are also exempt from section 404.

Recently, some farmers have learned for the first time that, based on technical criteria, some of their lands are defined as wetlands. These farmers are concerned that they may be subject to new regulations under section 404. I understand and appreciate this concern.

The Senators from Arkansas and Louisiana raised the concerns of their farmers and asked that the agencies who administer section 404 clarify which activities are exempt from the program. As well, these Senators are interested in improving communication with the agricultural community on section 404.

I wholeheartedly support these efforts and have joined with my colleagues from Arkansas and Louisiana in asking the Department of the Army and the Environmental Protection Agency to issue a clear, understandable memorandum on the section 404 regulatory program and agricultural activities. This memorandum will be sent to all field personnel involved with administering section 404. Further, the corps district offices will issue public notices and both agencies will issue press releases to distribute this information.

The Corps of Engineers and the EPA have also pledged to coordinate a public outreach program with the Cooperative Extension Service. Such a program would likely be the most effective means of clearing up some of the misunderstandings which have arisen in regard to requirements of section 404.

Mr. President, the section 404 regulatory program is one of the most important tools the Federal Government has for protecting our Nation's wetlands. The section 404 permit process is essential in order to reduce harmful impacts on wetlands associated with development and other projects which require disposal of dredged or fill material.

Assistant Secretary of the Army—Civil Works—Robert Page and Assistant Administrator for Water LaJuana Wilcher have been tremendously helpful over the past few days as we worked toward clarifying the exemptions for farming under section 404. In fact, I am pleased to note that, in general, the cooperation and coordination between the Corps of Engineers and the EPA in administering this program has improved significantly in recent years.

While the Memorandum for the Field printed preceding this discussion will help get the word out to the farm community, it is imperative that the agencies increase efforts to cooperate with the agricultural community and to provide clear information to landowners in regard to which activities are regulated and which are exempt under section 404.

Mr. President, I thank the Senators from Arkansas and Louisiana for their efforts to clarify some of the misperceptions that so often surround the section 404 regulatory program.

AGRICULTURAL PRACTICES EXEMPTION TO SECTION 404

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, I would like to commend my colleagues for their work on this complex and important issue. The distinguished Senators from Arkansas, Senators PRYOR and BUMPERS, and my senior colleague from Louisiana, Senator JOHNSTON, have been very active and diligent in addressing the uncertain situation faced by our Nation's farmers. Likewise, the chairman of the Committee on Environment and Public Works, Senator BURDICK, and our distinguished ranking member, Senator CHAFEE, have been most helpful in joining with us to clarify the operation of the section 404 program of the Clean Water Act and its effect on agricultural operations.

In recent days we have worked with the Corps of Engineers, the Environmental Protection Agency, the Department of Agriculture, and the White House in a cooperative effort to see to it that farmers receive equitable treatment under the 404 program, to ensure that the regulatory agencies share a common understanding of the application of the program to agricultural activities, and to improve the efforts of the Federal Government to communicate effectively with our farmers on the kinds of activities that are, and are not, within the scope of the program.

Mr. President, the documents that we are including in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD today will, I hope, significantly clarify for both the farm community and the regulators at the field level the scope and extent of the section 404 program and its application to normal farming activities. The corps and EPA have committed to work actively with the Department of Agriculture through its Cooperative Extension Service to help those involved in agriculture to better understand the 404 program and to see to it that our farmers do not inadvertently violate the law. Congress has provided specific exemptions from the 404 program for normal farming, ranching, and silvicultural activities. With the recent changes in the wetland delineation methodology, it is particularly important that our farmers, many of whom have never previously been affected by the complex regulatory program under section 404, be well informed and be assured that continuing their normal farming practices will not require new burdens or subject them to potential violations of Federal law. I commend these documents to the attention of all of my colleagues.

THE WETLANDS AGREEMENT

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, on April 30, 1990, during consideration of the dire emergency supplemental, Senators PRYOR, JOHNSTON, COCHRAN, CHAFEE, SIMON, and I entered into a colloquy concerning the problems experienced by farmers in the Mississippi River Delta and other areas in the country due to the application of section 404 of the Clean Water Act of 1977. There is a great deal of apprehension about the scope of section 404 and the potential penalties associated with violations. Dire consequences of infractions have been circulated, but no real attempt has been made to help farmers understand what can and can't be done. At the same time, the agencies tapped to administer section 404 did not fully understand the nature of farming in the delta region. For those of us vitally interested in preserving wetlands and in protecting the ability of farmers to make a living, this was an untenable situation.

During the colloquy it was announced that we were meeting with representatives of the White House, OMB, Corps of Engineers, EPA, and the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works on the development of necessary field instructions for EPA and the corps personnel clearly defining instructions on the 404(f) exemptions concerning normal farming, silviculture, and ranching activities. Section 404(f) was specifically included in the Clean Water Act to protect, among several things, normal farming practices.

After several days of negotiations, an agreement has been reached. None of us pretends that this is a perfect solution, but I believe the field instructions offer a vast improvement, and look forward to monitoring closely how these instructions are implemented in Arkansas over the next few months. One of the biggest problems we faced was the nearly complete lack of reliable information available to our farmers. I am pleased to note that the corps, EPA, and USDA have agreed to initiate an overdue mass information campaign designed to demonstrate to most of our farmers that they have no need to be concerned about the 404 process. Another encouraging note is that the corps and the EPA have agreed to consult the Cooperative Extension Service and the State land grant universities as to what constitutes a normal farming practice.

Today, we are placing in the RECORD three important documents: first, a field memorandum for the corps and the EPA; second, a copy of a draft general permit by the Vicksburg District of the Corps of Engineers on fish ponds that is currently in the proposal stage; and third, a copy of a letter to Chairman LEAHY of the Agriculture Committee from Robert Page, of the corps, and LaJuana Wilcher, of the EPA. This letter, among other very important points, notes that field personnel of the corps will be specifically instructed that all three criteria of delineating wetlands—wetlands hydrology, hydrophytic vegetation, and hydric soils—must be considered before section 404 applies. In routine situations, corps personnel making site visits can make field determinations that there have been significant modifications to the hydrology, such as levees and drainage ditches, thereby placing such land outside the reach of section 404. This part of the process has broken down in my State, and I will work closely with the corps to ensure that the three-parameter approach is communicated to and implemented by the Lower Mississippi Division of the Corps of Engineers.

Mr. President, I would like to thank Senator BURDICK, Senator CHAFEE, Senator BREAUX, and Senator BAUCUS, of the Environment and Public Works Committee, and the EPA, the corps, and the USDA for working with us to reach this agreement. I am very hopeful that the agreement reached will go a long way toward easing the problems experienced by our farmers.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, it is with great pleasure and satisfaction that I join my colleagues today in sharing the content of the agreements reached between several of us and the administration earlier this week on the regulation of wetlands. This agreement is the result of sincere efforts on behalf of those interested in the issue, and the final version now reflects a policy that is guided by a balance in which common sense has prevailed. It could not have been done without the enthusiastic and helpful participation of Senator BUMPERS, Senator JOHNSTON, Senator CHAFEE, Senator BREAUX, Senator BAUCUS, the White House, OMB, USDA, EPA, and the Corps of Engineers.

Before we revisited what exactly constitutes a "normal farming practice" confusion, anxiety, and fear ruled in farm country. No one knew, without a doubt, what could and could not be done. This is no small uncertainty, Mr. President, when one considers the penalties that could be imposed on one who violates section 404 regulations. To think that a farmer might lose all benefits because he built rice levees on land that had been in soybeans the year before is outrageous, yet this was the type of concern farmers were faced with. Just this past weekend a farmer in southeast Arkansas ran off the road while driving his truck and when he came to a stop, he found that he was stuck in the field. Finally, he managed to get his truck out of the field and had some fun repeating the story to some of his neighbors in the coffee shop. In the spirit of the conversation, one of the other farmers jested that he should return to the field and fill in his tire ruts or he might be in violation of draining a wetland. The driver was so concerned after giving it further thought that he returned to the field and did just that. Later, everyone got a good laugh out of it, but the point is this is the type of uncertainty that existed in the countryside, and frankly, I do not think the confusion was only characteristic of areas outside of the beltway. The memorandum of understanding that is being circulated to all local offices of the Corps of Engineers and EPA will clear up the confusion, and inform the farmer that it is now all right to get back in the field and start farming just like they always have farmed.

As negotiations progressed through the day it became quite clear that everyone involved wanted the same thing. All of us want to protect and preserve wetlands, one of our most cherished natural resources, but no one intended to see these regulations restrict the ongoing and usual farming practices that are needed to keep food on our table and clothes on our back. It is somewhat comical to think it took the thought of a floor amendment to the emergency supplemental bill to convene this miniconference so that an understanding could be achieved given that all concerned wanted the same thing. However, the agreement that has been reached and the concerns and goals that were identified should prove to be very helpful to everyone, most of all, the farmer.

Mr. President, I appreciate the willingness of the administration to elaborate on their definition of a normal farming practice so that normal farming as farmers know it can continue. Before, the definition of a normal farming practice that guided the agencies, implementation would not have been enough to keep farmers viable. Now, thanks to the cooperation and good faith of many, the farmer can farm like he always has, and we can continue in the noble effort of preserving wetlands at the same time.

Mr. President, I wish to mention another element of the wetlands controversy not mentioned in the memorandum we are agreeing on today, but an element which I believe we will settle today. This element concerns the indicators that regulators look for when determining an area to be a wetland. While the regulations state that three parameters—hydrophytic vegetation, hydric soils, and wetlands hydrology—must all be identified to classify an area as a wetland, reports are that a wetlands determination is often made when only one indicator, hydric soils, is present. This practice has had a result more egregious perhaps than the inclusion of normal farming operations in the 404 process, namely the misidentification as wetlands of areas that are by definition not wetlands.

In an April 19, 1990, letter to Chairman LEAHY, the EPA and the Army expressed their intention to more strictly adhere to regulations requiring the identification of all three wetlands parameters. The Corps of Engineers has reinforced its commitment to this stricter inspection standard in conversations with Senator BUMPERS' office. I am grateful to Senator BUMPERS and his staff for their diligent work on this element of the wetlands controversy. Their efforts have uncovered a shortcoming in the wetlands identification process which has often needlessly mired not only farming operations, but also home building, and development projects in the 404 permitting process. I intend to work with Senator BUMPERS to hold the EPA and the corps to their pledge of stricter adherence to the wetlands identification criteria so that this head of the wetlands hydra does not grow back.

Exempting normal farming operations and more strictly adhering to the regulatory definition of wetlands are two very important, immediate steps we can take, but more work must be done to make our national wetlands policy fully viable. A comprehensive, detailed inventory of our Nation's wetlands must be developed so that commercial interests as well as environmentalists will have a clear understanding of just what lands should be protected. In our present condition, commercial interests are often hindered from planning effectively, and environmentalists are often forced to defend areas that are only marginally wetlands because we all lack a clear, comprehensive picture of those lands whose preservation is our objective.

The viability of our wetlands policy will also be enhanced if clear, specific criteria can be developed to guide mitigation efforts when a farmer, builder, or developer wishes to convert a wetlands area. Presently an individual who wishes to convert a wetland area must develop a mitigation plan with almost no guidance, submit the plan to the appropriate regulatory body, and hope for the best. This is no way to do effective, efficient planning, and no way to operate a policy based on a philosophy of "no net loss of wetlands."

There is still work to be done in the ongoing challenge of striking a balance between economic well being and the environment. For now, we can take comfort in knowing the chaos that clouded a farmer's mind earlier has been eliminated in time for the farmer to still work the land as he must in order to continue supplying this country with the cheapest and safest food and fiber supply in the world.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that an article from the New York Times be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Times, Apr. 24, 1990]

FOR FARMERS, WETLANDS MEAN A LEGAL QUAGMIRE

(By William Robbins)

MARCELINE, MO.—To the casual visitor, Rich McGown's farm looks like prime cropland, and it does what good farmland should do, yielding more than 150 bushels of corn an acre last year.

To officials of the Army Corps of Engineers, however, Mr. McGown's property is quite different. Solid as it may seem, they say, it is wetland. As wetland it is part of the waters of the United States, coming under the jurisdiction of the Corps.

RISING PRESSURES SEEN

Between those points of view stretches a web of arguments, legal questions, claims and counterclaims involving the Clean Water Act of 1972—a web that has now entangled farmers, environmentalists and Federal agencies in legal disputes across the country. What a runaway bureaucracy wants them to do, farmers say, is convert good cropland into bogs and marshland. Furthermore, they say, the Government is doing this with total disregard of property rights guaranteed under the Constitution.

Farmers say pressures from Federal environmental agencies have increased since the Bush Administration took office and adopted a policy of trying to prevent any net loss of wetlands. But they charge that while officials have been strict with small operators, those with larger resources, like corporations and big developers, have been able to circumvent Administration policy.

And some of the farmers' representatives note that the Administration recently retreated from its own policy in response to concerns of Alaskan officials, who feared that strict application of the policy would inhibit development of oil and other resources.

But Government officials insist they are simply enforcing the law that gives the Corps of Engineers authority over the waters of the United States.

"If my country needs my land for a public purpose, let them have it," Mr. McGown, a 35-year-old farmer, said not long ago as he stood looking out over his rich soil, blackened by overnight rains. "But if they are going to take it for a public purpose, let them do it in a legal way and let the public pay for it, not send individual farmers into bankruptcy by taking away what they have spent much of their lives working for."

Mr. McGown said his farm, 255 acres that is mostly the rich low-lying fields commonly known as bottom land, has never included the "swamps, bogs and marshes" that the Corps has long regarded as necessary to define a wetland. Part of the Government's case to the contrary is based on a Federal agent's discovery of a plant that the official said was typical of wetlands. "What he was calling 'cattails' was a head of grain sorghum," Mr. McGown said, referring to a common crop used for livestock feed.

His complaint, which will soon be addressed in a Federal District Court case in St. Louis, is similar to that of several other farmers.

A neighbor, Allen Moseley, has been sued in the St. Louis court by the Corps, which charged "pollution of waters of the United States" for building a levee to guard his fields against floods. The Corps has proposed a solution under which he would agree to cede half his 187 acres to Federal control for a wildlife easement, plant trees on it and pay a fine of $7,500.

"The agreement they offered me amounted to an agreement to let me hang myself," said Mr. Moseley. "If I accept their plan, I lose the farm. It's that simple. I won't have enough cropland left to pay the mortgage."

A Justice Department lawyer representing the Federal agencies in the cases said he could not comment because they were in litigation, but he provided copies of letters to Representative Trent Lott, Republican of Mississippi, on the McGown case and to Vice President Dan Quayle on the Moseley case.

LETTERS CITE DEFIANCE

Both letters, signed by Morris Kay, regional administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, asserted that the property in question involved wetlands and that the two farmers, in defiance of the Corps of Engineers, and without first obtaining permits, had performed levee-building and clearing operations violating the Clean Water Act.

The cases involving those landowners and many others are rooted in changing laws, an evolution of attitudes of the United States toward a resource that until recently was regarded as wasteland and an effort to use the Clean Water Act of 1972, an anti-pollution statute, as a device to protect the country's diminishing wetlands.

When the first Europeans arrived in America, what is now the contiguous United States had about 215 million acres of wetlands. The most recent estimates now put that at less than 100 million acres. Much of the wetlands that was converted has been used by land developers, but the biggest parts have been converted by drainage and filling for agriculture.

It was not until the last decade or so that environmentalists were able to persuade Congress, Federal agencies and much of the general public that wetlands had valuable functions, supporting wildlife and fisheries, protecting against floods and droughts and helping clean up pollutants before they could filter into ground water and lakes and streams. In fact, until an executive order on protection of the wetlands was issued in 1977, the Agriculture Department actively aided and subsidized drainage projects.

EXTENSION OF RESTRICTION

Section 404 of the Clean Water Act prohibits the discharge of dredged or fill materials into water without a permit from the Corps. And that restriction has been extended to property Federal agencies have defined as wetlands—even though the word wetlands never appears in the act. While the act does contain an exemption aimed at permitting "normal farming activity," it is the interpretation of what is normal that is causing much turmoil.

The first direct Congressional action to slow the conversion rate of wetlands for agriculture was a little-noticed provisions of the Food Security Act of 1985, the basic farm law. A provision of the law, known informally as the Swampbuster section, bars farm program benefits for farmers who convert wetlands into tilled fields and then plant major annual crops on the converted land.

The authority of the Corps of Engineers comes from the Clean Water Act. Corps officials say that farmers can still plow and plant crops in wetlands and that if they are willing give up their farm program subsidies, they can even clear forested wetlands for farm fields. But they are prohibited from digging up stumps and taking earth balls with the roots; filling the stump holes and tearing through the fields with machinery, like bulldozers, not normally used in farming.

By the Corps' interpretation, as Mr. McGown put it, "piling dirt on dirt in my fields is polluting the waters of the United States."

FARMER'S PLIGHT BEGINS

Mr. McGown unsuspectingly stepped into his legal quagmire when he bought the 255-acre farm in 1981. He then began to clear old fields, which he said had been in production over much of the last century but had been allowed to revert to brush in recent decades, under an old Agriculture Department program known as the "Soil Bank." That program paid farmers to take land out of production.

As he and farm program executives now tell it, because he had started clearing his fields before passage of the Food Security Act of 1985 he ran into no real problems for a time.

The trouble, he said, began in 1987 when he set out to repair a break in a levee caused by a flood from a small stream and to raise the rest of the levee, which had subsided over the years, to its original height.

At that point, Mr. McGown said, agents of the Corps of Engineers arrived and told him that he was depositing fill in wetlands and that, to do that he would need a permit. If he applied for it, the permit would cost him $10, he was told. He applied.

Except for that action, he said, he has never acknowledged that his fields were wetlands. Meanwhile, he and his lawyer say, the Government's definition of wetlands was changing.

DEFINITION OF WETLANDS

In a letter issued in 1986, the Corps defined wetlands this way: "The term 'wetlands' means those areas that are inundated or saturated by surface or ground water at a frequency and duration sufficient to support and that under normal circumstances do support, a prevalence of vegetation typically adapted for life in saturated soil conditions."

For emphasis it added this sentence: "Wetlands generally include swamps, marshes, bogs and similar areas." "We have listed swamps, bogs and marshes at the end of the definition to further clarify our intent to include only truly acquatic areas."

Never since he has owned it, Mr. McGown says, has his land included those "swamps, bogs and marshes."

Last year, without seeking public comment, a new definition was produced by the Corps and three other agencies: the Fish and Wildlife Service, the Soil Conservation Service and the Environmental Protection Agency. Under that definition, it was sufficient to class a parcel of cultivated fields as wetlands if Federal experts found that the land, if it were not being farmed, would sustain vegetation typical of life in saturated soils.

It was such an expert who found on Mr. McGown's fields the plant that he says is a cattail and Mr. McGown says is grain sorghum.

"That $10 permit could be the costliest paper anybody ever got," Mr. McGown said. To allow him to continue restoration of part of his fields and the protective levees, the Corps has proposed that, in "mitigation" for his damage to wetlands, he cede about 25 percent of his land to Federal control as a wildlife easement. Another condition of the permit is that the easement be written into the property deed as a permanent restriction for the present and all future titleholders.

Mr. McGown and his lawyer, Edwin Harvey, have sued in the Federal District Court in St. Louis asking for a declaratory judgment that his farm is not a wetland and seeking a restraining order requiring that he be let alone to farm his land without hindrance of the Federal agencies.

"Bit by bit and month by month, I have lost the rights to my property," said Mr. McGown. "Bit by bit, they are using the Clean Water Act to capture farmers' property."

The Corps has asked for dismissal of the action, arguing that he is seeking what they cannot give—that they stop enforcing the Clean Water Act.

"I spent $105,000 to buy the farm, $140,000 to improve it and $40,000 so far to fight them," he said. "But if they have their way, what I will have left is little more than the right to walk on it."

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

At 12:23 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Ms. Goetz, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bills and joint resolution, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 3048. An act to designate the Agricultural Research Service, United States Department of Agriculture, animal health research building in Clay Center, Nebraska, as the "Virginia D. Smith Animal Health Research Laboratory";

H.R. 4637. An act to amend Public Law 101-86 to eliminate the 6-month limitation on the period for which civilian and military retirees may serve as temporary employees, in connection with the 1990 decennial census of population, without being subject to certian offsets from pay or other benefits; and

H.J. Res. 490. Joint resolution commemorating May 18, 1990, as the 25th anniversary of Head Start.

At 2:11 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Hays, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bill, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 3802. An act to designate May 1990 as "Asian/Pacific American Heritage Month."

MEASURES REFERRED

The following bill was read the first and second times by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

H.R. 3048. An act to designate the Agricultural Research Service, United States Department of Agriculture, animal health research building in Clay Center, Nebraska, as the "Virginia D. Smith Animal Health Research Laboratory"; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

The President pro tempore (Mr. BYRD) announced that on today, May 3, 1990, he had signed the following enrolled joint resolution, which had previously been signed by the Speaker of the House:

S.J. Res. 236. Joint resolution designating May 6 through 12, 1990, as "Be Kind to Animals and National Pet Week."

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED

The Secretary of the Senate reported that on today, May 3, 1990, he had presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled joint resolution:

S.J. Res. 236. Joint resolution designating May 6 through 12, 1990, as "Be Kind to Animals and National Pet Week."

EXECUTIVE AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

The following communications were laid before the Senate, together with accompanying papers, reports, and documents, which were referred as indicated:

EC-2913. A communication from the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Procurement, Department of Defense, transmitting, pursuant to law, notice of a delay in the production of a report on investment studies of the Department of Defense; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-2914. A communication from the Director of Administration and Management, Office of the Secretary of Defense, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report entitled "Working Capital Funds of the Department of Defense" for fiscal year 1989; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-2915. A communication from the Under Secretary of Defense, transmitting, pursuant to law, notice of an increase in unit cost of the Advanced Medium Range Air-to-Air Missile program; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-2916. A communication from the Acting President of the Oversight Board, Resolution Trust Corporation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the semiannual report on the activities of the RTC, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the Oversight Board; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-2917. A communication from the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Court, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report of applications for delays of notice and customer challenges under provisions of the Right to Financial Privacy Act of 1978; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban affairs.

EC-2918. A communication from the Deputy Associate Director for Collection and Disbursement, Minerals Management Service, Department of the Interior, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on the refund of certain overpayments of offshore lease revenues; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

EC-2919. A communication from the Deputy Associate Director for Collection and Disbursement, Minerals Management Service, Department of the Interior, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on the refund of certain overpayments of offshore lease revenues; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

EC-2920. A communication from the Assistant Secretary, Policy, Management and Budget, Department of the Interior, transmitting, pursuant to law, reports of the Bureau of Land Management and the Fish and Wildlife Service on the implementation of section 318 of the 1990 Department of the Interior and Related Agencies Appropriations Act through April 1, 1990; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

EC-2921. A communication from the Secretary of Energy, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on a project negotiated under the Department of Energy's Clean Coal Technology Demonstration Program; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

EC-2922. A communication from the Secretary of Energy, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on a project negotiated under the Department of Energy's Clean Coal Technology Demonstration Program; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

EC-2923. A communication from the Secretary of Energy, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on a project negotiated under the Department of Energy's Clean Coal Technology Demonstration Program; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

EC-2924. A communication from the Chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on the nondisclosure of Safeguards Information for the quarter ending March 31, 1990; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-2925. A communication from the Assistant Legal Advisor for Treaty Affairs, U.S. Department of State, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on international agreements other than treaties entered into by the United States; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

EC-2926. A communication from the Director of the United States Office of Personnel Management, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation entitled the "Federal Pay Reform Act of 1990"; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-2927. A communication from the Director of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior, transmitting, pursuant to law, the 1989 annual report covering the disposal of surplus Federal real property; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-2928. A communication from the Secretary of Commerce, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to amend two sections in Part I of Subtitle E of title V of the Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act of 1988 regarding establishment of a National Trade Data Bank to give the Secretary of Commerce greater flexibility in assessing user fees to defray the cost of disseminating data and in developing an index of indicators for measurement of service sector activity; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-2929. A communication from the Executive Director of the Committee for Purchase From the Blind and Other Severely Handicapped, transmitting, pursuant to law, the Committee's FY 1989 report under the Inspector General Act Amendments of 1988; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-2930. A communication from the Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the annual report of the Commission under the Government in the Sunshine Act for calendar year 1989; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-2931. A communication from the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on applications for court orders made to Federal and State courts to permit the interception of wire, oral, or electronic communications during calendar year 1989; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC-2932. A communication from the Acting Assistant Attorney General, U.S. Department of Justice, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation entitled the "Forfeiture Act of 1990"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC-2933. A communication from the Acting Assistant Attorney General, U.S. Department of Justice, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to strengthen a provision of the Civil Rights Act of 1968; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC-2934. A communication from the Chief Justice of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, amendments to the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC-2935. A communication from the Acting Director of Communications and Legislative Affairs, U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the annual report of the Commission's Office of Program Operations for fiscal year 1989; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

EC-2936. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Resources, transmitting, pursuant to law, a draft of proposed legislation entitled "Food, Drug, and Device Fraud and Abuse Prevention Act of 1990"; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

The following bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first and second time by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

By Mr. COHEN (for himself and Mr. BIDEN):

S. 2568. A bill to establish the Counter-Narcotics Technology Assessment Center within the Office of National Drug Control Policy, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LEVIN (for himself, Mr. SPECTER, Mr. BYRD, and Mr. RIEGLE):

S. 2569. A bill to amend the Trade Act of 1974 to strengthen and expand the authority of the U.S. Trade Representative to identify trade liberalization priorities, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

By Ms. MIKULSKI (for herself and Mr. SARBANES):

S. 2570. A bill to amend title 5, United States Code, to provide higher rates of basic pay for Federal employees within the consolidated metropolitan statistical areas of which the District of Columbia and the city of Baltimore, MD, is a part; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

By Mr. GORE:

S. 2571. A bill to amend the Antarctic Conservation Act of 1978 to protect the environment of Antarctica, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

By Mr. THURMOND (for himself and Mr. BIDEN):

S. 2572. A bill to provide for the extension of certain authority for the Marshal of the Supreme Court and the Supreme Court Police; placed on the calendar.

By Mr. RIEGLE (for himself, Mr. HEINZ, and Mr. LEVIN):

S. 2573. A bill to promote fair trade in auto parts, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. CHAFEE (for himself, Mr. DOMENICI, and Mr. DOLE):

S. 2574. A bill to amend the Social Security Act to improve old age, survivors, and disability insurance benefits and supplemental security income benefits, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. KERRY (for himself, Mr. GORE, and Mr. PELL):

S. 2575. A bill to urge the Secretary of State to negotiate a ban on mineral resource activities in Antarctica, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. METZENBAUM:

S. 2576. A bill to revise the orphan drug provisions of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act and the Orphan Drug Act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

S. 2577. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to extend the credit for clinical testing expenses for certain drugs for rare diseases or conditions, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. BENTSEN:

S. 2578. A bill to declare certain portions of Pelican Island, TX, nonnavigable; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

By Mr. D'AMATO (for himself, Mr. DECONCINI, Mr. MACK, Mr. HELMS, and Mr. SPECTER):

S. 2579. A bill to amend the Export Administration Act of 1979; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. SHELBY:

S.J. Res 304. A joint resolution to designate October 17, 1990, as "National Drug-Free Schools and Communities Education and Awareness Day"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. THURMOND (for himself and Mr. SHELBY):

S.J. Res. 305. A joint resolution to designate the month of September 1990, as "National Awareness Month of Children with Cancer"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SIMON (for himself, Mr. PELL, Mr. METZENBAUM, Mr. DODD, Mr. KENNEDY, and Mr. JEFFORDS):

S.J. Res. 306. A joint resolution to designate the period commencing October 21, 1990, and ending October 27, 1990, as "National Humanities Week"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SUBMISSION OF CONCURRENT AND SENATE RESOLUTIONS

The following concurrent resolutions and Senate resolutions were read, and referred (or acted upon), as indicated:

By Mr. LIEBERMAN (for Mr. PELL (for himself, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. SARBANES, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. BOSCHWITZ, Mr. GORE, Mr. DODD, Mr. CRANSTON, and Mr. KERRY):

S. Con. Res. 126. A concurrent resolution calling for a United States policy of promoting the continuation, for a minimum of an additional 10 years, of the International Whaling Commission's moratorium on the commercial killing of whales, and otherwise expressing the sense of the Congress with respect to conserving and protecting the world's whale population; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. COHEN (for himself and Mr. BIDEN):

S. 2568. A bill to establish the Counter-Narcotics Technology Assessment Center within the Office of National Drug Control Policy, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

COUNTER-NARCOTICS TECHNOLOGY ACT

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I am rising today to join with the distinguished chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee in introducing legislation that we hope will bring one of our greatest national strengths, namely our technical and scientific prowess, to bear against one of our most implacable national enemies, the scourge of illegal narcotics.

We are all familiar with the rhetoric of the war on drugs, but I think most of us would agree that the rhetoric has often outpaced the reality when it comes to Government action. In previous wars, our Government didn't hesitate to turn to the scientific community for solutions and to generously fund research and development projects when national security was at stake. Indeed, as a nation, we have taken great pride in the discovery and development of such things as computers, lasers, hard plastics, and a wide variety of sophisticated electronics. These technologies have not only helped to protect the country, by keeping us one scientific step ahead of potential adversaries, but they have also produced substantial benefits for the civilian economy.

These technologies and many others were made possible, at least in part, because Congress has provided the funds necessary for government labs to do basic research and because the Defense Department has been well-organized to evaluate and coordinate alternative research projects. While this combination of resources and organization has proven effective in support of our national defense needs, we have yet to undertake similar initiatives to support the civilian law enforcement community in the war on drugs. The only organization presently seeking to coordinate the U.S. counter-narcotics R&D effort is a committee in the Office of National Drug Control Policy that has a skeletal staff, no budget, and minimal authority with regard to the different organizations involved in counter-narcotics research and development. Not only is this committee structure in my view inadequate, but the resources devoted to the problem are inadequate as well.

In the Defense Department, and even among many corporations in the private sector, it is not uncommon for research and development costs to constitute 5 to 10 percent of the total operating budget. With regard to counter-narcotics matters, however, we are only investing about two-thirds of 1 percent of the overall supply-side budget on research and development activities. This is not because of a lack of promising technologies that might help to stem the manufacturing, importation, and distribution of illegal narcotics. Unfunded or underfunded projects that have already been identified include portable, unmanned radars to close gaps in U.S. radar coverage; lasers that can identify emissions from drug processing and manufacturing operations; computer software that can detect money laundering operations; intrusion detectors for remote border areas where narcotics are smuggled; and electronic and chemical tags for raw materials to trace the flow of illegal narcotics from their countries of origin into the Untied States. And we clearly need devices that can more effectively search for illegal narcotics on ships, planes and motor vehicles entering the United States.

In a recent hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee, to which I was graciously invited by Senator BIDEN, several witnesses indicated that we could easily spend four to eight times the current counter-narcotics research and development budget on worthwhile projects that have the potential to diminish the availability of illegal narcotics. Among those testifying were representatives of the Customs Department, the Los Alamos National Laboratory, the FBI, and the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency. Several witnesses also expressed support for strengthening the flaccid committee mechanism in Director Bennett's office that is struggling to identify potentially effective technologies, coordinate ongoing efforts, and obtain necessary funding.

None of the witnesses that appeared before the Judiciary Committee on this issue suggested that there is a technical solution to the drug problem, or that there is any substitute for continued efforts to reduce the demand for illegal narcotics. And we are not in any way suggesting today that the nation embark on a law enforcement equivalent of the strategic defense initiative. I believe, as I know most of my colleagues do, that the ultimate success of our efforts to eliminate illegal narcotics will depend on demand reduction. At the same time, however, we must recognize that demand and supply reduction efforts are complementary, and that any reasonable steps we can take to reduce the flow of drugs into the country will help to minimize the temptation faced by millions of U.S. citizens who are confronted by illegal narcotics in their neighborhoods or places of employment.

Mr. President, this legislation seeks to remedy the problems of inadequate organization and funding by establishing a Counternarcotics Technology Assessment Center in the Office of National Drug Control Policy. This measure would also substantially increase the authorization for national counter-narcotics technology initiatives and establish a counter-narcotics technology budget account for the drug czar's office. We believe that taken together, the provisions of this bill would substantially boost the efficiency and effectiveness of U.S. counter-narcotics research and development activities.

As a member of the Senate Armed Services and Governmental Affairs Committees, I have had substantial involvement over the years in organizational initiatives that originated in this body and were sometimes enacted over the opposition of the administration. In this instance, opposition from the administration may not materialize. But my recent experience has taught me that we should not hesitate to modify the organizational structure of the executive branch when there are compelling reasons to do so. For example, as I recall, every single official of the Defense Department who testified before the Senate Armed Services Committee in 1986 opposed the proposed reforms of the Joint Chiefs of Staff which became the Goldwater-Nichols Act. Today, however, these reforms are lauded by the Secretary of Defense and most outside observers. Indeed, as a recent editorial in the Armed Forces Journal stated, "* * * the returns are in now, and Panama makes it clear that Goldwater-Nichols works." This is also a matter of national security in an ongoing war that is causing untold casualties every year. In my view, there is no reason that we should not move forward as vigorously against the threat of drugs as we have against other, more conventional adversaries.

In considering this measure, I believe it is important to point out that we can achieve the benefits of a more coherent and effective national counter-narcotics research and development program without creating a vast new bureaucracy or establishing new laboratory facilities. With regard to personnel, this legislation authorizes Secretary Bennett to add not more than 10 individuals with scientific and technical backgrounds to his staff in order to form the counter-narcotics technology assessment center. This additional staff, together with an increased research and development budget and the authority to allocate funds, should help to give impetus and direction to the fledgling efforts currently underway to pit an old and invaluable ally, namely technology, against the rapidly evolving threat of illegal narcotics. Let me reiterate, we are not proposing the creation of new facilities or organizations for the conduct of empirical research. Rather, we believe that, by establishing an effective managerial mechanism for counter-narcotics research and development activities, and by increasing funding for the entities that already have research capabilities, it may soon be possible to make drug smuggling a far more difficult and costly enterprise for the Colombian cartels and their counterparts in other countries.

In closing, Mr. President, I would like to openly acknowledge the fact that technology can be used for good or ill. Our intent is to stem the invasion of drugs into this country, not to authorize an invasion of the rights of U.S. citizens. I am convinced, based on the generally favorable record of the law enforcement community, that we can develop procedures to protect our constitutional rights while more effectively protecting the public from the threat of illegal narcotics. I hope that my colleagues will join with Senator BIDEN and I in supporting this effort.

